Her name is Mrs. Jennie Scull, and she is thirty-two years old. She does not live with her husband, but has a room in a boarding house, where she has lived for three months. The landlady, Mrs. Wilson, said to-night that when Mrs. Scull came to her she claimed to be a professional nurse and was away from home a good deal of the time.

Wednesday and Thursday Mrs. Soull was absent from home. She came back about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and instead of exchanging a few words with Mrs. Wilson, as was her custom, she passed directly through the house to the kitchen. Mrs. Wilson noticed that she was carrying a bag, but paid no attention to it.

In the kitchen she met Alice Miller, a colored servant of the house and asked her for a candle. The girl got a candle, lighted it and preceded her down to the cellar steps. Mrs. Scull went directly toward the furnace at the end of the cellar. While the servant held the candle Mrs. Scull opened the door and hastily drawing an object from the bag she threw it into the blazing coals. The colored woman, who was watching her, saw that it was the body of a white child. Dropping the candle, she ran screaming up the stairs into the house.

In the meantime George Burton, a colored man employed by Mrs. Wilson, had entered the cellar. He said afterward that he had heard Mrs. Scull's request for a light and had become suspicious. He found the bag on the floor, and was attracted toward the furnace by the odor. He pulled the body from the furnace. Without pausing to look for Mrs. Scull, who had disappeared, Burton went into the street and found Policeman Dougherty of the Nineteenth District. The facts were communicated to Lieut. Mitchell, attached to the Eighth and Lombard Streets Station, who notified the authorities and put his men to work on the case.

NEW CATHOLIC BISHOPS.

ROME, Dec. 14.—At the consistory held to-day the Pope formally announced the appointment of a number of Bishops. One of them was that of Mgr. Fergo McEvay to the Bishopric of London, Ontario, which post he has been occupying since August last.

The Pope also announced the appointments of Mgr. Falconio, the Apostolic Delegate to Canada, as Metropolitan of Larino, and of Mgr. Frederic Eisaux to the united Sees of Sault Ste. Marie and Marquette.

The new Bishop of Havana was installed by his Holiness.

The consistory was held in the Salle Regia, with the usual grand ceremonial and in the presence of the Diplomatic Corps, the Roman nobility, and many prominent strangers. The Pope appeared to be in good health. He smiled continually and was in excellent humor.

A secret consistory in the Sixtine Chapel followed, at which the Pope delivered an allocution of a wholly religious character, and performed the ceremony of opening and closing the mouths of the new Cardinals.

The Pontiff was much acclaimed, especially in the Ducal Hall, where crowds witnessed the procession.

GERMAN REICHSTAG ADJOURNS.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—In the Reichstag, today, in the continuation of the debate on the budget estimates, Eugene Richter, the Radical leader, commenting on the Emperor's Hamburg speech, defended the House from the reproach of persistently refusing to increase the navy.

"If, however," proceeded Herr Richter, "the Bundesrath is reduced to the position of a body of men whose sole purpose is to register the supreme will, then the Reichstag must revert to the demand for the institution of a responsible Ministry. Since Dr. von Buchka has been head of the Colonial Department the expenditures have doubled, without reckoning the cost of glorious Kiao-Chau, and in proportion as the naval plans have increased, it has become more difficult to secure favorable commercial treaties."

Referring to the Transvaal situation, Herr Richter said: "While the sympathies of Germany are with the Boers, the Government must and is remaining neutral. That is great progress, compared with the unfortunate telegram of some years ago. The war has proved that Great Britain's power has been much overrated. Germany will not again become an anvil, but neither is it her business to be a hammer."

The estimates were eventually referred to the Budget Committee.

The House will reassemble Jan. 9.

ATLANTIC COUNTY GOLF.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 14.—The Atlantic County Country Club's open golf tournament opened here this morning with a match of thirty-two contestants entered to qualify for medal play to follow to-morrow. The first eight to play for first prize, a handsome silver cup; the second eight to play for consolation prize, also a silver cup.

A silver cup offered to-day for the best playing was won by Willie Davis, the open champion. Davis defeated "Jack" Harrison, a professional of Dayton, Ohio, in a match game by a score of 8 to 7.

The following qualified to-day for medal play to-morrow: First prize, Davis and Darby, Lynch and Bohlen, Robbins and Douglas, Forrest and Hamilton; for consolation prize, Villapigue and Singer, Kimball and H. Fownes, Phifer and Tappin, Lippencott and Kirk.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

One of the most active members of the Harvard Club had just returned from a visit to his Alma Mater, and as he was an oarsman of note in his student days, and active in securing money from the New York alumni for the building of the new boathouse on the Charles River, his talk naturally drifted to college rowing. "With every member of the crew back in college next year," said he at the club yesterday, "there seems now no good reason why we should not repeat our triumph of a year ago and make it three straight in the races against Yale. If Lehman did nothing else for Harvard, he did arouse an unusual interest in rowing generally. If we had had in my day some of the spirit that now exists, and for arousing which Mr. Lehman is entitled to credit, our record against Yale would certainly have been a better one. A man can now row all he wants to, and if he has the least taste for the sport there are plenty of opportunities for him to exercise it. With the rivalry between the Weld and the Newell Clubs, Harvard is developing a lot of oarsman, and more than superficial interest in rowing as well. Even with all the old men back in college, it is already the gossip that there may be a considerable change in the make-up of the crew. There were some good oars in last year's freshman crew, and there are some rattling good ones, so far as promise goes, among the new men of this year. The freshies had six eight-oared crews on the water this Fall, and there were a half dozen eights, besides fours and pair-oars in the club crews. It is a great thing for the boys to have a chance to race frequently, as they do now, and Higginson, who will stroke the crew again next June, expects that when the boys can get on the water in the Spring there will be more rowing than was ever before done at Harvard. The new boathouse that we have given them will be ready by that time, and the policy will be to give every man who shows a disposition to row a thorough trying out. That is the policy that will win races for us if any will, and there is a general feeling among the students that it is worth while to try for the crew when it is known that a seat in the boat will depend entirely on the capability of the man instead of on his social position. I think we are on the right track, and that if we keep it up Yale will have to stand from under for some time to come."

Do you notice how very obsequious and polite your janitor is just at present? Hallboys and servants are generally affected in the same way, and from now until a week from Monday the very best of service may be counted on by occupants of apartments. Were there no other signs to indicate it, this would alone show the near approach of Christmas. It is just so at the clubs, where the Christmas boxes have put in an appearance, and where the suddenly improved service causes fewer complaints to the House Committee. Your barber is a trifle more careful when he shaves you now, and your bootblack admires more openly the success of his efforts to make your boots shine like a mirror. The very air is suggestive of Christmas tips on all sides. In one up-town locality where hallboys are as numerous as are the apartment houses, the boys have instituted a new method of giving hints to tenants. When one of these appears, particularly if it is the wife of a proposed victim, the boys talk to one another about the expected Christmas donations, and have a habit of winding up with: "Well, no one needn't give me nothin' but money! That's all I want."

One local freight down on the Central Road yesterday brought six platform cars loaded as high as they could safely be packed with Christmas trees. As the train passed Riverside Park down to the freight yard a hundred youngsters playing there spied the load, and every one of them set up an anticipatory shout of delight and greeted the trees with cheers. Most of the trees come from the Catskill region, and are brought to the city by boat to the wharves near Washington Market.

"Yes, Sir, these are very busy times all about the park, where the squirrels live during the Winter," explained the old keeper who frequents the Ninety-sixth Street path just at the lower end of the north meadows in Central Park. "Getting ready for Winter housekeeping and for the increase in the family that comes in February or March. All those big rough nests you see in the tops of the trees are made by the squirrels who have been busy at their work for a couple of weeks now. You see this is near their regular pairing season. We usually get litters of squirrels here in September and February or March, from three to six to the litter." There promises to be a considerable addition to the park menagerie if every nest that is now being built has a family of even three gray squirrels in the early Spring, for the writer counted twenty-three of these nests in a walk across the park and back, between Central Park West and Fifth Avenue in the belt of woods that lines either side of the Ninety-sixth Street transverse road. This was in a stretch probably less than a sixteenth of a mile in width. The nests are huge affairs—for nests—for some of them would fill a peck measure. They are always in a fork of a tree, and apparently as high up as safety for their perch will permit. Stray twigs, bits of rope, rags, and leaves are used in the make-up of these Winter homes for the universal pets of park frequenters. Very busy in making them the squirrels are, too, and visitors with cakes, fruits, and nuts have more trouble in coaxing the squirrels to come to them for food than usual. When nuts are offered the little fellows hurry away to bury them for their Winter food supply instead of stopping to gorge themselves, as they ordinarily do in the warm weather. One particularly large nest is very close to the East Drive, and placed as it is at the top of a very tall young oak, is an especially sightly one. A pair of young squirrels are building it, and the veteran keeper thinks it is their first essay at home-making, so very industrious are the two that are constructing it.

Oystermen have a grievance. They say that the sort of weather we have been having is spoiling their trade. Dealers and planters alike are complaining, and the men who handle the opened oysters exclusively have been without anything like a sharp demand for their goods until within the past week, as the Western market is taking nothing like its usual quantity of oysters. The demand has been picking up a bit for the holiday trade, and this is their ray of sunshine. Unless there is a good and long-continued cold snap, they fear that there will be a falling off that will materially affect the business after Jan. 1. Prices hold good, however, and there has been an increase in the export to Europe.

A rather unique situation has been developed in the steel rail business that was the cause of considerable comment at the Transportation Club, where the good luck of the New Haven road in having made a contract for rails at a very low price some months ago was being talked about. great has been the demand for old rails, not only from the smaller roads that are in the habit of buying second-hand rails, but from the mills as well, that the New Haven people have been able to dispose of all the old rails they have taken up and replaced at a price actually in excess of that which they paid for the discarded rails, the excess in some cases reaching $8 per ton. These old rails are actually bringing more than the company is now paying for the new rails being delivered under their contract made some time ago for delivery this year. One of the directors of the road was quoted as authority for the statement that there is still in use on some of the branches of the road rails that were made in England and first laid on the New Haven road bed about fifteen years ago.

Parties back from the South say that the hunting in North Carolina and Virginia this year has been better than they have known it for years. There has been a plentiful supply of quail, more good duck than there have been seen in three or four years, and a bountiful supply of wild turkeys, with a good lot of red deer as a side issue. The "blizzard" of last March, which it was feared would play havoc with the birds, apparently did but little damage to either quail or partridge. Rabbits have been so numerous as to be a nuisance in some sections of the country. Hunters who have frequented the shore have been able to get good bags of the shore birds, and if a man wanted possum, coon, or foxes he has been able to get all that sort of game he wanted. There will be a considerable exodus of hunting men to Florida after the holidays for a shy at the quail and deer in the Florida woods unless the slump in Wall Street proves to have been sufficiently severe to knock in the head a lot of plans that have been laid for trips of this nature.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The Assembly ball of last night, the story of which will be found in another column, was the chief topic of anticipatory interest wherever people prominent in the gay world of New York met yesterday, and the preparations for the ball had their effect upon the teas, receptions, and other incidents of the day. A Winter which has brought such an army of débutantes as the present makes the first large subscription ball, where most of these buds make their first bow, an event of more than usual importance, and so the interest and preliminary excitement which last night's event induced are not to be wondered at.

Friday, always a dull day, even in the height of the season, as compared to its fellows, keeps up its reputation this week and brings little of note, but to-morrow will be marked, as was last Saturday, by a number of débutante receptions. There will be a matinée performance in the Astoria ballroom, both to-day and to-morrow, of the musical burlesque, "The Lady from Chicago," given by the Strollers, and Mrs. Benjamin F. Church's dancing class will hold its first meeting of the season at Sherry's; Mrs. Snedeker's class will also meet at Sherry's, and among minor incidents of the day will be a card party to be given by the Misses de Peyster of 112 East Thirty-sixth Street.

Among those who arrived on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. from Mediterranean ports yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Kellogg and Mrs. H. F. Kellogg. Mr. Crosby, Commander C. A. Schetkey, United States Navy, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. and Miss Schetkey, Mrs. John Struthers and the Misses I. H. and Armitage Struthers of Philadelphia, Mrs. Helen Weeks, Miss Helen F. Weeks, Miss Whitney, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Whitehouse and E. G. Whitehouse.

Among the dinners of to-night is that to be given by Mrs. Joseph T. Low of 57 West Fifty-second Street, who will have as her guests Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Juilliard, Dr. Edward L. Keyes and Mrs. Keyes, Mr. and Mrs. John Hone, Dr. Wyckoff and Mrs. Wyckoff, Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest, and Mr. Charles Godfrey. Mrs. George P. Blade of 62 East Sixty-eighth Street also gives a dinner to-night for her niece, Miss Cornelia Helen Merrill, who recently made her début. Among her guests, as already announced in these columns, will be Miss Elsie de Peyster and Capt. William Cameron of Troop A. The guests at this dinner, being members of Mrs. Church's dancing class, will go direct from the dinner to the first meeting of the class.

Mrs. H. De Barkeley Parsons of 204 Madison Avenue gave last evening a dinner of sixteen covers. Her guests went from the dinner to the first Assembly ball. Mrs. Henry Parish, Jr., of 8 East Seventy-sixth Street, gave a dinner last night to Miss Kitty Hall. The guests were all débutantes, and among them was Miss Evelyn Parsons, daughter of Mr. Schuyler L. Parsons. The guests at this dinner also went later to the Assembly ball. At the dinner given by Mrs. Alexander T. Van Nest of 31 West Thirty-seventh Street, at her residence last evening the guests were Miss Julia Clark, Miss Beatrice Post, Miss Madeline Knowlton, Miss Isabel Cameron, Miss Laura Hard, Miss May Low, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Clarke, Phoenix Ingraham, Goelet Gallatin, Alexander Hadden, Stephen Pell, Lawrence Elliman, Arthur Crosby, Robert Livingston, and Sherman Day.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Alfred Pell and her daughter, Miss Frances Pell, gave a rose tea for Miss Helen Tracy Brown of Flushing, L. I., whose mother was Miss Julia Tracy, a sister of Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan. Mrs. Pell was in gray satin, with lace trimmings, and Miss Pell wore pink crepe de chine.

The Bachelors and Spinsters had their first dance of the season at Delmonico's last evening. There was a large attendance of the members of the organization and a number of guests. There was a cotillion and a supper served at small tables. The patronesses of this class, most of whom were present, are Mrs. George Tucker Harrison, Mrs. Joseph M. Knapp, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. E. A. Bronkerhoff, Jr., Mrs. H. M. Clements, Mrs. Andrew H. Dickinson, Jr., Mrs. R. L. Foster, Mrs. Robert E. L. Lewis, Mrs. Walter St. John Benedict, and Mrs. Herbert R. Woods.

Mrs. Frederick Edward Ballard of 21 West Seventy-third Street gave a reception at her residence yesterday afternoon to introduce her daughter, Miss Grace Kinsdale Ballard.

A large reception was given by Mrs. Robert Hoe of 11 East Thirty-sixth Street at her residence yesterday afternoon for her daughters, Mrs. Samuel Morley Evans and Miss Ruth Lawrence Hoe. At the second of the two receptions given on Wednesday by Mrs. Philip S. Brown for her daughter, Miss Jean Brown, there received with Mrs. and Miss Brown Mrs. Brown's sister, Miss Carter; Miss Harriet Barnes, Miss Mary Gardiner of Albany, Mrs. Jones and Miss Rosalie Jones, daughters of Dr. Oliver Livingston Jones; Miss Vibbert, a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Vibbert, and Miss Ella de Peyster, Miss Helen Rogers, and Miss Ethel Ward.

The wedding of Mr. Graham Lusk and Miss Mary Woodbridge Tiffany, daughter of Mr. Louis C. Tiffany, will be celebrated at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church on the afternoon of next Wednesday, Dec. 20. In Philadelphia yesterday morning Mr. William Wilson Longstreth and Miss Edna Rogers Smith, daughter of Mr. Robert Hobart Smith, were married in St. Mark's Church by the Rev. Dr. Mortimer. There were no bridesmaids, and the maid of honor was Miss Mildred J. Keville. The bride wore a handsome gown of heavy white satin, trimmed with old family lace, her tulle veil being fastened by a wreath of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of Bride roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Keville wore a gown of white liberty gauze, trimmed with yellow. Her hat was yellow, trimmed with yellow roses, and she carried a large bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. A pretty feature of the bridal procession was the two pages, Master Edward Smith and Master Edward Smith McCawley, who wore suits of white serge and walked immediately in front of the bride. Mr. Longstreth, the bridegroom, was attended by his cousin, Mr. William Longstreth Smith, who acted as best man. The ushers were Mr. Lawrence Wharton Bickley of New York, Mr. Joseph Hill Brinton, Mr. Walter J. Odiorne, Mr. Joseph Woolston, and Mr. Charles Edwin Shull, and Mr. George Hazlehurst. Immediately after the ceremony a small breakfast followed at the residence of the bride's parents, 1221 Locust Street.

"Miss Beatrix Jones, daughter of Mrs. Cadwalader Jones of New York, is the young woman," says a correspondent, "whose impress will be seen in and about Chiltern, the new place of Mr. Edgar Scott of Philadelphia, at Bar Harbor. To her Mr. Scott intrusted the transformation of the fourteen acres of wildwood and swamp land into an artistic and enchanting inclosure for his one-hundred-thousand-dollar villa. Mr. A. W. Longfellow of Boston drew the plans for Chiltern, and highly complimented Miss Jones for her wonderful skill and cleverness in the latest and most novel of the professions to be entered by the new woman. Chiltern will be in many respects the most interesting Summer villa in Bar Harbor, romantically situated near Kenarden Lodge, owned by J. S. Kennedy, and George W. Vanderbilt's Point d'Acadia. The house will look as old as the Mount Desert hills, whence the surface, mossy granite composing its half-structure, was taken. Chiltern will be a two-storied structure of native granite and shingle—the main house being 106 by 45, with a wing 82 by 40. It will be ready for occupancy June 1, and will be one of the finest villas in New England."

The rumor is revived at Bar Harbor that, owing to the expense of maintaining the ferry route of eight miles across Frenchman's Bay, and especially in the light of the memorable disaster at Mount Desert Ferry, the Maine Central Railroad will abandon the ferry and run its rails on to Mount Desert Island, as planned some years ago, having a station at a distance from the village and running a line of stages to it.

Mr. Anthony Drexel has taken Landon Park, Surrey, for a term of five years. The owner of Landon Park is Lord Onslow, who leaves the county. Landon Park is a very handsome place, with good shooting, and although not so picturesque as Norris Castle, is still one of the great landed estates in England.

On Monday evening next will take place the first german in Richmond, Va. This is an event of as much importance in the South as the Mardi Gras balls in New Orleans, the St. Cecelia in Charleston, and the Bachelors' german in Baltimore. Many people known in New York will be present at this dance. A party goes from Philadelphia, and Mrs. Frank S. Pleasanton and Miss Pleasanton, who has just made her début, will also be among the number.

Miss Sylvia de Grasse Fox is in town, having come over from Philadelphia to attend the Assembly. Miss Fox, who is one of the beauties of the Quaker City, will pass a part of the Winter in Bermuda. On Dec. 20 many New Yorkers will go over to Philadelphia for the coming-out ball of Miss Ellen Drexel Paul, which is to be one of the most elaborate entertainments ever given in that city.

At Mr. Bagby's next musical morning, which will take place on Monday, Mme. Nevada and Mr. David Bispham will sing and Max Bendix, the violinist, will play.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Toye—Brush.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 14.—In the First Presbyterian Church here to-night Miss Rebecca Whitlock Brush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton E. Brush of Irving Avenue, this place, was married to George Benjamin Toye of Toronto, Canada. The Rev. Dr. George L. Spining, pastor of the church, officiated. The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Toye of Toronto, sister of the bridegroom; his cousins, Miss Eugenia Moore and Miss Adriana Quackenbush of New York; Miss Grace L. Brush, a sister of the bride, and Miss Jane Murdock of Pittsburg, Penn. Clinton E. Brush, Jr., a brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Cornelia Brush, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The ushers were Herbert H. Moss and Frederick W. Moss of Brooklyn; M. M. Brush, brother of the bride; Watson G. Clark of Cresskill, N. J.; W. Arthur Babcon of South Orange, Norman Brown of Toronto, and Harris S. Quackenbush of New York.

Cooke—Barrett.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 14.—Miss Margaret Barrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barrett, and Frank Cooke were married here to-day by the Rev. Thomas Smith. Miss Julia Barrett, sister of the bride, was to have been maid of honor, and Thomas Cooke, a brother of the groom, the best man, but the couple fooled their friends by going to the parsonage at 6 o'clock and were married while their friends waited for them. The ceremony was to have taken place in the church at 6:30 o'clock.

Northam—Hyde.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 14.—The wedding of Miss Jennie Elizabeth Hyde, daughter of Mr. Salisbury Hyde, to Mr. Russell Chase Northam, son of Mr. Charles H. Northam, took place at Trinity Church today. The wedding ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Ernst De F. Miel, the rector of the church.

Nicoll—Wing.

Dr. Mathias Nicoll, Jr., and Miss Alice Maude Wing, daughter of Mrs. Charles Tudor Wing, were married in the presence of only the very immediate relatives at Mrs. Wing's residence, 1,700 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Farley, the Auxiliary Bishop of this diocese, and Dr. and Mrs. Nicoll left shortly after the ceremony on their wedding tour. The wedding was to have been a large one, but all invitations to it were recalled, owing to the death on Tuesday of Frank Evans Wing, an uncle of the bride.

TEXT OF THE SAMOAN TREATIES

Provisions of Agreements with Germany and Great Britain—King of Sweden Arbitrator.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The full text of the treaty negotiated between the United States, Germany, and Great Britain for the adjustment of the questions between the three Governments in respect to the Samoan Islands was made public to-day. The treaty bears date at Washington, Dec. 2, 1899, and after reciting its purpose to be to adjust amicably questions between the three powers in respect to the Samoan group and to avoid future misunderstandings, proceeds textually as follows:

Article I.—The general act concluded and signed by the aforesaid powers at Berlin on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1889, and all previous treaties, conventions, and agreements relating to Samoa are annulled.

Art. II.—Germany renounces in favor of the United States of America all her rights and claims over and in respect to the Island of Tutuila, and all other islands of the Samoan group east of longitude 171 degrees west of Greenwich. Great Britain in like manner renounces in favor of the United States of America all her rights and claims over and in respect to the Island of Tutuila, and all other islands of the Samoan group east of the longitude 171 degrees west of Greenwich. Reciprocally the United States of America renounce in favor of Germany all their rights and claims over and in respect to the Islands of Upolu and Savaii and all other islands of the Samoan group west of longitude 171 degrees west of Greenwich.

Art. III.—It is understood and agreed that each of the three signatory powers shall continue to enjoy in respect to their commerce and commercial vessels in all the islands of the Samoan group privileges equal to those enjoyed by the sovereign power in all ports which may be open to the commerce of either of them.

Art. IV.—The present convention shall be ratified as soon as possible, and shall come into force immediately after the exchange of ratifications.

In faith whereof, &c.

JOHN HAY.
PAUNCEFOTE.

A separate treaty was negotiated to cover the provision for the settlement of claims in Samoa. It sets forth that the three Governments are "desirous of effecting a prompt and satisfactory settlement of the claims of the citizens and subjects of their respective countries resident in the Samoan Islands on account of recent military operations conducted there, and have concluded a convention for the accomplishment of this end by arbitration."

The King of Sweden and Norway is made arbitrator, and he is not only to determine the amount of claims, but is "to decide to what extent either of the three Governments is bound, alone or jointly with the others to make good these losses."

The nature of the claims to be adjusted is set forth in Article I of this treaty, as follows:

All claims put forward by American citizens or German or British subjects, respectively, whether individuals or companies, for compensation on account of

CURRENCY DEBATE IS TAME

Congressman Sibley Says He Will Oppose the Bill.

DECLINES, HOWEVER, TO SPEAK

Mr. Thayer, a Massachusetts Democrat, Delivers an Argument in Favor of the New Measure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The debate on the Currency bill in the House to-day was tame and prosaic. The attendance both in the galleries and on the floor was light, and none of the speeches made attracted especial attention. Mr. Sibley, (Dem., Penn.,) who has publicly announced his change of views on the money question, and who, it was thought, might vote for the bill, stated that he would vote against it.

Mr. Thayer (Dem., Mass.,) was the only member of the opposition who made a speech for the bill to-day.

Mr. Cox, (Dem., Tenn.,) who was the ranking minority member of the Banking and Currency Committee in the last Congress, opened the debate to-day in opposition to the Currency bill.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Cox paid his respects to Mr. Grosvenor, whom he characterized as the spokesman of the Administration on the floor. He was a most adept representative of the Executive, said he, for when placed in a hole he never experienced the least difficulty in getting out. [Laughter.]

Mr. Crumpacker (Rep., Ind.,) believed it possible that the enactment of the pending bill into law might enhance the prospects of the necromancer from Nebraska.

"But," said he, "if Bryan should be elected this law would act as a sort of legislative straitjacket and reassure the country by minimizing his capacity for evil."

When Mr. Sibley (Dem., Penn.,) arose to speak at the conclusion of Mr. Olmstead's remarks much interest was manifested, owing to the report that he had changed his views upon the silver question. Mr. Sibley, however, disappointed his audience. He had only risen to say that he proposed to print his views in The Record. He had been offered time by the Republicans, but as he had spoken against the Republican candidates in twenty-seven States in 1896 he did not desire to accept favors at their hands.

On the other hand, he did not desire to embarrass the Democrats by asking for time from them.

He would vote against the pending bill, he said, but he did not entirely agree with the views of members upon the minority side. He would, therefore, content himself with printing his opinions.

Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, called Mr. Sibley to witness that he had been offered thirty-five minutes within which to present his views. To this Mr. Sibley asserted, but said he had not availed himself of the proffer as he did not desire to embarrass the gentleman who had tendered it.

Mr. Ball (Dem., Texas,) said that in order to support this bill almost every Republican in public life had to recant the professions of a lifetime.

Mr. McCleary (Rep., Minn.,) remarked upon the change which had come over the Democrats. In past Congresses they had always seemed eager and anxious to offer a free-silver proposition as a substitute for almost anything that happened to be pending. During the debate not a Democrat had come forward with a free-silver substitute.

Mr. McCleary made himself the target of a fusillade of questions from the Democrats by the assertion of the proposition that during the whole century not a single silver dollar had been coined on private account. During a passage at arms with Mr. Sulzer, (Dem., N. Y.,) Mr. McCleary said that neither Mr. Sulzer's father nor grandfather had ever seen a silver dollar except as a curiosity.

"And if you and your party associates keep on," retorted Mr. Sulzer, "neither will my grandchildren." [Laughter.]

"That depends upon the grandfather," observed Mr. McCleary, amid renewed laughter.

Mr. Boutell, (Rep., Ill.,) in his remarks devoted considerable time to showing that both Jefferson and Jackson were directly opposed to the present Democratic theories of finance.

Mr. Gilbert, (Dem., Ky.,) in opposing the bill, read a letter from the Controller of the Currency, in answer to an inquiry of his, saying that the tax on capital, surplus, and circulation of National banks, if the circulation were reduced to the minimum under the pending bill, would be $2,709,000. The total tax collected from National banks last year was $3,744,000.

Mr. Berry (Dem., Ky.,) said if the Republicans had declared for the pending bill when they got together to fool the people at St. Louis there would not be enough Republicans in the House to-day to get a roll call. He predicted that the bill would yet unhorse the Republican Party.

After some further remarks by Mr. Lewis, (Dem., Ga.,) Smith, (Dem., Ky.,) and Jett, (Dem., Ill.,) against the bill, and Mr. Graff, (Rep., Ill.,) for it, Mr. Thayer (Dem., Mass.,) concluded the debate for the afternoon with a ten-minute speech in favor of the bill. He said he regretted to differ from his colleagues, but his conscience compelled him to dissent.

He spoke of the Chicago platform of 1896 as a great mistake made by a portion of the Democratic Party, created by Jefferson, defended by Jackson, and protected by the immortal Russell of Massachusetts at the sacrifice of life itself. He said he believed that if the question of silver at sixteen to one could be left to the Democratic voters unaccompanied by illustrious names, they would reject it by an overwhelming majority. The time had come, he said, when the financial interests should be relieved from continued agitation of the financial question which had been hanging over the country for the past eight years like a funeral pall. Mr. Thayer declared that the Republicans would not have had the courage to bring in this bill if the little band of heroic Democrats in 1896, in the spirit of self-sacrifice, had not declared for the gold standard. Mr. Thayer was liberally applauded by the Republicans.

At 5 o'clock the House recessed until 8 o'clock.

At the night session thirteen speeches were delivered for and against the bill.

MAJORITY FOR CURRENCY BILL.

Republican Leader Says It Will Have 36 Votes to Spare—Eight Democrats Counted On.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Representative Overstreet of Indiana, in charge of the financial bill now under consideration in the House of Representatives, said to-day that the informal canvasses thus far made showed that the bill would pass on the final vote next Monday by a majority of about 36, in case the full strength of both sides was present. This is based on the calculation that the full Republican vote, 185, and 8 Democratic votes, will be recorded for the bill, and that 7 other Democratic members will refrain from voting. Mr. Overstreet says it is established beyond question that not one Republican vote will be recorded against the bill. There will be no amendment to the present form of the bill except the substition of "July" for "June," in designating a statute referred to in the bill.

Representative Richardson of Tennessee, the Democratic floor leader, says it cannot be definitely stated before to-morrow whether a substitute or amendment will be offered by the Democratic side. There has been some suggestion that a substitute or amendments embodying an affirmative position should be presented, but there are parliamentary objections to this course, as the special rule governing the debate will not permit changes outside the Committee of the Whole, so that no record vote could be secured.

The matter of a Democratic caucus on the bill is also open, with the indications that no caucus will be held.

GALAPAGOS SALE NOT CREDITED.

Secretary Hay Has No Information of Such Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Responding to a resolution of inquiry, the President to-day sent to the Senate a statement by the Secretary of State concerning the possible sale of the Galapagos Islands.

The Secretary says in his statement that the Department of State has "no recent information as to a proposed sale of the Galapagos Islands by the Republic of Ecuador to Great Britain or any European power."

Presidential Nominations Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Senate to-day confirmed the following nominations:

To be United States Ministers—William P. Lord of Oregon, to the Argentine Republic; Herbert W. Bowen of New York, to Persia; Arthur S. Hardy of New Hampshire, to Greece, Roumania, and Servia; Lawrence Townsend of Pennsylvania, to Belgium; Ballamy Storer of Ohio, to Spain; John N. Irwin of Iowa, to Portugal.

To be United States Consuls—J. H. Johnson of Texas, at Coaticook, Canada; H. L. Washington of Texas, at Valencia, Spain.

To be Secretaries of Legations—Lloyd C. Griscom of Pennsylvania, at Constantinople; J. C. McNalley of Pennsylvania, to Guatemala and Honduras; Spencer F. Eddy of Illinois, to Paris, (second secretary;) Joseph H. Choate, Jr., of New York, to London (third secretary;) Arthur M. Beaupre of Illinois, at Bogota, Colombia.

House Committees to be Named Soon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Speaker Henderson has made such progress with the House committees that he was able to state definitely for the first time to-day that the list would be announced before the holiday recess, probably on or about the day before the recess begins. Until then, the Speaker stated, there will be nothing authoritative relative to the Chairmanships or the personnel of committees.

Congressional Recess Begins Dec. 20.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Senate to-day agreed to the House resolution for Christmas holiday adjournment on the 20th of December until the 3d of January.

Against Married Woman Clerks.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—First Assistant Postmaster General Heath reiterated his former order, that the presence of husband and wife as clerks in the same office is inimical to the service and that the woman's position should go to some one who had no means of support. He says: "I intend to apply this ruling to female clerks who in the future marry. Female Post Office clerks already married, and whose employment under their married names has been approved by the department, will not be disturbed under this ruling."

Remains of Maine Dead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Navy Department has given notice that any person claiming the remains of any of the victims of the Maine explosion before the Texas arrives at Hampton Roads with the bodies from Havana, which will be in about fifteen days, may have them sent to their late homes for burial at the expense of the department.

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The following fourth class Postmasters were appointed to-day:

NEW JERSEY—South Effingham, C. G. Hope; Midvale, J. E. Pellington.

NEW YORK—Killawog, Ashley Williams.

AGED YONKERS EDITOR WEDS.

John W. Oliver, in His Eighty-fifth Year, Receives Congratulations on His Third Marriage.

Special to The New York Times.

YONKERS, Dec. 14.—John W. Oliver, one of the oldest and most popular citizens of this city, and editor and publisher of the Yonkers Daily Statesman, married Mrs. Maria Du Bois of Kingston, N. Y., at half-past 8 o'clock to-night at his home, Rose Cottage, 102 Warburton Avenue. Mr. Oliver is in his eighty-fifth year. His wife is thirty-two years his junior.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. E. Price, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Oliver is a member, in the parlor of the house, which had been handsomely decorated with roses and smilax; and in which nearly 130 guests had assembled. There were no bridesmaids, best man, or ushers.

Promptly at the hour named Mr. Oliver, walking as proudly erect and as firmly as any young man could have done, entered the room with his bride on his arm and escorted by his son, Edwin A. Oliver. Mrs. Du Bois was attired in a handsome high-necked dress of pearl gray satin. As they made their appearance Miss Edith R. Goldrick, organist of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, played on the piano the nuptial march from "Lohengrin." The couple took their station in the bay window, facing the company, the words which made them man and wife were soon uttered, and then Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were overwhelmed with the congratulations of their friends. The company then sat down to supper.

The witnesses who signed the marriage certificate were Mayor Leslie Sutherland and City Judge William Kellogg. Among others present were Isaac J. Oliver, Chandell R. Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. Norton P. Otis, Charles R. Otis, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Andrus, Mr. and Mrs. James Affleck, Mr. and Mrs. William Affleck, Commissioner of Public Works Samuel Cooper and Mrs. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Cozzens, ex-Judge and Mrs. F. X. Donoghue, William H. Doty, President of the First National Bank of Yonkers, and Mrs. Doty; City Attorney James M. Hunt and Mrs. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Ackerley, the Rev. Dr. David Cole, the Rev. Charles E. Allison, the Rev. Dr. W. E. Ketchum and Mrs. Ketchum, the Rev. Dr. A. S. Hobart, S. W. Seybold, Halcyon Skinner, Dr. R. R. Trotter, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Bell, Prof. E. W. Cook, Alderman E. H. Garrison, ex-Senator J. Irving Burns and Mrs. Burns, Dr. W. H. Bell and Mrs. Bell, E. O. Carpenter, and John T. Waring.

Many pretty wedding presents were received, among them a wicker armchair, attached to which was a card with the inscription, "The Editor's Easy Chair." Apropos of this, the bridegroom remarked that he would be in his real editorial chair as usual to-morrow morning and that the best place to spend a honeymoon was right in his own home.

This is Mr. Oliver's third marriage. His second wife died two years ago. A few months ago he thought it was time to have a housekeeper to look after his home, and made known his conclusions to Mrs. Cyrus Sickley of Yonkers, a friend of his first wife. Mrs. Sickley said she knew just the person he needed, and introduced him to Mrs. Du Bois, who had been a widow for some years. Mr. Oliver soon satisfied himself that Mrs. Sickley had not been mistaken. His admiration for his housekeeper's qualities ripened into affection for herself, with the result seen to-night.

Mr. Oliver has three children now living—a son and two daughters—six grandchildren and five great grandchildren. His son, Edwin A. Oliver, is associate editor of The Statesman, and is well-known as a humorous writer. The aged editor comes of a family remarkable for the longevity of its members. His father lived to be ninety-six years old.

TO FIX DRUG CLERKS' HOURS.

Agreement on a Bill to be Sent to the Legislature.

The various organizations of druggists in the city have agreed upon the form of a bill providing for shorter hours for drug clerks, which will be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature.

It provides that a clerk must not work more than 140 hours in two weeks. He may work 76 hours in one week, but the next week he must receive an allowance for the six hours over-time of the preceding week. Clerks must not sleep in the stores where they are employed unless the sleeping apartments are approved by the Board of Health. The act will apply only to cities of the first class.

Testimonial for Slayer of Burglar.

DEEP RIVER, Conn., Dec. 14.—The Directors of the Deep River Savings Bank evidenced their appreciation of the fidelity and courage of night watchman Harry D. Tyler, who heroically attacked four men who were endeavoring to gain an entrance into the bank early Wednesday morning, and who killed one of the burglars, by presenting him with a purse of $500 this afternoon. Accompanying the gift were resolutions expressing the Directors' appreciation of the watchman's faithful services.

HOW TO CONTROL TRUSTS

Publicity, Prof. Clark Says, Will Destroy Their Power.

THE CHECK OF COMPETITION

Enforced Uniformity of Prices Urged to Enable Competing Elements to Work at Advantage.

Prof. John B. Clark of Columbia University said last night, at the Cooper Institute, that the most effective means for controlling trusts were publicity regarding their affairs and the compulsion of uniformity in their prices. The occasion was a discussion of the "Pros and Cons of Trusts," held under the auspices of the Fellow-Citizenship Association of the East Side House Settlement. John Graham Brooks of Cambridge, Mass., presided. Mr. Brooks claimed that, in the strict sense of the word, there were no practical monopolies in existence. He said:

"You can swell and water stocks to an enormous extent, but you can't swell man's capacity for management. Men in several trusts have come to me and said that they were put to their wits' end to get managers of sufficient ability to warrant a jump of, say, from five to twenty millions."

Mr. Brooks urged trades unionists to fight the trusts tooth and nail if it finally appeared that the men on top did not divide the profits with those at the bottom. He believed that with the publicity here of the trust's affairs which he said English and German laws enforce they could be controlled.

Prof. Clark then addressed the association. In part he said:

"A moral energy on the side of the people that is simply irresistible is necessary when the people and great concentrations of capital come into opposition.

"Without being an absolute monopoly, a trust can be one to a very large degree. Trusts generally pay pretty good salaries to their employes, because it won't do to have a hostile public in front and fire in the rear.

"If a trust doesn't raise prices, it is because for some reason it cannot. It is that reason which we want to get at. Just now steel and iron products are increased by the natural operation of the law of supply and demand. But statistics show that trusts do generally increase prices.

"A trust can work very damaging effects upon the laboring class as a whole, and still pay good wages to its employes. If it decides to decrease production and curtail its list of employes, it pours a certain number of wage earners into the labor market, and the wages of the class as a whole are bound to go down.

"There are three ways of dealing with trusts. In the first place, you can let these monopolies or consolidations grow to an immense size and then nationalize them—absorb them by the Government. I do not think this plan will work well. While I love the State, I haven't the greatest confidence in all of its officers.

"In the second place, our Legislatures can pass sweeping prohibitory laws, such as they have now in Arkansas and Texas. If, instead of having States like New Jersey and Delaware competing to get trusts, we had all the States, like Arkansas and Texas, shutting them out, and the Federal Government assisting, we could at least keep the trusts in a more or less perturbed state of mind. But even that wouldn't put them out of existence.

"There is a third measure, but it will not be resorted to very soon because the public does not seem to want it and the trusts are in deadly opposition to it. It is the natural method of dealing with trusts. Why is it that sugar isn't dearer? It is not because of any benevolence on the part of the heads of the trust, but because of some check. That check is competition in a new form. If they put the prices up, new mills will come into the field. It is potential competition that makes it impossible for prices ever to be raised above a certain point. There is no checking this potential competition absolutely. The world is full of capital. The trusts themselves are continually pouring out new capital which must be used.

"Beyond a certain point, trusts cannot raise prices, but it is within that degree that the great evil lies. The new mill instead of coming into the field to-day waits until to-morrow. Potential competition is slow—it must be made more active.

"The competing power of a great trust is a terrible thing, but it can be destroyed by publicity. This means that the public must know the freight rates, the way in which the different customers are being treated, and whether or not uniform prices are being asked. If the large number of business facts were made public it would go far to disarm trusts.

"There is a kind of legislation we haven't tried yet. It must be made necessary for trusts to charge uniform prices everywhere. In this way all the competitors can be protected, and competition will always be possible.

"We can save that great productive power that is in the trust for the uses of our people, and we shall need it in the struggle with the nations."

MONEY RATES BECOME EASIER.

Treasury Anticipates the Payment of January Interest on Bonds—Talk of Gold Exports.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Secretary Gage announced to-day that he would anticipate the interest due Jan. 1, 1900, on United States registered and coupon 4 per cent. bonds of 1907 without rebate. Checks to the number of 26,563 will be mailed to-morrow to holders of the registered bonds, and interest on the coupons will be paid on presentation of the same. The amount of the former is $4,386,505 and of the latter $671,381, making a total of $5,057,886, less the interest on bonds recently purchased, and less the interest already anticipated by the Secretary's offer of Oct. 10 to pay interest due at any time during the present fiscal year with a rebate of about 2.4 per cent. Applications for interest to become due after the offer of Oct. 10 must be made before Jan. 1.

Following upon the announcement from Washington of the Treasury's intention to anticipate January interest on Government bonds, this notice was posted in the Sub-Treasury here:

"This office has been authorized to prepay, without rebate, interest due Jan. 1 on 4 per cent. bonds of 1907, beginning Dec. 15. Checks for registered interest will be mailed from Washington on the 15th and 16th insts."

The notice was signed by M. L. Muhleman, Acting Assistant Treasurer, who gave it as his opinion that this would release between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000 at this point.

Call loan money rates ruled yesterday at 6 per cent. At one time a demand for accommodation put the rate at 7 per cent., but before the close of the stock market the rate was 4½ per cent., and later on 4 per cent. Time money rates were the same as on Wednesday. Demand sterling opened strong, at $4.88 bid, but apparent corroboration of a British advantage in the Transvaal made the rate easier, and the closing quotation was $4.87⅞ to $4.88. One opinion on sterling getting below the gold export rate was that it was due to the raising in London of the premium on bar gold. An authority on Exchange expressed these views:

"I quote demand sterling at the close of the market at $4.87⅞, less brokerage, one-thirty-second. The market opened at $4.88 bid. At such a date, unless my judgment and experience err, we could have shipped gold without loss. The exchange market got soft on reports of a victory over the Boers, and the buying back of stocks sold yesterday, and the fun of this is that our people passed for Londoners. 'London account' is old Street slang, but there are many who believe in it. The decline in or raid on the stock market was due to money conditions, and a disposition to regard affairs as looking blue.

"As to the action of the Secretary of the Treasury in anticipating without rebate the January interest, it's but a drop in the bucket—only a little over $5,000,000. Of this about $3,000,000 will come out. What will change the money situation? The end of the South African war. But for that war we would have imported $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of gold and everything would be lovely. End the war, and the result will be comfort, abundance, and booming stocks."

A canvass of the gold-handling houses last evening found a general opinion that for the time being exports are out of the question. At the Assay Office, where there is $80,000,000 of gold bars, it was reported that no inquiries pointing to a shipment on an up turn of the sterling market had been made.

Expressions of relief were general when it was known that the discount rate of the Bank of England had not been raised from 6 per cent. and on the announcement that the January interest on Government bonds would be paid in advance without rebate, while fears were expressed of a money and exchange relapse should the reports or rumors of British success in the Transvaal be denied on authority or should another British reverse be made known. A story that an officer of the National Bank of Commerce had given an opinion that the money tide had turned from the West toward New York was denied by that official. He had simply made known the arrival of a sum of importance from St. Louis. From Chicago came $100,000 to a Wall Street bank, and more gold—about $300,000—came from Canada.

FOREIGN TRADE IN NOVEMBER.

Imports Increased $22,375,000 and Exports Decreased $6,600,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The November statement of the imports and exports of the United States issued by the Bureau of Statistics shows as follows:

Merchandise.—Imports, $74,452,283, of which $32,226,490 was free of duty; increase over November, 1898, about $22,375,000.

Domestic exports, $121,802,627; decrease nearly $6,600,600.

Gold.—Imports, $2,904,043; exports, $364,310; decrease in imports over $2,225,000; decrease in exports, $849,000. Silver—Imports, $2,772,390; exports, $4,480,166; increase in imports, $500,000; increase in exports, $416,000.

During the last eleven months there was increase of $152,576,412 in the imports of merchandise and an increase of $34,494,703 in the exports of merchandise.

FIFTH AVENUE ELECTRIC 'BUS.

Experiments with a New Vehicle to be Commenced Next Week.

The Fifth Avenue Stage Company will begin experimenting next week with electric omnibuses to determine the kind of vehicle best adapted for its purposes. The one to be tried first was not built for a stage, and will accommodate, including roof-seating, only fourteen persons. It is intended only to gauge the conditions obtaining on Fifth Avenue.

The 'bus will not be operated on schedule time, but at different times of the day, and under various conditions, and will carry passengers for the regular fare. When the company has become satisfied as to the feasibility of electric vehicles and settled upon the best kind, they will be substituted for the present horse coaches.

PRODUCTS OF NORTH CHINA

Peculiar Methods Pursued by the Natives There.

TWO CROPS A YEAR GATHERED

No Statistics Reliable—Indian Corn Well Established—Conservatism of Chinese Farmers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Advance sheets of the report of James W. Ragsdale, United States Consul at Tientsin, on the agricultural products of North China, have been issued by the Bureau of Foreign Commerce. The report considers both the products and agricultural methods of the two principal northern provinces, Pechili and Shantung, which are taken as typical of the northern part of the empire. This region has an alluvial soil, and is usually capable of producing good crops when there is an adequate rainfall, which, however, not infrequently fails. At such times there is always a risk of a general famine.

"Perhaps the most important crop is wheat," says the report. "It grows all over Northern China, with but slight differences in manner of cultivation, due to local climate. If the wheat gets a good start in the Autumn, it looks well all Winter. It is much helped by the rains, and especially by the snows, which generally occur at intervals through the Winter.

"The Chinese are very expert in the use of manure, which they dry in the spring and pulverize; and it is always for sale at the river markets at a price varying with the locality. This manure is brought to the fields in carts, and is poured into the seed drill with the seed, so as to make a little go a great way. The practice of drilling everything is sometimes a wasteful one, as there is almost always (with their imperfect machines) a much larger quantity of seed put in the ground than can live in the limited space intended for it, and much of it has to be pulled up later by hand.

"Much of the land is made to yield two full crops a year, and after the wheat has been gathered in June, the land may be planted in beans or sweet potatoes, maize, or some other late crop. But it is recognized as the better plan to let the ground lie fallow until after Autumn harvest, when wheat may be put in again, as the increased yield compensates for the loss of the extra crop.

"The wheat usually ripens about the beginning of June, when the stalk is either pulled up by hand or the straw cut (with a small sickle not more than 4 inches in length) very near the root. It is thrashed out by the passage of a stone roller over it, and the winnowing is generally done by throwing the grain and chaff into the air with shovels, by which crude process most of the chaff is eliminated—at least a sufficient amount to satisfy the Chinese demands.

"It is very difficult," the report continues, "to ascertain the product of any Chinese crop per acre or 'mou.' All measures in China, like all weights, are extremely variable. The farmer will tell you that his land yielded so many pecks, but it may be incidentally learned that the 'peck' of that region is but a third as large as the one used in another district near by. Acres, bushels, pecks, pounds, &c., have no fixed value. For these reasons all statistics as to the productiveness of Chinese land are to be taken with considerable allowance."

Next to wheat, probably the most important food crop is millet, of which an enormous quantity is grown everywhere. White rice does not grow in Northern China, although found in Tientsin and Peking. Millet is planted as early in the Spring as the rains will allow. It is drilled into the ground and worked by plowing between the rows while it is small, and later by hoeing.

What is called "tall millet" bears no relation to the grain last mentioned. It is very similar to the sorghum, or sugarcane, extensively grown at one time in the Middle and Western States. It is planted about the same time and under the same general conditions as millet, but it grows to from 10 to 15 feet in height. "In this plant," says the report, "nature has furnished one of her best gifts to the forestless plains of Northern China. The blades are stripped from the stalks while green and cured for fodder. When ripe, the tops are thrashed for the grain. The stalk of the sorghum is so full of silica that it is invaluable for making hedges and for the roofs and sides of buildings. When used for the latter purpose the stalks are covered with very thick layers of mud, and withstand the heaviest rains for a long time. When they finally rot, they can be removed, and what is left is used for fuel. Finally, after the stalks are cut and removed from the fields, the roots are pulled up and stored away for fuel, and thus every vestige of the plant is made to serve some useful purpose.

"Indian corn has undoubtedly been introduced into China during the present dynasty," says Mr. Ragsdale. "It never grows to a great height, and the yield is probably not a quarter as large per acre as in the United States; but it is useful to take the place of other crops in a dry year, since it can be planted much later than either kind of millet. It is now thoroughly established as one of the standard crops of Northern China."

Barley is grown to some extent, and in the poor soil near the mountains much buckwheat is raised in small patches. Besides the millet already mentioned are several other kinds. The varieties of these small grains are so numerous that it is a proverb that not even a farmer can repeat all the names.

"Sweet potatoes are found throughout this entire region, sometimes of an excellent quality. They are perhaps the cheapest form of food accessible to the poor and are easily cultivated, being propagated from shoots set out after the rains have begun. Tobacco is another plant which China owes to the West, although that fact has long been forgotten. It cannot be said to be introduced more than two hundred years, but its use has become practically universal. Foreigners think it too mild, but the Chinese are attached to it. It is smoked in long pipes, holding very small quantities."

Beans of various kinds are raised in great quantities, and the peanut, said to be an importation, is extensively cultivated throughout Northern China. Poppy is grown in considerable areas in various parts of Northern China, but statistics of the production are not available. The profit is largest on food crops, but the injury done by the withdrawal of so much productive land amid such a dense population is very great.

"As market gardeners," continues the report, "the Chinese excel. They have the infinite patience which is able to tire out the hosts of insect foes always lying in wait for the farmer, and they have a large variety of vegetables which they assiduously cultivate. They are very fond of melons, and these are so cheap and abundant as to bring them within reach of the poorest people.

"The Chinese have for ages understood the art of grafting. Their orchards are a source of great profit, and are tended with ceaseless patience and care to protect the crop from insects, birds, and the still more dreaded human thieves. Fruit is always picked before it is ripe, to lessen the danger of losing it altogether, and to make it easier of transport. Now that railways have been introduced to some extent, there is no reason why fruit crops should not be brought to a profitable market."

Concerning the implements and methods in use by the farmers of Northern China, Mr. Ragsdale says:

"The Chinese hoe is a clumsy implement. It has a surface more than six inches square, and its function is to cut weeds in two, and to stir the soil from beneath, without to any extent removing it. The plow is always small, with but one handle, the moldboard having a very few inches of surface, and being always designed for surface work only. The plows are frequently drawn by men and women. No Chinaman has the smallest conception of such a thing as deep plowing, and he would be horrified at the idea of turning all the valuable surface soil underneath. The harrow is not unlike the kind we used a hundred years ago, and the farmer often has a brush drag for a convenience. He depends upon the Winter frosts, however, to do most of the work of pulverizing the lumpy soil, and in the Spring it is always easy to get the ground which was plowed in the Fall into shape for planting.

"Chinese agriculture," says the report in conclusion, "like everything Chinese, illustrates the talent of this race for doing almost everything by means of almost nothing. They fatally lack initiative; but if new methods are forced upon their attention, they may be persuaded to adopt them, and, once having done so, they will not again give them up. Efforts to introduce American cotton and other foreign seeds have generally been a failure, owing to the reluctance of the Chinese to use them, and especially to the fact that the seeds themselves do not produce the results which they do in their native soil."

Mr. Stern's Yacht Virginia Tried.

BATH, Me., Dec. 14.—The steam yacht Virginia, built by the Bath Iron Works for Isaac Stern of New York, had a four-hours' steaming trial off the Maine coast this afternoon. Mr. Stern had as guests J. F. Toms and C. R. Crane of New York. The owner has expressed his satisfaction with the boat, as every requirement was fulfilled. The Virginia will leave for New York in ten days to go into commission.

Important Announcement.

OWING to the unprecedented demand for "The Letters of Robert Louis Stevenson," the first large edition of the work, which was expected to suffice for the holiday season, was exhausted within a few days of publication. A second edition, necessarily smaller on account of the impossibility of securing the requsite quantity of paper, was immediately printed, and of this only a limited number remain unsold. A third edition of 3,000 sets is now printing, only a part of which will be ready before Chistmas.

A special edition of the "Letters" for subscribers to the Thistle Edition is also nearly sold out.

"A much-needed work well done."—The Independent.

Washington the Soldier.

By GEN. HENRY B. CARRINGTON.

WHAT IS SAID OF IT:

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT:—"It is a well thought, well planned, well executed work, in which the whole public career of the father of his country is reviewed in a broad and comprehensive manner, not only as a soldier and a statesman, but as a citizen and a Christian."

CONGREGATIONALIST:—"This book is not burdened with technicalities. It is an excellent piece of literary work, is written in a graphic and interesting manner. It is a book for the household and all intelligent people."

ST. LOUIS GLOBE-DEMOCRAT:—"The work of General Carrington is an addition of great value to the already long list of Washington literature."

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The Sub-Treasury team lost a chance to win two games in the Bank Clerks' League at Reid's alleys last night through Jenkins missing an easy spare. The team won the first game easily from the Hamilton Bank bowlers. The Chemical National Bank five disposed of the Hamiltons as easily in the second game.

In the third game the Sub-Treasury team held a lead until Smith, the last man of the Chemical team, had bowled. The latter finished the game with two strikes, and it was left to Jenkins, the last man on the Sub-Treasury team, to win the game. He made nine on his first ball, and it only required a spare to win the game for the Sub-Treasury. Jenkins, however, missed the single-pin spare, losing ten pins and the game. Score:

FIRST GAME.

Hamilton—Crosby, 138; Ward, 87; Hasbrouck, 99; Kottmeier, 168; Mooney, 125. Total, 617.
Sub-Treasury—Jordan, 139; Oakley, 125; Bird, 152; Copeland, 190; Jenkins, 157. Total, 763.

SECOND GAME.

WOMEN AT BILLIARD TOURNEY.

Kellogg and Threshie Tied with Smith—Stark a Winner.

It was "Ladies' Day" at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club yesterday, and many women were present to see the games in the Class B amateur billiard championship tournament. Kellogg and Threshie, the winners, yesterday, are now tied with Smith for first place.

But one game was played in the evening, and Threshie and Cutler, both of Boston, were the players. The former won by 300 to 221, his average being 8 20-35, and his best run 56. Cutler averaged 6 11-35, and made a run of 27.

In the afternoon Kellogg defeated Hevner by a score of 300 to 137. Kellogg's best run was 49, and his average 7 20-40. Hevner made an average of 3 26-39, his highest break being 20.

Stark defeated Poggenburg last night in the Inter-City Club handicap amateur billiard tournament at Daly's Academy by 300 to 243. Stark's average was 5 25-55, and his highest run 28. Poggenburg averaged 4 27-59, his best run being 28.

BASEBALL MAGNATES SILENT.

Refuse to Tell the Result of Their Conference.

The National League of baseball magnates labored yesterday afternoon and last night at the Fifth Avenue Hotel and when they adjourned kept all they had done to themselves. One or two admitted that the league may be in session for several days more. The Board of Directors were in conference nearly all day, and it was rumored that their report on the shortening of the circuit and the Brooklyn-Baltimore syndicate protest may be submitted to the League to-day.

Mr. Freedman of the New York Club wants the Brooklyn-Baltimore syndicate fined in the Wrigley matter, but the syndicate seems to hold the key to the circuit-shortening proposition, and if it is fined may cause trouble for the men who are counting on a reduced circuit next year. There seems to be no doubt that the Cleveland, Washington, and Louisville owners are ready to drop out on terms that would be acceptable to the other magnates.

FOREIGN MAIL TAKEN TO BOSTON

Liner Reaches That Port with 2,034 Sacks, Much of It for New York.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—What is claimed to be the largest single consignment of mail ever brought from Europe to this country was brought to this port by the Dominion Line steamer New England to-night. She signaled the marine observer at Highland Light shortly after 6 o'clock, and then proceeded across Massachusetts Bay to Quarantine, arriving there at 8:30 and being docked an hour later.

Contrary to the usual course, the steamer was boarded at Quarantine at night, and permission given to unload the mail. The amount of foreign mail thus handled to-night broke all records at the Boston Post Office. While only a small portion of it staid here, the bulk of the 2,034 sacks has yet to be forwarded to New York and the West. The mail is mostly of a Christmas nature. The New England's heavy cargo of mail is due to the British Government chartering so many liners for transport service.

This company has secured all the rights and patents of Oliver L. Gardner for the manufacture of Artificial Lumber.

This material has been manufactured for a period of twelve years and is gradually taking the place of lumber for inside decorations on railroad cars and all classes of buildings.

It can be used as a substitute for plaster and laths in buildings, as it is sound proof and temperature proof, and it IS FIRE PROOF.

The economies and savings in the construction of cars and buildings, and many other things heretofore made of wood and plaster, made possible by the use of this lumber are very large.

It is manufactured from a WASTE material of which there is an unlimited supply, and consequently capable of earning large dividends, owing to its low cost of construction.

The engineers of the Guaranty Development Company, 10 Wall Street, New York, have made a full examination of the nature of this artificial lumber and the uses to which it can be put, and they report that its value as a commercial article is practically unlimited. A detailed report of this examination can be seen at their office.

PATENTS

New patents have recently been obtained, and applied for, covering a process for the manufacture of this material in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Austria, Russia, and Australia, which gives to this company an ABSOLUTE MONOPOLY.

Careful, conscientious work, which has cost over FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS in cash, has been put into this enterprise to develop it up to its present finished condition so that, after long usage, it now stands as a recognized commercial commodity by architects, builders, decorators, and manufacturers of railroad cars, steamships, and boxes, and there is positively no question regarding its practicability and future position as a substitute for wood in all its uses and decorations for inside work. The company now has orders which guarantee a continuous demand larger than it is possible to fill with the present plant.

The gradual decrease in the supply of wood in the world, and the increase in the demand for same, particularly the grade that is used for inside decorations, is a well-known fact, and consequently this substitute for wood is much more valuable as a commercial commodity, under these conditions, than any new commercial proposition has been for the past twenty years.

PLANTS

A plant is now erected (fully equipped with machinery) at Barberton, Ohio, for the manufacturing of this material.

A plant will be erected within the vicinity of New York, one in the West, and one in Canada, each with an earning capacity equal to the one at Barberton, Ohio.

FINANCIAL

THE EARNINGS FROM THE BARBERTON PLANT WILL, AFTER PAYING SIX PER CENT. INTEREST ON THE $1,500,000 OF PREFERRED STOCK ISSUED, PAY FIVE PER CENT. ON THE COMMON STOCK ISSUED; AND AFTER THE ERECTION OF THE PLANT IN THE VICINITY OF NEW YORK CITY, IN THE WEST, AND IN CANADA, THE EARNING CAPACITY OF THIS COMPANY WILL BE $1,800,000 ANNUALLY.

Applications are now in hand from prominent European bankers to organize corporations to manufacture and sell this artificial lumber in England, France, and Germany, and as the United States company own and control the foreign patents, a large percentage of the profits of the foreign companies will revert to the Artificial Lumber Company of America.

The books for subscriptions will open on the 18th day of December, and will close on the 23d day of December, 1899, at 3 P. M.

To complete the balance of the purchase price and pay for the four new mills to be erected.

EVERY INVESTOR SHOULD NOTE CAREFULLY the following exceptional features in the policy of the International Zinc Co., Ltd.:

FIRST—The net profits of the company are certified as correct by the well-known Chartered Accountants, Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co., of New York, Boston, London, and Manchester, England.

SECOND—The books of the company are kept under their supervision, and quarterly statements of the earnings of the company will be issued, certified by them, thus enabling every shareholder to verify from independent sources the enormous profits of the company.

THIRD—This is the only mining company in the United States to adopt this most important safeguard of its shareholders' interests.

The International Zinc Company, Ltd., is now earning over 22 per cent. on its entire capital stock, out of which it is paying dividends at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum and carrying forward a surplus of 10 per cent.

When the improvements now under way are completed, the company will earn 42 per cent. per annum, with ore at $30.00 per ton. A careful consideration of the certified statement of profits as set forth in the prospectus shows that this estimate is based on actually less than is now being accomplished.

EVERY INVESTOR SHOULD READ the company's prospectus, which gives in detail full information as to the company's properties and earnings, with the complete statement in which these details are certified by the Accountants.

Beginning Jan. 1st, 1900, this company will pay regular monthly dividends of one per cent., with such extra dividends from time to time as the condition of the company shall warrant.

FINANCIAL.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company.
OFFICE OF THE TREASURER.
GENERAL OFFICE, PHILADELPHIA, DECEMBER 13, 1899.

To the Stockholders of the Pennsylvania R. R. Co.

At a meeting of the board held this day the following resolution was, on motion, adopted:

"Resolved, That, for the purpose of providing a portion of the necessary capital for construction and equipment expenditures, during the year 1900, on the main and leased lines and branches, and for other corporate purposes, the privilege be given to stockholders of the Company to subscribe, at par, between December 27th, 1899, and January 20th, 1900, on which latter date the privilege will cease, for ten per cent. of their respective holdings as they stand registered at three o'clock P. M. on December 23, 1899. The privilege of subscribing may be sold by any stockholder. Payment in full for such stock may be made after January 14th, and must be made not later than January 30th, 1900. Receipts, which will also be negotiable, will be given bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. from January 30th to May 1st, 1900, (being 70 cents per share,) at which time said receipts will cease to bear interest.

"Certificates for the new Stock will be delivered on and after May 1st, 1900, on surrender of the receipts. Receipts covering fractions of shares will be converted into Stock when presented in multiples of Fifty dollars. All receipts must be presented for conversion before January 1st, 1901, on and after which date they will only be redeemed, at par, in cash."

Blank forms, giving the particulars of the payments as above recited, forms of subscription, and allotment of privilege, etc., can be obtained on application at this office after December 20, 1899.

Stockholders desiring their new Certificates for full shares by May 1st must deposit their receipts with the Transfer Department of the Company on or before March 15th, 1900. For all receipts for full shares deposited after that date, and for all fractional receipts, Certificates will be ready for delivery as soon after May 1st as practicable, of which notice will be given.

ecretary Gage that he is thus merely nsolidating into one big gold shipment series of Government routine transacons involved in the carrying on of Philpine war operations. Certain payments n the war's account have to be made rough London, and the advocates of e project to make an immediate deit of ten millions of American gold in ndon urge that the Treasury Departent will be merely anticipating remitnces which must from time to time be ade in lesser amounts—with the possiility, perhaps, of affording quick and fective money market relief (and seurity market relief) both abroad and re.

Secretary Gage's consideration of the an is said to give some weight to the estion of what might be the popular ew of such an operation—as to how far might be rated a matter of mere Wall reet assistance and expediency.

With the reduction in the short interrt, to-day's market may have to stand me new tests, for bear speculators who ve been able to cover large outstanding ntracts profitably are pretty sure to reme aggressive activity the moment the arket shows a spirit of buoyancy. uch good news was heard yesterday, e influence in the market emanating om reports dated London (via Montreal d Chicago) representing that British ctories won at Ladysmith have resulted the capture of from 3,000 to 10,000 er soldiers. Manhattan Elevated, rooklyn Rapid Transit, and the local action stocks generally improved conderably on this good news, which has t more direct bearing on them perhaps an on the Steel and Wire Trust and ocking Coal and Iron; which did not so romptly respond. Still, good South frican war news ought to be as helpful bad South African war news has been. he bearing of such influences upon New ork stock market quotations passeth e understanding of ordinary common nse folks.

HE POSITION OF THE BANK OF FRANCE.

(From a Special Contributor.)

The equanimity with which the Bank of rance has held its customary course durg the increasing financial stress in Lonon, due to the South African war, and its pacity to come to the rescue with supies of the much-needed gold, when the ress threatens to become too severe, is alculated to attract special attention to at institution just now. While rates for oney ruled high all around, and the Bank England put up its discount rate to 6 r cent., a figure previously reached by e Reichsbank at Berlin, the Bank of rance kept on at 3 per cent., finally adancing only to 3½ when the British deand for gold grew importunate.

The strength of the Bank of France is ue to a variety of circumstances. It is ore distinctly a financial agency for rance than the Bank of England is for ngland, and it is not subject to such a rain under the financial operations of a idely extended empire, having commercial nnections with all the world. But for hatever part it may be called upon to ke at home or abroad, its machinery is uch less rigid and its action much less stricted than that of the "Old Lady of hreadneedle Street." It holds to-day the rgest store of the precious metals for onetary use in the world. Last week its sh resources included $375,000,000 in gold, twice and a half as much as was held the Bank of England, besides which it d $230,000,000 in silver, making its total etallic reserve over $600,000,000, against out $150,000,000 in the London institution, th all its domestic and international conections. Its note issues amounted to about 0,000,000, against which it held fully 75 r cent. in "hard money."

The Bank of France is not required to ld any fixed percentage of its deposits a reserve to secure its notes or to meet general liabilities, but it is managed th genuine conservatism and with great acity and skill, always with a strict ard for the financial interests of France, which, with its nearly eighty branches the several "departments," it is the ief custodian. It acts as the fiscal agent the Government, by whom its Governor d Deputy Governors are appointed, but atever political influence may be behind its financial acumen and integrity are ver impaired thereby.

But the great advantage of the Bank of ance lies in the flexibility of its system d the control of its management over its airs. Its gold does not have to be proted by a regulation of the discount rate d a consequent disturbance of the normal ndition of the money market. It never uses the yellow metal to its noteholders, less the notes are accumulated in large ounts and presented for the purpose of uring gold for export, and then it someies exercises its option of offering to pay silver and demanding a premium for gold. at it may, if it chooses, and for good reaon, part with its gold for a price, or loan out to relieve stress at any point where uble is threatened, receiving it back with terest when the stress is over. Twice bere in recent years it has come to the reof the Bank of England in her distress. hile its notes afford the exclusive paper rrency of France and are a full legal tenr so long as they are redeemed in coin on mand, they are not issued up to the auorized limit, and in time of a strong deand for money they can be put out in new ans. The circulation of the bank was ely increased by 100,000,000f. in a single ek, and that affords one explanation of e steadiness of the discount rate in Paris d the stability of the metallic reserve of e Bank of France.

According to an eminent financial author- to whom the writer is indebted for sugstions on this subject, the Bank of ance, and not the Bank of England, is mainstay of Great Britain in the presе financial situation, caused by the stoppge of the Transvaal gold supply and the avy drain for the transportation of troops d supplies and the costly operations of r in South Africa, which now threaten be protracted. In his opinion, the rength of this institution in such an ergency is due to the system upon which is operated, as well as the ability and ill with which it is managed. A. K. F.

SUGAR DEVELOPMENTS.

There were no new developments of conquence in sugar trade circles yesterday yond the announcement that some of the iners are selling sugar to manufacturers a sixty days' guarantee, but not to groers. What this indicates, whether a temrary lull in the storm or a cloak for the mmencement of further hostilities, no one the trade seemed to know.

In reference to the Delaware Colonial gar Refining Company, Dow, Jones & Co. terday issued this Wall Street bulletin: "We are told that the recent announcent of a new $100,000,000 Sugar Company part of a big plan for a combination of various Sugar interests. Some of the mponents of the Sugar Company have intained right along that they would not l out to the American Sugar Company. ey have not stated, however, that they uld not sell out to some one else. Mr. atthiessen is a party to the plan of merg all the companies, or most of them, into e new company, and his resignation from the American Sugar Company therefore serves a fit purpose in this matter. It is said that the new Sugar deal is well advanced toward maturity, and that it will be along lines similar to those adopted by the American Tobacco Company in securing the Liggett & Myers plant."

Mr. F. O. Matthiessen, when shown the bulletin, said that he had nothing to say.

During the day over 120,000 shares of American Sugar were traded in, the prices ranging from 126 to 131¾, with the close at 130⅜—a net gain for the day of 3¼ points.

EXTRAORDINARY EARNINGS.

Notwithstanding its better general tone, the market yesterday was still inconsistent in spots, a fact borne out by the action of Colorado Fuel and Iron stocks in the face of a report in respect to its earnings which was in every sense of the word essentially favorable. This report showed that the net earnings of the company for the month of October were $182,800, an increase of no less than $121,000 over the same month last year, while since July 1 the earnings have been $574,100, as compared with $243,000 in 1898. Yet, despite this exceptionally good report, the preferred stock of the company showed a fractional decline, though the common stock gained two points.

It is pointed out that fixed charges for twelve months ending June 30, 1900, including bond interest, taxes, and preferred stock dividends, amount to $600,000, or only $25,900 more than the net earnings for the first four months of the fiscal year.

RUMORS OF LITIGATION.

As explanatory of the weakness of Brooklyn Rapid Transit for the greater part of the day yesterday, the Street was full of rumors of new and serious litigation begun or pending against the company, and it was even said that some of the interests now alleged to be back of the property were parting with their holdings as a consequence.

At the office of Sheehan & Collin, counsel for the company, Mr. Sheehan, discussing the rumors, said: "They are Wall Street fables, and there is absolutely nothing in them. Certainly no new suits have as yet been brought against the company. What may be pending, I, of course, don't know."

ABREAST OF THE TIMES.

General Manager and Second Vice President Kendrick of the Northern Pacific, which on Wednesday declared an extra 1 per cent. dividend on its common stock, shows clearly that, though the road is paying extra dividends, it nevertheless is easily keeping abreast of the times in respect to betterments and improvements. He says:

"This season we have laid 370 miles of new track and in addition have graded and ballasted 570 more miles. Everything is in splendid shape, and, thanks to the open season, we have been able to carry our work right up to the present time. Our business is very satisfactory."

TRYING TO DISLODGE A POOL.

The trading yesterday in Federal Steel was quite active, and the preferred stock at one time showed a decline of 4 points, while the common for a time fell off nearly 3 points. Both issues, however, recovered in the afternoon, and closed with only a fractional decline each.

Concerning what seemed to be a drive at the stock in the morning it was stated on the Street that an effort was being made to dislodge a 60,000 share pool, said to have been formed not long ago. If that is the case, the effort was unsuccessful.

HEAVY FOREIGN SHIPMENTS.

In reference to the report that the American Steel and Wire Company had made a contract to deliver 250,000 tons of wire and nails in Germany, an officer of that company said yesterday:

"Such an anncuncement should occasion no surprise. As a matter of fact, we are constantly sending large shipments abroad. Our export trade is a no small factor in the company's business, and what is most gratifying, is that it is steadily on the increase."

In this connection, it is stated that the company's consignments to Australia were last month the heaviest in its history.

AN EMPHATIC DENIAL.

In reference to a report that $11,500,000 Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Consolidated 7s maturing June 1, 1900, were to be paid off by a sale of Jersey Central stock at par to present stockholders, President Maxwell of the Jersey Central said yesterday:

"The story is made out of whole cloth, and there is absolutely nothing to it. The bonds, it is true, are due June 1, and we must raise the money to pay for them, but we will not do so by selling our stock. There are, I may say, only $5,300,000 of these bonds in the hands of the public, and we hold the rest."

LONDON'S LATE BUYING.

An interesting feature in connection with yesterday's market was the late buying for London account, which continued practically up to 3 o'clock, though ordinarily it is concluded several hours before. The explanation was that the cables were belated by a storm and did not arrive on their usual time. All told, London must have bought some 60,000 shares. Interesting, also, in market conditions was the wonderful activity in trading on the first hour after the opening here, when something like 300,000 shares were dealt in, more than one-fourth of the transactions of the entire day.

CRYING FOR MORE CARS.

As another evidence of Southern prosperity announcement is made from Louisville that the officials of the Louisville and Nashville declare that they could use 5,000 more cars at present, as they have much more freight than they can satisfactorily handle for some time.

REPORT NOT VERIFIED.

It was reported yesterday that a well-known Stock Exchange broker, who has recently been more or less prominent in Sugar Trust speculation, was to be cited to appear before the Governing Committee to answer some certain charges of alleged misconduct which it is said had been preferred against him.

Nothing definite, however, could be learned of the matter and officials at the Exchange denied any knowledge of any such probable action.

BANK OF ENGLAND'S STATEMENT

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—On the Stock Exchange, at 2 o'clock, Rand Mines suddenly jumped up £1 on the rumors that Gen. Clery had entered Ladysmith, and that Gen. Buller had captured 3,000 Boers. The boom did not last, and South African securities closed very unsettled. Rand Mines closed at 38⅛, after jumping to 38¾ from 35½. Gold Fields closed at 7¼, after rising to 8⅜ from 6⅝.

The market for American securities, after a steady opening, fluctuated early and improved on a more buoyant feeling. Three small failures were reported. The closing tone was firm with the demand improving.

Consols for money, 101⅛; consols for the account, 101 11-16; Canadian, 95¼; Erie, 12½; Erie first preferred, 36; Illinois Central, 115; Union Pacific preferred, 76⅞; St. Paul, 122; New York Central, 137; Pennsylvania, 67½; Reading, 9½; Northern Pacific preferred, 75⅞; Atchison, 20⅝; Louisville, 82¼; Grand Trunk, 7; Anaconda, 8.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—On the Bourse to-day prices opened dull, but improved on buying orders from London, rumors of the relief of Ladysmith and the unchanged bank rate. They closed very firm. Spanish fours and Rio Tintos made a sharp advance, the former closing at 67.95. Three per cent. rentes, 100 francs 60 centimes for the account. Exchange on London, 25 francs 32½ centimes for checks.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Notes in circulation, decreased, 6,900,000 francs; Treasury accounts current, increased, 16,225,000 francs; gold in hand, decreased, 3,350,000 francs; bills discounted, decreased, 11,750,000 francs; silver in hand, decreased, 2,350,000 francs.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—Prices opened weak on the Boerse to-day, but made a good recovery at the close, owing to the same reasons which influenced the Paris Bourse. Exchange on London, 20 marks 52½ pfennigs for checks. Private rate of discount, 6 per cent.

FRANKFORT, Dec. 14.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were weak, but improved toward the close. There was little business doing.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—Boston and Montana, which closed Saturday at 295 and yesterday at 275, opened to-day at 265, fell further to 250, and rallied to 280. Arcadian fell 4½ to 18½, rallying to 21; Atlantic, 3 to 21; Butte, 6 to 39, rallying to 42, and closing at 40; Calumet and Hecla, 10 to 720, rallying to 725; Cochiti, ¾ to 12¼; Central Oil, 1 to 18½, rallying ½; Dominion Coal, 2½ to 43, rallying to 45, and closing at 44⅛; Elm River, ½ to 5; Franklin, 1½ to 13½; Mohawk, ¾ to 15; Osceola, 5½ to 6½, rallying to 65; Parrot, 2¼ to 32½, rallying to 34⅝; Quincy, 4 to 132, rallying to 154; Santa Fé, 1 to 5; Tamarack, 10 to 180, rallying to 185.

United States Mining rose 1⅜ to 30⅝, later 30¼. United States Oil sold ex dividend of 1½, opening at 25, against 34 at the close yesterday, equivalent to a decline of 7⅜; thence selling up to 30, and closing at 27½. Wolverine was off 3, at 35, rallying to 35¾; Utah lost 3, to 26, but later sold at 27¾; Old Dominion fell 3 to 19, later 21¾; Isle Royale lost 4 to 21, later 23½. New England Gas and Coke declined 1¼ net for the day, closing at 13⅝. American Zinc was off 5, at 20. Bell Telephone lost 10 to 335; Boston Elevated, 4½ to 94.

Call loans, 6@7 per cent; time money, 5@6; commercial paper, 5½@6. At the Clearing House balances between the banks loaned at 6 per cent.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Linseed preferred opened at 51⅞ and advanced to 53½, closing at 52¼. The common, which opened at 12, declined one-fourth of 1 point, and then rose to 12¼, closing at 12⅜. Biscuit common opened at 34, and then fluctuated nervously from 33⅝ to 34⅜, until after the call, when it dropped to 33½, and closed at 34. There was a drop of 1¼ points from the opening of Metropolitan preferred, at 77, after which it advanced to 78, and closed at 77¼. Match broke 1½ points from the opening, at 124½, but rose to 125, dropped again to 123½, and closed at the starting figure.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Heavy selling of Amalgamated Copper for Boston account at the opening of yesterday's market for outside securities brought about a sharp decline in that stock and exercised an unfavorable influence on the whole market. Liquidation was apparent in a number of other issues, and several declines of 2 or more points were recorded. Declines seemed less the result of bear attacks than they had been on the several preceding days, and yesterday there were probably more efforts made to advance prices than to bring about further recessions in quotations. A number of issues that were weak during the morning became stronger in the late trading and recovered much of their early losses. At the close the market was irregular and net changes for the day were pretty evenly divided between advances and declines, but the larger changes were on the side of net losses. Trading was active in several issues besides Amalgamated Copper, Electric Axle and several of the industrial stocks showing fairly large totals.

Amalgamated Copper.—As a result apparently of the temporary embarrassment of one of the Boston banks a large amount of Amalgamated Copper was put in the market at the opening, and caused a decline of 2 points in that stock. It opened at 79, and on transactions amounting probably to 4,000 shares sold down to 77¼. The sharp decline was due partly to fear that the situation in Boston was even worse than reported and that it might lead to the throwing over of large blocks of the copper stocks. When it was learned that the bank that had been in difficulty had received assistance through the Clearing House, there was less desire to sell Amalgamated Copper, and it recovered nearly the entire amount of the early decline. It sold back to 79, and ended the day at 78⅝ bid, a net loss of half a point. Total sales amounted to about 5,000 shares.

In several prominent stocks, including two or three of the preferred issues of industrial stocks, urgent selling led to declines of a number of points. Comparatively little demand was shown for these issues, and sellers found it difficult to dispose of them except at considerable recessions from the latest sales. In some cases the bids recovered very sharply after the liquidation that marked the opening of the market was over, but in the majority of these issues closing bids were little better than the lowest. Among the industrial stocks that went off sharply were Havana Commercial preferred, International Pump preferred, Electric Boat common and preferred, and Standard Oil.

International Pump preferred opened at 63. It dropped a point between sales, to 61, at which figure about 500 shares changed hands. In the afternoon the price went up more than a point, and it closed at 62¾ bid, showing a loss of about 2 points. Transactions in the common stock amounted to about 500 shares, which sold at 14 and 14⅛.

Havana Commercial preferred sold at 60 to the extent of several hundred shares, and later the price dropped to 50. In this as well as in other issues sellers found it necessary to take practically what they could get. It was a day of liquidation, and buyers found it more to their advantage to await offerings of stock than to bid for them.

Electric Boat sold as low as 26¼, and closed with a net loss of 3 points, at 26 bid. A small lot of the preferred stock sold at 35, and this issue closed about 5 points lower than on Wednesday.

Illinois Transportation sold at 2 during the weak market of the early part of the day, but later was in good demand at 2¼, closing at this figure and showing no net change for the day.

New York Transportation was weak, selling off to 9⅜. It closed at 9¼ bid, a net loss of three-quarters of a point.

New England Transportation sold at 6, and at the close was offered at 6½ without a bid.

Rubber Tire common sold to the extent of 200 or 300 shares at 7, and one lot of the preferred stock changed hands at 35.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

W. E. D. Stokes Sells His House for $325,000—Other Dealings and Sales at Auction.

W. E. D. Stokes, the broker, has sold to William H. Moore of Chicago the dwelling 4 East Fifty-fourth Street. This house, which is just being completed, was erected by Mr. Stokes with the idea of making it his residence and may safely be classed as one of the finest private dwellings in the city. It is of the American basement type and occupies a lot 36 by 100. Mr. Golding would not disclose the price paid for the property, but it is understood to be something over $325,000.

It is learned on good authority that the following men are interested in the syndicate which will buy the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum property: Henry Seligman, Charles T. Barney, John A. McCall, William F. Havemeyer, William A. Butler, Jr., Edward N. Gibbs, Edmund L. Baylies, and George F. Vieter.

Henry D. Winans & May report the sale, for C. Adolph Low, of 16 East Sixty-ninth Street, of a 33-foot four-story brown-stone modern dwelling, to Henry B. Anderson; also, for Mrs. A. Kneeland, 16 East Sixty-second Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, 20.6 feet front; also, for Mrs. Sidney Dillon Ripley, 38 West Thirty-third Street, a four-story brownstone private dwelling, 25 feet front; also, for Mrs. S. Gruner, to A. J. Ditmar, 29 West Eighty-first Street, a four-story private dwelling, fronting 25 feet on Manhattan Square.

It is reported that William E. Shepard has bought the four-story dwelling 16 East Sixty-ninth Street, 33 by 100.5.

Edward P. Hamilton & Co. report that they have sold the five-story apartment house 60 West One Hundred and Fourth Street, 33.4 by 87 by 100.

Bleiman & Co. have sold for J. Sander to Mandelbaum & Lewine the three-story dwelling, 54 East First Street, 20 by 100. Mandelbaum & Lewine have also bought the four-story dwelling 26 West Ninth Street, 25 by 94, and the three-story dwelling 268 Bleecker Street, 18 by 60.

Ghames & Losere have sold for Robert Ghames to H. W. Badger the two-story dwelling on the west side of Green Avenue, Unionport, 200 feet north of Westchester Avenue.

William Stonebridge has sold for Charles Worrell to George Clark, for about $2,500, the northeast corner of One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Street and Hughes Avenue, 75 by 87.6.

David Stewart has sold for John B. Wilson to a client the vacant plot, 50 by 100, on the north side of One Hundred and Eighty-fourth street, 200 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue.

ENJOIN THE GOVERNOR

Whalen Institutes Proceedings to Stop Astoria Grant.

..L SUE FOR AN INJUNCTION

..any Officials Say Action Is Taken Too Late—The Governor Cannot Be Restrained.

..BANY, Dec. 14.—John T. O'Brien, rep..nting Corporation Counsel John Whalen ..ew York City, came to Albany to-day served papers on Gov. Roosevelt, Sec..y of State McDonough, Attorney Gen..Davies, Controller Morgan, and other ..mbers of the State Land Board to re..n and enjoin the Commissioners from ..ting the application of the Astoria ..t, Heat and Power Company for a ..t of sixteen and one-half acres of land ..r water at Astoria. The Corporation ..nsel will move for the granting of such ..nction at a special term of the Supreme ..rt to be held at Albany Dec. 26.

..e injunction also seeks to restrain Sec..ry of State McDonough from issuing letters patent of land under water to Astoria Company, or Gov. Roosevelt ..n signing such letters patent.

..e proceedings are instituted on the affi..t of Corporation Counsel Whalen, who, ..r reciting the facts of the case, declares ..e issuance of the grants will result in ..parable loss to the city incapable of ..g redressed in money damages, and, in ..dition, the issuance of such grants will ..nously interfere with the administration ..he affairs of the Department of Docks Ferries, and particularly with the plan ..he water front of the City of New York, ..he same is being contemplated and ma..ed for the future government of the said ..er front. Wherefore the plaintiff prays ..t an injunction issue perpetually re..aining and enjoining the defendants, the ..mmissioners of the Land Office, from ..nting the applications of the Astoria ..mpany.

..ecretary of State McDonough to-day, in ..cussing the matter, said that so far as ..action and motion for the injunction ..cted the Commissioners of the Land ..ce, the suit seems to be late. The acts ..ch it is proposed to enjoin them from ..g were done at the meeting of the ..rd on Dec. 7. They then passed the ..olution making the grant in question, and ..t, having done this, their function ended ..to this grant.

When the money was paid to the State," added, "the Deputy Secretary of State ..ned the patent and sent it to the Gov..or. The patent has been in the hands ..the Governor for several days, so that ..hing remains to be done by the Land ..rd, and therefore nothing that they may restrained from doing. The complaint ..mands as relief that an injunction shall ..granted restraining the Land Board and Governor from executing and issuing ..s patent. Inasmuch as the only remain..act to be done is that of the Governor executing the patent, if the injunction granted the effect will be to restrain the ..vernor from the performance of an ex..tive act.

I am sure," he continued, "that the ..rney Corporation Counsel of New York ..st know that no court in the State has ..risdiction to restrain and prevent the ..vernor from the performance of his offi..l duties. In the Broderick case, which ..s decided by the Court of Appeals last ..r, where it was sought to compel Gov..rton and the other members of the Board ..Trustees of Public Buildings to reinstate ..oderick, under the law giving preference ..veterans, the Court held that a man..mus could not be issued as against the ..vernor, that the Executive department ..the Government was a co-ordinate ..anch, and could not be controlled by the ..iciary.

In view of this decision of the Court of ..peals, I doubt very much whether the ..al question, that is, as to whether the ..te may grant title to lands under water ..hin the territory of Greater New York, ..n be raised in this case. It seems to me ..at if the City of New York desires to ..view the action of the board some other ..thod should be resorted to.

I notice, by the eighth allegation of the ..mplaint, it is alleged that the Commis..ners of the Land Office had no legal ..ht or authority to make the grant in ..estion. If that be true, then the grant ..ued pursuant to the resolution of the Com..ssioners must be void, and therefore ..sts no title in the grantee, and it seems ..me strange that an effort should be made ..enjoin the board from the performance ..what is claimed to be an absolutely void ..t." The only proceeding that can lie is a ..it of certiorari for the review of the pro..edings of the board under which the grant ..s made.

Gov. Roosevelt will take no action as to ..e disposition he will make of the letters ..tent until a decision shall be rendered by ..e Supreme Court on the application of ..rporation Counsel Whalen. The Governor ..ught Attorney General Davies's advice ..e to what effect the service of the notice ..the motion to be argued on Dec. 26 has ..n his powers in the matter, and, while the ..inion of the Attorney General is that the ..urt has no power to enjoin the Governor ..nd that the service of a motion does not ..esen or prevent an exercise of his powers ..e the pending case, he advised the Gov..nor that it would be best, out of courtesy ..o the court, to take no action in regard to ..e letters patent until the courts have ..isposed of the proceedings which Mr. ..halen has instituted.

The special committee of the Land Board ..ppointed to procure information relative ..o grants of land under water made by the ..oard within the corporate limits of Great..r New York has submitted to the Gov..rnor a report containing the desired in..rmation. While this report has not been ..ade public, it is said that it shows that ..he price charged for the land granted to ..he Astoria Company is on a par with other ..rants made in that locality.

The officials of the Law Department yes..erday declared that the action to prevent ..he grant to the Astoria Light, Heat ..nd Power Company was taken merely be..ause this application was the first one on ..he calendar of the Land Board, and not ..ecause of any opposition there might be ..o the company as a result of the Astoria ..as scandal at the last session of the Leg..slature. "There is nothing behind the at..ack," said Assistant Corporation Counsel ..reedman. "We are merely opposed to the State ..iving away franchises which should belong ..o the city, and we mean to contest every ..pplication made under these circumstances ..until we get a final judicial decision."

ASTORIA GRANT INDORSED.

Republicans of Queens Want the Governor to Confirm It.

The efforts of the Astoria Light, Heat and Power Company to secure the Governor's approval of the grant of land under water at Berrian's Island made to it by the State Land Board have been indorsed by the organization of the Republican Party in the Borough of Queens. At a meeting of the Queens County Republican Committee held in the Lincoln Club House, Third Street, Long Island City, yesterday afternoon, a preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted and the Secretary was directed to send a certified copy to Gov. Roosevelt. The resolution was offered by Postmaster George Ripperger of Long Island City.

The preamble and resolution adopted by the committee are as follows:

Whereas, The State Land Commissioners of the State of New York have granted to the Astoria Light, Heat and Power Company certain privileges in relation to the occupancy and improvement of land around Berrian's Island, City of New York; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Republican County Committee, hereby indorse and approve the action of said Land Commission, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to his Excellency the Governor.

Grants of Land Under Water.

The New York, Woodhaven and Rockaway Beach Railroad has received from the State Land Commissioners two grants of land under water in Jamaica Bay, aggregating sity acres. The land is located off the northeast corner of the railroad company's dock at Hammill's, Queens Borough.

Ladies' Day at Lotos Club.

The first ladies' day of the season was given by the Lotos Club at its clubhouse yesterday afternoon. During the hours of the reception, from 2 to 5 o'clock, there was a large attendance of women who had received cards of invitation from members of the club and who listened to some good music and enjoyed refreshments. The first art exhibition of the season at the Lotos Club, which will consist of a number of American landscapes, will begin this afternoon and continue for several days.

The silky Astrachan, that comes only from Europe, makes the most luxurious overcoat possible to make—almost too luxurious; doesn't give real hard service.

But some men insist upon the very best, regardless of wear and cost, and we have it, in smooth as well as rough, in all sorts of cloths and all kinds of make-up—an overcoat stock neither we nor others can hope to better.

$50 was the price of all the Astrachans, but the olive brown hasn't proved popular—so we've chopped its price down to $35. Only the olive brown.

LEGAL NOTES.

ENTITLED TO BACK PAY.—Justice Bischoff yesterday, in settling the order in the case of Simon Warschauer and others, who in mandamus proceedings were required to be reinstated as Inspectors of Water Supply at a salary of $3 a day, from which position they were removed by William Dalton, Commissioner of Water Supply, held that these men were entitled to a direction that Mr. Dalton audit their claims for the amount of their back pay for the period during which they were wrongfully prevented from performing their duties.

RIGHT TO SURPLUS MONEYS.—When Mrs. Jane E. Campbell purchased certain real estate in this city in December, 1894, the consideration for the conveyance was paid entirely by her husband, William C. Campbell. He was indebted at the time to the Central National Bank for more than $10,000, and he also owed Daniel H. and Hiram C. Bennett. Mrs. Jennie J. Mandeville recently brought an action to foreclose her purchase money mortgage upon this property, and upon the foreclosure sale there was a surplus of something more than $12,000, which was deposited with the City Chamberlain. Each of the parties made a claim to this surplus. It appeared on the hearing before a referee that the bank and the Bennetts had each obtained judgment against Campbell, the former in February, 1896, and the latter in April of the same year. Then the Bennetts began a suit against Mrs. Campbell to enforce their lien as creditors upon the lands conveyed to her, and they recovered a judgment in their favor. Subsequently a like suit was begun by the bank, and a lis pendens was filed, but the action was never tried. The First Appellate Division has now affirmed an order made in the surplus money proceeding, deciding that the Bennetts were entitled to all the surplus money. The Court holds, by Justice Rumsey, that under Section 4 of the real property law of 1896, which provides that where the consideration for a grant is paid by another than the grantee it shall be presumed fraudulent as against the creditors of the person paying the consideration, and where a fraudulent intent is not disproved, a trust shall result in favor of such creditors, a creditor first perfecting an action in equity, after exhausting legal remedies to reach the trust property, acquires a lien prior to those of other creditors, entitling his claim to preference over theirs.

VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATION.—When the Dolgeville Electric Light and Power Company instituted proceedings by petition to wind up its affairs, on the ground of its insolvency, the Commercial Bank, a creditor, interposed the objection that as the petition was not verified by a majority of the Directors, the court had no jurisdiction. It appeared that something more than a year before the petition was filed an attempt had been made to reduce the number of Directors from thirteen to five, and that the petition had been signed by four of these five. The Court of Appeals has reversed an order of the Fourth Appellate Division, affirming two orders of the Special Term, one confirming the report of the referee dissolving the corporation and the other denying the bank's application to dismiss the proceeding. Chief Judge Parker, giving the court's opinion, holds that the petition presented in such proceeding to empower the court to act must have been verified by a majority of the Directors, and that to legally increase or reduce the number of Directors of a stock corporation a transcript of the minutes of the stockholders' meeting at which the change was determined upon shall have been filed in the offices where the original certificate of incorporation was filed, as provided by Section 21 of the stock corporation law. As the filing of the transcript in this case was not done until after the proceedings were instituted, it was held that the petition was not signed by a majority of its Directors.

CONTRACT TO IMPROVE BOTTOM OF PARK LAKE.—William G. Horgan contracted with the city in January, 1893, for clearing and concreting the bottom of the Park lake called "The Pond," near Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth and Sixth Avenues. The contract provided that the contractor should drain off all water from the bottom during the progress of the work, that he should furnish all pumping or bailing required for the proper prosecution of the work, and that he should satisfy himself as to the nature and amount of the work to be done by personal examination of the location. There was an outlet pipe in the bottom of the lake, the gate of which only was visible on Mr. Horgan's personal examination of the proposed work; but, on his attempting to draw off the water thereby in the progress of the work, the underground pipe or sewer proved to be obstructed and failed to remove the water for a considerable depth. Mr. Horgan was consequently compelled to pump out the water, and for so doing he claimed to recover from the city as for extra work. A judgment dismissing the complaint in September, 1896, was unanimously affirmed by the First Appellate Division a year later, Justice Barrett giving the opinion. The Court of Appeals has directed a reversal, holding, in an opinion by Judge Bartlett, Judges Gray and O'Brien dissenting, that a provision in the contract that all loss or damage arising out of the nature of the work to be done, or from any unforeseen obstruction or difficulties which might be encountered in its prosecution, or from incumbrances on the line of the work, should be sustained by the contractor, applied to the work to be done, and to the unforeseen obstruction or difficulties which might be encountered under the contract, and therefore did not affect the extra work to which the contractor was subjected because of the unforeseen obstruction in the outlet pipe, such obstruction being entirely outside the contract. The municipality having, by its own act, caused the work to be done to be more expensive than it otherwise would have been under the original contract, was held to be liable to the contractor for the increased cost or extra work.

WILCOXSON SEPARATION SUIT.

Husband, Accused of Cruelty, Says the Conduct of His Wife Caused Their Domestic Trouble.

Martin Niles Wilcoxson, whose wife is suing him for a separation on the ground of cruelty, was put on the stand before Justice Russell, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, and told his side of the case. Mrs. Wilcoxson frequently showed by her whispered protests to her lawyer that she disagreed with the testimony of the defendant.

Mr. Zaring, his counsel, began at once to question him about his wife's doings with Capt. Parker at Glengariff Castle. "Was Capt. Parker stopping at the castle when you were there?" he asked.

"He was," the witness replied.

"Do you know that he was requested to leave because of his intimacy with Mrs. Wilcoxson?"

"He was requested to leave by his host because it looked as if they were intimate."

"Did you speak to your wife about the matter?"

"Yes. I told her that while I did not think that there was anything really wrong, she had certainly acted improperly, and that she had given rise to scandalous remarks on the part of others."

Mr. Zaring questioned him about letters that had been sent to his mother by the owner of the leased Grange Erin. This lady at first requested, and at last insisted, that Mrs. Wilcoxson must leave, as her actions were giving the place a bad name. These letters, Mrs. Wilcoxson said, were opened by him after his mother's death and shown to his wife. "I told her," said he, "that I had no reason to think that she was doing anything wrong, but her reception of army officers alone for hours at a time while I was away gave rise to talk. I told her that she was disgracing herself and her children by acting so. Mrs. Wilcoxson said that the letters were libelous. I told her that maybe they were, but that her actions had given people the opportunity to talk that way of her."

Mrs. Wilcoxson, the witness said, at one time told him that she was in love with an officer, and that she was going to get a divorce if she could, and if not she would go and live near him. He told of a time when she deserted him at Ostend. The tearing up of the letters, which led to her assault upon him with a whip, he said, was in consequence of Mrs. Wilcoxson's frank avowal of her love for the officer.

Mrs. Wilcoxson, he said, had in her room the photographs of Capt. Hull and Mr. Douglass. By the side of each she had a nude painting which the witness gave her before they were married. "I especially objected to Capt. Hull's photograph," he said. "I had objected mildly to them before, but when I found the servants were laughing about them I determined to take them down. I had threatened to do so before, but every time I spoke of it Mrs. Wilcoxson packed her trunk and said she would go away.

"I went in and tore up Capt. Hull's photograph. She ordered me out of the room, but I went on and tore up the photograph of Douglass as well. She said to me, 'This ends everything.' She reached up to the mantel, where she had a cowhide whip her father had given her. It was about three feet long, two inches at the butt, and was what is called a loaded cowhide. She picked it up and struck me across the face with it. I did not attempt to take hold of her. I simply put up my hands to ward off the blows from my face. I turned and went out of the room and went into Miss Lindsay's room. I said to her, 'Miss Lindsay, will you bear witness that Mrs. Wilcoxson struck me.' 'Yes, I will,' she said. 'She is a bad woman. I know that. I am sorry for you.'"

Wilcoxson also told of the incident connected with the gun, which his wife had mentioned. He said that they had talked together about a letter she had received. She picked up the gun, he said, and went out of the house with it. He called Mary Ellen, her confidential servant, and told her to follow her, as she was hysterical. He then went to a window near which she stood. The maid cried out that she could not get the gun from Mrs. Wilcoxson, and he went out himself. She cried to him, "Step a step nearer and I will shoot you." Wilcoxson said he ducked his head and caught the muzzle of the gun. He discharged it himself and then took it away from her.

Susan Elizabeth Boice, who acted as housekeeper for the couple at the Catskill house, testified to certain occurrences there. The defense then rested, and Justice Russell reserved his decision.

Bank Employes' Pay Increased.

A 10 per cent. advance was made yesterday in the salaries of the employes of the Provident Institution for Savings at Washington and Grand Streets, Jersey City. The managers re-elected the officers. The President is Edward W. Kingsland. The deposits received during the year ending Oct. 1 were $3,001,639.93; the amount paid out, $2,554,141.67. The total number of depositors was 24,200, a gain of 2,000.

EXCHANGE MEMBER EXPELLED.

Washington L. Galbraith of the Consolidated Found Guilty of "Obvious Fraud."

Washington L. Galbraith was found guilty last evening of "obvious fraud" by the Board of Directors of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange and was expelled from membership. The technical charge against him involved specifications of conduct prejudicial to the welfare and repute of the Exchange, and the fundamental offense was sending out circulars of the Franklin Syndicate character after the officers of the Exchange had prohibited such practices.

Galbraith has handsome offices at 39 Wall Street, and lives at 210 Second Avenue. He joined the Consolidated Exchange in October, 1896. He had been in Wall Street for several years before he went into business for himself, and was last employed by E. B. Cuthbert & Co., who went out of business under an assignment. When Miller's concern in Brooklyn was attracting public attention Galbraith was issuing circulars which promised great returns on money confided to him for investment. The Exchange Directors made a ruling against the sending out of such circulars by members, and their claim is that he disregarded it. Galbraith was arraigned before the Directors Dec. 7, and part of the evidence against him was his circulars, which conveyed the impression that he was syndicating his phenomenal luck. One of these circulars said, in part:

Since writing you on Oct. 1 we have made a number of profitable turns for our clients in the stock market; parties who complied with our request to have funds in our hand on Oct. 10 have earned upward of 100 per cent. on their investments, and their profits are increasing every day.

The Directors were in session nearly two hours last evening before passing the resolutions adjudging him guilty of obvious fraud and expelling him. In discussing the charges against him, Galbraith insisted that when action was taken by the Directors because of the Franklin Syndicate scandal he ceased to send out his circulars. When summoned before the Directors he exhibited his trades to prove that he executed every contract he entered into. He considered that he had dealt fairly with his customers. Members of the board which decided Galbraith's case said that they knew of no action having been taken against him by any of his customers.

HIGH BIDS FOR SEIZED GOODS.

Four Lots Auctioned at the Public Stores Fascinated Buyers.

Unusual bids prevailed at the auction sale of seized goods at the Seizure Room in the Public Stores yesterday. Some of the goods sold had been seized for undervaluation, and some because of attempts to smuggle them. The sale realized nearly $5,700. The lot which brought the highest price was a pair of diamond earrings. They sold for $250. They had been appraised at only $150.

An antique inlaid table of French make, which was appraised at $64, and which was seized because that was more than 50 per cent. in excess of the invoice value, sold for $101. It had one leg broken, and was otherwise somewhat damaged. It is surmised that one reason for this extraordinary price was the fact that there was one drawer which the Custom House officials had not been able to unlock. Some of the bidders seemed to think that in this drawer would be found treasures of some French nobleman of Revolutionary times.

There were also seven cases of khaki machinery, which sold pretty well. They were said to have cost $117, and the duty would have been 45 per cent. ad valorem. The lot sold for $232.50.

A cigar dealer on the Bowery paid $7 a hundred for a lot of Puerto Rican cigars, which he afterward learned cost 48 cents a hundred in Puerto Rico.

REV. KIELY'S WILL CONTESTED.

Charge of Fraud Against His Spiritual Adviser, Father Hefy.

A contest over the will of the Rev. John M. Kiely, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of the Transfiguration, who died on August 9 last, was begun in Surrogate Abbott's court, Brooklyn, yesterday. The ground of the contest is that Father Kiely was insane when he executed his will on Sept. 15, 1898. The will provides that $500 shall be expended in caring for his grave, $500 is to be paid to the Church of the Transfiguration for masses, and $1,000 is to be given to the parochial school. There are other bequests to relatives and for charity. The residuary legatee is the Rev. Father J. J. Hefy. He and Jacob Hurtz are named as executors.

Objections to the will are filed by Cornelius O'Connor, official guardian for Maurice F. and Christine Kiely, children of John F. Kiely, Father Kiely's brother, who has been missing since 1895. O'Connor alleges that Father Kiely was insane for sixteen months prior to the execution of the will and that Father Hefy, who was his spiritual adviser and nurse, procured the execution of the will by fraud. O'Connor also alleges that between Jan. 1, 1890, and May 22, 1897, Father Kiely executed a will making John F. Kiely's children his beneficiaries.

In the Surrogate's Court yesterday Lawyer Francis A. McCloskey moved to set aside the order appointing O'Connor special guardian of the infants. That there was no proof that John F. Kiely is dead. Surrogate Abbott said the special guardian would have to prove the existence of the prior will and adjourned the hearing for a week.

FOR NAVAL VETERANS' HOME.

Movement to Build It Launched at Musical and Dramatic Tea.

The movement for the building of the Naval Veterans' Home was successfully launched yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at a largely attended musical and dramatic tea given at the residence of Mrs. George W. Dilks, 34 West Ninth Street. The diversion was originated and conducted by Mrs. Andrew J. Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dilks.

Letters were read from Admiral Dewey, Gen. Miles, Secretary Long, Assistant Secretary Allen, Miss Bailey, the Chinese Minister, and others expressing sympathy with the movement and regretting their inability to be present at the tea. William C. Whitney sent a check for the proposed home, as did John Drew, who was to have taken part in the entertainment, but was unable to do so.

Those who took an active part in the entertainment included Lillian Russell, Mme. Giulia Valda, Mr. Dellinger, "Frona" Eldridge, Paul Johnning, "Aunt Louisa" Eldridge, Thomas Karl, and Levy's Orchestra. Mrs. Donald McLean made an address on "The Navy." The Reception Committee included Mrs. G. W. Dilks, Mrs. A. J. Robinson, Mrs. William T. Salter, Mrs. Bruce Crane, and Miss Justice. Among those present were Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Randolph Coppenhefner, Mrs. Clarence Postley, Miss Postley, Mrs. Frederick Bacon, Mrs. G. Westervelt, and Mrs. Walter Smith.

During the afternoon there was a discussion of plans for the Naval Fair, which will probably be held at Madison Square Garden during the first week of March, 1900, for the benefit of the building fund of the proposed home.

FLINT'S FINE FURNITURE

A CHAPTER ON CHAIRS.

From time immemorial there has hovered sentiment about chairs. Who should we care to now possess a genuine Windsor or Chippendale, with a direct lineage to back it, but no longer able to hold any weight, when it is possible to have their replicas with the same exquisite polishings and grainings in acclimated wood?

With the matching period past, every piece of furniture stands on its own basis of elegance. There is the low-backed, wide-legged chair with broad arms, that is Dutch. Mayhap its neighbor has a high, carved back and curiously twisted legs—that is Flemish. Comfort in both or nineteenth century common sense. Our ancestors often made comfort a minor point.

Mahogany harmonizes with everything; in the dainty Louis XV. or XVI. style or in the Dutch marqueterie, it cannot fail to add a note of beauty to any furnishings, however economical or extravagant they are.

CONGRESS.—In the House yesterday the debate on the Currency bill was continued. Mr. Scudder and Mr. Clayton, two New York Democrats, supported the measure. A lively tilt took place in the House between two Democratic members from Kentucky over the Goebel contest.—Page 3.

FOREIGN.—Gen. Buller, the British commander in South Africa, while trying to force the passage of the Tugela River yesterday, met with a crushing defeat. His troops were driven back by the Boer riflemen, and were compelled to abandon ten guns after losing one from the enemy's shell fire. The official dispatch intimates that the loss of life was great. A force of Boers has been discovered in Gen. Methuen's rear. The British announce that an attack on Mafeking has been repulsed. Baron von Suesskind, the German Military Attaché at Paris, has been withdrawn. The Dreyfus case and subsequent attacks of the French press are admitted to be the causes which led to the action. CHICAGO'S TENEMENT HOUSES.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Chicago's display in the tenement house exhibition which opens in New York Jan. 15, under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society of that city, is almost ready. Under the direction of the Improved Housing Association, a general committee, with the help of a number of sub-committees, have been working diligently for some time. As a result, John M. George, Secretary General of the committee, has to report that with the exception of a few minor details all the work has been turned in.

Six large maps have been prepared showing, first, the most densely populated portions of Chicago; second, the mortality rates from all causes; third, the zymotic or germ diseases; fourth, diphtheria; fifth, tuberculosis, and, sixth, child mortality.

There are also two dozen photographs showing typical poor dwellings in the First, Seventh, Sixteenth, and Nineteenth Wards, in the stock yards district, near the University of Chicago Settlement, and in the Bohemian district along Blue Island Avenue.

PATERSON WRECK CLAIM PAID.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN Dec. 15.—Ex-Judge Lucius F. Deming of this city to-day filed a bond of $2,000 in the Probate Court as administrator of the estate of Mrs. Alexander Craig, who was killed, with her husband and two children, in a railroad wreck at Paterson, N. J., recently.

Judge Deming said to-day that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, through its attorney, had offered to settle with the heirs of Mrs. Craig for damages. Judge Deming refuses to state the terms of the settlement. They are satisfactory, however, for the heirs have concluded not to bring any damage suits. Judge McGee, counsel for the railroad, has been negotiating with Judge Deming over the settlement.

It is expected a similar line of settlement will be made with Mr. Craig's heirs. The action of the railroad was voluntary.

BULLER ROUTED; LOSES 11 GUNS

British Meet Crushing Defeat at Tugela River.

ARTILLERY IN A TRAP

After Hard Fighting Two Batteries Are Abandoned.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE.

Reported that One Brigade Suffered Severely—Battle Brought on While Trying to Relieve Gen. White.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The War Office has received a dispatch announcing that Gen. Buller yesterday met with a serious reverse, losing eleven guns.

He was attempting to force the passage of the Tugela River. Finding it impossible to effect his object, he ordered a retirement in order to avoid greater losses.

Ten of the guns lost were abandoned, while one was put out of action by the Boer shell fire.

The following is the text of Gen. Buller's dispatch:

"Buller to Lansdowne. Chieveley Camp, Dec. 15, 6:20 P. M.:

"I regret to report a serious reverse. I moved in full strength from our camp near Chieveley at 4 o'clock this morning. There are two fordable places in the Tugela River, and it was my intention to force a passage through at one of them. They are about two miles apart.

"My intention was to force one or the other with one brigade, supported by a central brigade. Gen. Hart was to attack the left Drift, Gen. Hilyard the right road, and Gen. Lyttleton was to take the centre and to support either.

"Early in the day I saw that Gen. Hart would not be able to force a passage, and I directed him to withdraw. He had, however, attacked with great gallantry; and his leading battalion, the Connaught Rangers, I fear, suffered a great deal. Col. I. G. Brooke was seriously wounded.

"I then ordered Gen. Hildyard to advance, which he did; and his leading regiment, the East Surrey, occupied Colenso station.

"At that moment I heard that the whole artillery I had sent to support the attack—the Fourteenth and Sixty-sixth Field Batteries also suffered severe losses. We have retired to our camp at Chieveley."

A special dispatch received here to-day from Frere Camp says that simultaneously with the bombardment of Colenso a furious artillery duel commenced between the garrison of Ladysmith and the Boers on Umbulwan Hill.

LONDON STAGGERED BY DEFEAT

Buller's Repulse Regarded as the Most Serious Reverse Since the Mutiny in India.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The news of Gen. Buller's reverse was received so late that morning newspaper comment to-day is confined to perfunctory expressions of extreme regret and disappointment and of the necessity of calmness and redoubled efforts to retrieve the position. This latest check is regarded as the most serious event in Great Britain's military history since the Indian mutiny.

The Standard says:

"Gen. Buller's dispatch is deplorable reading. It is the now familiar story of concealed Boers and of British troops marching up blindly almost to the very muzzle of the enemy's rifles. It cannot be doubted that the moral effect will be to aggravate our difficulties over the whole field of operations.

"The country has discovered with annoyance and surprise that subduing Boer farmers is about the hardest work we have entered upon since the Indian mutiny. Their commandants have shown themselves able to give our Generals useful, but expensive, lessons in modern tactics."

The Times says:

"Since the days of the Indian mutiny the Nation has not been confronted with so painful and anxious a situation. Plainly Gen. Buller's advance is paralyzed for the moment as completely as Lord Methuen's and Gen. Gatacre's."

The depression over Buller's defeat is all the greater as, during the last forty-eight hours, there had been reports of the relief of Ladysmith. Yesterday the War Office allowed it to be understood that the position of affairs in Natal was entirely satisfactory. The reaction is all the more pronounced on this account.

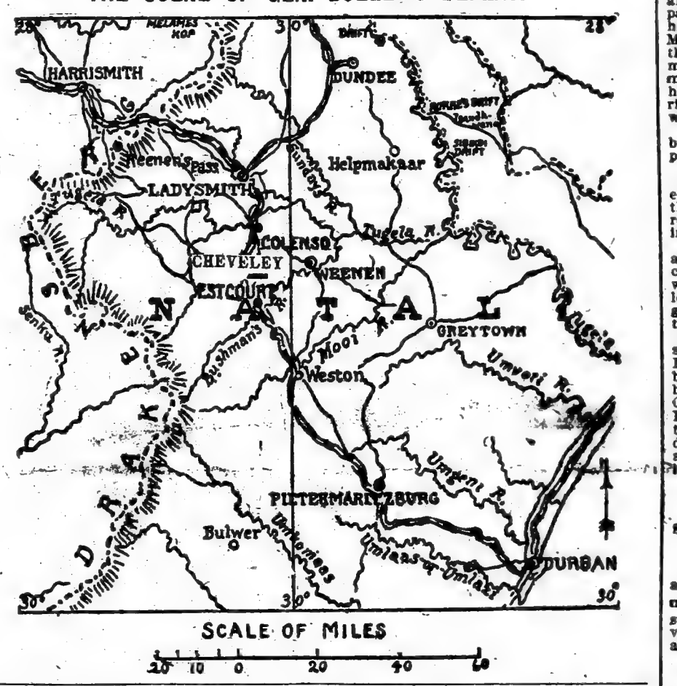
The gloomy information came too late to reach the service clubs; and only a few journalists and stragglers were waiting at the War Office. It has hardly been realized until now, even after the experience of the week, that Gen. Buller could fail.

Virtually nothing had been allowed to leak through regarding his preparations; but the public waited patiently, in the confident belief that he was taking such time and precautions as would insure success.

No independent reports of the engagement have yet been allowed to come through; but Gen. Buller's own dispatch tells the sad tale in sufficient outline to show that the British have been entrapped again by the astute Boers. It was not anticipated that Gen. Buller would make a frontal attack; but no criticisms of his movements are made, since apparently he suffered a repulse rather than a defeat, and did not push the attack home, but broke it off in the middle, so as to save a useless sacrifice of life.

It is expected that he will renew the attack shortly. Immediately on receiving the news, the War Office decided to mobilize still another division and to replace the losses of artillery. The necessary reinforcements will be hurried off as speedily as possible.

THE SCENE OF GEN. BULLER'S DEFEAT.



BOERS THREATEN ORANGE RIVER.

Strong Force Developed in the Rear of Methuen.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The War Office has received the following dispatch:

"From the officer commanding at Orange River, Thursday, Dec. 14:

"'Yesterday part of the mounted infantry, under Capt. Bradshaw, and the Yorkshires' and Lancashires' guides, under Lieut. Macfarlane, patrolled in the direction of Ramah and Zoutspan Drift, about ten miles east of the Orange River, to reconnoitre and report the strength of the enemy reported to be holding the drift. The mounted infantry found a strong detachment of the enemy at the drift, and a sharp engagement ensued. The enemy ultimately retreated to Goemansberg.

"Capt. Bradshaw and three men were killed; Lieut. Gregson of the East Kents and seven men were wounded.

"'The Boers had five men killed and several wounded.'"

MORE FIGHTING AT KIMBERLEY.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The War Office has a dispatch from Col. Kekewich, dated Kimberley, Sunday, Dec. 10, saying:

"The Boers have reattacked Kuruman, and have again been repulsed by loyalists and Bechuanas.

"The Kimberley forces made a demonstration northward Dec. 9, and drew 500 Boers and 3 guns. Fighting ensued for several hours. The British casualties were 1 man killed and 7 wounded."

BOERS REPULSED AT MAFEKING.

PRETORIA, Monday, Dec. 11.—It is officially announced that Molopo, west of Mafeking, was bombarded Dec. 11. Sharp fighting occurred.

The Boers attacked a British post at Mafeking during the night of Dec. 10. After severe fighting the Boers were repulsed and retired to Suyman's Fort.

GEN. CRONJE TELLS OF FIGHTING.

PRETORIA, Dec. 12.—The following official announcement has been made:

"Gen. Cronje reports that yesterday there was desultory fighting till 6, when heavy cannon fire was resumed. The Scandinavians stormed a difficult position, but it became untenable and they suffered severely. I was unable to send help. The British were in overwhelming force, but must have had at least 2,000 men put out of action, either in killed or wounded."

Another official report, from Capt. Finnhart, says:

"There were no signs of surrender, the burghers fighting with conspicuous bravery and maintaining their positions under heavy British fire. Our cannon were of very little use.

"The British were greatly assisted by balloons. Twenty-four ambulances were working backward and forward between the fighting line and the enemy's camp.

"Our loss is not definitely known. I estimate it at 100 killed and wounded."

A telegraph operator at the Modder River wires:

"Gun and Maxim firing has been proceeding since 5:30 this morning. At 10 cannonading was proceeding and at 2 the fighting was reported to be very severe. The Boer force along the river bank was being heavily attacked and is receiving assistance from the other Boer forces."

It is not known whether the operator refers to the fighting of Monday or to renewed fighting on Tuesday.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A special dispatch from the Modder River says the firing reported by a telegraph operator was a resumption of the fighting between Gen. Methuen's forces and those of the Boers.

15,000 TROOPS ON THE WAY.

Heavy Reinforcements Due at Cape Town Between Dec. 17 and Jan. 8—Ladysmith in Danger.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Fifteen transports are due to arrive at Cape Town between Dec. 17 and Jan. 8, with about 15,000 troops of all arms; but, unless Gen. Buller is able to renew the attack, which is exceedingly doubtful, the British Generals will be compelled for another fortnight or more to remain practically on the defense.

The latest dispatches indicate the continued bombardment of Ladysmith, whose position is now perilous.

Major Gen. Sir Herbert Charles Chermside has been appointed to command the Fourteenth Brigade in the Seventh Division.

OFFICERS ORDERED TO THE CAPE.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—It is announced that Gen. Hector Macdonald has been ordered to leave India immediately, to succeed the late Gen. Wauchope in command of the Highland Brigade.

Gen. Tucker, commanding at Secunderabad, has also been ordered to the Cape, to command a division.

Gen. Hector Archibald Macdonald is one of the few British Generals who rose from the ranks. He entered the army as a private in the Gordon Highlanders in 1879. In 1880 he was with the Gordons under Lord Roberts in the Afghan campaign. He soon gained a reputation for judgment, coolness, and gallantry, and at the close of the campaign was the recipient of a commission in his own regiment. He was with Colley at Majuba Hill during the last Boer war. When the British fled at that fight Macdonald remained, and when he had run out of ammunition he knocked down two Boers with his fists. A third was about to cock his rifle to put an end to the gallant Highlander when a comrade interposed.

"Don't do that," he said. "This is a brave man. We must spare him. Take him prisoner."

And this they did.

At the battle of Omdurman he commanded a Soudanese brigade, and it was said that his dash, combined with coolness, was responsible at the critical moment for turning defeat into victory.

Gen. William Guise Tucker was present at all the important battles of the Egyptian campaign, and after the battle of El Teb was specially mentioned in dispatches for leading a handful of men up to the enemy's guns, capturing the guns, and then turning them upon the dervishes.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Charles Warren, who may succeed Lord Methuen in command of the Kimberley relief expedition, has a long and brilliant record in many capacities. He is best known as one of the most successful Commissioners of Metropolitan Police that London ever had. He occupied this position from 1886 to 1888, and resigned out of disgust at the criticisms that were leveled at him on account of the labor riot in the latter year.

METHUEN REPORTS HIS LOSSES.

Sends Partial List of 55 Killed, 253 Wounded, and 76 Missing.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The list of casualties among the non-commissioned officers and men in the fight at Magersfontein, just issued, shows 55 killed, 253 wounded, (21 severely,) and 76 missing. This, however, is apparently not a complete list.

TRANSVAAL SEEKS RECOGNITION.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Mr. Macrum, United States Consul at Pretoria, has cabled the State Department that the Transvaal Government has informed him that full reports will be given through the War Office of the republic of the names and condition of British prisoners when applied for by the British authorities.

Mr. Macrum preferred a request for information on this point some time ago, and was at first refused. Now, however, that the assent of the Boer Government is given, it is noted that their response is not complete. They will not furnish Mr. Macrum himself with the information, but will oblige the British to make application to the Boer War Office. This is a small matter, but, it is said, may be indicative of an intention on the part of the Boers to force formal recognition of their independence in every official communication by the British Government.

LORENZO MARQUES, Dec. 13.—Mr. Charles Macrum, late United States Consul at Pretoria, will leave for New York Saturday, Dec. 16.

Denied that Irish Cheered Krueger.

WATERFORD, Ireland, Dec. 15. — The story printed in The Freeman's Journal to the effect that the reserves of the Royal Irish Regiment while embarking on their way to South Africa at this port Wednesday sang "God Save Ireland," cheered the Boers and President Krüger, and threw their rifles into the river, is absolutely unfounded. Nothing whatever occurred among the men beyond the pathetic leavetakings, which have been witnessed at all similar embarkations.

Webster Davis Sails for Cape Town.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Webster Davis, Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior at Washington, sails for Cape Town to-morrow on the steamer Mexican. He expects to visit the Transvaal. Mr. Hubert de Bathe, Mrs. Langtry's husband, will also sail on the Mexican.

Officers that Were Missing Are Dead.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The following-named officers of the Highland Brigade, who were reported missing after the battle of Magersfontain, were killed: Capt. the Hon. Cumming-Bruce, Capt. Macfarlane, Lieut. Ramsay, and Capt. Brodie, and the following subsequently died of their wounds: Col. Downman and Lieut. Campbell.

WAR FORCES WOOL UPWARD.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—According to wool experts in Chicago, the war in South Africa is threatening the prosperity of New England wool manufacturers. A heavy shipment of Cape wool is due in Boston, New York and Philadelphia have a three months' supply of this staple, and if British campaigning shall last for sixty days in the Transvaal, indications are for a sudden, sharp rise in wool, estimated at 10 to 15 per cent.

J. H. Howard, a local dealer, said to-day: "While the 15,000,000 pounds of Cape wool imported yearly is small compared with the 350,000,000 pounds we consume, that importation is a distinct necessity. Ninety per cent. of this wool is of fine grade, entering into the manufacture of fine hosiery and underwear. Boston has been the great receiving port for Cape wool, and it holds by far the greatest amount of present stock. Mauger & Avery of Boston are that city's largest importers, and perhaps hold the heaviest bulk of Cape wool. The fine grades of scoured Cape wool are quoted to-day at 62 to 65 cents, which is 20 per cent. above normal prices.

"If war continues, I would not be surprised to see these wools advance another 10 to 15 per cent. in February."

AUTOMOBILE CABS BARRED

Jefferson Seligman and Isaac L. Rice Lose Park Permits.

BOTH DENOUNCE MR. CLAUSEN

"High-Handed Outrage," the Words Used—Commissioner Intimates that He Will Not Relent.

Two citizens well-known in Wall Street will call upon Park Commissioner Clausen this morning to demand of him an explanation why they cannot continue to operate automobiles in the Park upon the strength of permits issued a few days ago by Mr. Clausen himself.

One is Jefferson Seligman of the banking firm of J. & W. Seligman & Co., and the other is Isaac L. Rice, a Director of the Electric Vehicle Company and other electric concerns. Their permits were revoked yesterday by Mr. Clausen, but neither Mr. Seligman nor Mr. Rice had received official notice last night of the fact. They will this morning.

The reason for the revocation of the permits, according to the statement of Mr. Clausen, is that both sent automobile cabs, or coaches, into the Park, whereas, as Mr. Clausen says, their permits called for "electric automobile pleasure carriages" only, and that, furthermore, their vehicles were operated other than by themselves.

Mr. Rice's wife and two children were driving through the Park on Thursday afternoon in a cab, which Mr. Rice hires by the month and which is operated by a man in uniform. The automobile was stopped at the Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue entrance, but was allowed to pass upon presentation of the permit.

On the West Drive the automobile and its passengers and Mr. Clausen, who was driving at the time, approached one another. Mr. Clausen was astonished at the size of the vehicle, and, remembering that he had issued no permits for one of its make, closely scrutinized the driver and his passengers. About this time Capt. England of the Park Squad appeared, and Mr. Clausen ordered him to stop the cab. The driver produced his permit. It bore the signature of the Commissioner and was regularly made out to Mr. Rice.

"Well," said Mr. Clausen, after Capt. England had reported, "let it go on, but such a vehicle has no right here."

The automobile later was stopped by a mounted policeman, who ordered the driver to show his pass. Again the cab was allowed to go on, but by this time Mrs. Rice, appreciating the fact that riding in an automobile and being stopped every few minutes was not pleasure, but annoyance, ordered her driver to leave the Park and go home. Mr. Rice was indignant that evening when he heard the story, and yesterday when he was told that his permit was about to be revoked he called Mr. Clausen's action a "high-handed outrage."

"It may be," he said, "that Mr. Clausen thinks he owns the Park, and can do as he pleases by keeping some citizens out and letting others in, but I think his action is high-handed. The cab in which my wife and children rode was as much of a pleasure vehicle as any other electric cab. I do not understand his designation of 'pleasure vehicle.'

"Furthermore, his action in peering into the cab was, to say the least, decidedly unwarranted. What he means by it all I do not know. I am not prepared to say that he intended any personal affront in revoking my permit. I shall see him in the morning and see what he means. I want to know whether [illegible] not. I shall certainly demand that my permit be returned to me. He has no right to revoke it. My driver is an expert and perfectly competent."

Mr. Clausen's complaint against Mr. Seligman is that the banker's brougham in charge of an operator and footman was driven through the Park a few days ago. This was reported to Mr. Clausen, and his action of yesterday followed, although Mr. Seligman had had no notice of the contemplated action, nothing having been said when the permit was shown to an officer.

Mr. Seligman said he had three electric automobiles, a brougham, victoria, and a phaeton. The phaeton he drives himself, and the others are in charge of an operator and footman.

"I am a citizen and pay considerable money in taxes," said Mr. Seligman last night. "Mr. Clausen is also a citizen and pays taxes, except that he is a Park Commissioner in addition. His action in revoking my license is a high-handed proceeding. I consider that I have a perfect right to send my operator in the Park with my vehicles. They are essentially pleasure vehicles.

"Mr. Clausen seems to take this means of stopping the march of progress, but he cannot do it. The automobile will eventually take the place of horses. I have sold my horses and now rely on my electric carriages. My wife rides in the brougham and has been in the Park frequently. If Mr. Clausen has any grievance against me, the gentlemanly way would have been to notify me directly, instead of allowing me to learn of the revocation of my permit through the newspapers."

Mr. Seligman said that he also would make it his business to see Mr. Clausen to-day.

Mr. Clausen, when asked for an explanation of the affair, said:

"I do not term the lumbering affair of Mr. Rice's a pleasure carriage. It is one of those old-fashioned coaches of the early makes and calculated to frighten horses. I supposed those gentlemen understood the nature of the permits, and believe they had a misconception of the scope of the permits when they put the vehicles in charge of uniformed operators. Perhaps they did not understand.

"Mr. Seligman and Mr. Rice will now have to make new applications and take their turns. My plan, as they know, or ought to know, is to issue these permits gradually. I have no personal animus in this affair. The rules were simply broken, that is all. My aim is, and I want it understood, to allow in the Park only light, open vehicles driven by their owners."

LOCOMOTIVE PLANT FOR RUSSIA.

A Philadelphia Firm is Negotiating for the Building of a Factory.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Vienna correspondent of The Times says:

"The Politische Correspondenz has been informed that a Philadelphia firm is negotiating with the Russian Government for the construction of a large locomotive factory at a suitable point on the Siberian Railway, and also for a rail mill, at a total cost of $5,000,000, which will be provided by American capitalists."

The details of these negotiations were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Saturday, Nov. 25.

UNION PACIFIC LANDS SOLD.

Chicago Men Buy 35,000 Acres in Colorado for Irrigation Project.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—A corporation of Chicago men, called the Colorado Bijou Land and Irrigation Company, yesterday closed the purchase from the Union Pacific Railway Company of 35,000 acres of land in Colorado for development by irrigation.

The officers of the corporation are: Dr. Wilson H. Davis, President; Leslie Stavert, Vice President; O. S. Buell, Secretary; Dr. Allen T. Haight, Treasurer. Levi H. Fuller is general counsel. The deal is said to be as large a purchase as has been made in Colorado for several years, and it is expected that $200,000 will be expended in the development of the land by irrigation.

The land is on the Bijou River, covering the basin along Beach Branches, and there is enough water to irrigate 35,000 acres. There are three natural reservoirs within its boundaries, covering more than half a section of land. The Union Pacific Railway lines touch the south end of the tract, and Denver is only thirty-six miles from the boundary line.

THE NEW CENTURY IN GERMANY.

According to the Kaiser's Calendar It Begins Jan. 1, 1900.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—The new century will be commemorated in various ways. The Emperor has ordered that the solemn Court function usually held on New Year's Day, when the Generals, courtiers, and high officials bring their congratulations and file past his Majesty, shall occur this time on the stroke of the midnight bell ushering in 1900. The army also will be ordered to make a suitable commemoration of the new century.

The Postal Department will issue commemorative postal cards.

ALLEN MAY NOT BE SENATOR.

Doubt Whether Nebraska's Representative Can Take His Seat.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 15.—The question has been raised as to whether William V. Allen, appointed Senator from this State, can be seated. The contention of some is that Hayward, never having taken his seat, the whole matter is in the same position as in a State where the Legislature failed to elect. The question is said to have occasioned Hayward considerable worry before his death.

Several lawyers were of the opinion that, the Legislature having made an election, the failure of the person elected to qualify would not deprive the State of the right to representation. Others of equal prominence were in doubt about it.

PRINCE OF WALES ON GAMBLING.

In a Letter Referring to the Baccarat Scandal He Condemns It.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The biography of Dr. Benson, late Archbishop of Canterbury, just published, reveals an interesting letter which the Prince of Wales wrote to him after the Tranby croft scandal. It is as follows:

"My Dear Archbishop: Your kind letter has touched me very much, as I know the kind feelings which prompted you to write to me on the subject which we have discussed together, and which, as you are aware, has caused me deep pain and annoyance. A recent trial, which no one deplores more than I do, and which I was powerless to prevent, gave occasion for the press to make most bitter and unjust attacks upon me, knowing I was defenseless, and I am not sure politics were not mixed up in it.

"The whole matter has now died out, and I think, therefore, that it would be inopportune for me in any public manner to allude again to the painful subject which has brought such a torrent of abuse upon me not only by the press but by the Low Church, and especially the Non-conformists. They have a perfect right, I am well aware, in a free country like our own to express their opinions, but I do not consider that they have a just right to jump at conclusions regarding myself without knowing the facts.

"I have a horror of gambling, and should always do my utmost to discourage others who have an inclination for it, as I consider gambling, like intemperance, is one of the greatest curses which a country could be afflicted with. Horse racing may produce gambling, or it may not, but I have always looked upon it as a manly sport which is popular with Englishmen of all classes, and there is no reason why it should be looked upon as a gambling transaction. Alas! those who gamble will gamble at anything.

"I have written quite openly to you, my dear Archbishop, whom I have had the advantage of knowing so many years. Believe me sincerely yours,

Col. Judd's Widow Willed $5,000 to Offset Husband's Compunctions.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 15.—By the will of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Judd, widow of Col. Henry B. Judd, these bequests are made:

St. Luke's Hospital, New York, $5,000; Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church for Education of Indians, $5,000; General Clergy Relief Fund of the Protestant Episcopal Church, $2,000.

The will says that the bequest for Indians was made at the request of Col. Judd, who was an officer of the regular army, engaged in service against the Indians, which was distasteful to him, and he took this method of making some return for what duty had forced him to do.

Mobile Will Not Permit Vessels from Infected Ports to Enter Bay.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 15.—Arthur Shirely Benn, a member of the Mobile Board of Health, arrived here to-night. He says Mobile will not permit any vessel from a plague-infected port to enter Mobile Bay. All pilots have been instructed to turn such vessels to the National Quarantine Station, either at Ship Island or Dry Tortugas.

The New Orleans Board of Health officials say that they have no power to refuse vessels from Santos and other infected ports to land here if quarantine regulations have been complied with.

Pastor's Wife Takes Part—Prayer Meetings at Fifty-five Other Places.

Special to The New York Times.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Dec. 15.—While district prayer meetings were being held in fifty-five different places in this city last night, preparatory to a great revival effort to commence here on Jan. 22, under the direction of the Rev. Wilbur J. Chapman of New York City in the basement of the People's Church, a dance was in progress in which members of the church, including the wife of the Rev. E. C. Smith, the pastor, took part. The scene attracted many pedestrians to the doors of the church.

This is the church of which the Rev. Caroline J. Bartlett was formerly pastor, and which Ingersoll once said he would like to join.

PHILADELPHIA WINS CONVENTION FIGHT

Republican Committee Names June 19 as Date of Meeting.

NEW YORK GETS ONLY 7 VOTES

Chicago is Finally Beaten by a Bare Majority of One.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Republican National Convention will be held at Philadelphia on Tuesday, June 19, next. The place and date were decided upon by the National Republican Committee to-day after a friendly contest for the honor of entertaining the convention between the city selected, Chicago, St. Louis, and New York. The meeting of the committee was held at the Arlington Hotel, and was presided over by Senator Hanna, the Chairman of the committee.

Forty-three of the forty-five States and each of the six Territories were represented. Senator Foraker proxy for Charles L. Kurtz, the National Committeeman for Ohio, and Senator Wolcott proxy for J. F. Saunders of Colorado, being the only absentees. In addition to the committeemen many of the big wigs of the Republican Party were in attendance. The proceedings throughout were enthusiastic and harmonious, every speech that was made emphasizing the fact that President McKinley will be renominated and that the convention will be in effect simply a ratification meeting.

There is little feeling discoverable over the victory of Philadelphia. The vote for New York showed how small the chance ever was that it could secure the coveted prize. The sentiment against naming a candidate too near Wall Street was strongly felt in the committee.

"The next time that Chicago wants to have a Republican convention," said a committeeman who favored that city, "it will probably make a push for it. The trouble was that Chicago, too highly appreciating its own merits, came here under the impression that the convention would fling itself at the Windy City. The preference for Chicago was shown by the leading vote on the first ballot; but the greater generosity of Philadelphia and the evident earnestness with which her claims were presented served to turn the scattered vote to that city."

The claims of the rival cities were presented by distinguished citizens of each in open session. The balloting occurred in the afternoon behind closed doors.

Upon the first ballot Philadelphia received 18 votes, Chicago 20, New York 7, and St. Louis 9. On the second ballot the contest narrowed down to Philadelphia and Chicago. The New York votes went to Philadelphia and the St. Louis vote was split between the City of Brotherly Love and the Windy City of the Lakes.

An amusing incident occurred in connection with this ballot. After it was concluded and announced as Philadelphia, 25, and Chicago, 23, Mr. T. N. Jamieson, the National Committeeman from Illinois, suddenly discovered that in the excitement he had forgotten to vote. He demanded that the vote should be recast, and this was accordingly done, but it did not change the result. Chicago gaining only the vote of the committeeman from Illinois. Philadelphia won by the narrow margin of one vote.

Immediately upon the announcement the Quaker City boomers who had been waiting in the lobby broke out in ringing cheers, and the hotel was soon given up to their jubilations. Later many of them went to the White House and called upon the President. As the ballot was secret, there is no record of the city for which each committeeman voted. It was the desire of the leaders at the meeting to-day that the convention should be held June 12, and that date would have been selected had it not been that it conflicted with the date of the Rhode Island elections. June 5 was then selected, but the date was reconsidered and changed to the 19th, in the hope and belief that before that date Congress will have adjourned.

After the time and place had been selected the committee considered briefly a request from Delaware that the committee take some action to straighten out the factional fight in that State to prevent two contesting delegations from appearing from that State. The committee decided that it had no jurisdiction. After the Delaware case had been disposed of the Chairman was authorized to appoint a sub-committee of five to make arrangements for the convention, also a committee of three to prepare and distribute literature. Chairman Hanna and Secretary Dick were made ex-officio members of all sub-committees.

Messrs. Manley of Maine, Long of Florida, and Simon of Oregon, were appointed a subcommittee to consider the election of delegates in the District of Columbia.

The executive session of the committee, which opened the proceedings, was very brief, and consisted in calling the roll, the adoption of the order of business, and the adoption of a resolution in memory of Vice President Hobart. The resolution was offered by Mr. Feesenden of Connecticut, and is as follows:

"The Republican National Committee assembles under conditions which cause poignant grief. It mourns the death of one who was its distinguished associate in the years which have passed, and who died second only in position of honor, rank, and station in this country—Garret A. Hobart of New Jersey, late Vice President of the United States.

"For nearly twenty years this committee enjoyed his wise counsel and his unfailing support in every emergency. His judgment was always sound and his tact and discretion unerring.

"Ever courteous and affable, his urbanity never ceasing, it was a pleasure and a privilege to be associated with him in any capacity. There was no spot or blemish on his pure private life, and the Nation's sympathies have gone out to those whom he has left bereaved. Not even a whisper was ever heard against him in his long political career. Yet he was a sturdy Republican, and gave and took hard blows in many a political fight. He never avoided an issue nor evaded a responsibility. He commanded the respect and esteem of his political opponents in almost equal degree with the devoted loyalty of his friends. Enemies he had none, public or private.

"His great heart was never closed to any just appeal for aid or sympathy.

"Every act of his busy life dignified American citizenship, and in his closing years he conferred honor upon the high office which he held.

"Every attribute of his character drew him close to those with whom he was associated. Every act of his public life, in a long and distinguished career of usefulness, justified the confidence which his fellow-citizens reposed in him.

"The Republican National Committee extends to his family its most profound and sincere sympathy, and directs that a copy of this memorial be engrossed and transmitted to them."

CHICAGO'S CLAIMS PRESENTED.

The delegations from the different cities were then invited in to present their claims. An hour was accorded to each city. The first city heard was Chicago, for which Mr. Samuel Raymond made the opening address. Mr. Raym bounties of Providence and abundant crops, but we do claim that the measure, the policies, and the principles of the Republican Party have enabled the country to energize its productions and to utilize prosperous conditions for the wealth of the land, for the employment of its people, and for general and beneficent prosperity. Now the greatest concentrated exhibit of American prosperity is the city of New York. Its booming growth is greater every year than that which has made famous so many thriving towns. Within its corporate limits it is the second city of the world, and if we add Jersey City, on the other side of the North River, which is as much a part of it as the two sides of the Danube are of Vienna, or as the two sides of the Thames are of London, it is the foremost city in the world.

"It is, therefore, eminently proper that the convention which represents the party whose policies have protected the industries, stimulated the productive power and brought out the resources of the country, whose policies have opened the markets, in order that production might increase, and surpluses might grow, to the constantly increasing benefit of labor and capital, should hold its convention in this great and thriving centre of population, industry, intelligence; this epitome of the growth and prosperity and the power of the United States; this one spot where every nationality which has received welcome in the country and been adopted into our citizenship has the largest number of its people; this one spot where every section of the country has sent a portion of its active, enterprising, and brainy men and beautiful women to add to the strength and the power of the great city.

"There will be given to the convention sitting in New York a world of attention, and to its results a universal interest which is impossible in any other city in our country."

Mr. Depew's references to the unanimity of the party as to candidate and platform were received with great enthusiasm, and his witty sallies kept the delegates in a roar.

Mr. Woodruff added: "Should the holding of the Republican Convention in New York tend to bring also the Democratic Convention there, let me say for one that I believe the Republican Party of the great sound money Empire State would receive as much negative benefit from the latter as positive benefit from the former."

LIEUT. GOV. WOODRUFF TALKS.

Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff followed Senator Depew.

Mr. Woodruff said that not to afford New York the privilege of entertaining the next Republican National Convention, when it is borne in mind that not a single one of the eleven conventions which span the life of the party had been held there, would seem to savor of indifference toward the Republicans of the great pivotal State of the Union, whose electoral vote has been essential to the election of more than one Republican candidate from another State.

New York City deserved the convention because she had suffered from neglect and frequently been the victim of not unnatural outsirde political combinations.

The fact that New York Republicanism had been victorious in seven consecutive elections of State officers and the Legislature, thus surpassing the record of all the doubtful States at any period of the party's history, he urged as another title to consideration.

Mr. Ford spoke humorously, and his remarks elicited bursts of laughter. He said in part:

"New York is the only city which has the nerve to send a hotel keeper to beard a National Committee in its native lair. We have nothing to be ashamed of. We have not had a National Convention in our city for twenty years. We have the courage of our convictions. Landlords from other convention cities have no convictions, although they ought to have. If what we hear is true, some of them ought to have convictions for grand larceny."

Mr. Ford frankly admitted that the hotel men were after the Democratic Convention also.

"All conventions look alike to us," he added.

PHILADELPHIA IS PRESENTED.

When Pennsylvania was reached in the list W. S. P. Shields, Chairman of the Campaign Committee of Philadelphia, presented the claims of the City of Brotherly Love. He said he came backed by 100 business men of Philadelphia, headed by the Mayor, and accompanied by the committees of the Select and Common Councils, to invite the convention to Philadelphia. He eulogized Philadelphia as the greatest manufacturing centre of the country, and the greatest ship building city in the country and as the birthplace of the Republican Party. There was no contest for the Presidency. It would be a disgrace to suggest any name but that of Mr. William McKinley. [Applause.] He had made more history than any President who ever presided over the destinies of the Republic.

He introduced Henry Burke, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee, who said that Philadelphia had not in twenty-eight years asked for anything from the Republican Party, although it was the wheel horse of the party, with the largest Republican majority in the Union. Besides, Pennsylvania had raised the largest campaign fund in two National campaigns, and if the convention went to Philadelphia, he said, it would be held at the Auditorium, on the banks of the Schuylkill. It had a seating capacity of 8,000, but would, if the convention was obtained, be increased to 15,000. The hotel capacity of Philadelphia, he said, had been proved by the manner in which visitors to the Peace Jubilee, the Grand Army of the Republic encampment, and the Commercial Congress were entertained. The hospitality of the City of Brotherly Love was well known. In conclusion, he said that whether Philadelphia secured the convention or not, it would support that ticket with a great majority.

Mayor Samuel H. Ashbridge was then introduced and was given a rousing reception. He made a strong presentation of the claims and attractions of Philadelphia. When he said that the great cruisers New York and Brooklyn, with which Schley and Sampson sunk Cervera's fleet at Santiago, were built on the Delaware the committee and spectators cheered enthusiastically. He gave details of the accommodations and appointments of the Auditorium and an idea of the hotel accommodations.

"Besides," he said, "we have the greatest seaside resort in the world, Atlantic City, within a few hours' ride." [Applause.]

"The City of Philadelphia," said he, "might be slow, but it was never slow when the Republican Party was in straits. When money was needed the merchants, manufacturers, and bankers went down in their pockets to help win the victory." [Applause.]

PHILADELPHIA'S POLICE.

When he said that the President had frequently told him that Philadelphia had the best police regulations for parades and ceremonies of any city in the Union, the Philadelphia contingent roused the echoes with their cheers. In conclusion he called attention to the fact that Congress would probably be in session in June, and to the accessibility of Philadelphia for the attendance of Senators and Representatives. Without animosity or feeling toward the rival cities bidding for the convention, he tendered the committee a cordial invitation to come to Philadelphia, pledging in advance that no matter where the convention went, Philadelphia would give more money than any other city to win the coming battle against the heresies and Democracy. [Great applause.]

Gen. Harry Bingham, the Representative in Congress from one of the Philadelphia districts, in a graceful speech, concluded the presentation of Philadelphia's claims.

In his speech Gen. Bingham paid a handsome tribute to Mr. Woodruff. Senator Depew might be the actuality of the present, he said, but Mr. Woodruff was the potentiality of the future. The convention had gone West since 1872. Was it not fair, he asked that once in a generation the convention should come East, where the great Republican majorities were piled up? If the convention went to be a ratification meeting, as he agreed it was to be, he said the convention could not do better than come to Philadelphia, renominate McKinley, and adopt the resolutions of the last Republican State Convention of Pennsylvania.

FRIENDS OF ST. LOUIS SPEAK.

St. Louis claims were next presented, Mayor Walbridge making the first speech in behalf of that city. He said that they did not have a large delegation, "having left some of our people at home."

This reference to the large delegations from other States was received with laughter. Mayor Walbridge said that the facilities for holding the convention were superior to those of 1896. He spoke in behalf of 305,000 Republicans of Missouri.

Alluding to the reference of Mr. Miller to President McKinley he said that he wanted the citizens from the Lake City to understand that being for McKinley was not contestable, and if it were St. Louis claimed priority. He then eulogized President McKinley, saying that they were for him because he tried to prevent the horrors of war, but when Congress decided upon war the President conducted it in a manner which reflected credit upon the country, and established the United States upon a high plane before the world.

Mr. Nathan Frank of St. Louis was the next speaker. To-day, he said, we have but one candidate and boundless prosperity. The party intended to give that candidate a re-election. Why not give the city in which he was first nominated the convention, in which he would be again placed in nomination. He had nothing to say in disparagement of other cities, but he would say that New York City was principally famous for Democratic majorities, while St. Louis was as strongly Republican.

Mr. Edward Devoy was introduced as a Democrat, but who spoke for the business men of St. Louis. He said that all the people of his city, irrespective of party, would welcome the convention. It was unfortunately true, as Mr. Frank had said, that St. Louis was Republican, but as far as the business men of St. Louis were concerned there would be no party in the entertainment of the convention.

This concluded St. Louis's hour, and New York was then called.

DEPEW PLEADS FOR NEW YORK.

Gen. McAlpin introduced Senator Depew, who was greeted with tremendous cheers.

Mr. Depew said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: On behalf of our delegation I wish to briefly present the reasons which we believe make New York the best place for holding the next National Republican Convention.

"The first considerations in selecting a city are accommodations and easy and frequent methods of communication. New York is pre-eminently equipped beyond all other cities in this respect. Fifty thousand or 100,000 additional visitors make no impression upon its hotel accommodations. These accommodations are of the variety to meet every pocket and every taste. They are from the Mills Hotel to the Waldorf-Astoria. The conformation of the city is such that the hotel district lies within a limited area. By the elevated and surface roads all the hotels are within easy communication and within thirty minutes of each other. Madison Square Garden accommodates, without crowding, 13,000 people, and is also so centrally situated as to be within easy and convenient access from the city hotels.

"This convention will probably be in session for a fewer number of days than any of its predecessors. The ticket will be nominated by acclamation. There is no division of sentiment in our party as to who shall head it. The wisdom and statesmanship of President McKinley have satisfied the party and the country, so that he will receive the immediate and unanimous nomination of the convention, and that choice will just as certainly be ratified by the people. By the time the convention meets, the choice for Vice President will be equally clear. We shall have the unique, interesting, and inspiring spectacle of a great party going before the people without any of the jealousies or the acrimonies or heart-burnings of defeated convention candidates. The platform is already formulated in the minds, not only of the party leaders, but of the voters of the country. It will point to an unexampled record of pledges fulfilled, of the beneficent results of Republican policies and extraordinary prosperity. Its keynote will be gold and glory—gold, the standard which, once fixed beyond question, has given us the first rank among commercial nations, and the glory of our arms, which has made us a world power and opened for the enormous surplus of our fields and factories distant, exhaustless, and remunerative markets.

ATTRACTIONS OF THIS CITY.

"The delegates who attend this convention and whose duties, while important, are already so clearly defined and settled, will necessarily wish to make the trip an excursion and to be accompanied by their families. Whatever may be the criticism upon New York every human being in the United States desires to visit the city, and this will be both excuse and opportunity.

"No city in the world is so situated for recreation. We have the Hudson River on the one side, the East River on the other side, and the beautiful bay for excursions. The ocean is within an hour's ride for health and a dip. The most attractive places in the world are on the beach, reached by hourly trains and boats. The art treasures of the city are unequaled upon the continent, and the theatres present the best dramatic and musical attractions.

"The presence of the convention in New York City would have an inspiring effect upon the greatest of our States, whose electoral vote has so often turned the scale of the Presidency. It will also give renewed enthusiasm to the Republicans of Connecticut on the one side and of New Jersey on the other, who have rescued from free silver those ordinarily Democratic States.

"The cosmopolitanism of New York will appeal to the delegate from every State. There is hardly a commonwealth which does not have in the great city a sufficient number of its citizens in permanent residence to form a large and flourishing society.

"The West, the South, and the Pacific Coast are represented by the most active and energetic business men of the metropolis, who are there also to represent the business interests of the sections from which they come. There are more Yankees than there are in Boston. It is by contact with these States within a State that the delegates from the several States will be brought into more intimate and close connection with the sections from which they come and with all other sections of the country than is possible anywhere except in the cosmopolitan city, which is the first city in the world and the metropolis of the Western Continent, which has, within the last two years, been treading upon London's prestige as the financial centre of the world.

"We have developed, with the excitement of our rushing business and reckless disregard of health, which characterize our active business and professional men, a class of ultimate hunters. Some are such from the necessities of their health and others are such simply for comfort. They have hitherto been seeking what they desired at St. Maurice, around the Swiss lakes, on the Riviera, on the Nile and in the deserts of Arabia. But they have found that for certain months in the year Lower California and Florida are more healthful in some lines than Cannes or Cairo, Colorado than St. Maurice, the Adirondacks than the Italian lakes. But in the month of June there is no place in the world, which, with its parks and its environs, is so attractive so healthy, and possesses so charming living, livable, and invigorating an atmosphere as New York City.

ATTRACTIONS IN JUNE.

"One of the charges frequently brought against Americans is that they are always talking about the bigness of their country. No American of to-day can tell the truth modestly and moderately without talking about the bigness of his country. We Republicans do not claim the earth, but we do claim that our policies have benefited the on [illegible] that [illegible] returning to the city where the first Republican candidate, Fremont, was nominated on the platform of "Freedom and Liberty."

After the presentation of the claims of the four cities was completed the committee, upon the suggestion of Chairman Hanna, took a recess until 8:30, after which the vote was taken.

OPPOSES SOUTHERN METHODS.

During the meeting of the committee Cyrus Leland of Kansas offered the following resolution, which went over under the rules:

"Whereas, The Constitution of the United States provides that

"Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States or in any way abridged except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

"Resolved, That the Republican National Committee respectfully petition Congress to reduce the representation of the House of Representatives of Congress of the United States in any State which has in force laws 'denying to any of the male inhabitants' or 'in any way abridging the right to vote, as provided in said section of the Constitution.'"

PAYNE'S RESOLUTION SHELVED.

The Payne resolution for the reapportionment of delegates to the National Republican conventions on the basis of the Republican vote cast in the States and Territories will not be pressed at this meeting of the National Committee.

Up to to-night Mr. Payne, the author, had fully intended to offer the resolution to-morrow and to urge its adoption, but after a conference with the President at the White House to-night, at which Secretary Dick and Gov. Nash of Ohio were present, he decided to abandon the effort to have it acted on at this meeting.

Much opposition had developed to the proposed change, and the conclusion reached was that it was inexpedient to push the matter at this time.

Mr. Payne will make a statement before the committee in the morning, setting forth the reasons which prompted him to reach the decision stated.

JOY IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—There was general satisfaction expressed on all sides when it became known here this afternoon that Philadelphia had been selected as the place for holding the Republican National Convention next year. The citizens worked hard for the honor, and intend to work all the harder from now on to properly take care of the host of Republicans that will be here. The idea of bringing the convention to this city originated with the members of the Young Republican Club, and to-night the club is duly celebrating the consummation of its project.

The delegation which went to Washington to boom the city arrived home at 8 o'clock this evening. There was a large crowd at the station to welcome the delegation, and a band of music to greet them. The delegation was escorted to the Young Republican Club, where refreshments awaited it. The municipal legislators are preparing to help in making the convention a success, and ordinances are being prepared to appropriate funds for the purpose.

The convention will be held in the large auditorium of the recent National Export Exposition. At present the big hall has a seating capacity for 8,000 persons, but will be enlarged to accommodate at least 18,000. Plans for the alteration of the building are already in the hands of a contractor. The delegates will all be seated on the main floor, while the unofficial visitors will occupy the galleries. The hall will be so arranged that no seat will be more than 150 feet from the speakers' rostrum, and every one will be able to distinctly hear the speakers. Surrounding the auditorium will be more than fifty rooms for committee work, and all other conveniences for the delegates will be close at hand.

The convention hall is located in West Philadelphia, on the bank of the Schuylkill River, and is about a mile and a half from the hotel district.

Within a half hour after the National Committee at Washington had decided to hold the convention in this city, telegrams began pouring into the hotels, asking that rooms be reserved for the period during which the convention will be held.

One of the first messages received was from Chairman of the Republican National Committee Hanna, who requested that an entire floor of the Hotel Bellevue be reserved for him. Senators Depew and Platt of New York, State Chairman Odell of New York, and Gov. Roosevelt also had rooms reserved.

The Massachusetts delegation asked for eighty rooms at the Hotel Walton, and the Indiana delegation was the second body of delegates to have accommodations reserved for it. Scores of telegrams from prominent politicians from all parts of the country were still arriving late to-night.

CHARGES OF A DEAL ARE MADE.

According to persons who reached here from Washington last night the victory won by Philadelphia in securing the Republican National Convention was achieved through the help of the Southern representatives on the committee, who voted for Philadelphia with the understanding that they would receive support to defeat the proposed plan of a change in the basis of representation, which if adopted would decrease the number of delegates from Southern States to National Conventions and which is opposed by Southern Republicans, who do not look with favor on any plan which would deprive them of any influence.

Senator Platt and B. B. Odell, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, both returned to the city last night.

Mr. Odell, when asked about the results of the meeting of the National Committee, said:

"I left Washington before the vote was taken. The selection of Philadelphia is a surprise to me, as when I left it did not look as if the convention would go to that city."

ELYTON REORGANIZATION.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 15.—In the Probate Office this afternoon John M. Caldwell, A. L. Fulenwider, and W. A. Beatty filed the declaration of incorporation of the Birmingham Realty Company, with a capital of $2,000,000. This is the first step in the formal reorganization of the Elyton Company, successor to the Elyton Land Company.

To-morrow afternoon, it is understood, the properties of the Elyton Company will be deeded to the Birmingham Realty Company by William Halls, Jr., who recently bought them at a receiver's sale for $1,040,000. Mr. Halls, in the purchase, represented the Reorganization Committee of the Elyton, of which he is Chairman. He is cashier of the Hanover National Bank, New York.

It is understood that Mr. Halls will be President of the Birmingham Realty Company, which assumes the obligations as well as the properties of the Elyton Company. The properties consist of several million dollars' worth of real estate in Birmingham and other valuable holdings.

RAILWAY STARTS 41 TOWNS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—It is not often nowadays that an old-established railroad, traversing a thickly populated and well-developed country, can, in a few weeks, create forty-one new towns, with prospects of good business from each. Yet this is what the Northwestern Company has just accomplished.

In Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota, in districts that were presumed to have been fairly well covered by railroads, this system has completed nine branch lines, along which have been located more than two-score stations and towns. Though the paint on all of these station buildings is not dry, houses are going up, grain elevators are being constructed, and other evidences of urban life manifested.

The names and locations of the places are as follows:

Iowa—Kiron, Boyer, Deloit, Schleswig, Ricketts, Berne, Soldier, Moorhead, Preparation, Orson, Pisgah, Lone Rock, Fenton, Ringsted, Halfa, Maple Hill, Dolliver.

Minnesota—Judson, Cambria, Jeffers, Tennassee, Manyaska, Fox Lake, Triumph, Northrop, Fairmont, Truman, Odin, Lewisville, Darfur, Comfrey, Bedford, Wanda, Wabasso, Okawa, Vesta, Arcola, Ivanhoe, Hendricks.

SQUIRE FAILS FOR $3,000,000

Pork-Packing Corporation in Boston Unable to Meet Its Obligations —Assets Are $5,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 15.—John P. Squire & Co., a corporation doing a pork packing business, assigned at 4 o'clock this afternoon to H. W. Chaplin of this city. The liabilities are given as $3,000,000, assets $5,000,000. The assignment was due to inability of the company to secure ready cash to meet present obligations. Twenty other firms in New England owned or controlled in part or as a whole by the Squire corporation are to a greater or less extent affected by the failure.

Of the assets, $2,000,000 is represented by real estate, buildings, and machinery in East Cambridge and $3,000,000 is in book accounts, products, and accounts on hand. Among the claims is an item of $150,000, which represents accounts of the employes who left part of their earnings with the company.

The company was incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine, with a capital of $3,000,000. Frank O. Squire is President, Fred F. Squire Treasurer, and John P. Squire Assistant Treasurer.

The business will be carried on without any change by Mr. Chaplin, as assignee. A meeting of the creditors will be called at an early date, and Mr. Chaplin is of the opinion that all will agree on some plan that will allow the business to proceed without interruption.

The creditors are banks for the most part, the Globe National Bank of this city being one of the heaviest. Other Boston banks are involved to some extent, but the indebtedness is largly outside of Boston. The estate of the late John P. Squire is not involved in any way in the assignment.

In an interview to-night Mr. Chaplin said: "The assignment was the direct result of tightness in the money market. Practically all the indebtedness is to banks. These banks found it necessary to call their loans. The Squire Company could not raise the money to meet them all at such short notice, and it was deemed best to make an assignment. There is a clean $2,000,000 margin of assets over liabilities, and there are no incumbrances on any of the Squire property.

"The house is in a sound financial condition, and is now doing very large and profitable business. It may be that the company was a bit over-confident as to its credit, and when this call came so suddenly it found the corporation unprepared.

"A week ago we could have put a million-dollar mortgage on the company's property if we had cared to do so.

"The assignment is absolutely without preference. Many of the women in the Squire family are stockholders, and all have cheerfully turned over their stock, believing in the solvency of the concern and in the ultimate straightening out of the present tangle."

Asked as to the rumor that the cause of the assignment was an overdraft of $250,000 on the Globe Bank, which the company was called upon to make good, Mr. Chaplin said that so far as he knew the rumor was not correct, and that the indebtedness to the Globe Bank was not in the form of an overdraft.

As to the rumor that the John P. Squire Company was to be absorbed by the Swifts, Mr. Chaplin said there had been some talk of it, and he regarded it as very likely, but he did not think it would come about just at present, and not until the financial situation in general is much better than it is at present.

Mr. Chaplin explained that the two concerns, the Squire and the Swifts, were not on quite the same footing, as the latter has a million-dollar mortgage on its property, and the former has none at all. He said that John P. Squires & Co. would go ahead, straightening out its affairs as expeditiously as possible, and sometime after the beginning of the new year, if the money market got into better shape for the floating of a big enterprise, there might be a consolidation of the Squire and Swift interests.

RESULT OF JEALOUS MAN'S RAGE.

TACOMA, Washington, Dec. 15.—Adam Crist to-night shot his wife fatally, killed his eight-year-old son, seriously wounded a second, aged five years, and then shot and killed himself. Jealousy is the only motive assigned for the crime.

Crist was the proprietor of the Chicago Lodging House. He was in the kitchen of the hotel on the second floor, when his wife was called to the head of the stairs to talk to a peddler. He sent the younger child to ask her to come to the kitchen. Immediately after, four shots were fired, all of which were found to have taken effect in her body. He then turned the revolver on the little boy and wounded him in the leg, but the child managed to crawl down the stairs and escape.

The woman staggered to the sidewalk and Crist went into the hall, where he caught the eight-year-old boy. From the position of the bodies, he must have held the lad close to him while he put a bullet through his heart. A 41-calibre bullet through his own head followed, and both bodies fell to the floor, where they were found still clasped in each other's arms.

RECORDS OF THE LEGISLATORS.

Members Who Have Served for Many Years in Both Houses.

Preliminary sheets of the "Legislative Manual" have just been issued containing the names, occupations, political beliefs, home addresses, and records of the previous service as legislators of the members of the Senate and the Assembly. The manual shows that Senator Henry J. Coggeshall is the "Father of the Senate," having served continuously in that body since 1884. Prior to his election to the Senate, Mr. Coggeshall was an Assemblyman for one term. Others who have been members of the Senate for a long period are Senator John Francis Ahearn, ten years; Timothy E. Ellsworth, eight years; John Raines, nine years; George W. Plunkitt, seven years; Patrick H. McCarren, eight years; Cornelius R. Parsons, eight years; Thomas F. Grady, seven years. In some of these cases the service has not been continuous. According to the manual thirty-nine of the fifty members of the Senate have had previous experience in the Legislature.

In the Assembly Patrick H. Roche has served longer than any of his fellow-members. Mr. Roche next month will begin his eleventh term. Other members of the next Assembly who have been in Albany long enough to become thoroughly familiar with the work are Jonathan P. Allds of Chenango, Edward C. Brennan of Kings, John J. Cain of Kings, Thomas M. Costello of Oswego, J. B. Fitzgerald of New York, Joseph I. Green of New York, Henry W. Hill of Erie, George T. Kelly of Albany, Otto Kelsey of Livingston, John McKeown of Kings, S. Frederick Nixon of Chautauqua, Patrick F. Trainor of New York, and Daniel P. Witter of Tioga.

There are 19 lawyers in the Senate and 43 in the Assembly.

Package with Soldiers' Vote Opened.

A small sealed package, containing the votes of the soldiers who were on duty last election in Manila and Cuba and other places, and who reside in this city, was opened yesterday at Police Headquarters. There were 31 ballots—1 for Richmond County, 10 for Kings, and 20 for New York. They will be sent to the Inspectors of Election of the election district in which they are to be cast. As each ballot is for a different election district, there will be thirty-one polling places hired for next Tuesday, when the votes will be counted, and thirty-one Boards of Inspectors will have to meet. Each vote, it has been figured out, will cost $30.

New Jersey Minority Leadership.

The Democratic Assemblymen-elect of Hudson County have agreed upon Allen Benny of Bayonne as the minority leader for the next session of the Legislature. The eleven Democratic members from Hudson control the Democratic House caucus. Mr. Benny was born in Brooklyn in 1867. He served in the Bayonne Board of Commissioners [illegible]

BURIED INTO THE SOIL

Maurice Strauss, Once Well-Known as an Actor, a Suicide.

INSANE OVER SPIRITUALISM

A Farewell Letter to His Brother Found on the Fall River Steamer Puritan.

Driven by his desire to peer into the mystery of future life, Maurice Strauss, twenty years ago a well-known actor, and lately an enthusiastic Spiritualist, is supposed to have ended his life by plunging into the Sound from the Fall River steamer Puritan, which arrived at New York Thursday morning.

Mr. Strauss boarded the steamer at Fall River Wednesday night. He registered with Purser H. L. Beaver, who remembered him as very insistent upon obtaining an outside stateroom. When the stateroom assigned him remained locked after the steamer reached her pier in the North River an investigation was made. Its occupant had disappeared, but in the berth were found a valise and a sealed letter addressed to his brother, Jo H. Strauss, an importer, of 481 Greene Street. The missing man's pocketbook, containing a considerable sum of money, his watch, and other valuables were also left in the stateroom. The discovery was reported to the officers of the company by Capt. Colling of the Puritan, and the letter and valuables were promptly delivered to J. H. Strauss.

When seen yesterday Mr. Strauss admitted that his brother announced in the letter an intention to commit suicide by jumping overboard, giving as his reason that he wanted to meet his Creator. Beyond this Mr. Strauss would not divulge the contents of the letter. He said that he believed his brother had become insane over Spiritualism, which had apparently impressed his mind for some time. A few weeks ago, he said, he received a letter from his brother saying that he had associated himself with Mrs. C. B. Bliss, a Boston Spiritualistic medium.

Maurice Strauss was forty-two years old and a man of considerable wealth, which he had inherited from his father, who was a merchant in this city, and from relatives in Germany. For over fifteen years, up to two months ago, he had lived abroad, chiefly in Dresden and Munich. He was a connoisseur and collector of paintings. He had never engaged in business, but when a young man was well known as an actor in Boston and New York. He had frequently appeared at Daly's and other theatres in this city, and in Boston was a member of the Boston Museum Stock Company. He left the stage to live abroad when he was twenty-five years old. Upon his return to this country, two months ago, he went to Boston to live, and to renew his old theatrical acquaintances. He had rooms at 6 Berwick Park, in that city, in which were many fine oil paintings that he had brought from Europe.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 15.—Maurice B. Strauss, who it is believed committed suicide by jumping from a Fall River Line boat, left his lodgings, 6 Berwick Park, between 2 and 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, after telling his landlady that he was going to New York that night. Yesterday morning a letter was received by an acquaintance in this city, written by Strauss before he left Boston, in which he stated that he was going to jump from the Fall River boat Wednesday night, and this appears to have been the letter of a letter written to his brother, J. H. Strauss, of 1,695 Broadway, New York, for yesterday the latter telegraphed to this city to ask if his brother was dead.

Strauss had been deeply interested in spiritualism, and claimed to possess the same powers as those ascribed to Mrs. Piper. He had converted the front room on the second floor of the lodging house into a seance room.

NEWSPAPER PRINTERS STRIKE.

Pittsburg Men Attempt to Force Type-Setting Machine Tenders to Join Their Union.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 15.—The members of Pittsburg Typographical Union No. 7 have walked out of the offices of the Pittsburg daily newspapers and struck work, although the scale or contract between the printers and publishers does not expire until Dec. 24. They have not struck for higher wages. The demand is that the machinists, employed to care for the linotype machines, and who are members of Duquesne Lodge No. 158, of the International Association of Machinists, be forced to become members of the typographical union.

To comply with this demand would be to violate a contract between the publishers and the machinists. The contest of the Typographical Union, therefore, resolves itself into an attempt to disrupt a union of fellow-workmen. It is not primarily a dispute between newspaper publishers and printers, but a dispute between printers and machinists and an effort on the part of the printers to use the publishers as a club to drive the machinists into the Typographical Union.

The strike is the work of a few contentious men. The industrious printers of Pittsburg, with families to support, have been forced into it against their will. They were not allowed to vote on the proposition at all, but were ordered out by some outside authorities.

HUNTERS SHOT A "VOODOO" FOX.

Found Later It Was a Rare Specimen from the Zoological Park.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—A few nights ago Jim Johnson and Henry Brown, two colored nimrods of Fairfax County, Va., were out hunting 'possum with one of the best coon dogs in the county, General Grant. The dog struck a fox's trail, and the men followed it all night. At daybreak they came up with the dog standing guard over a big hollow stump. They smoked out the fox, and when he came out and started to run he was shot. When the hunters came up to view their prey they were struck dumb with astonishment and terror. The fox was blue. "Voodoo" was the only reasonable explanation.

The frightened hunters concluded that they had shot a witch, and there was a lively panic for a few minutes. Then, as the sun rose higher, their courage began to return, and Jim suggested that the fox had undoubtedly been the right color overnight, but had been turned blue by the smoke. With their courage restored the hunters took the mysterious corpse to Washington, and, entering a store on Pennsylvania Avenue, they offered to sell the fox. "We had to smoke him out," they explained, "and that turned him blue and spoiled him some, so we won't charge you much." The proprietor instantly recognized the fox as a rare and valuable specimen which had escaped from the Zoo a few weeks ago, and for which the officials have been hunting high and low. He told the men that a fox is all the better when he is blue, and gave them a handsome sum for their capture. The skeleton has been presented to the National Museum, and the skin is being tanned.

LAKE STEAMER IS WRECKED.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—News reached here to-night that the big steel steamer Arthur Orr is wrecked on the rocks at the entrance of Georgian Bay. Tugs were immediately sent from Port Huron to the wreck. It is reported that the vessel is in an exposed position and will be badly damaged if not speedily released. The vessel cost $225,000.

Capt. John Massey is in command. He has a crew of eighteen men.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair, cold, fresh northwesterly winds.

The severest cold of the season is reported in the Northwest and the British Northwest Territory, where the temperature last evening was below zero, with minimum readings 30 to 32 degrees below zero in the British Northwest.

A storm of unusual severity occupied the North Pacific Coast States, and a trough of low barometric pressure extended thence over the Middle Rocky Mountain region and the Middle Missouri Valley.

Reports were coming last evening from the North Pacific Coast and Northern and Middle Plateau region. The temperature is below the seasonal average, except in an area extending from the Middle Missouri Valley over the extreme Upper Mississippi Valley and in parts of the middle plateau regions.

The temperature will fall to freezing in the Gulf Coast States this morning, after which it will moderate slowly in the Southern States. Along the Middle Atlantic and New England Coast the winds will diminish in force from the northwest to-day. On the South Atlantic Coast fresh northerly winds will prevail.

The display of storm signals for the season will be discontinued on Lake Superior with the closing of the locks at Sault Ste. Marie.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

EXPERT ONCE HELD MOLINEUX INNOCENT

This Admission Made by Kinsley on Cross-Examination.

FACTS LED TO TWO THEORIES

Study of Handwritings Produced One Opinion and Then Another.

William J. Kinsley, the chief expert in handwriting for the prosecution in the case of Roland B. Molineux, charged with having murdered Mrs. Katherine J. Adams by poison in December last, and on whose testimony the State bases its main hope for the conviction of the prisoner, spent a trying day on the witness stand yesterday under cross-examination by Bartow S. Weeks, the senior counsel for the defense. Mr. Kinsley has been on the stand for six days, and Mr. Weeks is by no means through with him. There will be a re-direct examination by Mr. Osborne, who will not be content to let the testimony go to the jury in its present shape, especially after the admissions made by his expert yesterday, and then will follow a more or less protracted re-cross-examination by Mr. Weeks, so that it will be well along into next week before the prosecution again takes up its line of proof against the defendant.

Mr. Weeks directed his efforts yesterday mainly toward proving that the State had made up its mind that Molineux was the guilty man from the start, and that it did so without having any evidence in its possession warranting such a conclusion, but simply because of the popular demand that somebody should be arrested for the murder. He endeavored to show by skillful questioning of the expert that the determination of the police and the forces of the District Attorney to fasten the crime on Molineux was communicated to the experts and that this knowledge biased their opinions. He attempted to prove that Mr. Kinsley, as well as the other experts and witnesses, well knew that unless they could connect Molineux with the writing of the address on the poison package they could not hope to be employed by the State, and that in bending every energy to prove that Molineux was the murderer of Mrs. Adams, the authorities, whose duty it was to run out every clue, in whatever direction it might point, had failed to consider the possibility of any one other than Molineux being guilty, and had therefore lost sight of any other person who might have had a motive for trying to get rid of either Cornish or Mrs. Adams.

WITNESS CHANGED HIS MIND.

Mr. Weeks succeeded in drawing from the witness an admission that he had at one time said a certain state of facts pointed to the conclusion that Molineux had not written the address on the poison package, and that later he had come to the conclusion that the reverse was the fact from exactly the same premises. It was brought out that Mr. Kinsley had said in an interview that the breaks between the letters "1" and "c" on the poison package address in the words "Knickerbocker" and "Athletic," as well as other breaks between letters, pointed clearly to the conclusion that the breaks were part of an effort by the person who wrote the address to disguise his handwriting. On his direct examination Mr. Kinsley laid great stress on the similarity of the breaks between letters existing in the disputed handwritings—the requests for medicines written in the names of Cornish and Barnet and the poison package address—and the admitted handwritings of Molineux. He said frequently that he based his opinion that Molineux had made all the writings partly on the fact that these breaks were the same in all the exhibits.

Mr. Weeks asked the witness to reconcile the two diametrically opposite statements, that the breaks between letters were used as a method of disguise, and that at the same time they existed in the admitted handwritings of the defendant, which were in his natural hand, with no attempt at disguise. It was the most serious position that the expert had yet been in, and Mr. Osborne came to his relief with a speech, the purpose of which Mr. Weeks said was to give the witness a chance to think up an answer. After a wrangle between counsel, Mr. Kinsley admitted that he might have given the interview referred to, and that he might have made the statements attributed to him. At that time, he said, he was "fishing in the dark," and "looking for light," and was unsatisfied. His later and more fixed and sober opinion, he testified had come to him through longer study and under different conditions. The point obviously interested the jury, and Mr. Weeks, noticing this, was satisfied to leave the matter in that way.

Mr. Weeks also obtained from the expert the admission that he had at one time "sidetracked" Molineux, as the witness expressed it, and almost entirely eliminated him from consideration in the case, this having been due to his dissatisfaction with the samples examined by him, although he said he then had in his possession nearly a hundred samples of the defendant's writing, and as many more as he desired were offered by the defense.

HOW HE WAS CONVINCED.

He admitted having written a letter to Col. Hay of Washington, one of the experts for the prosecution, in which he said he was by no means sure that Molineux had written the address on the poison package, and in which he took exception to an opinion to the contrary expressed by Col. Hay. He admitted that at one time he thought some writing made by Gen. Molineux, the father of the defendant, was in young Molineux's hand, and then Mr. Weeks led the expert to the admission that it was not until Molineux had written to his order, with pens, ink, and paper furnished by him, and under conditions which he arranged, that he finally came to the conclusion that Molineux had written the poison package address. As soon as Mr. Weeks had obtained that admission he asked for an adjournment, and it was granted.

"I think I have given the jurors something to think about over to-morrow and Sunday," was Mr. Weeks's remark when he left the court.

Mr. Weeks's attack on the testimony of Mr. Kinsley was insistent without being violent. It gained in force from the fact that at no time was it a personal attack upon the man, but rather an attack upon his methods and manners. He conveyed the impression that he was attacking the whole theory of expert study of handwriting as a science rather than the ability of one of its exponents.

The defense again referred pointedly to J. Morton Riggs, the ex-member of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, and ex-Navy Paymaster, who is now in China. Mr. Riggs's name was prominently mentioned in the case during the inquest, and it was shown then that he had been expelled from the Knickerbocker Athletic Club for falsifying his bicycle record and on evidence presented against him by Harry Cornish, whom he had every reason to hate. Mr. Kinsley said, in answer to questions put to him by Mr. Weeks, that he had examined a number of specimens of Riggs's handwriting, but he admitted that this examination, as well as the examinations of handwritings by other members and employes of the club, was purely perfunctory. By his questioning on this point Mr. Weeks strove to show that the police, having fixed upon Molineux as the murderer, furnished the experts insufficient matter by which to enable them to fasten the crime upon any other person.

BIG CROWD AT THE TRIAL.

In spite of the fact that handwriting was to be the topic under discussion, the courtroom yesterday was more crowded than at any previous time in the trial, except when Mary Melando was on the stand. There were many women present who came and went throughout the day, their chief desire, apparently, being to get a good look at the defendant. It was an interesting gathering, including mugets and actors and critics and playwrights, but the well-known intention of the Court to have quiet made it an orderly assemblage.

Molineux, smiling as ever, took a deep interest in the cross-questioning of the expert by his counsel and his face beamed with satisfaction as Mr. Weeks brought his points strongly before the twelve men who hold his fate in their hands. Gen. Molineux was also much pleased with the day's developments and remained in court throughout the session. Mr. Carvalho framed many of the questions on technical points that were put by Mr. Weeks, and Dr. Hamilton also paid close attention to the evidence. There were the usual tilts between counsel, in which each accused the other of unfairness. The long-drawn-out explanations of Mr. Kinsley were cut short by an order directed to him by the Recorder, at the request of Mr. Weeks, that he answer categorically.

At the opening of the day's proceedings Mr. Weeks again brought out the fact that Mr. Kinsley knew long before he made his report that some of the writings submitted to him were Molineux's. He then asked for the production of the scraps of handwriting which the expert had said were given to him with the poison package address on Jan. 1. One of the letters was in the handwriting of J. Morton Riggs and one in the handwriting of Cornish.

"I hand you one of these letters," said Mr. Weeks, "and ask you if at the end of it there does not appear what looks like the signature of J. Morton Riggs?"

Mr. Osborne made a vigorous objection, after which the witness said that at the end of one of the letters appeared "per H. S. C." He said he connected the letters with Cornish and understood the writing to be in his name. Then there followed an argument as to whether Mr. Kinsley should be permitted to answer Mr. Weeks's question about the Riggs writing and upon the motion of Mr. Weeks that the letter go in evidence.

"If this letter is admitted," said Mr. Osborne, "you might as well have a van here to hold the exhibits that might be brought here. The witness examined thousands of writings, and if one is admitted they might all take the same course." After this Mr. Osborne withdrew his objection and the letter went in evidence. The witness said that the initials on the letter handed to him looked like Riggs's writing.

ONE PAPER DISAPPEARED.

"Then when you said that the only paper given to you then that you could connect with any one was the letter marked 'per H. S. C.' you were mistaken?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"I was not," said the witness.

"What has become of the paper marked 'per H. S. C.'?"

"It has disappeared."

"I suppose you have no idea where it went?"

"I have none."

"Did you reach any conclusion as to whether the papers handed you on Jan. 1 were written by the same hand?"

"I did not."

"Why not?"

"They were too meagre and unsatisfactory: I set them aside."

"Look at them now. Will you say whether or not they were written by the same hand?"

"I cannot say."

"Did you get more of that writing?"

"I did not."

"Did you ask for it?"

"Yes."

One of the papers handed to Mr. Kinsley had on it the date, "Dec. 15, 1898," with the words, "Dear Friend" on one line and "Cornish" on another. The second paper had only the name "H. Cornish" on it. The former was marked Exhibit 12 and the other 14. Exhibit 15 bore only the name, "J. Morton Riggs."

"Of all the papers given to you on Jan. 1 you have only been able to locate these three?" continued Mr. Weeks.

"That is all."

"And you have never been told, nor have you found out, who wrote these exhibits?"

"I have not."

"And, although you asked for more writing like 12 and 14, you were never able to get it?"

"No. I had more of Riggs's writing, though. I do not know that the 'J. Morton Riggs' was written by him."

"Between Jan. 1 and 7 did you get any more writings for examination?"

"Yes, many. Among them were many of the letters now in evidence as the admitted handwriting of the defendant."

"When did you get each of these letters?"

"I cannot say. They came to me from time to time."

"When did you first tell any one that you thought the address on the poison package was written by the defendant?"

"Between Jan. 8 and 10."

"Whom did you tell?"

"Capt. McClusky."

RIVAL EXPERTS DISAGREE.

"You consulted Mr. Carvalho on Jan. 16, did you not?"

"Yes."

"Did you show him a piece of paper on which there was writing in pencil?"

"I did."

The witness produced the paper and was asked if he did not tell Mr. Carvalho that he believed it to be in the handwriting of the defendant. He said he did not.

"Did Mr. Carvalho say that it was in the handwriting of the defendant?"

"He did."

"Did you tell Mr. Carvalho that Capt. McClusky told you that he had seen the defendant write it?"

"I told him that Capt. McClusky had said that it was in the defendant's handwriting. I did not tell him that I thought so, and I told him that it was merely an evidence of how persons not experts could be mistaken as to a fact." The experts glared at each other, and Mr. Carvalho shook his head in a decided negative.

"Where did Capt. McClusky say it was written?"

"In his house."

"Did he insist on that?"

"No, he backed water."

"Don't you know that the writing is in the hand of Gen. Molineux, who went with his son to the Captain's house when the defendant's name was first mentioned in the case?"

"Yes."

"How do you know it is the General's handwriting?"

"By comparison."

"Was that not written on Jan. 2?"

"I don't remember the date."

"If you say it was written on that date," put in Mr. Osborne, looking at the jury, "I will admit that it was written by Gen. Molineux and taken to Capt. McClusky's house with the statement that the defendant wrote it."

Gen. Molineux half rose to his feet and seemed about to speak, and Mr. Weeks objected excitedly. The Court sustained him, but when he remonstrated against the action of the Assistant District Attorney, Recorder Goff remarked that the incident was closed.

"Did you give that paper any study in connection with the address on the poison package?" went on Mr. Weeks.

"I did."

THOUGHT MOLINEUX WROTE IT.

"When you first compared it did you not think it was in the handwriting of the defendant?"

"I did."

"Did you find any similarity?"

"Yes."

"How often did you compare the two?"

"Twice."

"And then you went to Mr. Carvalho's office?"

"Yes."

"How long were you there?"

"About five hours."

"Did you call the next day?"

"Yes."

"Had you at that time reached any conclusion?"

"I had not."

"You have testified that at one time you side-tracked the defendant—that you had put his handwriting out of consideration. Is that right?"

"Yes."

"When was that?"

"In the latter part of January."

"When you side-tracked him you had plenty of his handwriting, and Mr. Carvalho told you that you could have more?"

"Yes, but I could not get the kind I wanted."

"Oh, you wanted a special kind!" cried Mr. Weeks, while the witness smiled. "You wanted a kind of your own, specially written and prepared for you under certain conditions. Is that it?"

"That is right," said the expert.

"And you did not get what you really needed until Feb. 20?"

"That's right."

The witness then told how on Feb. 17 Molineux had gone to the office of Mr. Osborne to write for him, (Mr. Kinsley.) Mr. Kinsley said the pens were bad, and the defendant asked for another pen. He wrote for an hour, and all the while, the witness said, a detective sat in the office and talked about poison cases and executions and the like. "You remember what an embarrassing position we were in?" said the witness.

"Oh, yes, I remember," said Mr. Weeks. "Did you not ask Mr. Carvalho if he wanted any of these specimens that were written for you, and did he not say that both you and he had passed the defendant out of the case?"

"I cannot recall that he said the last part."

SAMPLES NOT SATISFACTORY.

"Do you remember testifying before the Coroner that the samples of handwriting which you obtained on Feb. 17 were not satisfactory?"

"Yes."

"Did you say that on that occasion you were unable to get what you needed?"

"I did."

"Then down to Feb. 20 you needed specimens to convince you?"

"Yes."

Mr. Kinsley then told how he had "called down" Col. Hay for a premature expression of opinion that Molineux had written the poison address. He said also that he had employed the other experts, among them being Mr. Ames. He admitted that he had collected a part of Mr. Ames's fees under an agreement that he had with that gentleman to the effect that he should take the West as a field and the witness should take the East. Whenever either worked in the territory of the other, the witness said, they split the fees.

"On Feb. 6 how many samples of the defendant's handwriting had you?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"Fifteen or twenty."

"And were these not enough to form an opinion on?"

"No."

"After you have formed your opinion, then, you help justify yourself with arguments that, prior to the formation of that opinion, combated you?"

"No, and yes," said the witness.

"And is that the sum total of what you call the science of handwriting?"

"It is not."

"Have you not stated that the separation of certain letters in a word was a method of disguise?"

"I have."

"Did you not authorize a statement embodying that view?"

"I may have; I cannot remember."

"Did you have such an opinion regarding the separation of letters in the address on that poison package?"

"I may have had. I was theorizing in those days. I was fishing in the dark and looking for light. It was an attempt then to form some plan or idea."

"In regard to the address—is that handwriting simulated or not?"

"It is simulated. That is, it is an attempt on the part of the writer to disguise his writing rather than to write like another."

HAD FORMED NO OPINION.

"At the time when you say that you sidetracked the defendant, had you concluded that the address was not in his handwriting?"

"No, not entirely. I had formed no definite opinion."

"Did you not at that time report to Capt. McClusky that the defendant had not written the address on the poison package?"

"No. I told him that, though I had found similarities and characteristics in his handwriting, I had not sufficient evidence to satisfy my mind."

"When you talked with Mr. Carvalho were any of the original exhibits in his possession?"

"I don't know whether he had them or whether I took them there. The exhibits changed hands so often between the police and myself that it was impossible to keep track of them. Receipts were given only for the poison address."

"Then there is no way of telling how many persons handled them?"

"No."

Mr. Weeks then went into a technical dissection of the admitted writings and the poison address. The witness said that Exhibit No. 28, an envelope bearing the words "N. Y. City," had acted as a key to the whole situation. He was asked to point out what the key consisted of, and he said he did not work in that way, declining at the same time to give the information asked. There was another struggle between counsel, and Mr. Weeks, having made his point with the jury, the matter rested there. Mr. Kinsley tried to explain his condition of mind prior to Feb. 20, when he had not concluded that Molineux had written the poison address, by saying that he was beset on all hands by newspaper men, some of whom wanted to know whether from the style of the writing he could tell what was the color of the poisoner's hair and eyes.

Mr. Kinsley then told how he had examined the writings of members and employes at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

"How many times were you there?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"Three or four times."

"How long each time?"

"From three to six hours."

"And you examined thousands of writings?"

"There and in my office."

"Did you also examine the names on the register of the club?"

"Yes."

"Carefully?"

"Not very."

THE EXAMINATIONS PERFUNCTORY.

"As a matter of fact, these examinations were merely perfunctory, were they not?"

"They were."

"It was not such an examination as would lead you to swear that none of the persons who wrote there could possibly have written the address on the poison package?"

"I said it was."

"Do you mean to tell me that by running down a line of names you could come to such a determination?"

"I carried the chief peculiarities in my mind. When I found a sample that answered none of these I discarded it at once."

The poison address was then taken from between the glasses inclosing it and handed to the witness. He was asked to say whether he had made an ink test. He said he had not, and that he had no opinion as to the character of the ink used.

"When you got it on Jan. 1, could you tell whether the writing was recent or old?"

"I thought it was recent."

"How recent?"

"About a week or two old."

"Is it materially different in appearance now than it was then?"

"It shows some age. It is slightly darker."

"Is it any blacker than it was on Jan. 1?"

"A little."

"Could you say when you got the address on Jan. 1 whether or not it was five years old?"

"Nothing except what I have said."

"Is it possible that it might have been five years old?"

"Yes, it is possible."

Mr. Kinsley said that it was his opinion that the paper bearing the address had been part of a wrapper on a package, and that the writing had been done after the package was made up and tied. He said he based this opinion principally on the fact that the letter "S" in "St." had a distinct break between the top and bottom parts, and he thought that was caused by a person writing over a string around the box. He said that there was absolutely nothing to show whether the stamps had been put on before or after the address had been written.

"Now, in examining disputed handwriting," said Mr. Weeks, "do you follow any method or rule to form an opinion?"

"Yes."

"What is the rule?"

"I examine size, slant, shape, shade, spacing, speed, movement, the general proportions of the letters and parts of letters, and pen pressure. Those are the principal things I look for. That generally covers the field."

WATCHED MOLINEUX WRITE.

"Do you apply the same rules to simulated and dissimulated handwriting?"

"Practically."

"Have you given any study to the style of pen most suited to vertical writing?"

"Yes, a coarse pen, between a stub and a fine pen. Vertical writing is an innovation, and questions concerning it are in the experimental stage."

"Did you give that kind of a pen to Molineux to write with?"

"I did."

"You also gave him other styles of pens, did you not?"

"I did."

"Was not that done with the view of producing certain similarities between his writing and that on the poison package?"

"It was not."

"Did the fact of your seeing the defendant write on Feb. 17 and 20 enter into your conclusion that the defendant wrote the address?"

"It had no weight whatever."

"Then why did you come back to the room after leaving it to see him write?"

"So that there would be no legal question as to his having written the samples."

"You were then qualifying yourself to testify in the case?"

"No."

"Now, had you not already stated to Capt. McClusky that you would have to have more writings to make you sure in your opinion?"

"I said I would have to have more to make my decision positive or refute the opinion I had already formed."

"Did you ever say anything about refuting your opinion?"

"I did."

"On Feb. 20 you got the defendant to write the exact language that appeared on the package, did you not?"

"I did."

"So that until you succeeded in getting the defendant to write the exact language of the matters you were examining, under conditions that you prepared for him, with pen, ink, and paper to suit the purpose, you were not willing to give a positive opinion?"

"I was not."

"And yet you assume to be an expert in handwriting?"

"I do."

"And yet you were not able to form a conclusion until you had set the scene yourself and dressed the performers in the clothes you had chosen for them?"

"I was not."

The court then adjourned until Monday morning, after the Recorder had given the jury the usual admonition not to talk or read about the case.

REPORTED ERROR BY KINSLEY.

Handwriting Expert Said to Have Made a Mistake and Owned Up to It in the Nason Case.

It was said in Brooklyn yesterday that the case against ex-Coroner Nason of that borough, indicted for holding alleged bogus inquests, was likely to be upset by an error said to have been made by William J. Kinsley, the handwriting expert, who gave testimony in the case before the Grand Jury and who is now a prominent figure in the trial of Roland B. Molineux. It is claimed that ex-Coroner Nason has not been brought to trial because of the fact that Mr. Kinsley has admitted that he made a mistake in determining certain handwriting submitted to him to be that of the ex-Coroner.

The indictment against Nason was obtained by District Attorney Josiah T. Marean, now a Supreme Court Justice. It is said that when Mr. Marean decided to try the case of Nason, after the conviction of Coroner Coombs, he discovered that the indictment had been found upon warrants and vouchers not signed by Mr. Nason, and that these could not be brought to bear upon him in court. It was necessary to find some voucher written by Mr. Nason himself, and expert Kinsley was called. It is said that he swore that certain writings were by Nason, and on his testimony a new indictment was found.

Mr. Marean left office without having tried the Nason case, and it fell to his successor, District Attorney Steele. It is said that when Mr. Steele got ready to try the case Mr. Kinsley examined the testimony he had given before the Grand Jury, in which he swore that Nason made certain writings, and it is claimed that he declared that he must have made a mistake. He is said to have asked permission to look the matter up again, and to have returned later saying that after a careful examination of Mr. Nason's handwriting he was compelled to admit that he had been mistaken. Because of this alleged admission by Mr. Kinsley, it is said, the case could not be brought to trial on the indictment found. The case is still hanging fire.

District Attorney Steele, when seen in relation to the matter last evening, declined either to affirm or deny the statement as to Mr. Kinsley's alleged mistake. "In my position as District Attorney," he said, "it would not be proper for me to discuss this case."

Mr. Steele also declined to say just what was the cause of the delay in bringing the Nason case to trial. The delay, he said, was due to a legal technicality, but he declined to explain what the technicality was.

Justice Marean said last night that he knew nothing about the matter, as it did not come up while he was District Attorney.

Assistant District Attorney Kellogg, who is familiar with the Nason case, could not be seen last evening. One of his most intimate friends, however, said that Mr. Kellogg, in speaking to him yesterday morning, expressed doubt respecting the accuracy of some of Mr. Kinsley's testimony. In the case of Coroner Nason, Mr. Kellogg said, according to his friend, Mr. Kinsley testified before the Grand Jury that a certain exhibit of handwriting was that of the Coroner, and afterward, when the case was being prepared for trial Mr. Kinsley came into the District Attorney's office and declared that this same handwriting was that of somebody else.

MODISTE'S STORY OF CRUELTY.

Mrs. Mullen Obtains a Separation on a Recital of Her Wrongs.

The suit of Mrs. Mary Cecilia Keagan Mullen against her husband, Thomas F. Mullen, for a separation on the grounds of cruelty and desertion, was continued yesterday before Justice Russell, in the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Mullen testified that her husband objected to her having clergymen call upon her, and that he had a way of coming into the parlor in his stocking feet when she had visitors. On one occasion, she said, she hid for three days in a closet in her mother's room for fear of him. Mrs. Mullen was a modiste and continued in business after marriage. She said that her husband first boarded at her house and then married her. A part of his cruelty, she testified, was the humiliation he brought upon her by hugging one of the sewing girls and trying to hug another in her presence.

Mary Ryan, an employe, testified that she carried meals up to Mrs. Mullen in a clothes basket, with sheets over the food to hide it. Margaret McGoey declared: "I thought it wasn't very nice for him to put his arms around the girls down in the workroom and ask 'Where is her joblots?' 'Is joblots up stairs?'" Another witness said that Mr. Mullen placed a card, on which was printed "Crazy Mag," below a crayon portrait of his wife, and afterward turned the picture to the wall.

Mr. Mullen admitted that his wife had often run through the house, probably thinking he was in pursuit. He said that she took exception to his daughter, who came from Canada to live with them. He had taken a place at Marmaroneck, he testified, and invited her to come out and live on it, but she had ignored his letters. He denied the charge of cruelty, and said: "She told me once that she only married me so that she would have a 'Mrs.' to her name. She said to me a number of times that it would be fine to be a widow."

Justice Russell gave judgment for Mrs. Mullen.

San Francisco Suicide Identified.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—The unknown young man who committed suicide last Sunday by jumping from the ferryboat San Rafael is believed to be Howard Tuttle, twenty-seven years old, son of a wealthy stock broker, who made his fortune in New York and now resides in Paris. The suicide is alleged to have been caused by Tuttle's unrequited love for a young woman of Oakland.

Chicago Woman Burned to Death.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—While a score of persons stood helpless on the street, Mrs. Palmer, a stenographer, succumbed to heat and smoke this morning and was burned to death. The tragedy occurred at a small fire. Mrs. Palmer's room was on the third floor of the building. She rushed to the window and begged some one to save her, but all attempts at rescue were unsuccessful. One man stood scarcely five feet from the unfortunate woman as she fell back into the flames.

CURRENCY DEBATE GOES ON

General Discussion, However, Is Brought to an End.

DEMOCRATS FAVOR THE BILL

Two New York Representatives Announce They Are for the Gold Standard and Will Vote for It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—This was the closing day of the general debate on the Financial bill in the House of Representatives. To-morrow all speeches will be made under the five-minute rule. During the early hours to-day there was less than a score of Republican members on the floor and the Democratic representation was thin and scattered. Jones (Dem., Va.) opened the debate in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Brosius, (Rep., Penn.) speaking in favor of the bill, declared that no page in American history would shine with greater splendor through the centuries than that which tells how this Nation preserved its honor, maintained its credit, and kept its money good.

Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.) arraigned the Republican side for inconsistency, and urged that it was possible by legislative enactment to maintain a ratio between the metals.

Mr. Bailey, (Dem., Texas.) the floor leader of the Democrats in the last Congress, received close attention from both sides when he spoke. He said a remarkable spectacle was presented by the debate on this bill. He recalled that when in the Fifty-fourth Congress Mr. Towne asserted that the Republican Party had never declared for a gold standard, the Congressional Record showed that he was interrupted by many Republicans with the exclamation: "And it never will."

Mr. Bailey said the Republican side was so busy studying the trend of events that it had no time to study the science of money. While the first section of this bill purported to establish the gold standard, the law of 1873 fixed the gold dollar as the unit of value. This bill was therefore simply a re-enactment put forward to make people believe something new and wise was being done.

When Mr. Bailey referred to the increased production of gold, Mr. Dalzell interrupted to ask if, in view of this increased supply of gold, Mr. Bailey still believed in silver at 16 to 1. The Texan responded emphatically in the affirmative, amid Democratic applause. The Democratic side simply asked a sufficiency of the money, and if this was supplied by either gold or silver, then instead of refuting the Democratic position it simply confirmed it.

Mr. Bailey declared that the logical outcome of this bill would be to take the millions of silver impounded in the Treasury into the open market and sell it, as Germany had done. If the supporters of the measure were honest and consistent they would thus offer the silver for sale now, as that would be the inevitable fate of silver under this bill. He compared the appreciation of gold values and the corresponding depreciation of cotton and wheat.

Mr. Bailey closed his speech with a stirring tribute to the time-honored and undying Democratic organization, which evoked applause from the Democratic side.

Immediately following Mr. Bailey came the statement of Mr. Scudder, (Dem., N. Y.:) "As a Democrat I favor the single gold standard, and will vote for this."

While not concurring in all of the features of this bill, Mr. Scudder said the main feature—establishing a gold standard and giving stability to values—commanded his support.

Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.,) said Mr. Bailey had discovered nothing new in the old law fixing the gold standard. The trouble had been to have gentlemen on the Democratic side accept that law, and the purpose of the present bill was to place the subject beyond further doubt and misconstruction.

Mr. Dalzell (Rep., Penn.,) said the Republican Party was a progressive party; it was ready to meet the needs and demands of the present. Mr. Dalzell referred to the published interview of "that gentleman who has made demagogy a profession" during his wanderings in Texas, that the pending bill should be defeated because it was not in the interest of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Richardson (Dem., Tenn.,) sharply questioned this statement, saying the reference had been to the "Democracy," and not to the "Democratic Party."

Mr. Bellamy (Dem., N. C.,) spoke against the bill. Messrs. Mondell, (Rep., Wyo.) Kerr, and Broomwell, (Repn., Ohio,) spoke in favor of the pending measure.

The debate closed with a short speech by Mr. Morris (Rep., Minn.,) in support of the bill, after which at 5 o'clock the House recessed until 8 P. M.

The most interesting development in the evening session was the announcement by Mr. Clayton (Dem., Ala.,) that he intended to vote for the pending bill. In response to an unfavorable reference which had been made to gold Democrats, Mr. Clayton said there were many of that belief in New York and the number was growing constantly.

Senate Committees About Complete.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—To-day the practical completion of the Senate committees for the fifty-sixth Congress was announced officially by Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island. He presented to the Senate an order fixing the committees, and it was adopted without dissent. A few vacancies in the minority representation are yet to be filled. They will be disposed of in a few days. No other business of importance was transacted by the Senate.

Congressional Notes.

The Senate adjourned yesterday until Monday.

Senator Foster of Washington has introduced a bill extending the bounty provision of the Homestead law to the soldiers who served in the war with Spain and who are serving now in the Philippines.

House bills were introduced yesterday as follows: By Mr. Knox, Massachusetts, for civil government in Alaska; by Mr. Hull, Iowa, for the reward of distinguished service in the war with Spain; by Mr. Linney, North Carolina, to reduce the tax on distilled spirits to 70 cents per gallon.

DR. HARSHA HAS RESIGNED.

Surprise in Consistory of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church.

The Rev. Dr. Justin Harsha, pastor of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church, One Hundred and Twenty-third Street and Lenox Avenue, has resigned. Dr. Harsha, who has been in poor health for several months past, went to Oklahoma about three weeks ago with M. Wright, a missionary. Before leaving he addressed a letter to the Consistory of the church of which the Rev. Dr. J. Elmendorf is Chairman, requesting a leave of absence and hinting that his resignation be accepted, to take effect on Jan. 1.

At a meeting of the Consistory held several evenings ago Dr. Harsha's resignation was discussed. It was finally decided to accept it, and Dr. Harsha's letter will be read to the congregation to-morrow morning and the acceptance announced. Dr. Elmendorf last evening said:

"Although Dr. Harsha has been in poor health for months past, his resignation came somewhat as a surprise. Several rumors have gone the rounds as to the cause of Dr. Harsha's resignation. All of them are untrue. In his letter Dr. Harsha stated that he resigned for 'sufficient reasons.' What those reasons are he knows best."

Several other members of the church when interviewed on Dr. Harsha's resignation professed ignorance of it or refused to discuss it. Dr. Harsha has been pastor of the Second Collegiate Reformed Church, which is the west side branch of the old Harlem Dutch Reformed Church, in East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, of which Dr. Elmendorf is pastor, for the past seven years. He was called to the pastorate from a church in Omaha. The parsonage has been vacated and Mrs. Harsha and her daughters are visiting friends in Massachusetts.

Plymouth Pleased with Dr. Hillis.

The annual meeting of Plymouth Church of Brooklyn, which was continued from Friday evening of last week, was held last evening, when the following officers were elected: Clerk—Frederick C. Manvel; Assistant Clerk—Frederick N. Gilbert; Treasurer—S. V. White; members of the Board of Deacons—Henry L. Pratt, George J. Corey, Frederick W. Starr, and Philip M. Knight; Deaconesses—Mrs. Kate W. Nell and Mrs. Harriet E. Burke. The report of the Committee on Church Work expressed satisfaction with the work of Dr. Hillis as pastor.

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

Open Till Ten Tonight

DID you ever watch a big Corliss engine, how, with almost no fuss, it carries along the machinery of some great factory? Then think of a noisy little donkey engine that is helping to raise dirt from a pit.

Christmas shopping used to be a real annoyance—it is a helter-skelter scramble yet, in most stores. Visitors are continually commenting on the difference at Wanamaker's.

There is no questioning the bigness of the business—ten of every dozen who know it from the viewpoint of the trade world will say it's biggest of all. Never mind that—we want you to know it and like it for the comfortableness of it all, and its beauty.

We never sold Christmas goods so rapidly; yet the business runs with precision. We welcome visitors as heartily as ever.

The Halsey-Stirling Paintings and descriptive chat—10:30 and 11:30 a. m.; 3 and 4:30 and 8 and 9 p. m.

The Kitchell Madonna is very effectively lighted now. It deserves study as the most wonderful composite ever made, with the result of giving a Madonna that is the sum of the inspiration of artists during three centuries.

Christmas goods are everywhere—little counters off the track of the throng where one selects almost as from a table at home. Yet parts of the great stocks—and just as beautiful and fair in price.

Men's, Women's and Children's Shoes
HALF TO TWO-THIRD PRICES

Express elevators (but not run so fast as to take your breadth) direct to the Fifth-floor Bargain Store; a corps of careful salespeople, and such shoe bargains as you'll appreciate.

We've told you how these special values come to us (and not to the general shoe trade); we've told you—we repeat it here—that the bargain shoes are just as good as the regular shoes you'll find in any regular New York shoe store, and the styles as a rule are those you'd probably choose anyway. We believe in the goods—and protect you as fully as we protect those who choose from our regular stocks.

There are more sorts than we tell of, but you can judge them all by these—

Men's $3 Patent Leather Shoes at $2. And enameled leather and black kidskin shoes as well.

Men's $3.50 and $4 Shoes at $2.30. Box-calf, patent leather, enameled leather.

Men's calfskin and kidskin Shoes at $1.80.

Men's $3 and $3.50 Shoes at $1.50. Only 208 pairs of these—patent leather, kidskin and calfskin. Shop-worn, all right after one polishing.

Men's Slippers at $1.25—values run from $1.50 to $3. Some splendid Christmas gifts.

Men's Slippers at 90c—ten sorts, black and russet. Black Felt Slippers with felt soles, 50c.

Children's Shoes—1,108 pairs for girls; spring-heel shoes with patent leather or kid tips—8½ to 10½ at 80c.; 11 to 2 at 95c.

Children's Kidskin Shoes at 50c—sizes from children's 8's to misses' 2's (only 600 pairs). Spring-heel. $1 to $1.50 qualities.

Spring-heel Shoes for Boys—sizes 9 to 13 at 80c and $1. Made like big fellows' shoes.

Boys' Shoes, 11 to 5 at $1.50. Patent leathers included.

Men's and Children's and Boys' Shoes—Ninth street side.

Women's $3.50 Shoes at $2.35—360 pairs just added to the lot. Fine kidskin; fine styles.

1,692 pairs of Women's $2.50 Shoes at $1.40. Kidskin; lace; flexible soles, medium heels.

Women's $3 to $3.50 Slippers at $2—Fine; fine styles; for ball-room wear and boudoir.

Women's Kidskin Slippers at 80c and $1.25—values up to $2.50.

Cloth Overgaiters, 25c a pair.

Leggings for girls and boys, 50c.

Leggings for boys and women, 75c.

Women's Shoes, Tenth street side.

So much for the bargain store. And still, the regular store on first-floor will be busy. It never was so full of Slippers for Gifts, and you know the regular lines of shoes kept there. Fourth avenue and Ninth street.

Umbrellas Now if you've decided to give an umbrella—whether it be to a man, a woman, or a child—you'll be helped to a quick, satisfactory choice here. See the collection, anyhow, even if you haven't decided. It's not a gathering of numerous ordinary styles. Novelties—the best that could be found abroad and here.

Elegant handles of gun metal, some studded with jewels, and of Damascus steel, inlaid with gold; handles of sterling silver with the new enamel, and some of real Dutch silver—odd; tortoise shell, plain or elegantly inlaid. And if the umbrella is silk it's a good silk—some good ones, with various fine handles at $2.50 and $3.75, and a high-grade quality—men's or women's—at $5. There's a strong, durable umbrella here for $1—and from that they advance to $28 for one of exceptional elegance.

For children, choose at 50c to $5.

Walking Sticks Silver trimmed, of course. If he carries a stick, he will doubtless be pleased with one with an odd design. Many new ideas are effectively worked out in this large assortment. Some for 50c—others run up to $10. Broadway.

Clothing---Men's and Boys'

Anything one buys to give is exchangeable after Christmas—for the correct size. Now then, that's settled. And we'll make the exchange as a gift ought to be exchanged—graciously, discreetly.

For self or for giving—

Men's Overcoats of American Montagnac, black; cloth piping, silk linings; interlined red flannel, $25.

Overcoats of cheviot in the pretty Oxford grays—$15, $20, $25, $35.

Overcoats of kersey (all the men's stuffs, and boys' stuffs, too, are of pure wool), blue or black—permanent color. $8.50 to $15.

Overcoats of black velour—a soft, elegant woolen, satin shoulder lining, wool body lining, silk velvet collar. $20.

Boys' Winter Overcoats—blue or brown Frieze; lap seams, velvet collar, really stylish, for boys of 4 to 16 at $5.

These at $6.50 are in a new style—cuffs to the sleeves and crescent-shaped pockets. Brown or Oxford-gray.

Reefers for boys of 8 to 16—ulster collar—Frieze—brown, blue, Oxford-gray. $5, though quite well worth $6.50.

A hundred Sailor Suits—blue serge and cheviot, neatly made and trimmed, reduced from $6, $6.50 and $7.50 to $5. For boys of 3 to 12.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

rimmed Hats $4, $5, $6. Now it would be very wrong to call them $4, $5, and $6 hats—for they are good and stylish and new. Count up the materials—in most cases they'll come to half as much again as the hat. And there's the trimming, besides. Loss? Yes, as a rule—our way of reducing stocks and using up little bits of material.

Second Floor, Broadway and Tenth.

Women's Silk Stockings Not many but very fine. Seems rough on the stockman to ask him to sell his most sumptuous things at a loss—but broken lots can't stay here. Fair range of sizes in the lot as a whole.

2.50 for $3.50 to $7 Stockings—
black silk, open work.
black silk, embroidered fronts.
colors, with vertical stripes.
lace effects, with stripes of color.
5 for $9 and $10 Stockings—
open work, stripes of color and embroidery.
black, with open-work clocks.
and white, same style.
boot stockings with Van Dike points.
10 for $12 to $20 Stockings—
white lace.
all-over embroidered fronts.
black, open-work fronts embroidered.
black; lace inserted fronts.

Women's Vests—silk; elaborately crocheted designs. Five styles—white, pink, blue. $7.50, were $12. Broadway.

Flannelette Wrappers Of the new prettily striped and figured flannelettes. Made up in new styles, with various effective trimming designs. Prices quite as much to your liking as the wrappers are sure to be. $1, $1.25 and up to $2.50.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Canary Birds Miss Pope, the skilled bird doctor, stays another week to teach you the care of birds. She'll pick out a bird for you, if you wish.

What do you think of a store who says a woman to pick out the best things for you?

But all birds here are the pick of their tribe—we pay an extra price to have that pick. Birds, $1.65.

Cages and everything else you need; ready and fairly priced.

Christmas Candies

Two Christmas Candy Stores—basement, with handy annexes about the store, and a whole extra store—across the street—76 E. Ninth.

Our own factory is turning out more tons of candy daily than ever, and we have the output of the candy-department of one of the great chocolate factories, besides.

We have sold as much as seventeen tons and a half of candy in a day—all at retail, except the 50 to 100-pound lots for Sunday Schools.

The Christmas treat is a Five-pound Box of really fine Mixed Candies for $1, while at 20c a pound we have various specialties of chocolate—nougat, eclairs, marshmallows and caramels.

Five-pound box of delicious Glace Fruit for $1.50.

But the candy store is more than a feaster; it is a decorator as well—and the table pieces and favors we brought from Europe have been graciously received. Some careful people say we save them well on to half from usual prices—and offer best variety. What do you think of them?

Fire Screens and Taboret Boxes

A thoughtful man, this upholstery chief. Adjusting certain stocks now, and The Day so close at hand. Couldn't have timed a sale more to your advantage, as these price reductions will show. Screens—carved mahogany frames filled in with handsome damask and silk velour—at $16, $21, $22.50, $26, $32.50. Double those figures to find yesterday's prices.

Rare English and French screens and some tables and small cabinets are also re-marked to close before Christmas. The screens at $30, $40, $60, $70 and $100—were a full quarter more.

And three-fold denim-covered screens, elegantly embroidered, at $13.50 instead of $18.

Taboret boxes, octagon shape, with coverings of attractively colored cretonnes; three sizes; $2.25 kinds at $1.75; the $2.75 size now $2.25; those selling yesterday at $3, now $2.50.

Women's Desks---100 Styles

To choose among so many styles is an advantage that will be appreciated—certainly. But there's a still greater one. The prices. Whether at $5 or $30 the saving to you is a full third. Many at the lower prices are decidedly pretty—$5.50 buys a desk that sells regularly at $8.50. It's mahogany finished, high polish; made with serpentine front. At $8 a desk of golden oak, with painted decorations on lid—it was $11.75. Mahogany desks at $17 that were $25, and at $20 that were $30, and at like reductions up to very elaborate kinds at $45 that should be $67.50.

Make your selection promptly. We will hold purchase for delivery at your convenience. Fourth floor.

Suspenders We've lots of fine ones — meant for gifts, which means they are strong and good-looking. A shiny meretritious gift is an insult—we'll save you from insulting. How much for the suspenders? $1.50 to $6 a pair for the especially fine ones. Other good ones at 50c and so on. Every pair is put in a neat gift box. Men's Store, Ninth and Broadway.

Beaded Elastic Belts Imported. Pretty. Popular. Good assortment of approved styles — good values, too. Black, a few fine fringed kinds. About a dozen qualities—50c to $3.75.

Tenth street, with Dress Trimmings.

A Sale of Pictures Engravings in gilt frames, and copies of water colors. Some dainty little standing ones at 25c instead of 40c. The large copies of water colors at 50c and 75c—easily worth 75c and $1. The engravings at 60c—they have sold at $1.

Fifth floor, Tenth street.

Men's Full-Dress Protectors This men's furnishings store is a complete store — not a counter. It ranks with the best-tone store you know. Its stocks are correct—its prices are fair. And well they can be, for five times as many men come here as go to the exclusive stores, which gives us commercial advantages.

Full-dress Protectors at $1 to $5. Here is an example—

Black silk Protectors, heavy quilted lining—with or without collar—one dollar.
Same style in satin; same price.

Men's Goods, Ninth street side.

Gift Pieces—Silver-Plated In the Basement, Ninth street side, there is every conceivable shape of table piece in quadruple silver plate. Such wear is next to Sterling—there's almost no wear-out of it.

Bread Trays, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.
Chafing Dishes, $10 and $12.
Water Pitchers, $3.50 to $10.75.
Candelabra, $3 to $9.

But this is list enough.

Queen Mary Perfumes Our own chemists coax the odors from the flowers into the bottles. It isn't cheap work—we don't mean it to be. In fact, we can buy perfumes much cheaper than we dare make them. But what a difference! Discreet, charming odors—sold under our own registered trade-mark: Queen Mary: which is to be taken as our personal guarantee.

Queen Mary Triple Extracts—any of them—25c an ounce. Put in your bottles.

Queen Mary Toilet Water—violet, rose, jockey club and eau de cologne—5c an ounce—in your bottles.

Or we'll give you a cheap bottle, if you forget yours.

All Queen Mary perfumes are to be had in beautiful bottles and packages at fair prices.

That's one line of elegance.

And then we control most of the sorts of the wonderful Guerlain Perfumes sold in America. Paris has loved them for half a century.

Tenth street side.

Designed and Gathered for Smokers There's been a lot of study devoted to the needs of the smoker. The evidence is in this showing in the basement. Never saw such elegance in meerschaum pipes. Beautifully carved designs—novel, too. They are $4 to $16. But there are good French briar pipes at 25c—with celluloid mouthpieces. 75c for those with amber, clear or cloudy, as you may prefer.

The smokers' tables are interesting. One is a combination of many useful articles—useful not alone to the man himself. For outside of the cups for cigars and ashes and matches, and the cigar cutter and electric lighter, there are these: A clock, a thermometer, a barometer, a compass, an electric bell and an elegant little music box. This combination is $50. Other ingeniously arranged tables in varied assortment down to $1—that for one in oak or mahogany finish, without any frills.

Pipe Racks—Unique designs in clay, made in imitation of old ivory—75c to $1.75. Some odd Japanese affairs are 75c.

Cigar boxes with moisteners, in many shapes and qualities. They're $2 to $10.

Tobacco Jars—Clay heads, 40c to $1.25.

Cigar and cigarette holders of meerschaum, with amber stems, at 50c to $6.

Basement, Tenth street side.

Broadway, Fourth Ave., Ninth and Tenth St.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Kentucky Representatives Air Their Troubles Before the House.

TWO DEMOCRATIC VIEWS GIVEN

Mr. Berry Says Taylor Was Seated by Fraud and Will Be Ousted, While Mr. Wheeler Scores the Other Side.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—In the House to-day the serenity of the currency debate was unexpectedly interrupted by a personal clash between Mr. Berry and Mr. Wheeler, both Democrats, of Kentucky. Mr. Wheeler secured recognition to question statements made by Mr. Berry yesterday as to corruption in the recent Kentucky campaign.

Mr. Berry sat a few seats ahead of Mr. Wheeler, and the latter addressed himself personally to his colleague.

"I regret the necessity of having to wash our dirty linen of Kentucky on the floor of the House," said Mr. Wheeler, "but I do not propose that our people shall be maligned and slandered without a word of protest."

He declared that Mr. Berry represented neither Kentucky nor her people, and that the people of his district would speedily rebuke him by retiring him to private life. The election of Taylor, he asserted, had been bought and paid for, with a railroad on one side and the plain people on the other. But despite this, he said, "Gov. Goebel" would yet be seated.

"Yes, I use the word advisedly," proceeded Mr. Wheeler, referring to his characterization of Mr. Goebel as Governor, "for before the buds burst on any tree in Kentucky he will be its Chief Executive, and he will have routed that nefarious gang who won their certificate of election by corruption, fraud, and rascality."

The speaker then paid a glowing tribute to Goebel as a gallant gentleman, a tribune of the people, and denounced the reports set afloat against him.

"They were afraid of him," interjected Mr. Sulzer, (Dem., N. Y.)

"What does New York know about it?" shouted Mr. Berry.

"New York likes Goebel because he is a fighter," responded Mr. Sulzer.

Mr. Wheeler closed by declaring emphatically that Taylor had not been elected; that he had secured by irregular methods a certificate of election, but that when the calcium light of the courts was turned on this procedure, as it would be, William Goebel would be seated in the executive chair.

Col. Berry was quickly on his feet as Mr. Wheeler closed, and responded, savagely, personally, and with much feeling.

He said the speech just heard was typical of the intolerance of that Kentucky element which would not brook any freedom of opinion. It came with ill-grace from one who represented a district which for years was not true to Democracy. He did not need the influence of the gentleman or his backers. Four times he had been sent here, and he would return again.

Shaking his finger at Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Berry exclaimed:

"You are cringing at the feet of Goebel, and I tell you that your scalp is taken now by Goebel."

When reference was made to the irregularity of the Louisville Convention Mr. Wheeler sought to interrupt, but Mr. Berry waved him off, declaring that the gentleman had participated in the disorder, and had stood up and yelled down opposition, with policemen about him.

Mr. Wheeler interjected a flat contradiction of this, but, not heeding interruptions, Col. Berry proceeded in his fiery response, declaring that Mr. Wheeler was as bad as Goebel himself.

Mr. Wheeler gained a minute to reply, defending the regularity of the Louisville Convention, and saying that only a few thugs and toughs were excluded.

The tension over the affair was relieved at this point by a point of order from Mr. Cox, (Dem., Tenn.)

"What is the point of order?" asked the Chairman.

"I object to having this Kentucky side show thrust into a financial debate," said Mr. Cox, gravely, "to the edification of the Republican side."

This caused a laugh, and the heat of the exchange between the two Kentucky gentlemen was dispelled.

Mr. Boreing (Rep., Ky.,) denied that the election of Taylor in Kentucky was due to fraud, and said the strongest refutation of this charge was the fact that the election was held under the Goebel law, framed by the Democratic candidate.

OFFICE FOR A NEW YORKER.

E. V. Morgan is Appointed Secretary of Legation at Seoul, Korea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The President to-day nominated Edwin V. Morgan of New York to be Secretary of the legation of the United States at Seoul, Korea.

ALLEGED DEFAULTER CAUGHT.

T. J. Hunter, Wanted in Atlanta, Is in Custody in Morocco.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—United States Consul General Gummere at Tangier cabled to the State Department to-day that the Moorish authorities have just arrested Thomas J. Hunter, who is wanted in Atlanta, Ga., on a charge of defaulting in his accounts as auditor of a railroad.

Hunter at first denied his identity and claimed to be a British subject, but he fitted the description of the fugitive accurately and the Consul General is satisfied he has the right man. There is no extradition treaty between the United States and Morocco, but consent was given to the surrender.

CONGRESS REFERENCE LIBRARY.

To Open in Three Weeks—Room in the Capitol Not Yet Assigned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Herbert Putnam, the Librarian of Congress, hopes to be able at an early day to install in the Capitol a reference library, made up of selected volumes now in the new library building. This was contemplated in the last Appropriation bill. There is now no reference library at the Capitol, and books can be obtained from the Congressional Library only after a delay of from twenty to thirty minutes.

The authorities of the library have culled duplicates from the main collection and made purchases to the extent of nearly $2,000 from the general appropriation for books. These amount to over 2,000 volumes, comprising encyclopaedias, dictionaries, atlases, gazetteers, manuals, and standard reference books, particularly in history and statistics; the best collected editions of the writings of the fathers of the Republic and miscellaneous material on government, political and economic science. With the above are certain books upon topics likely to be under discussion during the present session, such as finance, subsidies, interoceanic canals, and Colonial administration. The latter constitute a special deposit, which may be changed from time to time, as occasion may require.

Attendants will be placed in charge of this material, who will offer personal assistance in its use and will make requisition upon the main collection for such further materials as may be currently required to answer particular inquiries.

Within three weeks the first installment of the collection will be ready for use, but space for it in the Capitol has yet to be assigned. It will require shelving and room for consultation and administration. It is planned to have the shelving open and well lighted, so that members may handle books directly so far as they care to do so, without the intervention of an attendant. There is little doubt that the old library space will be assigned for use as a reference library.

Licenses for Illegal Liquor Traffic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Commissioner Wilson of the Internal Revenue Bureau has reaffirmed his former ruling to the effect that persons who engage in the sale of alcoholic liquor, even though such business is a violation of the law of their State, are nevertheless required to pay the special tax under the internal revenue laws of the United States. The paper issued to them is not a license, however, and does not protect them from prosecution, conviction, and sentence under the State law.

FLASH OF A LARGE METEOR.

Left a Bright Train as It Passed Northward Over the City.

A large meteor, whose brilliance even the full moon could not obscure, although it passed within a few degrees to the westward of the orb of night, flashed over this city at 6:20 o'clock last night. It was seen by few, for pedestrians, as a rule, were hurrying along with their heads bent down into turned-up overcoat collars.

The meteor passed almost due north and left a train of light behind it which remained visible for a second or less after the head disappeared about midway between the zenith and the horizon. So bright was the meteor that it might easily have been mistaken for a heavy rocket had it not been that its trail seemed to burn with a steady light, instead of throwing out sparks.

COURT BARS BUILDING SCHEME.

Act Is Important to Holders of Land in Restricted Places.

Justice Marean, in the Equity Term of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, granted an injunction which is of importance to owners of property in restricted neighborhoods. The injunction was obtained by John J. Hurley and Aquila M. Hurley, as owners of property on Forty-fourth Street, in the Borough Park section of Brooklyn, and restrains Henry Brown from erecting double tenement houses with stores on property near that owned by the plaintiffs, on the ground that to erect the buildings would be detrimental to the interests of the neighborhood.

Justice Marean said that he found, as a matter of fact, that the buildings would seriously impair the use of the property near the plaintiffs' site, and that the values would be injured. He said that the injunction which he granted against the defendant was not made perpetual, as the character of the neighborhood may change. A time may come, he explained, when a permanent restriction might prove injurious to all concerned.

THE NEW HORACE MANN SCHOOL.

The fund of $100,000 required for the purchase of the land for the new Horace Mann School was announced yesterday to be completed. Miss Grace Dodge, Treasurer of the Teachers College, said that work on the new building, which is to cost $250,000, would be begun immediately. The money required for the construction of the building is already in hand, and it remains only for a clear title to the land to be obtained before commencing work.

The land, comprising ten lots, is situated on the east side of Broadway, between One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Twenty-first Streets. William E. Dodge made the first donation of $25,000 for its purchase. John D. Rockefeller subscribed $50,000 on condition that the remainder be raised before Jan. 1, 1900. Other contributors were D. Willis James, James Speyer, Seth Low, and a woman living in the West, each of whom gave $5,000. Charles W. Harkness subscribed $3,000.

SUES HOSPITAL FOR $30,000.

Miss Ward's Action Against St. Vincent's Again on Trial.

The second trial of the action brought by Miss Helen D. Ward against St. Vincent's Hospital to recover $30,000 for injuries received, as alleged, while a patient in the institution, due, as claimed, to the negligence of a nurse of little experience who was placed in attendance on her, was commenced yesterday before Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court. The suit was dismissed on a former trial by Justice Cohen on technical grounds. The Appellate Division held that the dismissal should be reversed. Col. E. C. James and A. I. Elkus appeared for Miss Ward. Austen G. Fox was counsel for the defendant.

Miss Ward, a sister-in-law of Henry H. Rowland, testified that, acting under the advice of her physician, Dr. William S. Lusk, she took a room in St. Vincent's Hospital on Feb. 26, 1894, for a week, paying $25 and $3 a day for the services of a skilled nurse. An operation was performed on her right leg by Dr. Lusk and Dr. Hughes, the house surgeon of the hospital. She was under the influence of ether at the time. When she became conscious her leg was paining her. The nurse told her a hot water bag was lying on it. The result of the contact of the bag was that her leg where the wound had been made was severely burned, and though she engaged several doctors, not until December of 1894 was the wound healed. She was in intense agony during all that time, and has since been unable to walk without assistance.

Miss Ward's examination had not concluded when the court adjourned until Monday next.

Norwegian Ships Fly New Flag.

All of the Norwegian vessels in this harbor yesterday hauled down the Union flag of Sweden and Norway and hoisted in its place the Norwegian flag. Yesterday the new law enacted in November last by the Norwegian Storthing over King Oscar's veto went into effect, and hereafter Norwegian merchant ships will fly the plain Norwegian Merchant flag without the device symbolizing the union. The new flag is of red ground with a white and blue cross. These flags are the merchant flags only. The royal flag and the naval flag of each country remain the same.

Military Code Amendments Proposed.

Several proposed amendments to the Military Code were presented to the Code Committee of the National Guard Association yesterday. The committee met in the office of Col. Alexis C. Smith of the Twenty-third Regiment. One of the amendments sought provides for an increase of the allowance to batteries and troops of cavalry for horse hire from $1,500 to $2,000 a year. The other amendment referred to the section about the appointment on the staff of Colonels of officers who have been in service one year "immediately preceding election." It was proposed to strike out the word "immediately."

Railroad Machine Shops Burned.

The machine shops of the Long Island Railroad located on Newtown Creek near Borden Avenue, in the Hunter's Point section of Queens Borough, were destroyed by fire last evening. Owing to the age of the building and everything being oil soaked, the flames spread rapidly. The railroad employes formed a salvage brigade and rescued most of the papers and records in the west end of the building. Paymaster William J. Jarvis of the railroad company said the loss would probably be between $15,000 and $20,000.

Government Buys the Plymouth.

The United States Government has purchased the steel screw steamer Plymouth of Boston for $80,000. The Plymouth, which was used as a tender to Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock, is now at the Lighthouse Department docks, at Tompkinsville, S. I., where she is being overhauled and remodeled for lighthouse service along the coast.

The Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary has won, purely on its merits, the place of highest authority in the departments of the United States Government.

Here are two statements, straight from headquarters, that are typical of the many:

In the Government Printing Office

C. M. Robinson, Foreman of Proof Division: "We have in constant use in our room all the modern dictionaries, but the most thoroughly thumb-worn of all is the STANDARD. It is not only the most accurate, consistent, and complete, but its typographic excellence makes it the favorite among men engaged in bookmaking. Hundreds of useful words and helps are found in the STANDARD which can be found in no other publication of the kind."

In the United States Patent Office

A. G. Wilkinson, Ph. D., Principal examiner: "The superiority of THE FUNK & WAGNALLS STANDARD DICTIONARY is unquestioned; I give it preference on all disputed points. It is the most perfect dictionary in any language."

BRIDGE SCHEMES BLOCKED

Two Bond Issues Not Approved by the Board of Aldermen.

CONTROLLER'S WORDS HEEDED

Protest Received from Him Against the Mayor's Action in Opposing a Tunnel to South Brooklyn.

Controller Coler scored a noteworthy victory in the Board of Aldermen yesterday, when the members of that body, actuated largely by a statement furnished by him, refused to concur in the action of the Board of Estimate in appropriating $1,000,000 for the proposed Blackwell's Island bridge, and recommitted the bridge resolution to the Committee on Bridges and Tunnels for investigation.

The Controller's statement, a copy of which was given to every member of the board, was as follows:

"The Mayor of this city has publicly declared that if both of the proposed bridges across the East River be built, at a cost of $30,000,000, it will be impossible to enter into the construction of tunnels. This declaration raises the squarest of issues. It means that the interests of the teeming population of the whole South Brooklyn district must be sacrificed for the benefit of a few real estate speculators in Queens County. It seems that we must have a thirteen-million-dollar bridge to Long Island City, but we cannot have a double tunnel to South Brooklyn to cost $3,000,000.

"The necessities of South Brooklyn exist to-day; the people are there now. The population which the Blackwell's Island bridge is designed to serve is only expected to arrive after the bridge is built. This bridge, which it is proposed to construct at such an enormous cost, is planned to equal or exceed the capacity of the old Brooklyn Bridge—the sole connecting link to-day between the great Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn.

"Such a scheme anticipates the natural growth of this district by at least fifty years. A double tunnel could be constructed to Long Island City which would not cost over $2,000,000, and which would accommodate the traffic requirements of this district for the next twenty or twenty-five years. It is possible, therefore, to build tunnels both to Long Island City and to South Brooklyn for about one-third of what this bridge will cost. Moreover, the tunnel could be completed in less than half the time, in all probability, from the date of the commencement of the work.

"South Brooklyn to-day stands more in need of better communication to Manhattan Island than any other district across the East River. The Bridge Department acknowledges that it would have located one of these bridges there if it had not been a practical impossibility. The conditions, however, are declared by eminent engineers to be ideal for practical tunnel construction. But we are told that the actual present necessities of this important district must be ignored so that an unnecessary and scandalously extravagant bridge scheme may be 'jammed through' without proper consideration of the economy and advantages of tunnels.

"But the issue now raised by the Mayor is no longer one between the relative merits of tunnels and bridges, as applied to Manhattan and Queens transportation. He has raised an issue much more practical and more easily understood. It is the relative claims and demands and rights of Long Island City and South Brooklyn. While it is true that the tunnels both can be accommodated, the Mayor has declared that the Blackwell's Island bridge shall be constructed and that therefore we shall have no tunnels anywhere.

"I do not know what action the Board of Aldermen will take. The members of that body have the greatest opportunity of their lives. I only know that it is inconceivable to me that any Brooklyn member, be he Democrat or Republican, should deliberately vote to sacrifice the enormous present interests of South Brooklyn's population to the prospective speculative profits of certain land owners in the Borough of Queens."

Alderman McCall, the Tammany leader, called the bond resolution up on a report from the Committee on Finance. In speaking for its passage, Mr. McCall said: "I can't see that the people of Queens want tunnels. They do want a bridge, and we ought to give it to them. The only person who is anxious for tunnels is the Controller. The people of Queens have never asked us for tunnels, so I take it for granted that they don't want them."

Alderman Wafer protested against hasty action on the resolution. There was plenty of time, he said, and the fact that the Controller had investigated the subject of tunnels and bridges and had reported favorably on them ought to convince the Municipal Assembly that nothing could be lost by taking plenty of time.

"I'm in favor of bridges and tunnels," said Alderman McInnes, "but I don't intend to vote for this bridge until consideration is given to the remarkable report made to us by the city's chief financial officer."

"Chief financial liar," growled Alderman James of Queens.

"Have it your own way," Mr. McInnes rejoined, "but I want to see this subject investigated, and I'll never vote for these bonds until something is done to find out if the Controller's figures are trustworthy."

Alderman Goodman, after apologetically saying that he was a monomaniac on rapid transit, declared that he was not opposed to the proposed bridges, but he thought the amount of money involved was sufficient to cause the Municipal Assembly to go slow. "Let us quit acting as a tail to the Board of Estimate's kite," he exclaimed. "I am tired of seeing this body pass large financial measures without consideration simply because some one wants them adopted. Let us be independent."

The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of recommitting the resolution. Another resolution appropriating $1,000,000 for the proposed bridge between Pike Street, Manhattan, and Washington Street, Brooklyn, was referred to the same committee.

HEARING ON PROPOSED BRIDGES.

Objections to the Plans Presented to the Harbor Line Board.

A meeting was held yesterday by the Harbor Line Board at the Army Building, to hear whatever objections might be made by the general public to the proposed bridges Nos. 3 and 4 over the East River. The plans must be passed upon by the board with reference to their possible interference with navigation, before being approved by the War Department. Yesterday's hearing was called by request of Bridge Commissioner Shea and Col. H. M. Robert presided.

Ex-Mayor Schieren of Brooklyn was the first to speak on the plans. He said, in referring to Bridge No. 3, that he recognized the necessity of more bridges, but objected to a bridge that began nowhere and ended nowhere. He said that Flatbush Avenue should be extended to the river, and the new bridge should connect with it. Commissioner Shea said the Department of Bridges had no power at present to connect the bridge terminal with Flatbush Avenue, which would mean the condemnation of two blocks of land.

With reference to Bridge No. 4, (the Blackwell's Island bridge,) Col. Robert read a protest addressed to the Secretary of War from the New York and Long Island Bridge Company, holders of the Raingy franchise. Dr. George F. Rainey, Secretary of the company, asked the board to suspend the hearing for two weeks in order that the company's counsel might file a brief. Mr. Shea objected on the ground that the matter had been in contemplation more than a year, and due public notice had been given. Rudolph Horak, Secretary of the Taxpayers' Association of Long Island City, protested against any further consideration being given to Dr. Rainey's company.

Col. Robert announced that the board would render decision on Tuesday, and in the meantime it would consider briefs or objections filed. All briefs, he said, must be confined to the single question of the possible interference with navigation.

New York Baptists Planning Systematic City Evangelization.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO CO-OPERATE

The Movement Is Intended to Aid Struggling Churches and Also to Start Missions Where Needed.

A systematic plan of city evangelization is about to be put in operation by the Baptists of New York. It will be co-operated in by the Baptist Young People's Union and the City Mission Society. The movement has two objects, namely, to assist struggling churches and to start missions in localities where Baptist churches are needed. Thus far joint conferences have resulted in the adoption of the following recommendations: First, that the Young People's Union in each Church should hold one session a year to discuss city mission work. Second, that all the unions unite in one grand rally in February. Third, that two persons annually visit the Mariners' Temple, conducted by the City Mission Society. Fourth, that the unions unite in hiring an evangelist to engage in active city mission work.

This movement is intended mainly to establish churches in the boroughs where the population is increasing. The main reason for securing the co-operation of the young people is to interest them in church work other than that of foreign missions. The Rev. Dr. A. W. H. Hodder, Chairman of the City Mission Committee, said yesterday: "With the young people interested in city missions we intend to make things hum. The Presbyterians have just had their turn, and now we want to outdo them."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Copyright, 1899, by John R. Whitney.

SUBJECT.—Christ's coming foretold. Isaiah, ix., 2-7.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke ii., 11.

The rising of "the Sun of Righteousness" which Malachi saw four hundred years before it began to illume the earth Isaiah saw more than three hundred years before Malachi was born. But many hundred years before Isaiah was born Abraham saw it as clearly as he. It was the blessed promise of a coming Saviour. For when He came, He said Himself: "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day; and he saw it, and was glad," for "before Abraham was, I AM." (John viii., 56-58.) He might have said the same thing concerning Isaiah and Malachi, and all the prophets by whom "God at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers." (Hebrews, i., 1.) To every one the vision was not only one of glory, but of gladness.

This vision of Isaiah, as now brought before us, was very much like that of Malachi, which engaged our attention last week. To both it was the vision of "a great light," shining for those who walk "in darkness," and "dwell in the land of the shadow of death." Although its full consummation was distant from them in point of time, yet they saw it as clearly as if it were an accomplished fact, and spoke of it with the confidence of a great reality.

When Isaiah uttered this prophecy he was not addressing himself to a suffering and sorrowing people, and promising them deliverance from trouble. On the contrary, they were in great outward prosperity, wealth, and comfort. It was "in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah," that he fulfilled his ministry. (i., 1.) They ruled over "the Southern Kingdom," the capital of which was Jerusalem. Their combined reigns covered more than a hundred years, during fifty-two of which Uzziah sat upon the throne. (Second Chronicles, xxvi., 3.) Of every one of them, excepting Ahaz, the record is that they "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord." (Second Chronicles, xxvi., 4; xxvii., 2; xxix., 2.)

As a consequence they all prospered. The record of Uzziah especially is, "He sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding in the visions of God—and as long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper." His army consisted of "three hundred thousand, and seven thousand, and five hundred, and made war with mighty power," so that his territory was greatly increased. New and more powerful instruments of war were invented and applied, commerce was extended—"and his name spread far abroad, for he was marvelously helped till he was strong." (Second Chronicles, xxvi., 5-15.)

Material prosperity, however, is not always, or even generally, a sign of acceptance with God. Men may—as these Kings did—do many things that are "right in the sight of the Lord," and yet not be "righteous" in His sight. It is "right" to be prudent, industrious, enterprising, and courageous, but none of these things necessarily bring any one into fellowship with God. On the contrary, they often hinder it. Even Uzziah was not righteous, however wise and prudent and successful he may have been. He was one of those that "have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away." (Luke, viii., 13.) His conduct was more the result of the influence of Zechariah, than of any real fellowship with his Maker.

A LOW SPIRITUAL CONDITION.

So, with all this outward, material prosperity, there was—as in the days of Malachi—a great spiritual declension. This low spiritual condition troubled Isaiah, as it did Malachi. As the prophet of God, therefore, he could only cry out as one utterly amazed, "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken: I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know. My people doth not consider." (i., 2-4.) Their religious services were abundant, but they were formal—without heart and without power. The multitude of their sacrifices and the offering of incense were vain oblations and an abomination to the Lord. (i., 11-15.) Therefore, they were "in darkness," and "in the shadow of death."

The dreadfulness of this spiritual condition the prophet set before them by the condition of material affairs in the Northern Kingdom. The material condition they could easily understand and appreciate. It would also surely come upon them if they did not repent. Concerning them the prophet declares that before his own new-born son, "Maher-shalal-hash-baz," shall be old enough to "have knowledge to cry, My Father, and My Mother, the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the King of Assyria," (viii., 3-4.)

Almost while he was speaking the army of Assyria was preparing to descend upon that doomed country. Everywhere a fearful apprehension was beginning to settle upon the people. The most northern provinces of the Northern Kingdom were Dan, on the east of the river Jordan, and Naphtali and Zebulun, on the west. In these tribes the first shock of battle would be felt. Then it would extend down the banks of the Jordan, throughout the whole of "Galilee of the nations." (v., 1.) Long before this—in the time of King Asa—these provinces had, comparatively, been "lightly afflicted" when "Ben-hadad sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maachah, and all Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali." (First Kings, xv., 20.)

But in a very few years God "did more grievously afflict" the same region, when, "in the days of Pekah, King of Israel, came Tiglath-pileser, King of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-both-maachah, and Janoah, and Kadesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria. (Second Kings, xv., 29.) Still "more grievously" did He afflict it a few years later, in the reign of Hoshea, the successor of Pekah. Then "Shalmanezar took Samaria and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed him in Halah, and in Habor by the River of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes" (Second Kings, xvii., 6.) Then Israel was blotted out from being one of the nations of the earth. Those were the days of "trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish" (viii., 21,) which the prophet foresaw.

THE SINNER AND HIS MAKER.

This physical condition of fearful apprehension on account of sin, he used to depict the spiritual condition of his people. It is the condition of the sinner in every age, when confronted with his sins as he stands in the presence of his Maker. Then he is filled with a far more solemn fear than any people ever had as they watched the approach of an invading army. When he realizes the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and that he is covered with it as with the foulest leprosy, in the sight of a holy God to whom he must give account, and that he stands condemned by His righteous law, all is dark and hopeless before him. He can see no light or way of escape. All of his efforts to make himself better only seem to make him worse and to aggravate his condition. He literally dwells "in the shadow of death." But it is to just such that the Gospel of the birth of Christ is sent.

At one of the McAll meetings in France a man and his wife were noticed as regular and attentive listeners. For many nights they seemed absorbed in all that they heard. But after awhile their seats were vacant. The good pastor sought them out and learned the reason. "Oh," said the man, "I thought I could find peace and rest in your meetings. But when I heard you explain the Scriptures, and I saw my sins in the light of God, they grew black and black and black. They did leap and mount. They crushed me. I could not bear it. Instead of peace I found torment. I cannot go again."

With all faithfulness and love, the good pastor showed him that it was consciousness of sin that troubled him, and not the Gospel; that "God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Romans, v., 8.) He was prevailed upon to return to the meetings, and soon he that "sat in darkness saw great light." (Matthew, iv., 16.) Unto him a Child was born and His name was "Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." In Him he found rest.

The graciousness and gladness of this vision of Isaiah is much more clearly unfolded in the "Revised Version" than in that of King James. It says that in it he is looking at those who, turning away from "the law and the testimony," are seeking God in some other way, or comfort from some other source. "There is no morning," he says—not even the glimmering light which precedes the rising of the sun—"for them. They shall look unto the earth, and behold, distress and darkness—the gloom of anguish—and into thick darkness they shall be driven away." Revised Version, viii., 19-22, R. V.)

Even for them, however, the prophet sees a door of hope as he goes on to say: "But there shall be no gloom to her that was in anguish. In the former time he brought into contempt the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, but in the latter time, hath He made it glorious, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the nations. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwelt in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined. Thou hast multiplied the nation, Thou hast increased their joy; they joy before Thee according to the joy in harvest—as men rejoice when they divide the spoil. For the yoke of his burden, and the staff of his shoulder—the rod of his oppressor—Thou hast broken as in the day of Midian"; as when Gideon, with his 300 men scattered the host of the Midianites and slew Oreb and Zoeb, their two Princes, (Judges, vii.) "For all the armor of the armed man in the tumult, and the garments rolled in blood," shall be taken away as things of no value, and "shall even be for burning—for fuel of fire," (ix., 1-6, R. V.)

THE BIRTH OF CHRIST.

And all this bringing in of light, all this increase of joy, all this triumphant victory over enemies would be the result of a most amazing fact. It would be, the prophet says, "for," or because, "unto us a child is born." Evidently this "child" would be of no ordinary parentage, and his career would be marked by no ordinary characteristics. But it was more than seven hundred years before the mystery was made clear. Then this "child" in the person of Jesus of Nazareth "came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zebulun and Naphtali," and the prophecy was literally fulfilled: "the people which sat in darkness saw great light, and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light" sprang up. (Matt., iv., 13-16.) But it was not for them alone. It reached even to that "great multitude" which John saw in his vision at Patmos. (Rev., vii., 9.)

Moreover, all this should be "for" or because "unto us a son is given"—not merited but "given"—the "Son of Man" in truth, but also "The Son of the Highest." Luke, i., 32.) "The Word" which was "in the beginning" with God, and "was God" John, i., 1.) "from everlasting, or ever the earth was" (Prov., viii., 23.) "was made flesh, and dwelt among us." (John, iv., 14.) When He was born, angels from Heaven proclaimed Him as "a Saviour, which is Christ, the Lord" (Luke, ii., 11.) and the Holy Ghost said, "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins," and "Emanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us." (Matt., i., 21-23.)

In Him every poor, trembling sinner who sits in darkness can find light and life. He is God's free gift to a rebellious and condemned world, for it is written, "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons," (Gal., iv., 4-5.)

Now, the great characteristic of this "Child" that was to be born and of this "Son" that was to be given, the prophet says, is "the government shall be upon His shoulder"—not the government of any one particular nation, but of all the nations of the world. "For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son; that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself; and hath given Him authority to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of Man." (John, v., 22-27.) Every man will be judged according to his relation to Him.

No wonder that to Him is given a name "far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." (Eph., i., 21.) For "His name shall be called—Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." (Verse 6.) "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil., ii., 10-11.) "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, even forever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this." (Verse 7.)

This is the blessed Gospel of Christmas.

QUESTIONS ON THE LESSON.

What is said of the eternal existence of "The Sun of Righteousness," spoken of by Malachi?

In what respect was this vision of Isaiah like that of Malachi?

When did Isaiah fulfill his ministry, and what was the condition of the people he addressed?

Are things that are "right in the sight of the Lord" always "righteous" things, and how is it illustrated in the case of Uzziah?

What was the spiritual condition of the people in the time of Isaiah, and how was the fearful result of this condition set before them?

What were the most northern provinces of "the Northern Kingdom," and how were they "lightly afflicted"?

How were they "more grievously afflicted"?

How did the apprehension of these evils set forth the condition of the awakened sinner, and how is it illustrated?

How is this vision of Isaiah told in the Revised Version?

Of what would all this promised light and joy be the result, and what is said of the "Child" to be born?

What is said of this "Son" to be given, and why can every sinner find life in Him?

What is said to be His great characteristic, and what will be its effect?

What position does the name of Jesus give Him—what is its purpose—and what is to be the duration of His kingdom?

The Rev. J. K. Smyth's Sermons.

"The Church of God" will be the subject of the Rev. Julian K. Smyth's sermon at the vesper services in the New Jerusalem Church, East Thirty-fifth Street, near Park Avenue, to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. During the service will be sung Garrett's "Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord" and "Lovely Appear" from Gounod's "Redemption." In the morning Mr. Smyth preaches on "The Scarlet Thread; or, The Sign of the Divine Forgiveness."

Custom Tailoring Only,

Temple Court Annex, 119 Nassau St.

W. C. WHITNEY IN A NEW FIELD.

Reported that He, with Widener and Elkins, Will Build Opera House.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—The statement is made here that P. A. B. Widener and William L. Elkins, the traction men, and William C. Whitney, the New York capitalist, have secured the controlling interest in the stock of the famous Academy of Music, at Broad and Locust Streets, and will erect a new opera house on the site of the present building.

OBJECT TO JEWISH HOSPITAL.

Incorporation of Emanu-El Hospital and Dispensary Disapproved.

ALBANY, Dec. 15.—The State Board of Charities has disapproved the incorporation of the Emanu-El Hospital and Dispensary of New York City, against which many protests were raised, principally on the ground that, so far as the Jewish community on the east side is concerned, there is no need for such an institution. Among the protestants were Dr. J. H. Byrne, Chairman of the Committee on Charities and Legislation of the New York Medical League, and Dr. Sturgis, Secretary of the same committee.

HUNTER ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Fell Down Stairs, Discharging Shotgun Into His Body.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 15.—A dispatch from Gouverneur, St. Lawrence County, says:

Stephen Burtis, aged fifty-five, was about to start on a hunting trip this morning when he fell down stairs and the shotgun which he was carrying was discharged. The load of buckshot entered his abdomen and he died in a few moments.

He carried an insurance policy for $5,000.

YALE GETS MARSH ESTATE.

Contest Instituted by R. H. Waters, Nephew of the Testator, Withdrawn.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 15.—The contest instituted by Robert H. Waters of Newburyport, Mass., against the will of his uncle, the late Prof. Othniel C. Marsh of Yale University, has been settled.

A formal decree was entered in the Superior Court by Judge G. W. Wheeler today approving the will, by which the entire estate, involving between $75,000 and $100,000, goes to Yale University. Waters's contest was voluntarily withdrawn. Waters claimed in his suit that the deceased had been unduly influenced by Yale University.

BISHOP SUED FOR SLANDER.

Missionary Returned from India Brings Suit for $50,000.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Dr. Salleni Armstrong-Hopkins, a returned missionary from India, who came to Syracuse a year ago, has brought an action for $50,000 damages against Bishop J. M. Thoburn of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for alleged slander. She has retained Attorney Hancock as counsel, and her brother, J. Z. Armstrong, who instituted the action, will assist. Mr. Armstrong says that he served papers on Bishop Thoburn before the latter sailed for Africa.

Dr. Armstrong-Hopkins went to India thirteen years ago, and after seven years of evangelical and medical work returned to this country. Upon leaving India she withdrew from membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The evidence to be submitted is said to be largely in the handwriting of the Bishop, and will fill three large volumes.

Killed by Jumping from a Window.

PROVIDENCE, Dec. 15.—Dr. Charles C. Howland of this city was found bleeding and unconscious on the ground here early to-day, having jumped through a second-story window. He died at the hospital later. The watchman in the Banigan Building says that he found Dr. Howland intoxicated on the eighth floor of the building last evening, and not wishing to turn him into the street in a helpless condition the watchman locked him in a vacant room on the second floor. That was the last seen of him until he was found dying under the window.

Connecticut Water Famine Continues.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 15.—South Norwalk, like many other cities in the State, is short of water, and stringent measures are being taken to husband the scanty supply now on hand. The recent rains have helped out somewhat, but the danger of water famine is by no means past. The cities have a serious problem confronting them.

Penitentiary Building Burned.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 15.—Fire at the penitentiary this afternoon consumed the manufactures building and caused a loss to building and contents amounting to between $75,000 and $100,000. All the prisoners are reported to have escaped injury.

AND REVIEW OF BOOKS AND ART.

MR. M'KINLEY AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The review offered by Mr. SCHURZ, President of the Civil Service Reform League, of the policy of Mr. MCKINLEY toward the reform during the past year is all the more severe for the temperate and discriminating manner in which it is made. It derives especial authority also from the fact that Mr. SCHURZ, as Secretary of the Interior, during four years of peculiar difficulty and without any statutory sanction, applied the strictest provisions of the merit system to his office with recognized success. He cannot be dismissed as a theorist on this subject, and no official can with effect be quoted against his statement that the merit system is not only entirely practicable but that it is the only system under which the best service can be got and the political independence of the voters be preserved. Nor must it be forgotten that the league, through its President, has in the earlier days of Mr. MCKINLEY'S Administration, recognized very heartily the advanced ground taken by Mr. MCKINLEY and the excellent manner in which at first he sustained that ground. It would be to them and to all fair-minded men a source of the greatest satisfaction if the President had permitted them to maintain the same attitude.

The claim made in the President's message that the order of May 29 was made to improve the service and to remove good grounds for objection to the system will not stand the test of facts. The only way in which the service has been bettered is that a large number of places that had been filled in violation of the rules are taken out of the rules, and the vice of their irregularity has been removed by approving it. Otherwise the direct effect of the order has been to strengthen the hands of the spoils seekers and the spoils mongers, to promote political favoritism in appointments and promotions, to lessen the equality of opportunity in the service, and to add to the cost while diminishing the efficiency of it. The politicians are not likely to be deceived as to its effect on their privileges, and they have hailed it with delight, publicly and privately. They have, moreover, been encouraged by it to the resumption of evil practices that had previously been quite thoroughly checked. They have begun again to enlist the office holders in partisan work in the most open fashion, and they have resumed the annual levy on the salaries of the public employés. In the President's own State the collectors made their appeal not merely to the place holders at home but to those in all parts of the Union.

We are far from supposing that the course of the President in this matter has been dictated by wanton disregard for his pledges, which, nevertheless, he has distinctly broken. We have not the slightest doubt that it would have been much more agreeable to him to observe toward the reform the honorable attitude that he assumed at the start. But he has had much to contend with. New questions have been presented to him and great and doubtful tasks have been imposed on him. He has felt the pressing need of harmony in Congress, and especially among his own party. He has not felt strong enough to face opposition there, and he is not the kind of man that can directly overcome such opposition. He has believed it his duty to placate possible opponents and to reinforce his supporters by every means in his power. Unfortunately no means has been so effective as the distribution of spoils, and to accomplish this the rules had to be changed and the pledges had to be broken.

Had the President in the Spring of this year known that he had the country with him as thoroughly as it is now plain that the country is with him, we are persuaded that he would not have made the sacrifice of his personal consistency and of his convictions of real right in the management of the service that he has made. On the other hand, had he been forced to meet a powerful, intelligent, and active opposition party, ready and able to hold him to account for the violation of his pledges, he would have been stronger to overcome the spoilsmen in his own party. We regard the check he has inflicted on the progress of the principle of the public service as a trust as very unfortunate and in reality wholly unnecessary for the purpose he imagined he was serving. We have hope that as it is shown to him by the progress of events that he has erred he will correct his error and employ the great strength that he enjoys before the people to re-establish and complete that reform which he began by serving well.

MR. WILLIAMS'S PLAN.

We look with doubt and suspicion on the report that the joint resolution about the Philippines introduced by Representative WILLIAMS of Mississippi was "the result of consultation among a number of Democratic leaders in the House." There is a unity, coherence, and granitic solidity of fatuousness about the composition that stamp it as the work of one mind—undoubtedly the mind of Mr. WILLIAMS himself.

The resolution declares it to be the purpose of this Government to withdraw its land and sea forces from the Philippines upon the establishment of peace and the organization of a Government or Governments by the people of the islands, provided the Filipino Government or Governments agree to refund to us the $20,000,000 which we paid to Spain. They are to give us a naval station and coaling stations, free access for our merchandise and our missionaries. But for a period of ten years they are to surrender into our keeping "the entire question of their foreign relations" and to pay the expenses of any troops we may keep on Philippine territory at their request.

Here is organized trouble, calculated turmoil, and sure embroilment entered into with prepense and aforethought. The absolute control of domestic affairs is to be intrusted to the natives. The reins of government would pass into the firm hands of such safe and sagacious statesmen as AGUINALDO and his associates. Under their amiable and disinterested sway foreign residents would be robbed sweetly and with an attention to finish and thoroughness that would command critical approval even while it provoked violent reclamations. The Filipino Government would attend to the robbery as a part of the domestic affairs of the Government. As custodians of their foreign interests we should be responsible to the power whose citizen or subject had been despoiled.

For instance, a levy would be made upon a fat and prosperous German merchant for funds to buy gold whistles and for other budget purposes. His reluctance having been overcome by duress and hot irons and his coffers emptied into the Filipino Treasury he would go off to Berlin and make a prodigious fuss about it. Mr. WILLIAMS'S resolution is silent as to the policy to be pursued in such cases. We might pay the bill ourselves and send troops and ships to make the Filipino Government disgorge. We might at all times maintain a large standing army in Manila to keep the local government straight and protect life and property. Apparently we could not permit Germany herself to go and collect her bill, for the resolution declares that we pledge ourselves "to treat as an unfriendly manifestation toward the United States any foreign interference or aggression."

Power without responsibility is the philosophical basis of Mr. WILLIAMS'S Filipino Government. The natives are to have their fling under our protection. They are to be an independent nation save that we are to take charge of their foreign troubles and fight their wars. The cable communications from his allies in Washington which so long cheered the great soul of AGUINALDO probably no longer reach him in his mountain concealment. The news of the introduction of the Williams resolution will not be likely to give him any aid and comfort even if he gets it. The Government will therefore not be embarrassed by it. It is as a measure and test of the capacity of the Democratic leaders in opposition that the resolution is most interesting. Is this wild and reckless declaration, as crude in its phrases as it is impossible in its policy, the best they can do?

UNIFYING THE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM.

It is probable that the Governor's commission will be able to recommend a simple plan for bringing the educational system of the State under one supervision and management. The differences that at one time threatened to arise between the Regents and the Department of Public Instruction are now in a fair way to be averted altogether, as it is understood that the plan under discussion is acceptable to both parties.

This plan was outlined before the commission by a committee of the Regents on Thursday evening. It is, in brief, to make the Chancellor of the University the chief executive educational officer of the State, adding to his present functions the duties now performed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. At the same time it is proposed to empower the Regents to pay the Chancellor a salary sufficiently liberal to attract an educator of eminent ability and National reputation.

No legislation is as yet proposed dealing with the composition of the Board of Regents. If their authority over the schools of the State is to be augmented it may be found necessary to consider some changes in the law governing their appointment and term of office. They are at present the only officers of the State who are chosen for life. A merely ornamental office to which election is bestowed as a compliment or as a graceful recognition of party service or kind treatment at the hands of newspaper editors may without harm to the body politic be impressed with a life tenure. There is some question whether it is wise to make life elections irrevocable, during the decent behavior of the incumbent, to an office where real work is to be done and decisions to be taken in important matters? At the same time the term, if it is fixed at a given number of years, should not be made short. If Regents were elected for three or four years the place would almost certainly become the subject of partisan interest and intrigue. The schools must be kept altogether out of politics.

Independent of any reorganization of the Board of Regents, the plan for unifying and consolidating the educational system will doubtless commend itself to instructed public opinion. Either the Chancellor or the Superintendent is at present a superfluous functionary. To combine the duties of the two offices and intrust them to the Chancellor would remove the possibilities of friction incident to dual control and would dispense with useless and duplicated machinery. It would also give the Regents a more intimate relation to the school system, enhancing the value and dignity of the office.

THE LONG ISLAND TUNNEL.

Some six months ago the company formed to construct a tunnel under the East River to connect with the Long Island Railroad applied to the Aldermen and the Council for the franchise which those bodies are authorized to grant. No action has been taken on the application and the delay is hindering a project of great public utility which can be carried out without the expenditure of a dollar of the taxpayers' money and with great enhancement of the taxable property of the city.

This tunnel will open up rapid transit in the most direct and advantageous manner. It will provide ample means for transferring large numbers of passengers from the heart of the down-town business district in Manhattan to the City Hall, in Brooklyn, in six minutes; to the present terminus of the Long Island Railroad, in the centre of a large residence district, in twelve minutes, and so on out through the territory traversed by the railroad as far as Jamaica, in twenty minutes. There is almost no limit to the population that can thus be brought within easy and prompt communication with the business part of Manhattan.

The plan has been carefully made, and its designers are entirely sure of its success. As a practical experiment in the use of tunnels for rapid transit it would have great value, and it can be conducted wholly at private expense. Since the Aldermen are ready to expend $50,000 for an investigation of precisely the same sort of work, it would seem much more sensible to permit the experiment to be made by the tunnel company.

BETTER BUY IT.

It is difficult to make out, from the Washington dispatches, just what the status of the negotiations is for the transfer of the Danish island of St. Thomas, or whether they are even properly to be described as negotiations. The latest and the most credible form in which the rumors reach us is that Denmark has offered us the island for three millions, coupling the offer with some kind of intimation that Germany stands ready to buy it if we do not care to go into the transaction.

The natural comment of the uninformed is that it would be a violation of the Monroe Doctrine for any European power to acquire the island, or rather the islands, for it is to be assumed that Denmark means to get rid of all her "holdings" in the West Indies, and that St. Croix and St. John are to go with St. Thomas. But there is absolutely nothing in this view. The transfer of an island from one European power to another would have no bearing whatever upon the contention we have been maintaining for three-quarters of a century that European monarchies should not be suffered to "extend their system" on this side of the ocean. Of course Germany was not in the contemplation of the framers of the doctrine, for the reason that it did not exist. And no more was Prussia, which did exist, but which had not shown the slightest outreachings in the direction of becoming a "world power."

Things have altered a great deal since. A "swap" between two European monarchies for the possession of a West India island does not come within the scope of the admonition of MONROE. But we have always reserved the right to object to such a swap when our interests were even remotely threatened by it. We have repeatedly recognized the difference between a "weak holder" of Cuba, such as Spain, and a strong holder, long before the time when we determined that the Spanish tenure of Cuba was a nuisance which we were bound to abate. The possession of St. Thomas by Denmark is one thing. The possession of it by Germany would be quite another. Our relations with Germany are excellent. It is our desire and interest to keep them so. Therefore it is our desire and interest that Denmark should not transfer her possessions in the West Indies to Germany. We are quite willing to have them remain in the possession of a quiet and stationary landlord, but we could not "view with indifference" the passage of them into the possession of an aggressive and militant power. So long as King Log chooses to hold on to them, all right. But really we cannot allow him to transfer them to King Stork.

This is the crux of the situation, as we believe the situation will be viewed by the considerate part of the American people. We do not any longer require the harbor of Charlotte Amalia, upon which our naval officers have for a generation been casting longing eyes. We have much better harbors in Ponce and San Juan de Puerto Rico, as we had occasion the other day to point out. But if Germany wants St. Thomas, then we want it more. And very possibly the easiest and cheapest method of settling the question would be for us to buy it at the Danish price.

The objection may at once occur to many readers that, if we undertake to acquire all the West India islands which the present owners find to be in the nature of liabilities rather than of assets, we shall not lack for offers. But this objection is not so serious as it seems. There being no longer any Spanish West Indies, there remain England and France. England is not in the least likely to sell her possessions to a customer who, however inconvenient a neighbor he might be to us, would be a far more inconvenient neighbor to her. As for France, it is necessary only to imagine the effect upon the Corps Législatif of a proposition on the part of the Government to dispose of Guadeloupe and Martinique to the German Government to see that there is no danger in that direction. And, behind all, there is the evident fact that, by the simple act of putting on a fraction of a cent differential duty in favor of sugar grown in American possessions, we could make all the sugar-growing islands prosperous at a stroke and stir their inhabitants up to emulation which should be the first to take advantage of our bounty. We do not undertake to say whether Mr. MCKINLEY'S free trade principles are as yet too inveterate to withstand a temptation like that. It is only necessary to point out that we have always the possibility of such an arrangement "up our sleeves" in discussing the future of the West Indies, and that, if we established such a preference for their products, the nations which pay bounties upon the export of beet sugar would have estopped themselves from making any objections.

BRIDGES AND TUNNELS.

From a purely sporting point of view, it is to be regretted that the meeting of the Board of Estimate did not take place yesterday. Both the Mayor and the Controller have caused it to be understood that they were, in the language of the Southwest, "looking for each other." If the proposal to appropriate money for preliminary investigation into the cost and practicability of a tunnel to South Brooklyn had come up, no doubt a lively altercation would have taken place. And the question could not have been prevented from coming up, in view of the resolutions both of the Board of Public Improvements and of the Municipal Assembly in favor of the appropriation.

And yet it is a matter for public congratulation that the meeting was not held. The necessary delay, before the subject can be brought up officially, will enable the disputants to cool down and to discuss the subject from a public and not from a personal point of view. The Mayor owes it even more to himself than to the Controller to make an apology for the imputation which at the last meeting he made upon the Controller's motives, an imputation which is saved from being outrageous only by being so conspicuously silly. And at the same time the Controller will have had time to form, it is to be hoped, a disposition to express his regret for imputing to the Mayor, as he has done in a published statement, an undue interest in the development of Queens County at the expense of Kings. When the smoke of this personal controversy has cleared away, each of the controversialists will be able to see more clearly that the question at issue is not one of personal sensibility but of grave public importance. It is to be hoped that they will both have the grace to treat it as such.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This square is composed of sixteen different numbers, which are so arranged that, added vertically, horizontally, or diagonally, the sum in each case is 1899:

It has been claimed that a magic square composed of an even number of numbers, as sixteen, like the above, could not be formed that would add odd, as 1899, but four different numbers may be taken from the above square, forming fifty-two different combinations, and the sum in each case be 1899.

WOOD ON CUBA'S FUTURE

Says Optimists' Opinions Will Be Realized in the Island.

LAUGHS AT TALK OF REVOLT

Gomez, the New Governor Declares, Will Not Make Trouble—His Own Policy.

Major General Leonard Wood, who has been appointed Military Governor of Cuba, was at the Cambridge Hotel yesterday. To a TIMES reporter he said:

"I am going to Cuba to do the very best I can. I shall sail for Havana to-morrow to relieve Gen. Brooke. When he will start for home I do not know.

"I have never been in Havana, but I believe I shall like it there. As I understand it, there have been material improvements there in the matter of sanitation and the paving of streets.

"Gen Brooke angry at my appointment? Nonsense. Nothing in it at all. I did not expect to be sent to Havana so soon. Of course I had heard of my possible appointment, but I did not expect it to follow so soon on the heels of my nomination as a Major General.

"Affairs in Cuba are in a very satisfactory shape. All this talk about a possible revolution is moonshine. Business in all branches shows a material and steadily growing improvement. The natives appreciate it and are rapidly coming to understand that the United States is going to give the people of the island a government that will best benefit all concerned.

"Will Gen. Gomez cause trouble? Not a bit of it. The General is living in peace and quiet. I am satisfied that he will do nothing to cause trouble. Of course, there are men in Cuba, as elsewhere, who delight in creating dissensions, but they are in such a very small minority that they are not worthy of serious consideration.

"When will the railroad from Santa Clara to Santiago be built? I don't know. The Foraker resolution stands in the way, but I am satisfied that our Government will do all that it consistently can to promote the welfare of the Cubans. I know that it is my purpose to do all that is possible to benefit Cuba and its inhabitants, regardless of race conditions.

"Cuba has a brilliant future, and I believe the opinions of the greatest optimists will be realized.

"Mrs. Wood will not accompany me to Cuba just now. Unfortunately, she has not been very well of late, but I am hopeful that she will be able to join me next month. She did not accompany me to New York, as reported.

"I do not care to speak about what I did in Santiago. If any good has been accomplished, let it speak for itself. But I am going to Havana to do the very best that I can to improve all sorts and conditions."

CUBAN COMMENDATION OF WOOD.

Much Curiosity in Havana as to Significance of Change.

HAVANA, Dec. 15.—The Cubano to-day expresses great satisfaction at the approaching change in the Cuban side of the administration, asserting that the general opinion is also one of satisfaction, owing to the character of Gen. Wood, from whom good government is expected.

Much curiosity, however, is expressed as to the significance of the change, most people inclining to the view that Gen. Wood is considered in Washington the best man for the place. It is not expected that there will be any substantial change of policy.

The Society of Veterans and other organizations are preparing a great ovation for Gen. Wood on his arrival. His pronounced friendly feeling for the Cubans, as well as his record at Santiago, appeal strongly to popular favor.

Wood's Policy in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—In the discussion of Cuban affairs in the Cabinet today it was developed that Gen. Wood in taking command of the island as Military Governor would pursue practically the same course that he followed in Santiago Province. Capable and trustworthy citizens from time to time will be given positions of responsibility, and so gradually become identified with the civil administration. The rigor of military rule will be lessened as rapidly as the situation safely warrants.

CUBANS THREATEN SPANIARDS.

Troops at Manzanillo Kept Ready to Prevent Mob Violence.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Dec. 15.—Capt. Partello, commanding at Manzanillo, has had troops ready for immediate action since Dec. 8, when three prominent Spaniards, Señors Rodon, Mestre, and Ferrit, gave a banquet in honor of the arrival of friends from Spain. The Cubans claimed that the Spaniards were celebrating the death of Antonio Maceo, and a mob, led by the Mayor, attacked the house and demanded the expulsion of the offenders.

Capt. Partello intervened and restored order for the time being, but the mob returned daily until to-day, when the Spaniards, fearing violence, came to Santiago.

The Spaniards assert that they had no intention whatever of slighting the Cuban commemoration in honor of Maceo. They believe the mob leaders were endeavoring to cause trouble with the Americans and to stimulate an uprising.

Another lot of concealed arms has been captured near Guantanamo by the rural guard. A party of colored Cubans was preparing to distribute the weapons.

REMOVAL OF MAINE DEAD.

Bishop of Havana Waives Usual Cemetery Charge.

HAVANA, Dec. 15.—The Bishop of Havana has agreed to waive all cemetery charges in connection with the removal from Colon Cemetery of the remains of the victims of the Maine disaster.

Father Chidwick, Chaplain of the destroyed battleship, is indignant at a charge made by a local paper that the Bishop demands $5 for a permit to remove each body. This statement is absolutely false, as the Bishop is lending all assistance and facilities in the undertaking.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR REINTERMENT.

Remains to be Brought to Arlington on a Special Train.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen, having selected the place where the dead of the Maine are to be buried, is now making arrangements for the reinterment, substantially on the same lines as those followed in the case of the Santiago victims. The remains of the Maine victims will be brought by a special train directly from Fort Monroe to Arlington. They will be carried through Gen. Sheridan's Gate and placed in hospital tents pending the burial services, each casket covered with an American flag.

It is expected that the President, the members of his Cabinet, most of the army and naval officers in Washington, and a large number of persons will be present at Arlington when the final interment takes place, probably the last week in December.

Ex-Rough Rider Cassin Sentenced.

HAVANA, Dec. 15.—Lieut. of Police Cassin, at one time a bugler in the Rough Riders, who has been on trial for killing a Cuban Major, Martinez, has been sentenced to imprisonment for two years and four months and to pay the heirs of Martinez $1,000. Cassin has already been nearly a year in prison, and half this term will be deducted from the sentence.

Holland Boat to be Again Tested.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Holland submarine boat is on her way to Washington to give an exhibition of what she can do before the Senate and House committees, when they are ready to witness a test. Engineers are here now, laying out a course for her on the Potomac. It is expected that the boat will be here Monday.

CENSURE THE PRESIDENT.

Civil Service League Passes Resolutions on the Relaxation of Rules —Commends Gov. Roosevelt.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 15.—The National Civil Service League to-day closed its annual session after re-electing all the old officers and adopting resolutions, some which read in part as follows:

The league regards the order issued by the President on May 29 last, withdrawing several thousand places from the classified service and relaxing the rules intended to prevent evasions of the law, as the most unjustifiable backward step taken by the Federal Administration since the Civil Service law was passed. The injurious effects of this order have already been seen in the demoralization of many parts of the Federal service; the encouragement of the enemies of reform in their efforts to cripple the merit system, and secure a further relaxation of the rules, and the widespread distrust of the promises of the President and the party in power to enforce and extend the civil service law.

We also regret that the President has not yet fulfilled the assurances given by him to a committee of the league, of his intention to include in the classified service a much larger number of places than those withdrawn, but on the contrary has included none whatever. We venture to hope that such extensions may yet be made at no distant day.

We ask Congress to remove the legislative restriction upon the consolidation of Post Offices to the end that the department may apply the merit system in minor offices, where practicable, by making them branches of larger offices, and filling them from the clerical force therein. The withdrawal of fourth-class Postmasterships from the patronage would destroy the most formidable remaining bulwarks of the spoils system.

The league rejoices in the substantial progress made in civil service reform in the State of New York by reason of an effective reform law, and heartily commends Gov. Roosevelt for his distinguished public service in aiding to restore the merit system, which had been seriously impaired by his predecessor.

The league expresses its satisfaction at the action of Gov. Wolcott of Massachusetts in extending the classified service, and resisting the insidious attempt made to cripple the merit system in that State.

We confidently rely on public opinion to effect the ultimate extension of the merit system to all branches of our National, State, and municipal Governments.

Other resolutions were to the effect that the Indian affairs since the resignation of Cornelius N. Bliss have suffered from the ravages of spoilsmen, and it was charged that the Census bill providing for 3,000 appointments, was passed with a deliberate rejection of the competitive system.

WILL OF CHARLES POTTER.

Printing Press Maker's Estate Left Principally to Relatives.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 15.—The will of Charles Potter, President of the Potter Printing Press Company, who died at Plainfield two weeks ago, was admitted to probate in the Union County Surrogate's Court to-day. David E. Titsworth, his son-in-law; Arthur T. Gallup, and Horace W. Fish are named as executors.

Mr. Potter's idea of public benefactions was that they should be made in the lifetime of the giver. He therefore gave considerable money to various institutions before he died. In his will he makes a bequest to the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of Plainfield, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, who was his pastor for many years, and leaves the house at West Sixth and Division Streets, Plainfield, to the Seventh Day Baptist Church.

The bulk of the estate is divided among his widow, three daughters, and the children of his eldest daughter, who is dead. There will be no change in the management of the printing press business. No schedule was filed with the will.

JUDGE F. W. KRUSE APPOINTED.

To Fill Supreme Court Vacancy in Eighth Judicial Department.

ALBANY, Dec. 15.—Gov. Roosevelt has appointed County Judge Frederick W. Kruse to the vacant Supreme Court Judgeship in the Eighth Judicial Department, made vacant by the appointment to a full term of Judge Truman C. White. Mr. Kruse was Judge of Cattaraugus County.

The Governor, in making the announcement, said that all of the candidates were of such unusually high capacity that it was a matter of regret to him that he could not have placed each and every one of them on the bench. If he had decided from a geographical standpoint he would have appointed former Judge Potter of Lockport, as Niagara County was the heavyweight in that respect.

The Governor stated that none of the candidates had withdrawn, but that Mr. Hotchkiss had asked him to appoint Mr. Clinton in case he made up his mind not to appoint him. (Hotchkiss.) The candidates in the field were William H. Hotchkiss and George Clinton of Buffalo, Fred W. Kruse of Olean, and Alva K. Potter of Lockport.

FALLS HEIR TO FORTUNE.

California Millionaire's Death Will Enrich Long Island Man.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Dec. 15.—Thomas H. Albin of this village has been notified by California attorneys that he is one of several heirs to a fortune of $2,000,000, left by a cousin named Louis Albin, who died about a year ago in California in his eighty-eighth year. Thomas H. Albin's share is said to be about $80,000.

Louis Albin, when a lad of fifteen, shipped on a whaling voyage, embarking from Sag Harbor, then the main whaling port on Long Island. Nothing was heard of him up to within a few years ago, when he wrote some relatives here and at Brooklyn saying he was living in California. He never married, and the property, which is said to consist of mining property and shares in a sugar refinery, is to be divided among his cousins.

MILLIONAIRE SETTLES A SUIT.

Pays $900 to Compromise a Physician's Claim of $10,000.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Attorneys for Dr. B. I. Robinson of McLean, who last March brought suit against G. E. Chambers of Cortland for services to the amount of $10,000, settled the claim with the defendant's representatives for $900.

The plaintiff claimed that the defendant's life, which he saved last September after the latter had attempted suicide, was worth $10,000 to the defendant's family and to the community at large, in view of the fact that the defendant was a millionaire. The case has been the most interesting one that has arisen in Tompkins County for several years.

KNIT UNDERWEAR COMBINATION

A Member Says that Prices Will Be Raised at Least 25 Per Cent.

There is to be a radical advance in the price of fleece-lined underwear. Just how great it will be will be decided at a meeting of the American Knit Underwear Association to be held in this city on Jan. 3. One of the members said last night at the Hotel Imperial that it would not be less than 25 per cent.

The American Knit Underwear Association has been formed with a capital of $10,000,000, and its object is to regulate and maintain the prices of the various grades of fleece-lined underwear. The officers chosen are: President—F. B. Harder, Philmont, N. Y.; Vice President—George W. Kavanaugh, Cohoes; Treasurer—W. A. Harder, Hudson; Secretary—A. A. Marvell, New York.

The organization takes in all the mills in this State from Hudson and Catskill on the South to Utica on the West. This includes Cohoes, Little Falls, Amsterdam, Herkimer, and other points in the Mohawk Valley.

MOVEMENT IN BOSTON STOCKS.

Standard Oil People, It Is Asserted, Are Buying Mining Shares.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—The Standard Oil people have, it is asserted in financial circles, averted a panic in Boston by buying 12,000 shares of Boston and Montana mining stock from A. B. Bigelow, and by agreeing to purchase 200,000 shares of United States Mining, which were in the hands of brokers. The situation was greatly disturbed by these things coming right after the Globe Bank's entanglement, and it is now believed that normal conditions will prevail.

The co-operation of Standard Oil people in these matters has enlisted Standard Oil money in the market, as is evidenced by the strength of copper shares to-day. Prices rebounded like steel released from tension. Sellers abstained from selling and bears prudently let the market alone. Cash buyers appeared, and the result was generally pleasing.

FILIPINOS LOSE HEAVILY IN FIGHT.

A Sergeant with 26 Men Defeats 400 Insurgents, Killing 26—Summary Punishment for Bandits.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The War Department received a cable message to-day giving the latest developments in the situation in the Philippines. The cablegram was as follows:

"Manila, Dec. 15.

"Negros reports Sergt. Alfred Roeder, Sixth Infantry, 20 soldiers, and 18 native police attacked 400 insurgents at Madrigal, Negros, this morning. No casualties. Enemy's loss, 26 killed and many wounded.

"Batchelor, Twenty-fourth Infantry battalion, reports on 7th inst. had an engagement at the junction of Magal and Rio Grande Rivers, Isabella Province, enemy leaving four dead and five mortally wounded in trenches. Our loss was one drowned and four wounded. Says he is in need of clothing, provisions, and money. Will reach Tuguegaro, Cagayan Province, shortly. Doubtless the navy relieved him yesterday.

"Four hundred and seventy-five Spanish prisoners arrived this morning, among them the sick at Vigan, numbering 120.

"Young, at Benguil, Northwestern Luzon, reports that his troops are still pursuing the remnant of insurgents, who have twenty-three American prisoners in their possession. Country exceedingly rough. Our men without shoes; still persistently pursuing. Few Spanish prisoners now in hands of insurgents, probably 1,000, mostly in south. Expect to effect their relief in a few days."

Isolated bands of bushwacking insurgents who are caught by our forces in the Philippines are likely to be summarily dealt with. At the Cabinet meeting to-day the matter was discussed at some length, and it was the general sentiment that the situation demanded vigorous treatment.

As long as the insurgents keep up a show of an army under a semblance of discipline they will be treated as prisoners of war when captured, but when they degenerate into isolated bands of marauders, harassing our forces by cold-blooded assassinations, it is the judgment of the officers in command in the Philippines and of the President and the members of the Cabinet that the situation demands summary action.

REBELS LEARN WAR SECRETS.

A Naval Officer Asserts that Filipinos Get Copies of Orders Even Before Their Delivery.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—A letter recently received from one of the officers of the United States ship Monterey at Manila, dated Nov. 3, says:

"The Princeton to-day was ordered to coal and go to some unknown destination. Great secrecy is maintained nowadays—even misleading statements are published in the papers. They do not fool the wily natives, however, who get information from the main source of orders.

"It is said, with reason for absolute belief, that spies have been caught with copies of orders which had not yet reached the person to whom they were addressed, and that detachments of soldiers ordered by telegraph to move have been ambushed in places where the insurgents could only have reached by being informed of the intended movements. Secrecy at present is more of a pretense than a reality."

RECRUITS FOR THE PHILIPPINES.

War Department Will Send One Thousand to Fill Regiments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The War Department has arranged to send about 1,000 recruits to Manila to fill up the regiments which are running short on account of deaths, diseases, and discharges. The steamer Sumner is being transformed into a troopship at Norfolk, and will be used for transportation of these recruits, who are now being congregated at Fort Slocum, New York.

According to the present plan, the Sumner will sail from New York City on Jan. 15, and will make the trip to Manila by the Mediterranean and Suez route.

IMPRISONMENT FOR SOLDIERS.

Mr. Root Recommends Commutation of Condemned Men's Sentence.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Secretary Root has recommended commutation of the death sentence imposed by court-martial upon Corp. Dambofer and two other soldiers of the Washington volunteer regiment, who were convicted of attacks on Filipino women. The commutation recommended is imprisonment for twenty years. In making this recommendation Secretary Root states specifically that he is satisfied of the legality of the original sentences, although they had been questioned by military lawyers.

The Forty-sixth Arrives at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Gen. Otis notified the War Department to-day that the transports City of Sydney and Pathan, with the Forty-sixth Infantry Volunteers, arrived at Manila this morning. No casualties are reported.

Rails for Philippine Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Gen. Ludington has just been notified of the safe arrival at Manila of the last shipment of railroad iron desired by Gen. Otis. The iron will be used in the repair and construction of railroads in Luzon. Twenty miles of rail were sent, being shipped aboard the various transports, in which it was used as ballast.

TO REDUCE TRANSPORT SERVICE.

The Quartermaster General Is Releasing Chartered Ships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Quartermaster General Ludington is rapidly reducing the expense for transports, and thus the daily expenditure by the Government of a large sum of money. All the troops intended for use in the Philippines excepting one regiment have been forwarded. When the last regiment was started the War Department was paying for forty transports at the rate of from $500 to $1,000 a day. Many of these vessels were frequently idle while waiting for troops to embark or to disembark, but the pay went right on, whether they were moving or at anchor.

In five weeks five large vessels have been released from charter. They are the Glenogle, Tacoma, Elder, Belgian King, and Zealandia. As it will be necessary, in the judgment of the War Department officials, to have vessels at command for transport service, nine vessels have been bought, and all the others will be released from charter. These purchased vessels are to be fitted up after the manner of the Grant, Logan, Thomas, Sedgwick, and other transports that have elicited the approval of Military Attachés of foreign Governments as being the best transports ever provided for any Government. In constructing these vessels the utmost care has been observed to make them comfortable, and, in the case of vessels to be used expressly for the transportation of animals, the method of fresh-air supply promises to overcome all former danger of suffocation of the animals in consequence of closed hatches during bad weather.

The Resolute Out of Commission.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—The supply ship Resolute, now lying at League Island Navy Yard, was to-day placed out of commission. Capt. Kelly, the Resolute's commanding officer, has been ordered to New York for special duty. All the junior officers of the vessel have been ordered to Manila and about one-third of the crew has been assigned to the Dixie, the new training ship. Within a short time the Resolute will be offered for sale.

Wants a New Cruiser Charleston.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Representative Elliott of South Carolina to-day introduced a bill for the building of a new cruiser to be named the Charleston, to take the place of the cruiser of that name recently lost in the Philippines.

Cruiser New York to Sail To-day.

The armored cruiser New York, flagship of Rear Admiral Farquhar, commander of the North Atlantic Squadron, will leave the Brooklyn Navy Yard to-day and will go direct to San Domingo City. From there she will go to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and will cruise about in West Indian and adjacent waters until March 31, when she will come north to Hampton Roads.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Marietta sailed to-day from Points De Galle, Ceylon, for Singapore, en route to Manila.

The Machias has arrived at Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo.

The Solace has arrived at Cavite.

The Essex has arrived at Port Mahon.

The Scindia is ordered into commission at Mare Island on the 21st instant. She will sail for Manila via Honolulu and Guam on Jan. 5.

KAISER RECALLS ATTACHE

The Military Representative at Paris Is Withdrawn.

DREYFUS CASE THE CAUSE

Attacks by the French Press Were Also Instrumental in Bringing About the Action.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—Emperor William's intention to withdraw Major Baron von Suesskind, German Military Attaché at Paris, as cabled some time ago, has just been carried out. The event is considered of prime importance. His Majesty had become thoroughly disgusted with the attacks and insinuations of the Paris press regarding the activity of the German Military Attachés and with the numerous private and official reports which had reached him on the subject, bearing out, partially at least, the newspaper charges.

His keen sense of honor was aroused, especially as he considers that German officers, who are popularly regarded by their countrymen as above reproach in military matters, ought not to be expected to furnish to the home Government information inconsistent with a nice sense of honor.

This view the Emperor wants practically borne out. He met with determined opposition on the part of some of his principal military advisers, Gen. von Hahnke, Count von Schlieffen, and Count von Waldersee, but succeeded in having his own way. It goes without saying that the Dreyfus affair was the immediate cause of the order of withdrawal. A high Government official, when questioned on the subject to-day, did not deny this.

It is understood that the duties of all German Military Attachés are likely to be modified and brought more into consonance with modern ideas of gentlemanly honor, the Emperor hoping, moreover, that the example set by Germany will be imitated by other military powers, especially by France.

PARIS INSURANCE SETTLED.

Steamer Will Be Refitted and Re-enter American Line Service.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The difficulties connected with the insurance of the American Line steamer Paris, which ran on the rocks off the Manacles May 21 last, and was refloated July 11, have been settled. The vessel will be handed over to Harland & Wolff, at Belfast, for a thorough overhauling. When she resumes her place in the transatlantic service, a year hence, she will be rechristened after an American city.

The officials of the American Line here yesterday confirmed the cable report that an adjustment had been effected between the company and the underwriters in the case of the Paris. The vessel would be refitted, they said, but how long it would be before she would re-enter the company's service they could not say. Nor had they determined definitely that the vessel's name would be changed. Asked who her commander would be, they said that point had not been decided. Capt. Watkins would not, however, have the command.

EX-PRESIDENT DROZ DEAD.

The Swiss Statesman Expired Yesterday at Berne.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 15.—M. Numa Droz, the distinguished Swiss statesman and former President of the Confederation, died to-day, in his fifty-sixth year.

M. Droz was born in the Canton of Neufchatel, Jan. 7, 1844, and was less than thirty-seven years old when he became President of the Swiss Confederation. He had been elected Vice President at the same time that Auterwert was elected President. A few days before the time set for his inauguration President-elect Auterwert committed suicide by shooting himself, at Berne, and Numa Droz became President in his place.

In 1864 M. Droz founded LeNational Suisse, which he conducted in the interest of Swiss Radicalism. Five years later he was chosen a member of the Grand Council, and in 1871 was appointed Director of the Department of Public Instruction. Later he directed successively the Departments of the Interior, of Agriculture and Commerce, and of Foreign Affairs, ultimately being chosen President of the Federal Council. He secured the enactment of the Swiss law regulating the protection of literary property, and was one of the negotiators of the Franco-Swiss commercial treaty, concluded in 1882.

THE POPE FEELS SLIGHTED.

Says He Was Entitled to a Place in The Hague Conference.

ROME, Dec. 15.—The text of the Pope's allocution at yesterday's Consistory is published to-day.

The Pontiff began by announcing the appointment of the Cardinals deputed to open the sacred door of the Roman Basilica at the commencement of the holy year. He said he could have wished that the Church enjoyed her former liberty in Rome, and that she might thus have been enabled to celebrate publicly the contemplated ceremonies with the solemn usages of bygone years.

The Pope then referred to the fact that the Vatican was not invited to send a representative to the Peace Congress at The Hague an omission which, he said, had been "censured by all impartial judges." The Czar, he continued, invited the representatives of the most powerful nations, with a view of establishing peace. Yet there was none more worthy of an invitation than the Pope, who had ever desired to attain justice, to make peace, and to prevent conflict—an office which, by the Divine will, was within the attributes of the Papacy.

The Holy See had desired a place in that conference, continued the Pontiff. One voice had obstinately opposed itself to this desire and had gained the point. It was the voice of those who, with the conquest of Rome, had deprived the Pope of his powers.

"What hostility," asked the Pontiff, "have we to fear from them when, even in the face of Europe, they do not hesitate to violate the sanctity of the rights and duties which naturally flow from apostolic powers? Nevertheless, whatever the future may bring, we should certainly never, by God's help, be found on the side of those who are afraid."

Peru's New Cabinet.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 15.—The new Cabinet, succeeding the Ministry which tendered its resignation Dec. 2, owing to the attitude of the Chamber of Deputies, is constituted as follows: President of the Council of Ministers and Minister of Foreign Affairs—Dr. Rivaguero; Minister of Home Affairs—Col. Parra; Minister of Justice—Dr. Romero; Minister of Finance—Dr. Belaunde; Minister of War—Gen. Velarde; Minister of Public Works—Col. Zegarra.

Venezuelans Object to Silver.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Dec. 15.—The Chambers of Commerce, banks, and traders have energetically protested against the contract awarded to Upton of Warren, Ohio, for the coinage of 2,000,000 bolivars, the reason for this protest being that Venezuela has a gold standard.

Brasil Settles the Rothschild Loan.

RIO JANEIRO, Dec. 15.—The Government to-day paid the last installment of the Rothschild loan of 1897—two millions gold. The customs dues heretofore assigned for these payments will henceforth go to guarantee the fund of paper circulation.

Venezuelan States Favor Hernandez.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Dec. 15.—Mail advices just received here says the Venezuelan revolution is taking thorough hold, nearly all the States having declared in favor of Hernandez. The best informed claim there is no doubt of his final success.

Germany Loses by Tax Frauds.

BERLIN, Dec. 15.—Proof that the income tax in Germany operates with some difficulty is furnished by an official report from Hamburg showing that the Tax Collection Department has been defrauded of 2,500,000 marks within five years.

Distress in Famine-Stricken India.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 15.—The distress in the famine-stricken districts is becoming more acute. About 2,250,000 persons have received relief.

AGAINST ASTORIA GRANT.

Council Opposes Resolution of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen at yesterday's meeting adopted this resolution:

Whereas, The State Land Board has practically decided to convey to the Astoria Light, Heat and Power Company, for a trivial consideration, certain lands under water within the boundaries of Greater New York, and

Whereas, The papers are now in the hands of his Excellency, Theodore Roosevelt, Governor of the State of New York, for his signature. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Municipal Assembly of the City of New York, hereby protest against the conveyance of said lands to the said Astoria Light, Heat and Power Company, and respectfully request the Governor to withhold his signature from said conveyance.

When this resolution reached the Council a storm of opposition arose, a sufficient number of Brooklyn and Queens Democrats voting with the Republicans against it to cause its defeat. On reconsideration the measure was made a special order for 3:30 o'clock. Before that hour arrived Councilman Leich, who had led the attack on the resolution, moved an adjournment, and thus action was deferred.

PRESIDENT CRAM'S WARNING.

Says City Should Have All Under-Water Land in Its Limits.

President J. Sergeant Cram of the Board of Docks and Ferries, at the board's meeting yesterday, had something to say about the Astoria under-water land grant by the State Board. Mr. Cram said that it was time that the board asked the State Board to cede to the city all the land within the new city limits lying between high and low water, so that the same conditions shall apply to the newly added sections of the city as applied to the old city's territory.

He said that the State Board was continually ceding tracts to private individuals. In Brooklyn a very large portion of the river front was owned by private persons. All these rights of private persons would eventually have to be acquired by the city, but it would be at an enormous expense, as the grantees would ask many times as much as they had paid, as instanced in the case of the property on the East River, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets, owned by the Consolidated Gas Company. The board had offered $150 a running foot for the property rights here, and the company asked $750. This property, President Cram said, the company had acquired at about $10 a running foot.

A representative of the Stuyvesant estate appeared before the board in the matter of the negotiations for the purchase of a bulkhead eighty feet long at the foot of Clinton Street. The Commissioners offered $200 a running foot, and the owners wanted $400. The board decided to ask the Corporation Counsel to institute proceedings to condemn the property.

WIFE MURDERER HANGED.

Offered to Help Erect the Scaffold on Which He Met Death.

ALBANY, Ga., Dec. 15.—W. J. Glazer was hanged here to-day for the murder of his wife in August last. Yesterday Glazer offered to help in the erection of the scaffold upon which he was executed, but his aid was not accepted.

WOMAN DRIVES AND WINS.

Mrs. Prindle's Skill Reverses Result in a Trotting Race.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 15.—Mrs. Jessie Prindle, wife of George Prindle, proprietor of Prindle's Hotel, on French Street, yesterday at the Highland Park track drove John Snedeker's trotter, Pine Knot, two half-mile heats against another trotter driven by a man.

The race was for the best two out of three heats, and Mrs. Prindle landed her horse a winner. The horses were hitched to pneumatic sulkies. The winning horse had been beaten just before by the same rival. The result did not please Mrs. Prindle, who claimed she could drive Pine Knot herself in such a manner as to beat the rival horse, and the match was made.

Mrs. Prindle drove the first heat in 1:10½ and the second a shade better, easily beating her opponent.

Mrs. Prindle formerly lived on a farm in Ohio. She is proud of her ability to drive on the track.

SHANGHAIED A BUSINESS MAN.

While Visiting a German Ship a Cincinnatian Was Carried Away.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—Government officials are investigating the facts connected with the reported "shanghaing" of Arthur Quirk, a business man of Cincinnati, who was brought to this port yesterday on the British steamship Weehawken, from Hull. Quirk claims that while he was in Baltimore he was asked to visit an outward-bound German steamship and that he had been on the ship only a few minutes when she proceeded to Bremen, where he was landed three weeks afterward and told to leave at once. While at sea he was put to work painting the vessel, as he was unable to perform the duties of an able-bodied seaman.

Quirk managed to get to Liverpool and finally to Hull, where the United States Corsul took the matter up and induced Capt. Smith, the master of the Weehawken, to bring Quirk to Philadelphia. Commissioner of Immigration Rodgers has investigated the matter and will send a report to Washington. Quirk is said to be well connected in Cincinnati.

INSURANCE MAN KILLS HIMSELF.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 15.—Henry C. Landis, Secretary of the Baltimore Board of Trade, and one of the most prominent insurance men of the city, committed suicide to-day at the Union Protestant Infirmary. He entered the infirmary two weeks ago as a patient of Dr. J. M. T. Finney and underwent a severe operation for abdominal trouble, from the effects of which, however, he was rapidly recovering.

His room in the infirmary was on the third floor, and he was constantly attended by a special male nurse, not on account of any suspicion that he might attempt to take his life, but because of the seriousness of his illness. He fell into a restful sleep about 4 o'clock this morning, and was apparently sleeping just before 7 o'clock. Then the nurse left the room for a few moments to prepare some medicine. Almost as soon as he was gone, Mr. Landis must have thrown up a window and jumped from it, for he was found immediately afterward on the bricks below. He was carried inside the building, where he was pronounced dead.

Mr. Landis was sixty-two years old, not married, and lived alone at 1,429 Bolton Street. The nearest relatives left by him are one brother and a niece. The latter is Mrs. Howard D. Feast of Washington.

VENEZUELANS SHOOT CAPTORS.

Four Taken at Trinidad Recover Their Arms and Escape.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, B. W. I., Dec. 7.—An extraordinary shooting incident has just occurred here. E. Pashley of the Customs Preventive Service at Trinidad left the station at Gasparillo in a rowboat with four men. At the Island of Patos, in the Gulf of Paria, they found a boat with the name "Atlas" painted on the stern. The crew claimed they were Venezuelans, and said they belonged to the boat Cannon. Being without the necessary clearance papers, Mr. Pashley ordered a search to be made, and four Winchester rifles, (all loaded,) a revolver, and a large quantity of cartridges were found.

Mr. Pashley ordered the seizure of the boat, and ran it upon the shore. The rifles were unloaded and the ammunition taken ashore. The Venezuelans were left on the embankment in charge of three customs boatmen, while Mr. Pashley, accompanied by one boatman, proceeded up the hill. They had not gone far when Mr. Pashley heard cries from the beach. He immediately returned and found that the Venezuelans had turned on their guard, had recaptured their rifles, and attacked the three boatmen, who were beaten off with butt ends. Mr. Pashley discharged his revolver, but without effect. The Venezuelans turned their fire upon Pashley and his assistant, shooting the first through the shoulder and inflicting some slight injuries to the foot of the assistant.

The Venezuelans succeeded in recapturing their boat and escaped. Mr. Pashley was removed to the Colonial Hospital at Port of Spain. The matter is being investigated by the authorities.

College Admission Requirements.—Nicholas Murray Butler, founder and President of the Teachers College, will discuss admission requirements in THE NEW YORK TIMES to-morrow (Sunday.) Order in advance to be sure of getting a copy. Sunday edition, 3 cents. All the news that's fit to print.—Adv.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

How thoroughly cosmopolitan in character New York City really is was noted by a gentleman who was one of a theatre party that went to see "Barbara Frietchie" the other evening and to supper at an ultra-fashionable resort afterward. "I am never much interested in theatre parties," said he, "but there was one that night that particularly attracted my attention because the hostess was a Japanese lady, and she was the first one I had ever seen, or at least the first one that ever attracted my attention. There were a dozen persons in the party, and, though there were two other men of Japanese birth besides her husband, she was the only woman of Oriental origin. What struck me was that she was as refined as any of her companions and as thoroughly at home as an entertainer as any of her companions could possibly have been. It was so at the restaurant, where her party happened to sit very near the one I was with. Her dress was in perfect taste from the American standpoint, being thoroughly up to date and of a richness and elegance that showed that she had studied American ways of dressing in only the most fastidious school. One could find nothing in her costume to criticise, for my wife said so, and she is a merciless critic. She was ready and witty in conversation and as jolly as if she had never heard or used any other language than English. It was the same with the three Japanese gentlemen of the party, who seemed from their conversation to be Americans to the tips of their fingers. I doubt if it would be very extravagant to say that one-half of the men in the crowded dining room, the greater proportion of whom were of American birth, could have taken lessons advantageously from these Orientals in some of those elegancies of deportment which are so often lacking in the busy American, who devotes so much of his time to business and so little to the graces that serve to make of him the perfect gentleman. I suppose I ought to have known better about our Japanese residents, but the fact is that the Chinaman has been to me the type of the Oriental, and I had never before been led to think of the elegant and polished people of a nation we are so apt to confound with our laundrymen."

Yesterday was "fish day" for a lot of people, and it brought with it surprises to many a dinner table when fresh shad was served. Shad at this time of year and in such abundance that they may be purchased at markets that make no pretenses to keeping costly delicacies, are a novelty in even New York markets. The fish come from Florida, and have put in an unusually early appearance in the rivers of the East coast, where they are caught in gill nets set for other varieties of the finny denizens of those waters. Truth is, however, that they are not what an epicure would call good shad, for they are mostly bucks, it being altogether too early for the female shad to have her roe at all developed, and why they have taken to running into the bays thus early in the season is a mystery, therefore. Bones of a very exasperating size are prominent in the make-up of these early shad, and what there is of flesh lacks altogether the quality of even the Savannah River shad, which, as every lover of fish knows, is many removes from the Hudson River or Connecticut River fish as a table delicacy. As a novelty, however, shad in December found a ready market, and people who ordered it at the hotels and restaurants where it was on the bills of fare as a feature smacked their lips and pretended that they liked it.

"Speaking about these handwriting experts of which we are hearing so much nowadays," remarked a man who was familiar with both handwriting—at the bottom of checks—and with politicians, as he chewed his toothpick after luncheon at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, "I know a man whose handwriting would fool them all. That is the State historian, Hugh Hastings. There isn't an expert on earth who would go on the witness stand and swear that a letter written by him and the signature attached to it were ever penned by the same person. The general run of Hugh's handwriting is about as rotund as is the body of the popular historian, but his signature is thoroughly different, as angular and picket-fency as any man ever wrote. If a fellow didn't know what that signature was he never in the world would guess that it was 'Hugh Hastings,' or was in any way related to him or his ordinary handwriting."

"The funniest experience I've had in the last twenty-four hours was with a woman from the country on the last trip up," remarked a guard on the Sixth Avenue 'L' road yesterday. "I noticed her fidgeting about and in earnest conversation with another female friend, also from the country, as we were swinging around the big curve at One Hundred and Tenth Street. Just before we reached the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street station she came to me and asked as she pointed at the recently finished arch for the cathedral on Morningside Heights, 'I say, conductor, have they really begun building the Dewey Arch over on that hill there?'"

Harlem has poolrooms, pawnbrokers, and at least one genius. The combination works together, and in a somewhat unusual fashion. The genius "plays the races" in a small way and carefully, preferring gambling to any more laborious method of making his living. His bets are usually confined to $2 or $3 on a race, and when he clears up $5 or so on a day's betting he is satisfied. He has as a reserve a one-hundred-dollar bill. When in the course of a day's play he loses his small cash capital he reverts to that one-hundred-dollar bill, and here is where the genius and the pawnbroker come in. Rather than break that big bill, and so run the risk of losing it all, he leaves the poolroom, which is in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, goes to a pawnbroker near by, tosses his one-hundred-dollar bill over the counter with a request to "loan me $10 on that, will you?" As the bill is an old visitor, he readily secures the loan desired, returns to the poolroom and resumes his play. When he has won what he deems sufficient for the day he returns to the pawnshop, and by paying $10.20 gets his one-hundred-dollar bill "out of hock" and back into his fob pocket. The broker with whom he does business says the young genius has never yet returned for a second loan on the bill, but in the end he looks for that result of course. "Meantime 20 cents interest for the use of $10 for a few hours on such gilt-edged collateral as the young gambler puts up is not bad business, is it?" asks he of the pawnshop.

Collectors of Americana in general and of Washingtonia in particular are exercising their wits to get possession of invitations to the Washington memorial services at St. Paul's on Thursday. Only the very few invited guests and members of the Society of the Cincinnati and of the Sons of the Revolution received the coveted bits of parchment, which even so soon as yesterday had a market value of $5 from enthusiastic collectors. At least that sum was then offered and refused for at least one of the invitations. These were neatly engraved and embossed. Upon them in colors were the seals of the Cincinnati and Sons of the Revolution. The name of the member or guest to whom they were sent was written under the invitation to the church services. James M. Montgomery, Secretary General of the Sons of the Revolution, has the credit of being the designer.

"Once a man gets a name for being charitably inclined, and the door opens for a lot of people with schemes that they believe to be the most meritorious that can possibly be brought to the attention of the philanthropist," remarked a man who has business interests with Andrew Carnegie, and who has a chance to hear something of the claims and demands made upon him since he has shown his fondness for founding free libraries. "Mr. Carnegie's experiences with schemes, visionary and otherwise, have been about as widespread as those of any man in America, in all probability. But the climax has just been reached," went on this friend of the millionaire and philanthropist. "In and around Pittsburg and Allegheny there are quite a number of Russians, and they have a congregation of the Greek Church, with a priest who visits them occasionally. I don't happen to know just how strong they are numerically, but I should say in a general way that weak would be the word rather than strong in speaking of them as a religious body. At all events, they wanted a church, and went ahead and had plans prepared and an oil painting made of the exterior of the structure. At this point their funds gave out. They think it would cost $50,000 to buy land and build and furnish the church or mosque or synagogue, or whatever they may call their house of worship. They see no chance of raising even a fiftieth of the amount among the workmen who would attend the services. But they argue that as the Carnegie works have had a number of orders from the Russian Government, therefore Mr. Carnegie should be willing to give them the funds necessary to carry out their project. That he has now been asked to do in a very formal and polite fashion. Mr. Carnegie may do what they ask, for there is no way to judge as to what direction his philanthropies may take, but it struck me when I heard of the project as one of the cheekiest that have yet been suggested."

EDUCATIONAL UNIFICATION

The State Commission Agrees on a System.

CHIEF POWER IN A CHANCELLOR

Board of Regents Continued, in Reduced Number, with Retirement at Seventy Years of Age.

ALBANY, Dec. 15.—The commission to unify the educational system of the State, after two protracted sessions held here yesterday and to-day, has agreed upon a plan of unification which provides for the establishment of a department of education, consisting of the university and the Department of Public Instruction as heretofore existing. The executive head of this department is to be called Chancellor of the University, and he is to have all the executive powers now vested in the Superintendent of Public Instruction and in the Regents of the university.

The university is continued as the legislative head of the department, the present Board of Regents remaining undisturbed as to its personnel, with the exception that the Lieutenant Governor, the Secretary of State, and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction are no longer to be ex-officio Regents. All Regents above the age of seventy years are hereafter to be honorary Regents, with all the privileges that members of the board possess, but with no vote. No vacancy shall hereafter be filled in the board until the number has been reduced below fifteen. Hereafter vacancies are to be filled by appointment of the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Chancellor shall be elected by the Regents.

The functions of the Board of Regents have been increased by the power of passing ordinances governing the administration of the Department of Education, limited by statutory enactments.

The department shall have the following five bureaus:

First—The Bureau of Public Instruction. Second—The Department of Higher Education. Third—The Bureau of Home Education. Fourth—The Bureau of Law. Fifth—The Bureau of Administration and Science. Each bureau is to be presided over by a director, who shall be appointed by the Chancellor, and be removable by him. The bureau directors shall appoint and remove their subordinates, subject to the civil service law.

The first Chancellor is to be appointed by the Governor within twenty days after the passage of the act, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. He shall hold office for eight years, at an annual salary of $10,000. The present Superintendent of Public Instruction is continued in office as Director of the Bureau of Public Instruction until the end of his term.

The Chancellor shall have the power to designate two of the directors of bureaus as his deputies. The Regents shall elect their own President, Vice President, and Secretary.

On the much-mooted question of the management of the high schools the commission feels that the plan as adopted will meet every just expectation of both sides. While the fiscal management of all schools supported by public taxation is intrusted to one bureau all advantages accruing to high schools from their present connection with the Regents of the university are preserved intact.

The recommendations of the commission will be put into statutory form by the Statutory Revision Commission and submitted to the commission for final revision at a meeting to be held on Friday, Dec. 29.

Mandamuses for Teachers Signed.

Justice Gaynor, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday signed the orders granting the peremptory writs of mandamus against Auditor Cook of the Board of Education and the Controller, directing them to certify and audit the pay rolls of the Brooklyn teachers for September, and the payment of those salaries by the Controller. This is the final legal procedure in the suits on the part of the Brooklyn teachers, and makes effective the schedule adopted by the Borough School Board on July 5 last.

Teachers Appeal to the Mayor.

A delegation of teachers from the Borough of Richmond called on Mayor Van Wyck yesterday and asked him to do something to relieve the condition of the teachers in that borough and enable them to get their salaries for three months. The Mayor said that there would be a meeting of the Board of Estimate next Thursday. If it were then shown that insufficient money had been provided to carry out the mandatory provisions of the Ahearn law, the board would supply the deficiency. If not, he did not know that anything could be done.

HARVARD DEBATERS WIN.

Defeat Men from Princeton in Their Argument at Cambridge.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 15.—Once again Harvard added to her unbroken debating record with Princeton University by defeating that university in Sanders Theatre to-night. Her debaters had what was generally considered the harder side of the question, and accordingly Harvard is wild with delight over the signal triumph of her team. The decision was based upon the merits of the speaking and on the force of the arguments, leaving out entirely the merits of the question.

The question was: "Resolved, That England's claims in the present controversy with the South African Republic are justifiable," Harvard taking the affirmative and Princeton the negative.

Each speaker was allowed twelve minutes for his first speech and five minutes in rebuttal. The judges were Judge Simeon Baldwin of the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors, Judge Andrew P. Wiswell of the Maine Supreme Court, and Prof. Charles H. Hull of Cornell University, and Samuel J. Elder was presiding officer. The decision was unquestioned and was greeted with wild applause.

Harvard was represented by E. Mayer, '00; R. C. Bruce, '02, and Wilbur F. Morse, '00. Alfred S. Weston, '99; Joseph H. Hill, '00, and Joseph A. Jones, '00, presented Princeton's side of the argument.

New Jersey's Traveling Libraries.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 15.—State Librarian Buchanan this afternoon sent out the first lot of the traveling libraries that have been established under a law passed last Winter. Libraries of fifty books each were sent to Shiloh, Cumberland County; Pensauken, Camden County; Freehold, Monmouth County; Blairstown, Warren County; Port Oram, Morris County, and Branchville, Sussex County. These libraries are supplied to communities making application, signed by twenty taxpayers, with a guarantee of some property owner to be responsible for all damage other than natural wear and tear.

Princeton Patagonian Expedition.

PRINCETON, Dec. 15.—The Board of Trustees of Princeton University held its regular monthly meeting to-day. President Patton's report for the month included a detailed account of the Patagonian expedition, which was undertaken by the university last Summer under the direction of Prof. Hatcher. President Patton said that a graduate of the university had given $24,000 to insure the publication of the report of the expedition, and that a body of specialists was at work in Princeton and Washington on the document, which when published will consist of six large volumes.

Oyster Output Increases.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 15.—The Connecticut Shell Fish Commission's annual report will show that there has been an increase of 1,000 acres in the amount of oyster grounds under cultivation during the year. The estimated output of oysters in Long Island Sound last year was 2,861,455 bushels, marketed at an average of 91 per bushel. Ten years ago the output was from 1,800,000 to 2,000,000 bushels per year, and fifty years ago the amount was about 200,000 bushels a year.

Macy Clerks to Have Commissions.

R. H. Macy & Co. have notified their clerks that they will receive a commission of 1 per cent. on all sales made by them during the period beginning to-day and including Dec. 23 in consideration of the fact that during this time the store will remain open evenings. Clerks who may win prizes, which have been offered heretofore, will receive either the prize or 1 per cent. of their sales, whichever is the more favorable to the clerk.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The plans for Christmas are beginning to take shape. As usual, there will be many house parties, and, as last year, these will be a special feature of the holiday season. Dr. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb will remain at Shelburne Farms over Christmas. At present they are at George Vanderbilt's place, Biltmore, in North Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt will have a large family party through the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt will also entertain a family party at their country place near Hyde Park. Ex-Gov. and Mrs. Morton will be at Ellerslie, Judge and Mrs. Gray will entertain at Albany. One of the largest house parties will be that of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Leggett at Ridgely Manor. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stevens will have only a small family party at Westbury.

Yesterday there were several receptions and "days," and in the evening at Sherry's the class known as Mrs. Church's had its first dance. There was a cotillion, led by Mr. Alexander Hadden, dancing with Miss Harriet Delafield. The favors were a variety of Japanese trinkets. The patronesses who received last evening were Mrs. Benjamin Schuyler Church, Mrs. Arthur J. Peabody, Mrs. Edward Curtis, Mrs. John Clarkson Jay, and Mrs. Henry R. Beekman. The Executive Committee selected for the Winter by the patronesses are Mr. James Montgomery Strong, Chairman; Mr. John Van S Oddie, Mr. Ashton de Peyster, Mr. Phillip Birckhead, Mr. G. Frederick Bartholomew, Mr. James R. Pierson, Mr. Augustus Ireland, Mr. Arthur Slade, and Mr. Walcott Robbins. Among the dancers were the Misses de Peyster, Miss Maisie Delafield, Miss Bowers, Miss Edith Clarkson Jay, Miss Pell, the Misses Schieffelin, Miss Angelica Church, Miss Walker, Miss Sturgis, Miss Beeckman, Miss Addie Pierson, Miss Ireland, Miss Peabody, and Miss Georgette Kidd.

'Among the other entertainments last evening was a dinner for Miss Cornelia Helen Merrill, given by Mrs. George P. Slade, her aunt, at 62 East Sixty-sixth Street, and a large card party by the Misses de Peyster, at 112 East Thirty-sixth Street, and the meeting of Mrs. Snedeker's dancing class in the small ballroom at Sherry's.

To-day will bring the last of the December débutante teas, and there are still quite a number of young men and women who will be introduced to society through this popular medium. Mrs. Edward Haskin Ripley of 76 Park Avenue brings out Miss Alice Van Doren Ripley; Mrs. Thomas Powell Fowler of 20 East Sixty-eighth Street, Miss Isabel Wilson Fowler; Mr. William Carpender of 16 East Fortieth Street, Miss Edith Carpender; Mrs. Carl Schefer of 40 West Thirty-seventh Street, Miss Elsie Schefer; Mrs. David McClure of 22 West Forty-ninth Street, Miss Catherine McClure; Mr. John D. Crimmins of 40 East Sixty-eighth Street, Miss Mary Crimmins; Mrs. John H. Screven of 40 West Thirty-ninth Street, Miss Ellen W. Turnbull; Mrs. Spencer Aldrich of 271 West Seventy-second Street, Miss Louise Aldrich; Mrs. Laura Riddle Green of 30 Madison Avenue, Miss Laura T. Green, and Mrs. William A. Jenner of 125 East Sixtieth Street, Miss Anna J. Jenner. Also to-morrow evening there will be the first of a series of subscription dances arranged by Mrs. Burnham Brown, at the Metropolitan Club Annex; the second dinner dance at the Country Club of Lakewood, and the first concert of the Women's String Orchestra at the Waldorf.

With Miss Elsie Schefer at her coming-out reception to-day there will receive Miss Trowbridge, Miss Edwards, Miss Beatrice Bonner, Miss Marguerite Chapin, Miss Edith Kohlmat, Miss Charlotte Hegeman, Miss Matilde Van Rensselaer, Miss Amy Ellis, and Miss Schefer.

Miss Isabel Wilson Fowler will have receiving with her to-day the Misses Edith Talcott, De La Vergne, Emily Hoagland, Marguerite Quackenbush, Aurelia Roe, and Elsie Todd. Miss Mary Crimmins will receive alone, but her aunt, Mrs. Lalor, and her sister, Mrs. Albert G. Jennings, will be present at the reception. Miss Louise Aldrich will be assisted by Miss Helen C. NEWPORT MAY SELL BONDS.

The Sale, Residents Fear, Means Withdrawal of the Wickford Steamer.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 16.—The City of Newport is discussing the question of disposing of some $50,000 in bonds of the Newport and Wickford Steamboat Company which it holds. The city purchased this stock when the line was organized, for the purpose of adding to the transportation facilities of the place and bettering of the mail service. This stock has never paid the city a dividend, nor does it seem likely to do so. The matter was recently brought before the City Council for action, and a special committee was appointed to see what price these stocks would bring if sold and to use the money from such a sale for the improvement of the sidewalks.

The sale of this stock would be distasteful to the people of Newport, who fear that if the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad should purchase the stock it would then become the sole owner of this road, as it holds the remaining portion of the stock. Once this corporation becomes the owner, the people fear that the cottagers would be deprived of the privilege of using this line, as the railroad, which controls all the Sound lines, might withdraw the steamer General from the Newport and Wickford Line, and cottagers and others would be compelled to use the Fall River Line. While the City of Newport maintains its ownership of this stock the officials are bound by law and by their charter to continue its present traffic.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Mrs. Marie Eichler.

Mrs. Marie Eichler, widow of John Eichler, who established the John Eichler Brewing Company, died yesterday morning at her residence, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street and Fulton Avenue, after a lingering illness. She had submitted to the operation of laparotomy last Monday. Since the death of her husband in 1892 Mrs. Eichler, who was sixty-eight years old, conducted the business of the John Eichler Brewing Company with the aid of two nephews. Mrs. Eichler leaves an estate said to be valued at about $2,500,000. She was born in Bavaria and came to this country in 1858.

LAUNDRY BILL CAUSES MURDER.

Dispute Leads to a New Hampshire Man's Death.

FRANKLIN, N. H., Dec. 15.—A dispute over a laundry bill and the display of a revolver led to a murder to-night. L. M. Yeaton, a local insurance agent, was the victim, and his assailant was E. C. Wingate, proprietor of a steam laundry.

Yeaton went to the laundry to talk over with Wingate some insurance matters. While there Wingate asked Yeaton to settle his laundry bill, and when the latter refused a dispute began. It is alleged that in the heat of the discussion Yeaton pulled out a revolver, whereupon

SOLOIST,

Miss Katharine Isabelle Pelton, Soprano

In an article on "The Secret of Musical Expression," published in The Etude, a well-known critic writes:

"I often come home from a symphony concert so starved for expression that I have had to sit down and play a piece on my Aeolian, which can be played with infinitely more expression than one hears at a majority of concerts by professional artists."

In fact, it makes about as much difference who plays the Aeolian as it does who plays the piano. At the same time a child can play it acceptably, especially the simpler things, though not so well as a musician

This proves that the Aeolian is not a mere mechanical instrument, but that it is musically artistic.

The great musical critics recognized this fact as soon as they gave the Aeolian serious thought and investigated its principles and listened to its performances.

It is a significant fact, and one not to be lightly answered, that the musically cultured are to-day the most enthusiastic in their appreciation of the results achieved by the Aeolian, and the enormous possibilities it has revealed.

New York-Brooklyn Club Controversy Settled at Last.

FINE OF $500 FOR BROOKLYN

Must Be Paid to the League for Signing Short Stop Wrigley.—Freedman Elected a Director.

The baseball magnates who comprise the National League and American Association of Baseball Clubs have at last straightened out the trouble between the New York and Brooklyn Clubs over the latter signing Shortstop Wrigley after the latter signed a New York contract.

The Brooklyn Club will have to pay damages to the amount of $500 for having violated the National agreement, but this fine will go into the League treasury, and not to the New York Club. To even up matters, however, the League remitted the fine of $500 imposed on the New York Club as a result of a forfeited game at the Polo Grounds last June in which the Brooklyn team was a contestant. In addition to this the League has ordered President Young to repay to the New York Club the receipts of this game, amounting to about $500, which was held by the League pending the settlement of the dispute. The Brooklyn Club is to get its share of it.

It was over this matter that the League has been wrangling for nearly four days.

The Board of Directors in its report to the League had asked that the Brooklyn club be fined $2,500 for signing Wrigley. John T. Brush of Cincinnati and A. H. Soden of Boston championed the New York cause, while James Hart of Chicago and Frank De Haas Robinson of St. Louis led the opposition.

It was decided that all of the games played by the Brooklyns in which Wrigley took part should be thrown out in figuring the standing of the club.

The protest of the New Yorks over the New York-Baltimore game of Sept. 9 was not sustained.

As a result of the Wrigley controversy, it was decided that a player may be placed on the reserve list of a minor league club twice, instead of one time, as heretofore. The drafting price to be paid by the big league clubs to minor league clubs was increased from $500 to $1,000.

In the future the Supervisor of Umpires will have supervision of the players as well as the umpires.

When the League proceeded to elect a new Board of Directors and Board of Arbitration there was a row. After two ballots, Mr. Freedman, the New York President, was chosen to succeed J. Earl Wagner of Washington on the Board of Directors.

It was said, however, that Mr. Freedman would refuse to accept the place. The new board, if Mr. Freedman consents to act, will consist of Freedman of New York, Reach of Philadelphia, Hart of Chicago, Brush of Cincinnati, Robison of St. Louis, and Soden of Boston.

The old National Board of Arbitrators was re-elected, and consists of Hart of Chicago, Rogers of Philadelphia, Brush of Cincinnati, Soden of Boston, Robison of St. Louis, and N. E. Young.

J. A. Hart of Chicago tried to have the League adopt a schedule of 132 games instead of 154. This and his motion to have umpires assigned for the entire season before the season begins were tabled.

A resolution offered by Col. Rogers of Philadelphia indorsing the scheme of having all armories equipped with baseball appliances for the benefit of soldiers was adopted. The resolution will be forwarded to the Secretaries of War and the Navy.

GOLF ON NORTHFIELD LINKS.

W. H. Davis and F. S. Douglas to Meet To-day in the Final Round for the Atlantic City Cup.

ATLANTIC CITY, Dec. 15.—Fine golf was witnessed in the open tournament of the Atlantic City Country Club to-day on the links at Northfield. The weather was again delightful, except that a very strong and chilly wind blew across the course, which made heavy wraps desirable.

To-day's programme consisted in the playing of the first match round and the semi-final match round for the four cups offered by the Atlantic City Club. Interest centred in the contest for the first, or Atlantic City cup. In the first round W. H. Davis, F. H. Bohlen, F. S. Douglas, and C. M. Hamilton won their matches, and in the semi-final round Douglas beat Hamilton after a warm contest, and Davis disposed of Bohlen. Douglas and Davis meet in the final round to-morrow.

The following are the results of to-day's matches:

FIRST ROUND.

Atlantic City Cup.—W. H. Davis, Lakewood, beat E. A. Darby, Atlantic City, 6 up and 4 to play; F. H. Bohlen, Philadelphia, beat Jasper Lynch, Lakewood, 2 up and 1 to play; F. S. BROOKLYN CUE EXPERT WINS.

Keeney to Play Poggenburg for Emblem—Class B Tourney.

An interesting and exciting game between Frank A. Keeney of the Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn and J. Byron Stark, in which the former by four points won the contest and the second section of the intercity and interclub handicap tournament, was held at Maurice Daly's Academy last night. Poggenburg, winner of the first section, will play Keeney a 600-point game for the Slosson-Daly emblem on next Monday and Tuesday nights, the first 300 points of which will be contested at Slosson's and the remainder at Daly's.

Keeney last night played 280 to Stark's 300, the final score being 280 to 296. Keeney's average was 5 30-50, his best run being 44. Stark made an average of 5 46-50, and his highest run was 39.

Three more games were played yesterday for the championship of Class B in the amateur billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Smith and Threshie by their victories over Kellogg maintained their lead and will meet in the final game to-night to decide the championship and second prize.

Smith and Kellogg met in the afternoon game, the former winning by 300 to 210. Smith's average was 6 18-47, his best run being 44. Kellogg averaged 4 22-47, and made a break of 28.

Hendrick defeated Cutler in the first evening game by a score of 300 to 199. He made a run of 37, and his average was 6 36-44. Cutler averaged 4 23-44, and his highest run was 22.

The final game between Threshie and Kellogg was won by the former, the score standing 300 to 86. Threshie's average was 10 10-29, his best run being 49. Kellogg averaged 2 9-29, and his highest run was 13.

Connelly Beats Local Pugilist.

"Eddie" Connelly of St. John's, N. B., received the decision on points in a twenty-five-round fight with "Kid" McPartland of this city at the New Broadway Athletic Club last night. Connelly rushed his opponent throughout the fight. McPartland was knocked to the floor repeatedly. In the preliminary twelve-round bout George Jansen defeated "Jim" McKeever.

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The Imperial Club appeared with only four men in the National League at Starr's Tournament Hall last night and were beaten in two games. The four men rolled good scores, however, particularly in the third game, against the Doolittles of Jersey City. The latter had out their full team, but did not have an easy time of it, the Imperials with four men rolling but fifty-two pins less than their opponents. The Doolittles and Kings County team rolled big scores in the first game. The former had the most luck and won by fifteen pins. Jackson of the Imperials did some effective work, rolling an average of 221 for two games. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Doolittle—Gray, 217; Barnes, 142; Duke, 180; Wright, 208; Kaufman, 190. Total, 937.

Colfax Council won two games in the Royal Arcanum League at the Tennis Club alleys last night, defeating De Vinne Council in the first game, and the Our Council No. 1 team in the third game. In the latter game, the Our team held the lead until the final frame. Then four of the team had split spares to play for and missed them. The first two men on the Colfax team made two strikes. The loss of 40 pins, due to "splits," enabled the Colfax to gain 40 pins and win the game. Scores:

FIRST GAME.

Colfax—Dormagen, 143; Hinds, 142; Hodges, 118; Sandford, 182; Meier, 178. Total, 743.
De Vinne—Frankie, 159; Hull, 159; Strack, 127; Hoar, 153, Detlef, 148. Total, 737.

Dr. Nichols to Coach Harvard Team.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 15.—W. C. Reid, Captain of the Harvard baseball team for next Spring, has secured the services of Dr. E. H. Nichols as head coach. Dr. Nichols, Captain of the Harvard baseball team in 1888, and is also the inventor of the manikin shark. Capt. Reid is making a personal canvass of the university to get more men who can play ball to promise to come out for the first practice in the Spring.

BALL OF "CHUCK" CONNORS.

All the East Side and Some Members of Exclusive Society See the Fun at Tammany Hall.

There was fun galore last night in Tammany Hall, for every one south of Fourteenth Street and east of Broadway who aspired to be a "sport" was in attendance there at the annual ball of "Chuck" Connors. It was not the ball of the Chuck Connors Association, but, as the flaming posters on the Bowery and all through Chinatown announced, just "of Chuck Connors, and don't yer forgit it."

Of course the ball would not have been a success without some Celestial coloring, for "Chuck" is essentially a part of Chinatown, and where he goes queues are bound to be found. The posters announced, "And we'll have noise by Wolf," and Prof. Wolf was there with a full orchestra, but so, too, were Sam Poy and Moy Gow with their quaint Chinese fiddles.

"Chuck" was on deck early with his wife, Nellie, and he was apparently looking for trouble, if the big orange sash he wore counted for anything, for his Celtic friends had warned him not to wear yellow. There were not more than three hundred people at the ball until after midnight, but by that time the fight at the Broadway Athletic Club was over and the crowd from there poured in.

Then the fun began. "Chuck," in all the splendor of his ball suit, went to the centre of the floor, and, taking off his hat, waved it to Prof. Wolf as a signal for the grand march music to begin. It was not a march that the band struck up, but instead a rag-time song, but it was melody, and that was all that was required, for every one fell into line and marched around the room. Some of the couples, more used to cake walks than ballroom marches, went through the cake walk, and two couples got off into a corner of the hall and started to dance. The "main guy" of the ball, as "Chuck" announced himself, soon spied them, and their waltz was cut short with, "Cut that splellin' out. Fergit it! Fergit it! This dance is a march, and the guy that don't know it kin git out. See?"

The balcony at the Fourteenth Street end of the hall was crowded with "Chinks," as "Chuck" and his friends called the Chinamen, and one of them had with him a little Chinese boy, quaintly clad in flowing Oriental robes. The spectators were not all east siders. They included some of the members of exclusive society who wanted to see the sights.

ATTACKS TYPEWRITER TRUST.

Motion to Compel H. H. Benedict to Answer Questions He Says Might Incriminate Him.

In the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Lacombe, yesterday, there was argued a motion to compel Henry H. Benedict, President of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, a corporation formed to make typewriters, to answer certain questions about the Union Typewriter Company, known as the Typewriter Trust. The reason Mr. Benedict had given for not answering the questions was that to do so might incriminate him. Decision was reserved.

The case came into court for the first time yesterday. The action is brought by Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict against the Wagner Typewriter Company for alleged infringement of a patent, and the testimony has been taken before an examiner. The defense of the Wagner Company is, first, that their machine is not an infringement of the patent in question, and, second, that the real plaintiff is the Union Typewriter Company, which, being an illegal concern, as alleged, has no standing in court. The defendant's memorandum says:

"The defendant's answer set up that the complaint is part and parcel of an illegal combination known as the Union Typewriter Company; that this company was formed to aid in the restraint of trade; that a portion of its capital stock was issued in purchase of the patent in suit, and that said patent is actually the property of said company; that, by reason of this and of other matters set out at length in the defendant's answer, the complainant is not entitled to ask the interposition of a court of equity."

The memorandum goes on to quote testimony taken in the case. Clarence W. Seaman, Director and general manager of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict, testified that since 1893 he had been President of the Union Typewriter Company. He also testified that the Union Typewriter Company owned substantially all the stock of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict.

Mr. Benedict was put on the stand before the examiner as the result of a subpoena directing him to produce the agreement relating to the sale of his stock in Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict. He did not produce them.

"When did you last have in your possession or under your control any of the papers mentioned in this subpoena?" he was asked.

"The defendant's answer, as I understand," replied Mr. Benedict, "charges me with the commission of a crime. I decline to answer the question on the ground that it might have a tendency to incriminate myself, and I demur to the question, as my answer might subject me to the pains and penalties contained in the Federal Anti-Trust act and the Statutes of the State of New York."

The memorandum went on to argue that Mr. Benedict's reasons were not sufficient to excuse him from answering the questions. "It is evident," it said, "that the real object of the witness is to protect the Union Typewriter Company."

The attorneys for Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict contended in court that the transfer of the stock of that corporation to the Union Typewriter Company did not make the Union Typewriter Company the owner of the patents controlled by the concern it absorbed, and, therefore, that the line of question to which Mr. Benedict was submitted was incompetent.

Arthur von Briesen of Briesen & Knauth, representing the defendant, said yesterday: "I think the stockholders of the Union Typewriter Company will be interested in knowing that Mr. Benedict refused to testify about the way it was formed on the ground that it might incriminate him."

SEVENTH'S MODEL MESS.

Company A's Banquet Illustrates Improvements in Commissary Department.

Should occasion ever require the Seventh Regiment to be kept under arms for a week or more in its armory, at Park Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, its 1,200 members would not go hungry, nor would they have to depend on the restaurants in the neighborhood for food. This was made plain last evening, when Company A, commanded by Capt. John Henry Townsend, feasted at a rich banquet cooked in the armory and by members of the regiment.

The complaints made by the volunteers about the food furnished them in the camps of this country, and also while in Cuba, satisfied those in charge of the Seventh that the Commissary Department of the regiment was an important one, and that it should be brought up to the highest standard of perfection. Investigation proved that there were 100 good cooks in the regiment, and arrangements were made so that they were divided ten men to a company. The field outfit being the best that could be procured, steps were taken to make the cooking department in the armory a model institution. This was done at a cost of over $5,000.

The dinner of Company A, which was served last evening, was cooked under the supervision of Private George W. Lyons, who divided the nine men under him into assistant cooks and waiters. Capt. J. W. Meyer of the Commissary Department saw that everything was served in the proper way, and at the close of the meal he had no complaint to make. The dinner consisted of beef and vegetable soup, broiled sirloin steak, baked potatoes, cauliflower, cabinet pudding, bread, and coffee.

Company G will hold its dinner in the armory on Monday night next.

Contractor Killed at Bayonne.

Dennis County, a contractor, sixty-two years old, was instantly killed yesterday at the Pacific Coast Borax Company's works at Constable Hook, Bayonne, N. J., by being struck on the head with a large beam. The body was removed to his home, 205 Twenty-second Street, Bayonne. He leaves a wife and two children.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RUMORS.

Conference of Heads of the Road and President Bacon Lead to Conjectures.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 15.—Edward R. Bacon, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway Company and a member of the Board of Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, was in Baltimore to-day. Mr. Bacon went to the Baltimore and Ohio Central building, where he was closeted with President Cowen and Chairman of the Board Salomon the greater part of the day. It was given out in Mr. Cowen's office that the conference was without significance, being devoted exclusively to examining the annual report as far as it has been made up.

The annual meeting of the stockholders, which was to have been held to-day, has again been postponed, this time until Jan. 17. The only reason given for postponing the meeting is that the report is not ready for submission to the stockholders. An official of the company said that it was not certain that it would be ready in time for the meting in January, and in that event it would be postponed again.

The presence of Messrs. Salomon and Bacon in Baltimore excited considerable interest in financial circles and gave rise to several rumors, one of which was that they came here for the purpose of arranging for the operation of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern as part of the Baltimore and Ohio system. Another report was that the conference was for the purpose of arranging to give the Pennsylvania Railroad representation in the Board of Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio. Neither report could be confirmed.

In an interview Mr. Salomon admitted that there was some basis for the reports recently printed of an understanding or agreement between the trunk lines, including the Baltimore and Ohio.

"I am at liberty to say" Mr. Salomon stated, "that something has been done which will be of great benefit to the Baltimore and Ohio. When the persons interested are ready to make a statement it will be given out. It may be two or three months before the announcement is made."

Grand Central Station Waiting Rooms

The new waiting room and offices for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, constructed in the main shed of the Grand Central station for temporary use while the south end of the building is being reconstructed, were used for the first time yesterday. The balcony outside of the New Haven offices on the second floor overlooking the train shed was torn down yesterday preparatory to taking down the north wall of the south end to make space for the dome of the new general waiting room, which may be ready for the public in a couple of months.

Lackawanna Brooklyn Terminal.

Work will be begun in a few days on a new freight terminal of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, which is to be established on property recently purchased in Brooklyn. A warehouse, probably the largest in Brooklyn, will be constructed there. The property was occupied for many years as a lumber yard.

A CHURCH GYMNASIUM CLOSED.

West Hoboken Episcopal Rector and the Athletic Union at Odds.

The Rev. J. C. Lambert and the Athletic Union of St. John's Episcopal Church of West Hoboken are at loggerheads, and the pastor has closed the doors of the church gymnasium against the members of the union. As to the cause of the trouble there are two statements:

"I was obliged to disband the union," says Pastor Lambert, "because the members refused to recognize the fact that as rector I am the Moderator of all societies connected with the church. There is a dispute still as to the apparatus of the union, but I shall settle that by giving up the property, though I believe the church has as much interest in it as the union."

Charles Bielitz, who was Superintendent of the Sunday school, has left the church in consequence of the trouble, and his associates of the union deny that the union was formally disbanded. They say that it gave public exhibitions and made a little money. This, they say, Mr. Lambert directed them to turn into the church funds, and when they refused he closed the doors of the gymnasium against them. They also say that Mr. Lambert refused to surrender the apparatus of which he spoke until they threatened to institute legal proceedings for its recovery.

The largest series of figure mosaics ever executed in America is nearing completion at the workrooms of J. & R. Lamb, 25 Sixth Avenue. The mosaics are for the Henry Sage Memorial Apse in the chapel of Cornell University. The largest portion of the work—a series of groups in the dome—is already in place, and the mosaics which will be placed around the base of the dome will all be in position in a few weeks.

The cartoons for the work were on view yesterday at the Messrs. Lambs' studio, and it is evident that the chapel at Cornell will be enriched by work of as high a character as any produced in recent years here or abroad. Modern mosaic workers make no attempt to rival the minuteness in detail of the Renaissance period of the art, their productions resembling more nearly Byzantine mosaics. But in spite of this there is none of the patchy appearance which has marred many recent works in this medium. The colors are brilliant, of course, but they blend harmoniously, and the quasi-primitive rigidity of line—the Wardour Street imitation of antiquity, as it has been termed—is conspicuous by its absence.

Especially successful are the figures of angels in the dome, which were designed by F. R. Lamb. They are symbolic of the Church militant and triumphant and the Holy Communion. Other portions of the work were designed by Charles R. Lamb and Ella Condice Lamb.

Gets a Commission of $118,500.

Archibald C. Gracie yesterday recovered a verdict in the Supreme Court for $118,500. The action was brought against Edwin A. Stevens, Robert L. Stevens, Richard Stevens, E. A. S. Lewis, and nine other defendants to recover $225,000 for services and commissions in connection with the sale of the Hoboken Ferry Company's franchises to Roswell Eldridge in June, 1899, for $4,500,000.

NORTH RIVER SHAD IN MARKET.

Two Stray Specimens, Sold for $8, Started a Wild Rumor.

The presence in one of the Fulton Market fish stalls yesterday of a couple of fine shad started a wild rumor among epicures that the fish were running in the North River and could be had at this unusual season in any quantities. Nobody ever heard of a run of shad in the North River before March or April, and as a result of the rumor there were many applicants for the fish in the market.

The two specimens there were sold early, but at prices that indicated that there was not such a big run of shad in the Hudson as was represented. Each of these fish brought $4.

Eugene G. Blackford, a piscatorial expert, said that the two fish were really caught in the North River, but were what are known as "stray shad." Two or three such fish are found every month in the bare nets of Hudson River fishermen, and always bring fancy prices, notwithstanding the fact that they are not so fat as in the Spring.

Some Fulton Market dealers manage to get one or two such shad every day, but the majority are taken in Carolina waters. The fish weigh from three and a half to four pounds, and are never sold for less than $1 a pound. The whole New York market has received only twenty shad from these sources in the past two weeks.

The regular season for "Savannah" shad begins next week. The fish, though shipped from Savannah, and bearing that name, are really taken in Florida waters.

"About the middle of January," said Mr. Blackford, "the fish begin to run in North and South Carolina waters. We begin to receive the Chesapeake fish during the latter part of February, and by the middle of March or the first of April shad begin to run in the Hudson. If they were running regularly there now, the fishermen would be almost millionaires before New Year's Day."

Ten Years for Attempted Arson.

Julius J. Karkay of 1,908 Lexington Avenue, who was convicted of attempted arson three days ago, was sentenced to a ten years' term in State prison yesterday by Justice Furesman, in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court. The tenement which he attempted to burn down contained seventy-eight persons.

Dictionaries Compared.

The London Daily Standard hits the nail on the head when it declares that

"Comparisons may be odious, but when a work of reference is concerned they are inevitable. The Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary, in the wealth of its vocabulary, leaves the Century far behind, and not only in comprehensiveness, but in exactitude of definition, its merits are unquestionable."

That conservative authority, The Saturday Review, London, states the same fact in the following words:

"In substantial merit we think the Standard Dictionary decidedly preferable to the much-advertised Century."

Americans recognize this superiority, and The Atlantic Monthly, Boston, particularizes thus:

"'A STANDARD DICTIONARY' (Funk & Wagnalls) is, from its fulness and general plan, to be compared rather with the Century than with the International, (Webster's,) and we shall accordingly confine ourselves to this view. . . . It introduces far wider attention to what is, on the whole, the simplest and best method of phonetic representation yet devised, and one distinctly better than that used by the Century, which is more difficult to be understood by the people. As to the spelling of words in general, a subject of far more practical interest than that of strict phonetics, hearty praise may be bestowed upon 'THE STANDARD,' which moves farther toward the proper goal than does the Century. Of the definitions themselves, it must be said that they are often clearer and more comprehensive than their correspondents in the Century."

Such comparisons are not ungenerous, they are only fair.

The world-famous American work, the Standard Dictionary, is the ideal Christmas gift. The edition for 1900 is just ready.

POISON IN HIS TEA.

Christian Hitt, Employed in Chemical Works and in a Dangerous Condition, Accuses Fellow-Workman.

Christian Hitt, thirty-three years old, of 40 Mallory Avenue, Jersey City, is lying in a critical condition at the City Hospital from poisoning by sulphate of chromium. Henry Bolzer of 112 Morris Street is in the City Prison without bail, charged with administering the poison with intent to kill.

The two men worked in the Mutual Chemical Works in Fulton Avenue in the West Bergen district. They quarreled on Monday night last, according to Hitt's statement, and the poison was administered on Wednesday night, as Hitt alleges, for revenge. It was placed, he says, in the tea in the top of his dinner can. When Hitt ate his dinner he drank a small quantity of the tea. He was immediately seized with violent pains. Fortunately for Hitt the liquid acted as an emetic, and Dr. Blanchard, who was hastily summoned, said that if Hitt had any chance of recovery it was due to that fact.

Superintendent Kaufmann submitted a portion of the tea to the chemist of the factory, who found, according to his statement, that sulphate of chromium, which is used in the factory, had been put in the tea. August Zalwowski and three other workmen then stated that shortly before noon they saw Bolzer go to Hitt's dinner can and remove the cover. They thought nothing of it because they supposed he had merely made a mistake. Bolzer denied this, but the men were positive in their assertion. Superintendent Kaufmann at once discharged Bolzer and Hitt was removed to his home.

It was not supposed then that Hitt was in any danger and the matter was not reported to the police until yesterday, when Hitt became worse and Dr. Blanchard believed that he was liable to die.

Bolzer was then arrested, and was confronted with Hitt, who fully identified him and made a statement implicating him. He was corroborated by Zalwowski and the other witnesses. Mrs. Hitt also submitted the tea left in her husband's dinner can.

Bolzer denied having attempted to poison Hitt, but would make no further statement. According to Hitt's statement, Bolzer, who was night watchman, charged him with telling Superintendent Kaufmann that he, Bolzer, neglected his duties and was asleep on his post for two hours. He denied that he had done so, but Bolzer reiterated the charge and also threatened to "fix him" for it. Hitt was not removed to the hospital until last night.

BRONX CITIZENS' FIGHT.

Proposed Ordinances to Remedy Alleged Evils in Transit System.

Two ordinances, by which it is sought to remedy the alleged inconveniences to which the residents of the Borough of the Bronx have been subjected by the management of the Union Railway Company, have been prepared by the Citizens' Committee on Street Railway Service and Adequate Waiting Facilities, and have been placed in the hands of Alderman Henry Geiger for presentation to the Municipal Assembly.

The first ordirance provides "that hereafter no franchise or extension of franchise shall be granted to any street railway company unless such company shall provide adequate waiting accommodations at all terminals and points of transfer where passengers are required to wait longer than two minutes for a car."

The other ordinance is intended to prevent passengers from riding on the rear platforms of cars, and reads: "No street or elevated railway company, or any of the employes thereof, shall permit or allow any person or passenger, other than employes in actual service on the car or policeman on actual duty on the car, to ride upon any of the platforms of cars carrying passengers. Any street or elevated railway company, or any employe thereof, violating this ordinance shall be liable to a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $50. Any person persisting to stand upon the platform shall be liable to arrest, and a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $25."

COMPLAIN OF POWER HOUSE.

Third Avenue Company's Reply to Amsterdam Avenue Residents.

The Third Avenue Railroad Company had a representative in the Harlem Police Court yesterday in the case of the residents in the neighborhood of the new power house, at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, against that company. There were ten citizens present to present their side of the case before Magistrate Flammer. They wanted a summons for the President of the railroad, as they claim the power house is a public nuisance. They assert that the plans for the building were for a car shed, and that it was built as such, but that since the power of the railroad has been changed ten big dynamos have been put in, which shake the surrounding buildings. They also claim that the steam exhaust pipes have no condensers, and that the steam, mixed with oil, drops at points hundreds of feet from the building, ruining clothes and other property in the yards. The noise of the dynamos is also kept up all night, making sleep impossible, they allege.

The representative of the railroad said that the company was now putting in condensers for the steam pipes, and that everything was being done that would comply with the requests of the property owners. He said that it was the hope of the company to have the entire power of the road in the new power house at King's Bridge within ten months, and, in the meantime, they would remedy all causes of complaints. He asked for a postponement of one month in order that the railroad could show the property owners the sincerity of the promises. Magistrate Flammer granted the request.

Movement to Improve Brownsville.

The movement for the improvement of the sanitary and other conditions of the Brownsville district of Brooklyn is being actively advanced. Yesterday Dr. Black, head of the Brooklyn Health Department, with Inspectors Metcalfe, Tighe, and Hill, Magistrate Jacob Brenner, and other officials, made a tour of the district. Dr. Black yesterday received a letter from Borough President Grout, in which the latter called attention to the fact that many houses in East New York are not connected with the sewers, and that the local water supply is drawn to some extent from land much lower than that occupied by the houses in question, and is therefore partly drainage.

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

The Executive Committee of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters at its monthly meeting yesterday only transacted business of a routine character. The full board will meet next Wednesday.

Chicago advices state that the negotiations which have been pending since Tuesday for the reinsurance of the Western business of the Traders' Fire Insurance Company of New York in the Palatine Insurance Company of Manchester, England, were closed yesterday.

It was reported yesterday that negotiations are pending in the East for the reinsurance of the business of the Farmers and Merchants' Insurance Company of Lincoln, Neb., which was recently purchased by a syndicate, apparently connected with the persons who wound up the affairs of the Rockford Insurance Company of Illinois this year.

The Brokerage Committee of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange, at its meeting yesterday, took up the subject of the proposed extension of brokerage certificates. The expected recommendation from Exchange Manager Hess, stating the definite length of time for which certificates should be extended, was not received, and after some discussion the matter was laid over until next Tuesday, when a special meeting of the committee will be held to act upon this question.

The Magdeburg Fire Insurance Company of Germany, which was refused admission to this State in 1897 because of the difficulties of American Life Insurance companies in Prussia, was licensed yesterday by Superintendent Payn of the State Insurance Department to do business in this State. The company was organized in 1844, and commenced business in this country in 1878, operating only on the Pacific Coast. In 1896 its regular United States branch was established under the present management, and on Jan. 1, 1899, the assets of this branch aggregated $919,090. In 1898 the Magdeburg Fire Insurance Company of New York was organized, with $200,000 capital, in connection with the German company.

Tired Bird Credited with Seeking to Send Its Message by Mail.

Policeman Brennan of the Oak Street Station and some of the employes in the General Post Office found a carrier pigeon yesterday that they were willing to bet had as great a hypersense as the collie dog Leo that always knew when his master boarded a train fourteen miles away from home. The pigeon alighted about noon in front of the main entrance to the General Post Office, and in spite of the crowd in the vicinity did not seem frightened, but instead hopped toward the entrance to the building.

Policeman Brennan noticed that the bird was apparently puzzled, and that it looked tired. He saw also that it carried an aluminum message cylinder on its right leg, and he concluded that if the bird was too tired to deliver the message he would try to find from the cylinder for whom it was intended, and send the message by mail. But when he attempted to capture the bird it made short flights, and his efforts to snare it under his helmet caused a large crowd to gather. It took him fifteen minutes to capture the pigeon, but when he had it safely under his helmet he was puzzled as to what disposition to make of it. The Post Office people were posted on the Federal postal laws, but could not tell him whether there was a penalty for detaining a carrier pigeon message, so the policeman concluded to let the bird rest until it was ready to resume its flight. The postal clerks and carriers profess to believe that the pigeon wanted to send its message by mail.

Half an hour after its capture the pigeon was released and then it soared skyward, and after circling several times darted off toward the southwest, probably headed for Bordentown, N. J., for the name of that town and the initials "L. F." were scratched on the aluminum cylinder.

Rough Rider Fish's Undertaker Dead.

J. Charles Burton, for many years an undertaker in this city, died on Thursday in the Adirondacks, where he had gone to recover his health. He was for twelve years sexton of the University Place Presbyterian Church, succeeding his father. Mr. Burton went to Cuba to bring back the body of Hamilton Fish, Jr., a member of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and one of the first to fall in battle. He was selected by Gov. Black as one of the members of the New York State Embalming Board, but was forced by ill-health to resign. He leaves a wife and two children.

For Women and Children's Hospital.

A concert was given at Carnegie Music Hall last evening in aid of the Metropolitan Dispensary and Hospital for Women and Children in East Eighty-second Street. One of the most interesting features of the programme was the rendering by Miss Rose McAlarney of an aria from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba," and of two ballads, "Deserted," by MacDowell, and "Spring Song," by Hyde. The other performers were Max Karger, violinist; Franz Listemann, cello; Miss Fredericka Raymond, and William W. Lowitz, pianist.

COLUMBIA ATHLETES UNITE.

The different athletic organizations of Columbia University were united yesterday afternoon into one general association, which will be known as the Columbia University Athletic Association. It will include the football, baseball, lacrosse, cycling, track, and gymnastic associations.

At the head of the new association will be a board composed of Alumni and undergraduates, which will direct its affairs. Under this board will be an Executive Committee, consisting of the Captains, managers, and assistant managers of the different teams, which will arrange all meets and games.

The consolidation plan originated at Princeton, and has since been put into practice at Yale, Harvard, and Cornell.

MORFEY WON LIVE BIRD MATCH.

"Tom" Morfey, the expert wing shot of the Lyndhurst Gun Club, defeated "Chris" Wright of Paterson in an exciting match at the Singac traps, near Greenwood Lake, yesterday afternoon. Each man shot at 50 fast-flying pigeons, and the score at the finish stood 36 to 33. The weather was raw and unpleasant, while the heavy gale that prevailed made the birds unusually fast, and as a result the scores were lower than the average work of either contestant.

The majority of birds, owing to the direction of the wind, were right quarterers, and Morfey had rather the better of the element of luck. Four of Wright's birds carried charges from both barrels beyond the boundary before they dropped, while Morfey lost five dead out of bounds. The match, which was for $50 a side, was witnessed by a score of club members. Several sweepstake events followed the match.

The scores:

JEANNETTE GUN CLUB SHOOT.

The wintry atmosphere and stiff gale of wind developed a lot of screamers in the regular monthly live-bird shoot of the Jeannette Gun Club at its grounds yesterday. About twenty members were present, and the day's sport was thoroughly enjoyed. In addition to the shoot for the diamond medal, a five-bird team race and a miss and out kept the marksmen busy until it became too dark to distinguish the birds against the sombre background. The scores:

Club Shoot for Diamond Medal.—Conditions, ten birds each, 30 yards rise and 50 yards boundary; with a dead line at 31 yards.—C. M. Brume, 9; F. Ehlen, 9; C. Otten, 8; C. F. Peters, 8; A. Intemann, 8; H. Loeble, 8; J. Lott, 7; W. Rothmann, 7; C. Steffens, 7; H. Mohrmann, 6; J. H. Hainhorst, 6; H. Kroeger, 4; L. Feigensow 4, and E. Roff, 4.

Five-Bird Team Race.—Team No. 1—Lott, 4; Brume, 4; Intemann, 4; Connors, 4; Otten, 3; Notman, 3; Mohrmann, 2. Total, 24. Team No. 2—Peterson, 5; Ehlen, 4; Steffens, 4; Kroeger, 4; Loeble, 3; Hainhorst, 2; Whitt, 1. Total, 23.

Report on New Jersey Fish and Game.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 15.—The State Fish and Game Commission, in its annual report, criticises the Legislature for failure to appropriate the $5,000 requested for use in stocking the waters of the State with fish and its uplands and meadows with game. The report says that the quail brought from the West multiply, and, unlike Southern birds, have shown no disposition to migrate. It is too early, the report continues, to estimate the success of the introduction of the ring-neck pheasant, and the pike, perch, white bass, and channel catfish. The condition of the shad and sturgeon industries is treated in detail, and a liberal policy is advocated in that regard.

Hunt Is Princeton's Chess Champion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 15.—In the final round of the university chess tournament the tie between J. B. Hunt, '02, and J. C. Henley, '02, was decided, Hunt winning the match and the university championship. The first, second, and third prizes were awarded to Hunt, Henley, and Scott, '02, respectively. Hunt and Henley will represent Princeton in the intercollegiate tournament in New York, held during the Christmas vacation.

Bicycle Races at the Garden.

Harry Elkes, champion middle-distance cycle rider of America, and Edouard Taylore, champion of Europe, will meet in a one-hour paced race at Madison Square Garden to-night. Taylore holds the world's one-hour record of 36 miles 1,400 yards. There will also be racing at Madison Square Garden this afternoon. The main event will be a one-hour race for the amateur championship between Arthur W. Ross and Ray Duer.

To complete the balance of the purchase price and pay for the four new mills to be erected.

EVERY INVESTOR SHOULD NOTE CAREFULLY the following exceptional features in the policy of the International Zinc Co., Ltd.:
FIRST—The net profits of the company are certified as correct by the well-known Chartered Accountants, Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co., of New York, Boston, London, and Manchester, England.
SECOND—The books of the company are kept under their supervision, and quarterly statements of the earnings of the company will be issued, certified by them, thus enabling every shareholder to verify from independent sources the enormous profits of the company.
THIRD—This is the only mining company in the United States to adopt this most important safeguard of its shareholders' interests.
The International Zinc Company, Ltd., is now earning over 22 per cent. on its entire capital stock, out of which it is paying dividends at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum and carrying forward a surplus of 10 per cent.

When the improvements now under way are completed, the company will earn 42 per cent. per annum, with ore at $30.00 per ton. A careful consideration of the certified statement of profits as set forth in the prospectus shows that this estimate is based on actually less than is now being accomplished.

EVERY INVESTOR SHOULD READ the company's prospectus, which gives in detail full information as to the company's properties and earnings, with the complete statement in which these details are certified by the Accountants.

Beginning Jan. 1st, 1900, this company will pay regular monthly dividends of one per cent., with such extra dividends from time to time as the condition of the company shall warrant.

MARKET CONDITIONS.

Gold exports started yesterday. But instead of showing any disturbance over the development the security market actually advanced. About $2,000,000 constituted the first shipment, various banking houses joining in the engagements. The warrant for the movement was found in foreign advances in the price of every form of gold, whether in bullion or coinage; and incidental bearing appeared in sharp advances in money market rates abroad.

The extent to which this gold export movement may go can be only a matter of wild guesswork. Few conservative bankers are willing to make an estimate. Too many and too complex interests are involved for anything like reasonable calculation.

The theory upon which Wall Street proceeded in the rally which attended yesterday's gold export announcement was virtually that the transaction was chiefly an attestation of the financial strength and independence of this country. We have gold to spare, Wall Street urges, and in helping England we are but increasing the consequence of our position as the creditor nation of the world. Under some prevailing circumstances this sentimental view makes a curious Wall Street exhibit. Yesterday's market showed with some vigor, however, that speculators who attempt to assail the quality of such sentiment undertake tasks that are not easy.

In yesterday's rally one attending feature was that while for more than a week past the fashion in Wall Street offices has been to hunt for weak spots in the market, to seek to make money by selling short, the disposition yesterday was so changed that with almost unanimity the traders of the Stock Exchange appeared alert only for chances to make money by buying.

Much speculation is expended upon what may be the showing of to-day's bank statement. The Treasury Department has made heavy drafts upon the banks, and large sums of money have been transferred from New York to Boston to afford relief in banking circles there, while upon the other hand the movement of currency from the West is becoming more consequential; but the important fluctuations have been in the deposit and loan accounts, where the extraordinary liquidation of the week is directly reflected. Generally Wall Street calculators count upon what is called a "good" statement—though gains in surplus reserves through the course of this week's stock market might seem suggestive of something else than unmixed satisfaction. Wall Street pays dearly for any comfort that such surplus figures may provide.

There is renewed and very confident expectation that some means of "relief" is being devised at Washington, but Wall Street's Washington forecasts have not recently been materializing.

SUGAR DEVELOPMENTS.

There were no new developments in the Sugar situation yesterday, though the buying of the stocks continued very active. All kinds of talk was heard in respect to developments, probable or possible, but there was nothing tangible. One report had it that a strong bull pool had been formed in order to put up the quotation, while another report had it that a pool was being formed further to depress the stock. Havemeyer interests, several days ago credited as sellers, were yesterday said to be buyers.

In their Weekly Sugar Trade Journal Willet & Gray say of the formation of the Colonial Sugar Company and of the situation generally:

"Something new is announced from Delaware viz., the proposed organization of the Colonial Sugar Company, with $100,000,000 capital, to do almost everything in the sugar line at home and in our new possessions. In the absence of any names being mentioned as promoters, much greater weight appears to be given to this matter in Wall Street than it is entitled to. It is hard to see where such an amount of money can come from for such a purpose. Certainly people are not expecting very brilliant results at present in Cuba, for instance, under the extremely slow development of that island, as already pointed out by us. Conditions in our new tropical possessions are not considered favorable for the production of refined sugars, and there are more than enough refineries already established here to supply the demand. Independent refiners state that they are not interested in the proposed company. The development of the raw sugar industry in those islands should make steady progress, but it will be some time yet before $100,000,000 is used for this purpose.

"Nevertheless, the foregoing incidents circulated in Wall Street appear to have brought about a most extraordinary liquidation among holders of the American Sugar Refining Company's stock. From being extremely strong at $140 and on the high road to $200, as claimed by Wall Street at the time, it has suddenly become apparently valueless, and in the rush to get out has declined to $125 already as a first installment of its decline. Of the capital stock of 375,000 shares, 232,000 shares were sold on Wednesday of this week. How much of this was actual stock held for investment it is impossible to know; also whether the stock is any less valuable for investment now than when selling at $140, less than a month ago. The annual meeting comes due Jan. 10, and will be awaited with much interest. Certainly nothing that has occurred during the month is sufficient to account for the present stampede."

EXTRAORDINARY EARNINGS.

In striking contrast with the recent marked decline in the quotations on the Stock Exchange of the railroad stocks, not even the standard roads excepted, and as proof of Wall Street's disregard at times for the best kind of news in the form of greatly increased earnings and continuing prosperity, comes the weekly statement of railroad earnings, to be published to-day by The Commercial and Financial Chronicle. OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Most of the changes in yesterday's market for outside securities were on the side of advances. For the time being liquidation seemed to be over, and yesterday the pressure to sell that characterized the market on the two or three preceding days was absent. Transactions were in smaller amount, and the only stock that was very active was Amalgamated Copper. The market opened very quietly, and in several quarters showed strength throughout the day. In the absence of urgent sellers it was found that relatively little stock was offered, and the purchase of a few hundred shares in several cases brought about advances of a point or more. Strength in the outside market was to a large extent the result of the better conditions prevailing in the Stock Exchange market, relatively few issues being affected by special influences. Among the news developments of the day was the announcement of the regular quarterly dividend on Electric Vehicle common, which very much benefited that stock.

AMALGAMATED COPPER, by far the most active issue, was late in the day one of the strongest. It opened at 79, and on the first sales went off to 78⅜, but very quickly recovered from this figure, and during the afternoon sold up to 81¼. A good deal of stock was taken in the neighborhood of 81, and, although the price fluctuated a good deal above 80, the market for the stock remained firmly above that figure. It seemed to be partly the result of manipulation that the stock reacted so sharply from the low figure recorded in the early trading. Contracts in Amalgamated on the short side are said to be large, and attempts have many times been made to force the shorts to cover. Success in this direction yesterday seemed to be small.

ELECTRIC AXLE was the most active of the electric stocks, and continued irregular. At one time it got up to 7 bid, and some stock changed hands at this figure; later the price fell back about half a point, and it closed unchanged for the day at 6⅝ bid.

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION showed notable strength. On transactions amounting to less than 1,000 shares it sold up to 11. It closed with a net gain of 1 point at 10¼ bid, but no stock was offered under 12.

ILLINOIS TRANSPORTATION was also in good demand, and advanced fractionally to 2½. At the figure at which this stock is now selling, which is only 50 per cent. of its paid in value, relatively little stock is offered, and there seems to be no very good reason for the heavy decline which has occurred in the stock. It has probably been due to the throwing of stock on the market by holders who became dissatisfied with the apparent lack of enterprise on the part of the management of the company. Friends of the stock say that it has been found impossible to have a sufficient number of vehicles manufactured quickly, and that the business of the company has been advanced as rapidly as possible. It is said that the number of vehicles operated by the several transportation companies subsidiary to the Electric Vehicle Company will be very considerably increased early next year.

ELECTRIC VEHICLE advanced sharply on the announcement of the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on the common stock. No transactions in the stock were reported, but from being offered at 60 it advanced to 65 bid, with no stock to be had within two or three points of that price. The last sale was made at 59.

STORAGE POWER was strong on light transactions. It sold up to 11½, and closed at 11 bid, a net gain of three-quarters of a point.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA common sold up to 8⅜, and ended the day at 8⅜ bid, a half point advance, and the preferred stock sold at 28½, and closed at 28½ bid, a net gain of 1 point.

RUBBER GOODS preferred was in demand. It sold up to 80, where several hundred shares changed hands.

Closing quotations were as follows:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—Boston had a good recovery to-day. The mining shares led in interest; indeed, they almost made the market. United States Oil, which showed great activity, opened off 2, at 25½, rose to 28⅝, fell back to 26½, and hardened again, to 27¾; the close was at 27½.

United States Mining sold to the extent of 1,100 shares in the morning and less than 100 afterward. The price was 5¼ lower, at 25.

Montana rose 25, to 285, closing at 285; Butte, 12, to 52. Dominion Coal lost ¾, to 43¼, thence rising to 45. Osceola was up 4, at 69, later 68; Tamarack, 10, at 195, later 188. Utah lost 1¼, to 27, rose to 30, and sold later at 29½. Amalgamated rose 1⅛, to 80¾, later 80⅜. Parrot gained 2⅜, to 37, and Arcadian, 2½, to 24.

Call loans, 5½@7; time money, 5@6; commercial paper, 5½@6 per cent. At the Clearing House, balances between the banks loaned at 6 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—The market to-day displayed considerable strength. Trading was fairly active and well distributed. New York bought the Readings. Pennsylvania spurted sharply, Choctaw rose 2 points to 35. Union Traction was marked up a point to 40 on the rumor that dividends would be commenced within three months. Substantial fractions were gained by American Railways, Asphalt, Marsden, and Electric Company of America, while United Gas rose 3 to 158½. The feeling was generally buoyant, and the market closed firm.

BIDS FOR RAPID TRANSIT.

John C. Sheehan's Firm Yet Undecided —The Statement of Engineer Parsons.

A report was circulated yesterday to the effect that the contracting firm of O'Brien & Sheehan, of which John C. Sheehan is a member, had decided not to bid for the contract to construct the rapid transit tunnel. When the matter was brought to Mr. Sheehan's attention, however, he denied that any decision in the matter had been reached.

"We have been looking it over," he said, "and you can say that we are all ready if we conclude to bid." He added that the conclusion might not be reached until the morning of Jan. 15, the day set for receiving bids.

William Barclay Parsons, Chief Engineer of the Rapid Transit Commission, said that no bids probably would be received before the day set, for the reason that every bid must be accompanied by a certified check for $150,000, and that no one would want to lose the interest on such a sum for any time when there was no advantage to be gained. He said checks would no doubt be certified at the opening of the banks at 10 o'clock on the morning of that day, and then the bids would be presented.

Mr. Sheehan yesterday declined to discuss a story that his firm had an advantage of about $5,000,000 over all other bidders, in having made a contract with the Carnegie Steel Company two years ago for the structural work that will be needed, and which has since greatly increased in price.

Indorses Underground System.

The Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association at a meeting held Thursday evening at its headquarters, One Hundred and Sixtieth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, adopted resolutions indorsing the underground system of rapid transit, and urging that the building of the road be commenced at the upper end of Manhattan Island. A committee was appointed to present the resolutions to the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners.

Another Astor Apartment House.

Plans were filed yesterday for the eight-story apartment house which William Waldorf Astor will build at the northwest corner of Broadway and Seventy-fifth Street. The structure, which has been planned to accommodate forty-two families, will have an exterior of brick and limestone, and will occupy a plot fronting 133.6 feet on Broadway and 164.9 feet on the street. The cost of the building has been estimated by Architects Clinton & Russell at $400,000.

New Building on Fifth Avenue.

On his recent purchase at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Sixteenth Street, a plot 49 by 141, Leo Wise will put up a ten-story store and loft building at a cost of $300,000. Plans, prepared by Louis Korn, were filed yesterday.

and during the third five years three per of such gross receipts, and thereafter five nt. of such gross receipts.

but one fare shall be exacted for passage the railroad constructed under this grant, er the lines of any railroad system operated nection therewith, and that the gross re- from joint business shall be divided in the proportion that the length of said railroad operated in connection therewith, and of the railroad to be constructed thereunder.

Fifth—The said railroad may be operated by underground electrical power substantially similar to the system of underground electrical traction now in use on the railroads in Second, Sixth, Eighth, Lenox, and Madison Avenues, in this city, and by any other motive power except locomotive steam power, which may be approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners and consented to by the owners of property, in accordance with the provisions of the Railroad Law.

Sixth—The said railroad shall be constructed and maintained subject to the supervision and control of the Commissioner of Highways and the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies of the City of New York, in all matters with respect to which said Commissioners are respectively invested with the power of regulation and control by the charter of said city.

Sec. 3. The said grant is also upon the further conditions, namely:

First—That the said right, privilege, and franchise to construct and operate its said railway shall be held and enjoyed by said railroad company, its lessee or successors for the term of twenty-five years, with the privilege of a renewal of said grant for the further period of twenty-five years upon a fair revaluation of the right, such revaluation to be of the right, privilege, and franchise to maintain and operate said railroad by itself, and not to include any value derived from the ownership, control or operation of any other railroad line or tracks by the grantee, its successors or assigns; provided, however, that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on such streets, avenues, parkways, and highways shall be first obtained, or in lieu thereof the favorable determination of three Commissioners, approved by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, that such railroad should be constructed and operated.

Second—Upon the termination of the said franchise or right, whether original or renewed, there shall be a fair valuation of the plant and property of the grantee in the streets, avenues, parkways, and highways aforesaid, with its appurtenances, and the said plant and property shall be and become the property of the city on the termination of the grant on paying the grantee such valuation. Such payment shall be at a fair valuation of the said plant and property as property, excluding any value derived from the franchise.

Third—The mode of determining the valuations and revaluations herein provided for shall be as follows: One disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment; one disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the railroad company; these two shall choose a third disinterested freeholder; the three so chosen shall act as appraisers, and shall make the valuations and revaluations aforesaid. Such appraisers shall be chosen at least sixty days prior to the expiration of the grant, or of the renewal thereof, and their report shall be filed with the Comptroller of the city not more than thirty days thereafter. They shall act as appraisers and not as arbitrators; they may base their judgment upon their own experience and upon such information as they may obtain by inquiries and investigation without the presence of either party; they shall have the right to examine the books of the railroad company. The valuations so ascertained, fixed, and determined shall be conclusive upon both parties.

Fourth—The said Fort George and Eleventh Avenue Railroad Company shall for and during the first five years after the commencement of the operation of any portion of its railroad annually, on November 1st, pay into the treasury of the city, to the credit of the Sinking Fund thereof, three per cent. of its gross receipts for and during the year ending September 30th next preceding; and after the expiration of such five years make a like annual payment into the treasury of the city to the credit of the same fund, of five per cent. of its gross receipts, as required by Section 95 of the Railroad Law.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment having among other things made inquiry and determined said above-mentioned percentage to be inadequate, and on December 5th, 1899, fixed and adopted as the money value of said privileges or franchises, as follows:

Four percentum of the gross receipts during the first five years of operation;

Six percentum of the gross receipts during the second five years of operation;

Eight percentum of the gross receipts during the third five years of operation, and

Ten percentum of the gross receipts during the remaining years of operation.

The said Fort George and Eleventh Avenue Railroad Company, in addition to the percentages first herein set forth, as required to be paid by the Railroad Law, after commencement of the operation of any portion of its railroad, shall pay into the treasury of the city, to the credit of the Sinking Fund, percentages of its gross receipts as follows:

For and during the first five years one per cent. of such gross receipts.

For and during the second five years one per cent. of such gross receipts.

For and during the third five years three per cent. of such gross receipts, and thereafter five per cent. of such gross receipts.

That but one fare shall be exacted for passage over the railroad constructed under this grant and over the lines of any railroad system operated in connection therewith; and that the gross receipts from joint business shall be divided in the proportion that the length of said railroad operated in connection therewith shall bear to the entire length of the railroad system which shall be operated in connection therewith, and of the railroad to be constructed thereunder.

Fifth—The said railroad may be operated by underground electrical power substantially similar to the system of underground electrical traction now in use on the railroads in Second, Sixth, Eighth, Lenox, and Madison Avenues, in this city, and by any other motive power except locomotive steam power, which may be approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners and consented to by the owners of property, in accordance with the provisions of the Railroad Law.

Sixth—The said railroad shall be constructed and maintained subject to the supervision and control of the Commissioner of Highways and the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies of the City of New York, in all matters with respect to which said Commissioners are respectively invested with the power of regulation and control by the charter of said city.

Sec. 3. The said grant is also upon the further conditions, namely:

First—That the said right, privilege, and franchise to construct and operate its said railway shall be held and enjoyed by said railroad company, its lessee or successors for the term of twenty-five years, with the privilege of a renewal of said grant for the further period of twenty-five years upon a fair revaluation of the right, such revaluation to be of the right, privilege, and franchise to maintain and operate said railroad by itself, and not to include any value derived from the ownership, control or operation of any other railroad line or tracks by the grantee, its successors or assigns; provided, however, that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on such streets, avenues, parkways, and highways shall be first obtained, or in lieu thereof the favorable determination of three Commissioners, approved by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, that such railroad should be constructed and operated.

Second—Upon the termination of the said franchise or right, whether original or renewed, there shall be a fair valuation of the plant and property of the grantee in the streets, avenues, parkways, and highways aforesaid, with its appurtenances, and the said plant and property shall be and become the property of the city on the termination of the grant on paying the grantee such valuation. Such payment shall be at a fair valuation of the said plant and property as property, excluding any value derived from the franchise.

Third—The mode of determining the valuations and revaluations herein provided for shall be as follows: One disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment; one disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the railroad company; these two shall choose a third disinterested freeholder; the three so chosen shall act as appraisers, and shall make the valuations and revaluations aforesaid. Such appraisers shall be chosen at least sixty days prior to the expiration of the grant, or of the renewal thereof, and their report shall be filed with the Comptroller of the city not more than thirty days thereafter. They shall act as appraisers and not as arbitrators; they may base their judgment upon their own experience and upon such information as they may obtain by inquiries and investigation without the presence of either party; they shall have the right to examine the books of the railroad company. The valuations so ascertained, fixed, and determined shall be conclusive upon both parties.

Fourth—The said Fort George and Eleventh Avenue Railroad Company shall for and during the first five years after the commencement of the operation of any portion of its railroad annually, on November 1st, pay into the treasury of the city, to the credit of the Sinking Fund thereof, three per cent. of its gross receipts for and during the year ending September 30th next preceding; and after the expiration of such five years make a like annual payment into the treasury of the city to the credit of the same fund, of five per cent. of its gross receipts, as required by Section 95 of the Railroad Law.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment having among other things made inquiry and determined said above-mentioned percentage to be inadequate, and on December 5th, 1899, fixed and adopted as the money value of said privileges or franchises, as follows:

Four percentum of the gross receipts during the first five years of operation;

Six percentum of the gross receipts during the second five years of operation;

Eight percentum of the gross receipts during the third five years of operation, and

Ten percentum of the gross receipts during the remaining years of operation.

The said Fort George and Eleventh Avenue Railroad Company, in addition to the percentages first herein set forth, as required to be paid by the Railroad Law, after commencement of the operation of any portion of its railroad, shall pay into the treasury of the city, to the credit of the Sinking Fund, percentages of its gross receipts as follows:

For and during the first five years one per cent. of such gross receipts.

For and during the second five years one per cent. of such gross receipts.

For and during the third five years three per cent. of such gross receipts, and thereafter five per cent. of such gross receipts.

That but one fare shall be exacted for passage over the railroad constructed under this grant and over the lines of any railroad system operated in connection therewith; and that the gross receipts from joint business shall be divided in the proportion that the length of said railroad operated in connection therewith shall bear to the entire length of the railroad system which shall be operated in connection therewith, and of the railroad to be constructed thereunder.

Fifth—The said railroad may be operated by underground electrical power substantially similar to the system of underground electrical traction now in use on the railroads in Second, Sixth, Eighth, Lenox, and Madison Avenues, in this city, and by any other motive power except locomotive steam power, which may be approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners and consented to by the owners of property, in accordance with the provisions of the Railroad Law.

Sixth—The said railroad shall be constructed and maintained subject to the supervision and control of the Commissioner of Highways and the Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies of the City of New York, in all matters with respect to which said Commissioners are respectively invested with the power of regulation and control by the charter of said city.

Sec. 2. The grant of said franchise or right to use said streets, avenues, parkways, and highways is made subject to the following conditions:

First—That the said right, privilege, and franchise to construct and operate its said railway shall be held and enjoyed by said railroad company, its lessee or successors for the term of twenty-five years, with the privilege of a renewal of said grant for the further period of twenty-five years upon a fair revaluation of the right, such revaluation to be of the right, privilege, and franchise to maintain and operate said railroad by itself, and not to include any value derived from the ownership, control or operation of any other railroad line or tracks by the grantee, its successors or assigns; provided, however, that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on such streets, avenues, parkways, and highways shall be first obtained, or in lieu thereof the favorable determination of three Commissioners, approved by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, that such railroad should be constructed and operated.

Second—Upon the termination of the said franchise or right, whether original or renewed, there shall be a fair valuation of the plant and property of the grantee in the streets, avenues, parkways, and highways aforesaid, with its appurtenances, and the said plant and property shall be and become the property of the city on the termination of the grant on paying the grantee such valuation. Such payment shall be at a fair valuation of the said plant and property as property, excluding any value derived from the franchise.

Third—The mode of determining the valuations and revaluations herein provided for shall be as follows: One disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment; one disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the railroad company; these two shall choose a third disinterested freeholder; the three so chosen shall act as appraisers, and shall make the valuations and revaluations aforesaid. Such appraisers shall be chosen at least sixty days prior to the expiration of the grant, or of the renewal thereof, and their report shall be filed with the Comptroller of the city not more than thirty days thereafter. They shall act as appraisers and not as arbitrators; they may base their judgment upon their own experience and upon such information as they may obtain by inquiries and investigation without the presence of either party; they shall have the right to examine the books of the railroad company. The valuations so ascertained, fixed, and determined shall be conclusive upon both parties.

GRANTS CONVICT'S PRAYER

Judge Newburger Shows Mercy to a Repentant Man.

WANTED FREEDOM CHRISTMAS

Reno's Letter Saves Him After Twenty-two Years in Stripes—Learned an Art in Prison.

For William Reno, who was arraigned before Judge Newburger in Part IV. of the Court of General Sessions yesterday next Christmas will be the first Christmas spent out of jail in twenty-two years. He owes this privilege to the eloquence of his pleadings and the clemency of Justice Newburger, who suspended a sentence for grand larceny and let him go on his own recognizance.

Reno had been arrested on an old charge of grand larceny on Nov. 9, just as he was leaving Clinton Prison, after having served a term of four years for the same offense. While in the Tombs awaiting trial he wrote a letter to Judge Newburger, and when arraigned in court yesterday pleaded guilty, and presented the letter to the Judge with a plea for mercy. Judge Newburger read the letter to the jurors, several of whom were visibly affected by its pathos and by the evident sincerity of the prisoner. The letter was as follows:

"The Hon. Judge Newburger:

"Dear Sir: I hope your Honor will please excuse me of taking the liberty of addressing this letter to you. I am to go before you for sentence on Friday, Dec. 15. I beg your Honor to show me some mercy. I have served many years of imprisonment, and think I have been punished and suffered much for my crimes.

"I cannot complain, because I know I deserve it. I know, your Honor, that there are few people will believe that a man who has been in prison so many times will repent and lead an honest life. For the last four years in prison I worked and studied hard, night and day, to learn a good trade so to earn a good, honest living, and on the morning of the 9th of last November I woke up a happy man, expecting to be free to go out in the world and earn an honest living. I was dressed, taken to the office, handed my few dollars that were due me, and signed my discharge papers; turned around to leave, when an officer who stood behind me rearrested me on this charge.

"I hope to God no man will ever feel as I felt then. I do not know what to say to your Honor so you will believe me. I know I deserve my punishment, but the great God, who can look in all our hearts, knows that I am a different man now when I left that prison from what I was when I went in. There are people willing to help me to lead a better life and get employment for me if your Honor sees fit to give me a chance. I beg you, Sir, give me a chance in any conditions your Honor sees fit to make, and I assure you I shall never get into trouble again. If I should get into trouble again, then let the severest penalty the law calls for be dealt out to me. Any questions you will ask me when I am called before your Honor I shall answer with nothing but the truth. So I beg of you, Sir, to have mercy upon me and give me a chance to redeem myself and live and die an honest man.

"I have not seen a free Christmas day in twenty-two years, or seen my people in that time. When I get work and can prove to them that I have turned away from crime and crooked life I would like to see them once more. I will close, hoping your Honor will excuse me for addressing this letter to you, and have mercy on me. I am your most humble servant,

"WILLIAM RENO.

"Tombs City Prison."

After Judge Newburger had concluded, D. G. Kimball, a representative of the Prison Association, came forward and said that he had interested himself in the case, and that the prisoner was deserving of mercy. He said that Reno had perfected himself as a designer of embroidery in Clinton Prison, and was considered by the prison authorities one of the best designers in America. Mr. Kimball told the Judge that Reno could easily make from $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

Judge Newburger, after a few words of advice to the prisoner, who wept bitterly, told him that he was released. Reno promised to report to the Judge every month as to his progress, and then walked out of court. His long years of imprisonment had made free movements unnatural to him, and he fell into the lockstep behind a visitor, who was also going out. His newly acquired freedom was so strange to him that it was necessary for Mr. Kimball to lead him out of the building.

Reno's record shows that he began his prison life in 1878. He was convicted on five different indictments for grand larceny.

JERSEY TRAMP PHILOSOPHER.

Had Plenty of Clothes and Studied the Science of Cheap Living.

A tramp who was arrested in Jersey City early yesterday morning, and who refused to give his name, was found to be well fortified against cold weather, so far as clothing was concerned. When searched at the Ocean Avenue Police Station he had on seven coats, one vest, and five pairs of trousers.

The only thing found in any of the pockets of the garments was a newspaper clipping, telling "How to Live On Ten Cents a Day." It had the appearance of having been well studied, though the owner admitted that he had not had 10 cents in as many weeks. He said a man who had his wits about him could live a week on 10 cents and still have the dime.

C. PERCIVAL STEWART ARRESTED

Five Indictments Found Against Him Charging Grand Larceny.

C. Percival Stewart, formerly of the Granite State Provident Association, the American Investors' Trust, and the Financial Agency Company, was locked up in Police Headquarters last night, five indictments having been found against him by the Grand Jury. The prisoner is accused of grand larceny in the second degree, by taking money under false pretenses and feloniously converting to his own use money belonging to the American Investors' Company. Indictments were also found against four of the prisoner's colleagues.

Stewart is alleged to have represented the American Investors' Company, of which he was the promoter, to be a wealthy concern, in good business standing. It occupied large offices in the Potter Building, and claimed property and assets aggregating more than $125,000. Diedrich Behrens of Brooklyn and Karl Priess, who lives on Long Island, are the principal complainants.

FOUR ELECTION CONVICTIONS.

A Tammany Captain Found Guilty of Colonizing Voters.

The case of Samuel Goldberger, Tammany Captain in the First Election District of the Eighth Assembly District, charged with colonizing voters at 17 Forsyth Street, came up yesterday before Justice Werner in the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court. Herman Schroeder, the chief witness for the State, testified that there were eight mattresses on the floors of two rooms, and between eight and ten men were there off and on, sleeping. He said that he received a slip of paper, and was told that he could live at 17 Forsyth Street without paying rent. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was remanded until Monday for sentence.

William E. Vokes pleaded guilty to illegal registration and to attempting to vote in the thirteenth election district of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District. He was committed to the Elmira Reformatory. James Morrissey, who tried to vote in the first election district of the Sixth Assembly District, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to confinement in the same institution. Thomas Smith, who pleaded guilty of attempting to vote in the fourteenth election district of the Eighth Assembly District, was sentenced to one year in State prison.

Makes hot breakfast-breads wholesome—no yeast germs, no alum. Makes cake, biscuit and pastry of superior fineness, flavor and delicacy. Makes food that will keep moist and sweet. Is most economical, because it is the purest and greatest in leavening strength. In the easy, expeditious preparation of the finer cakes and pastries appropriate to the season, Royal is indispensable.

Care must be taken to avoid baking powders made from alum. Such powders are sold cheap, because they cost but a few cents per pound. Not only will they spoil the cake, but alum is a corrosive acid, which taken in food means injury to health.

LEGAL NOTES.

THE COMMISSIONER, NOT THE CITY, LIABLE FOR BACK PAY.—Justice Bischoff yesterday granted the applications of George S. Gilfillan and two others for reinstatement by Henry S. Kearny, Commissioner of Buildings, Lighting and Supplies, as bath attendants; but he refused to direct the Commissioner to audit their claims for the amount of their per diem during the period of their removal, as had been done upon a similar application, in which Commissioner Dalton was respondent. Justice Bischoff said that were it not for the allegations contained in the respondent's affidavits, he should conclude that the relators were entitled to such direction. It was alleged, however, that the positions from which the relators had been removed had been filled by other appointees who had received the salary and performed the services incidental to these positions. As these allegations were not placed in issue, the Court said a complete defense to a demand against the city for back pay was disclosed. All that appeared, therefore, was an existing right of action against Mr. Kearny for the wrongful removal, and if the petitions were framed as upon a demand for damages against him personally, an assessment of damages might possibly have been had, under Section 2,088 of the Code, notwithstanding the absence of a return. No notice, however, was given Mr. Kearny that a personal liability was to be asserted and enforced in the proceeding, and relief could not be granted which would be inconsistent with the averments of the petition. No demand having been shown against the city, there was no claim which should be audited as an incident to the relators' reinstatement. "The respondent may, indeed," Justice Bischoff added, "have invited the release of the city at his own expense, but this is a matter for subsequent litigation, and cannot be determined here."

REMOVAL OF TRUSTEES UPHELD.—Griffin B. and George A. Disbrow, who were trustees of the property left by their father, were removed by the Supreme Court at Special Term, which decided that the trust had been improperly administered, because of the "feeling of hostility between the two trustees." The Court held that for that reason, if no other, they should be removed, and that conclusion was yesterday sustained by the First Appellate Division. Benjamin D. Disbrow, at his death in 1893, left a wife and four sons, his only heirs at law and next of kin. By his will he gave all his property to his son Robert N., and just before his death he executed a deed conveying to him all his real estate. Probate of the will, after a contest, was refused, and pending an action then brought to set aside the deed the son Robert, and his wife, by a compromise, executed a trust deed, under which the sons Griffin B. and George A. Disbrow became trustees of the real estate, to pay the income to their mother during her life, and then to sell it and divide the proceeds between the four sons, Griffin, George, Robert, and Charles Disbrow. Ill feeling, which soon sprang up between the trustees, and between Griffin and his mother, finally culminated in an action by the mother, Sarah M. Disbrow, to remove both trustees. Justice McLaughlin, giving the opinion of the Appellate Division, said in part: "The defendant Griffin, in the discharge of his duties as trustee, acted in not only an arbitrary and offensive manner with his co-trustees, but he failed to treat his mother, the plaintiff, with the respect due her, not only as his mother, but as one having the principal interest in the trust property. He took the entire management of the property into his own hands, and treated with contempt reasonable requests made by his co-trustees, and the plaintiff, in reference to what he was doing. His acts were such that it is not at all surprising that the plaintiff became suspicious of him, doubted his integrity, and finally asked for his removal." The Court held, however, that the accounts of Griffin were erroneously surcharged with certain items, aggregating $1,782.16. Justice Barrett dissented from the latter conclusion, holding that the expenditures distinctly covered betterments, as distinguished from repairs, and, at any rate, there was not a particle of evidence tending to show the actual necessity of the work for which this sum was charged.

CONSTRUCTION OF WATER SYSTEMS BY MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—An important decision in reference to the right of a municipality to construct a system of water supply, as against a franchise previously granted to a private water company, was decided last week by the Court of Appeals. The case affects a very large amount of invested capital in various places throughout the State. The action was brought by the Skaneateles Water Works Company, to restrain the village of Skaneateles and its officers from constructing and operating in the village an independent system of water works for the purpose of supplying it and its inhabitants with water. The village had in 1887 granted to this water company, which was organized under Chapter 737 of the laws of 1873, a franchise to maintain and operate within its corporate limits a system of water works for furnishing the village with pure and wholesome water. From December, 1890, the company, which had established for the municipality, at great expense, a complete and sufficient water supply, furnished such supply for five years, when its contract with the village expired, and it was not renewed. After the company, claiming it was losing money, asked for $10 more a year than its contract price of $40 for each hydrant, the residents at a special election voted to construct an independent system of water works for the village. The present action, which was then brought, resulted in a judgment, entered upon the report of a referee, dismissing the complaint, and this decision was unanimously affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Fourth Department in October, 1896. The Court of Appeals now holds, affirming the judgment below, Chief Judge Parker giving the opinion, that the municipality might under the circumstances, under the act of 1875, construct its own water works, and that, although it had the power to acquire by purchase or condemnation proceedings the plant of the private company, it was not bound to do so, but might duplicate it with its own plant, and thus practically destroy the value of the property of the old company. Rights not expressly granted by the terms of the franchise were, the Court held, to be deemed reserved. The Court decided, however, that the provisions of the act of 1875, embodied in the amendments of 1893 and 1894, permitting the municipality to tax the old company for the purpose of constructing the new municipal plant, and permitting a discriminating tax to be imposed against the patrons of the old company, were unconstitutional, being in violation of Section 10 of the Federal Constitution. The unconstitutional provisions being, however, separable from the main provisions of the law, did not, it was held, invalidate the entire act. Judge Bartlett gave a dissenting opinion, holding that the property of the old company should be purchased by private contract or condemned under the statute before the municipal water company was permitted to begin work on its plant.

Veterans of Troop A at a Feast.

The veterans of Troop A, New York's Volunteer Cavalry, which served under Major Gen. Nelson A. Miles in Puerto Rico during the Spanish war, dined last night at the Hotel Manhattan. Flags captured from the Spanish, and some guns, swords, and other trophies from the same source were part of the decorations.

OPPOSE COPPER COMPANY SALE.

Minority Against the Plan of Senator Clark and His Associates.

Attorneys for the United Verde Copper Company and for United States Senator William A. Clark and the other Directors appeared before Justice Gildersleeve, in the Supreme Court, yesterday in opposition to the continuance of a temporary injunction restraining the sale of the mining properties of the company on Dec. 19. The company has its mines and plant at Jerome, Arizona, and is capitalized at $3,000,000, of which $9,000 is held by the minority stockholders. The sale is opposed by George A. Treadwell, as it is designed to be a formal sale for the purpose of reorganization. The proposed action involves the dissolution of the company under its New York charter and the substitution of a West Virginia charter.

Charges of mismanagement were denied by the attorney for the defense, who asserted that the stock, which had been worth only 75 cents a share, was now worth $300 a share. Justice Gildersleeve took the papers and reserved his decision.

Mrs. Glennon Indicted for Murder.

Mrs. Anna Glennon, who cut the throat of her six-year-old daughter Mary at her home in Douglass Street, Brooklyn, on Dec. 5 last, was yesterday indicted for murder by the Kings County Grand Jury. The commission appointed to inquire into the question of the sanity of the woman examined Mrs. Glennon yesterday. Dr. George F. Maddock of the commission said that Mrs. Glennon was undoubtedly insane, and that the commission would recommend that she be placed in an asylum.

LAWYER HELD BABY IN COURT.

Warren Dixon Thus Let Mother Show How Accident Happened.

Mrs. Annie Ames of 170 Bay Street, Jersey City, yesterday brought suit in the Supreme Court to recover $5,000 damages from the North Jersey Street Railway Company for injuries as the result of being thrown from one of the company's cars on June 19, 1899.

Mrs. Ames came to court carrying in her arms her baby boy. While she was showing the jury how the accident occurred it became necessary for some one to hold the baby. As no one else was available, Warren Dixon, her counsel, who is also Assistant United States District Attorney, volunteered his services. His friends in court declare that he performed the duty in a highly creditable manner. The baby was well behaved, but Mr. Dixon seemed gratified when Mrs. Ames relieved him of his charge. The trial was not finished.

SHOT IN A BOWERY HOTEL.

James Russell Likely to Die and His Assailant Not Arrested.

James Russell, twenty-four years old, a watchman, living at 19 Main Street, Brooklyn, was shot in the right eye in a fight in a rear room on the main floor of the Oregon Hotel, at 85 Bowery, last night. Russell was taken to Gouverneur Hospital, and is in a serious condition. The police of the Eldridge Street Police Station arrested five men and two women who were in the hotel at the time of the shooting.

The police were unable to learn much about the shooting at the hotel, or from the prisoners, but it was ascertained that a man known as "Buck" probably did the shooting. A detective learned that Russell and "Buck" had quarreled Thursday night in Essex Street, and that "Buck" had promised to "do up" Russell last night. "Buck" and ten other men entered the hotel last night and saw Russell sitting at a table." It is said that "Buck" walked up to where Russell was sitting and said, "Now I am going to do you." He then, it is alleged, pulled the revolver from his hip pocket and fired the shot. A Coroner was sent for last night to take Russell's ante-mortem statement.

"Buck" is twenty-three years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, and when last seen wore a black cheviot suit. An alarm has been sent out for him.

Topics of the Week.

An important book of biography is in preparation by Harper & Brothers, to be published some time before Spring. It is "Letters and Reminiscences of Robert E. Lee," by the son of the late commander of the Confederate forces, Capt. R. E. Lee. Capt. Lee has worked upon the volume for several years. An enormous mass of material has been examined—private journals, letters, family and Government records—and the result, it is said, will be the production of an ideal work of memoirs, authoritative and valuable as it will be graphic and picturesque. New light, it is believed, will be thrown upon the causes which governed the manœuvres of the Confederate Army during the closing days of the war.

"Paolo and Francesca," a dramatic tragedy in four acts, by Mr. Stephen Phillips, was published this week by John Lane. The story is based upon that well-known Italian tragedy of the Italian nobleese which has, since its occurrence, figured several time in literature and drama, but which is most beautifully and dramatically related in the fifth canto of Dante's "Inferno," through sixty lines beginning:

Quali colombe dal disio chiamate,

E caddi come corpo morte cade.

Mr. Phillips was comparatively unknown prior to his receiving the first prize in poetry offered by the Academy of London. His "Paolo and Francesca," which some time in the Spring will be produced on the stage, has received extensive criticism of approval in London. Mr. Sidney Colvin, for example, in the December number of The Nineteenth Century, devotes several pages to an elaborate review of the tragedy. It is rumored in literary circles over there that "Paolo and Francesca" will be crowned by the Academy this year. Certainly no publication so far this season has been received with so much respect and enthusiasm by British reviewers.

At the time that Stevenson's letters are being so generally read, attention should be called to the death of Dr. Charles M. Hyde of Honolulu, which has just occurred. It will be recalled that the doctor, for his attacks upon Father Damien, who sacrificed his life in behalf of the lepers of Molokai, was remorselessly arraigned by Robert Louis Stevenson in a letter, which first appeared in The National Observer, entitled "Father Damien." Stevenson in his usual quiet way began by saying that if nature had blessed him with a certain power to use words in the most scathing and denunciatory sequence, Dr. Hyde had furnished him with a most inspiring topic. A short time after the death of the writer it was rumored that Stevenson had recanted. We are able to state in the most positive manner possible that Robert Louis Stevenson never wished to modify in any way his utterances concerning the maligner of the martyr Damien.

At the urgent request of the heirs and publishers of the late Grant Allen, Mr. Edward Clodd has undertaken to write a memoir of the dead author. Persons who may have in their possession letters or other material which will be useful in the preparation of the work are requested to send them to the publisher, Grant Richards, 9 Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, where, we are told, every care will be taken of them, assuring their prompt return. Mr. Allen was a very prolific writer. The overflow of his work is now coming before the public. A new book of his, "Hilda Wade," will presently be published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The theme concerns a beautiful, intellectual young woman, who takes a position as nurse in a hospital in order to thwart the inhuman experiments of a great scientist, whom she believes to be an actual murderer.

Mr. Elliot Gregory, who recently returned to New York, his native city, after a long stay abroad, has written an article on the "Poetic Cabarets of Montmartre," which he has illustrated with his own sketches. It will appear in the January number of Scribner's Magazine. Mr. Gregory's volume of charming essays, entitled "Worldly Ways and By-Ways," although published about a year ago, has sold to the extent of over 4,000 copies, which must be taken as an excellent indication that the reading public is not entirely absorbed in the four or five novels of the year which have passed the 100,000 or the 200,000 mark. All readers of "Worldly Ways and By-Ways" perhaps do not know that Mr. Gregory had rank as an artist before he became an author. For those his Scribner sketches should have particular interest. With this article he makes his first attempt to illustrate his own work. We understand that Mr. Gregory in a drawer of his desk, in his studio up town near the Worth Monument, is secreting material that might make another volume of essays. Will he not please let some one publish it?

"The Story of Donald Kestral" has just appeared from the press of D. Appleton & Co. This is by A. J. Dawson, whose tale, "God's Foundling," excited comments of all sorts some time back. The action of the new novel passes in London society, in Morocco, and in the Australian bush. It is the story of a writer's life, in which the stages of his career are graphically depicted—the novitiate, the success, and the despair of genius. The spirit of the novel is intensely modern and abounds in active life and human interest. The characters are sharply drawn, and there is a successful attempt at mental analysis.

A unique volume is being prepared for the series of "Histories of Literature," which Mr. Gosse is editing for the Messrs. Heinemann of London. It will be entitled "Chinese Literature," by Dr. H. A. Giles, Professor of Chinese at the University of Cambridge. The next volume of the series will appear shortly after the Christmas holidays; it will be Prof. Macdonell's "Sanskrit Literature."

Mr. Eden Phillpotts is at work on a new novel, the publication of which has been secured by G. P. Putnam's Sons. It will be called "The Last of Her Line." Mr. Phillpotts's "Children of the Mist," already promoted by this house, continues to grow in popularity. It is now calling for its fourteenth edition. It is believed that the book will go to press for its fifteenth

GOLDWIN SMITH'S NEW WORK.

His "United Kingdom: A Political History," in Two Volumes.*

Reviewed for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW by

H. Morse Stephens, M. A., Oxford,
Professor of English and Modern European History at Cornell University.

Since Goldwin Smith during the first four years of the existence of Cornell University lectured in that institution upon English history, there seems to be a certain fitness in intrusting the consideration of his latest historical work, "A Political History of the United Kingdom," to one who is, like himself, an Englishman and a graduate of Oxford, and who has in a certain sense succeeded him at Cornell. The vigor and eloquence of Mr. Goldwin Smith's teaching left its mark deep upon the students of Cornell between 1868 and 1872; he was one of the distinguished band of teachers, men of science and men of letters, gathered by Andrew D. White to give an impulse to his new experiment in education; he has left traditions which have become a part of the university, and his generous gift of his own historical library was the forerunner of the still more splendid benefaction of President White. By frequent visits to Ithaca, Goldwin Smith has kept alive the recollection of his former connection with the university; he honored its Faculty by accepting the title of Emeritus Professor in 1894, and he has always generously encouraged the efforts made to maintain a high standard of history teaching there. It may be worth while to recall in this article some of the main facts in the long and noteworthy career of the Nestor of English historical writers, and to deal rather with the life and writings of Goldwin Smith, including an examination of his historical method and an estimate of his work as a historian, than to attempt a detailed review of his latest work. A thorough criticism would fill too many pages; a partial criticism of certain chapters or statements would be unfair to the author; a commentary upon his point of view would require at least as much space as his own volumes, and the reader is more likely to decide whether he wishes to read Mr. Smith's book or not from a knowledge of Mr. Smith's personality than from a summary of his form of arrangement of the well-known facts of English history.

"The friends who urged the writer to undertake this task know that it has been performed by the hand of extreme old age." With these words Mr. Goldwin Smith concludes the brief preface to his latest and most important historical work. It is true that some few historians have, like Ranke, continued their labors until long past the allotted years of a busy life, but it would be difficult to mention among them any writer who has at the age of seventy-six completed a book so remarkable for vigor of thought and vivacity of style as "The United Kingdom: A Political History." It is difficult to think of Mr. Goldwin Smith as a man in extreme old age, for his fighting qualities and the epigrammatic brilliancy of his language are as characteristically youthful as ever in his newly published volumes. Yet seventy-six is certainly a ripe old age, and writers are few, even in this age of "grand old men," who have the strength of mind and body to produce an elaborate historical work fifty-four years after their graduation from the university. Mr. Goldwin Smith was born at Reading, in Berkshire, England, in 1823, and received his school education at Eton, where he made many schoolboy acquaintances among men now known to fame in English political life. As a member first of Christ Church, and afterward of Magdalen College, Oxford, he had a successful academic career, winning the Hertford and Ireland Scholarships for classics, open to the whole university, as well as the university prizes for Latin verse, for the Latin essay and the English essay. He took his B. A. degree after obtaining a first class in classical honors in 1845, and was elected a Fellow of University College in 1846. As a successful Oxford tutor and a particularly brilliant Oxford scholar, he was well known throughout the university, when he was named Assistant Secretary to the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the existing condition of things in Oxford University in 1850. From the work of this commission has grown the new Oxford. The abuses of the old foundations were manifest and the result of the commission's work was the passing of the Oxford University Act in 1854. Under this act was appointed the celebrated Oxford Commission, which sat until 1858, with Goldwin Smith as Secretary, and reorganized both the university and the colleges to meet modern requirements. Though forty years have passed since the reorganization of Oxford, the echoes of the great controversy between the reformers, with their radical ideas for bringing Oxford down to date, and the conservatives, who hoped to maintain studies, methods, and habits of life as old and undigested as the college buildings themselves, have not yet died away. The difficult and young Secretary of the commission was held responsible for the changes that were effected, and the obloquy heaped upon him by his colleagues in the university first showed Goldwin Smith the personal and social disadvantage of being the spokesman of a minority with ideas in advance of its age. But if the Tories in the university resented the changes brought about, the statesmen employed upon the commission recognized the ability and clear sightedness of their Secretary, and in 1858, at the age of thirty-five, Goldwin Smith was nominated by the Government to be Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford.

This chair had been founded by George I. in 1724, with the idea of teaching Whig principles to the students at the Jacobite university, and the professorship as a royal foundation has since been a place of Government patronage. In this chair Goldwin Smith succeeded H. H. Vaughan, the successor to Thomas Arnold, and he tried to make its work a real force in the university. His eloquence and fascination as a lecturer are now only a tradition at Oxford, but the ideas he held as to the aims of the study of history at that time can be seen in his little volume, published in 1861, entitled, "Lectures on Modern History, Delivered in Oxford." Goldwin Smith, however, both as a professor and as a college tutor, refused to be a "mere don," and his keen interest in practical politics appeared in the work that he did as a member of the Popular Education Commission in 1858. He had already adopted the unpopular side in advocating the separation of England's colonies from the mother country in a series of letters to The London Daily News, which he published in 1863 in a volume with the title of "The Empire." But still more unpopular among the governing classes in England, and above all in Tory Oxford, was the position which Prof. Goldwin Smith took upon the great question of the civil war in America. With voice and pen he advocated the cause of the North, and he was, perhaps, next to John Bright, the most vigorous, consistent, and thorough-going exponent of the Northern idea on the English platform and in the English press. It was his sympathy with the North that led him to visit the United States in 1864, when he came into personal contact with President Lincoln and the great leaders of Northern thought. On his return to England he published a series of pamphlets, "England and America," "The Civil War in America," and "Experience of the American Commonwealth," and eventually in 1868 he resigned his professorship at Oxford and came to make his home on the American side of the Atlantic Ocean.

Though but forty-five when he abandoned Oxford and England, Goldwin Smith had already made a great reputation; his work at Oxford, for it was known that he was the stimulating force in the Oxford Commission, had left its mark on the university; his lectures on history had revealed the personality of an inspiring teacher; his political attitude, especially on colonial and American affairs, had shown him to be an independent thinker; his literary gifts had been made manifest in his various writings; and the charm of his conversation and the variety of his knowledge were such that when "Lothair" was published, in 1870, every one assumed that the somewhat spiteful portrait of the "young don" in that celebrated novel was intended by Benjamin Disraeli for Goldwin Smith. He was already then a most distinguished man when he joined the Faculty of Cornell University as Professor of English History upon its opening in 1868. A wider contrast between two educational institutions cannot be imagined than between the ancient University of Oxford and the new foundation of Ezra Cornell. But Goldwin Smith rejoiced more in things new than in things old, and he gave his earnest help to the experiment which Andrew D. White, his intimate friend, was attempting at Ithaca. Not only did the ex-professor at Oxford give his services and his advice to the new institution, but he presented it likewise with his own library of books on English history. That his name is honored by Cornell men goes without saying, for the countenance of such a man in the early days of the new university was felt as a special encouragement, and it established an abiding bond between Oxford and Cornell. In 1872 Prof. Goldwin Smith removed to Toronto, but he maintained his connection with Cornell as a non-resident lecturer, and for many years has continued to visit the university and to enrich its library. Of his later life in Canada it would be superfluous to say anything in this article. His well-known views as to the eventual union of the Dominion of Canada with the United States have not made him popular among his fellow-citizens. But it is characteristic of his courageous independence of mind, of his habit of being in opposition to the majority, and of his disdain for sentimentality, that he has continued to advocate his views with voice and pen where they are least appreciated. Whenever there is an unpopular cause to champion or a rebuke to be administered to some ugly Goldwin Smith is always ready to declare his views. Outside in a pungent criticism or a telling argument.

The years of his residence in Canada have been fruitful in literary production. Poetry, philosophy, criticism, literary biography, and history have all been exhibited by his prolific talent, but he has never ceased his active interest in politics, and he has followed the great political movements of the day in England, Canada, and the United States with keen but somewhat sorrowful interest. Just as he was no "mere don" at Oxford, so he has been no mere man of letters at Toronto. All his books abound in the reflections of one who has studied men and manners in many countries, and his historical works in particular are not only the writings of a historian, but of one who is a man of affairs and a man of letters as well. It is the publication of the latest of his historical works that has suggested this article, and it is now time to turn to a consideration of Mr. Goldwin Smith's other historical works, in order to show how from a study of them, as well as from a knowledge of his career and his personality, his "United Kingdom: A Political History" may best be understood and its value estimated.

It has already been stated that the appointment of Goldwin Smith to the Professorship of Modern History at Oxford at the age of thirty-five found him chiefly known from the conspicuous part he had taken as a university reformer. During his undergraduate days he had won deserved reputation as a classical scholar, but had done nothing to indicate special aptitude for historical work. The training which is now demanded of a historical teacher was unknown in England forty years ago, and it was not considered a scandal then, as it would be nowadays, to appoint as the representative of historical instruction in a great university a young man whose chief qualifications were a thorough knowledge of the classics and the zeal of an educational reformer. During the ten years of his tenure of the Chair of History, Goldwin Smith was much more interested in politics than in history, and his books, pamphlets, and newspaper articles dealt rather with burning questions of the present than with the history of the past.

His only publications of a historical nature were his "Lectures on Modern History," published in 1861, and his "Three English Statesmen: Pym, Cromwell, and Pitt," published in 1867. The latter of these volumes was a characteristic utterance of the author's ideas on history. To a student, trained as he had been in the classics, the ideas of the scientific school of history, with its earnest striving after truth for its own sake, were incomprehensible. To him the study of history meant the study of past politics, and in considering past politics he had always his thoughts fixed on their application to modern conditions. It is worthy of note that upon the title page of his latest work Mr. Goldwin Smith cites a sentence from the great English statesman whose career formed one of the topics of his first original contribution to history. "The best form of government," said John Pym, as cited by Goldwin Smith, "is that which doth actuate and inspire every part and member of a State to the common good." It is to the development of the State and to the political modifications wrought in States during the course of their history that Mr. Goldwin Smith, as a profound student of Aristotle, devotes his chief attention in his historical writings, and throughout them all he fixes the interest of his readers upon the explanation, given by history, of existing political conditions. He belongs in this respect to a school of historical writers of which he is the last survivor, a school which endeavored to explain the present by a knowledge of the past, a school which considered political in preference to social or economic problems, a school which did not consider the discovery of the truth as the one and only aim of the historian. It was a school, further, which regarded literary style as of greater importance than the historians of the modern scientific type are in the habit of doing, and which rejoiced to display the personality of the writer. These qualities in Mr. Goldwin Smith's earlier historical works were once more displayed when he again devoted himself to writing history in these latter days. For many years after his settlement in America his writings mainly dealt with current politics. He wrote upon the relations of England to Ireland, the relations of Canada to the mother country and to the United States, upon Socialistic fallacies, and upon other political and social subjects, with occasional diversions towards literary biography and criticism, as in his volumes on Cowper in the English Men of Letters Series and on Jane Austen in the Great Writers Series.

Five and twenty years after his resignation of his chair at Oxford and his settlement in America, Prof. Goldwin Smith made his reappearance as a historian, and in 1893 he published his volume on "The United States: An Outline of Political History 1492-1871." This volume did not gratify us as a history in the accepted modern acceptation of the term. It contributed no previous working up of ordinary historical material; it made no claim to any extended perspective or correct proportion; it did not aim at presenting novel views or supplying new documents; it contained narration of fact and reminiscence of travel, and it was undoubtedly intended to express the author's own individual political views. "If this book comes into the hands of an American," says the author in his preface, "his liberality will make allowance for the position of an Englishman who regards the American Commonwealth as the great embodiment of his race, and looks forward to the voluntary reunion of the Anglo-Saxon branches of the race within its pale, yet desires to do justice to the mother country, and to render to her the meed of gratitude which will always be her due." Mr. Goldwin Smith's book was immediately upon its publication recognized as being not indeed a valuable contribution to American history, but one of the most stimulating books ever written upon the United States. However much critics and general readers might differ as to the correctness of the author's views, no one could fail to be impressed by the originality of thought, the picturesqueness of style, and the sincerity of purpose, which shone through its pages. Eager expectation was therefore aroused when it was announced that Mr. Goldwin Smith had promised to follow up his political history of the United States with a political history of the United Kingdom. It was universally felt that a contribution of surpassing interest would be made, not to the knowledge but to the understanding of English history; it was a foregone matter that the literary style of a great master would be revealed once more upon the theme of his maturest reflections. It was everywhere recognized that the celebrated political controversialist of the present would be at home in treating the political controversies of the past. And lastly the author's long residence in Canada must have given him a singular equipment for a broad point of view. The title of his book showed that he was impressed with the fact that English history need not mean South British history; and the expansion of the English-speaking race was likely to obtain for a book written in America its proper recognition. He could deal more sympathetically with English history than a citizen of the United States could possibly do, while he had an advantage over the home-staying Englishman from his long residence in a colony, for, as Mr. Kipling says:

"What can he know of England, who only England knows?"

Most contrary have all these expectations been fulfilled. Mr. Goldwin Smith's "United Kingdom" must take rank as his masterpiece of literature. The task he set himself was far more difficult than the one which he attempted in his "United States"; the period covered is not only longer in point of years, but more complicated in its diversity; and the problem of what to omit must have been proportionately hard. There is not another writer to-day, whether he be trained historian or man of letters, who could have accomplished what Goldwin Smith has done in the space of a thousand medium-sized and broadly printed pages. Neither Bishop Stubbs, with his vast stores of erudition, nor Mr. S. R. Gardiner, with his specialist knowledge, patiently acquired by years of labor, of the seventeenth century, nor Mr. Lecky, with his philosophical method, could have compressed so readable a review of the whole length of English history. The only book which can possibly be compared to Goldwin Smith's admirable production is Mr. John Richard Green's "Short History of the English People." That remarkable book, published just twenty-five years ago, appealed, like Mr. Goldwin Smith's volumes, to the general reader. In many respects the two books deserve to stand side by side. Both are written with a master's grasp of the English language; both reveal the traits of genius in presenting intelligible pictures in a few well-chosen words, with an avoidance of detail; both are intended to stimulate thought rather than to prepare the way for further investigation, and both are written for the general reader and not for the scholar or the specialist. But the points of contrast between these two great books are as marked as their points of resemblance. Mr. Green deals, as his title indicates, with the history of the English people, and Mr. Goldwin Smith with the history of the English state. Mr. Green's most fascinating and fanciful pages are devoted to Anglo-Saxon history, and his work falls off both in knowledge and in vigor when he passes the crisis of the great civil war in the seventeenth century, while Mr. Goldwin Smith gets rid of the story of England before the Norman conquest in fifteen pages, and is at his best in his last 250 pages, dealing with the history of the United Kingdom from 1760, and ending with a summary of the new political conditions involved in the expansion of England's empire. Both books have an index that gives the references of their value; they are invaluable secondary sources of information, but they are not primary authorities. Mr. Green's book is more vivid and more readable, but Mr. Goldwin Smith's book will be found more trustworthy and more suggestive.

It has been said that Goldwin Smith's new book appeals to the general reader. For educational purposes it must be regarded as almost absolutely unadapted. It contains neither footnotes nor references to authorities; it makes no effort to discuss mooted and difficult problems; it supplies none of the bibliographical information rightly demanded by the historical student; it avoids topics demanding technical knowledge, and it is free from the minute discussions of detail which scare the general reader so much up they delight the scholar. In its style, no less than in its method of treatment, Mr. Goldwin Smith in his latest book appeals to the general reader. He is one of the last of the great masters of English prose style who were nurtured on the Greek and Latin classics. In directness of statement and epigrammatic brilliancy of style he has surpassed even himself in his latest book. There is not a dull page throughout his volumes, and the old age, to which he so pathetically alludes in his preface, shows no trace in its vigorous sentences. It is but too certain that none of the great living English historians can be compared with him as a writer of the English language, and the great excellence of his work lies in the fact that to him transmuted the results of their labors and their discoveries into a form that can be appreciated and enjoyed by every educated reader. But Mr. Goldwin Smith is no mere compiler of secondary history, no mere reporter of the ideas of other men. Of him, as perhaps of no other English writer of the present time, is the saying of the famous French critic "Le style est l'homme" most absolutely true. The personality of Goldwin Smith, that personality which it has been in part the aim of this article to explain through a summary of his personal and literary career, shines through on every page, and the independent thinker and great writer embodies the results of other men's researches in such fashion as to make them characteristically his own. It may be added that it is an especial pleasure for a contributor to Goldwin Smith to the professorial Chair of English History at Cornell to be able to bear testimony to the undiminished vitality of his predecessor's genius, and this article may fitly conclude with the expression of the hope that still greater length of years may be vouchsafed to the distinguished writer to full health and mental vigor, since for Goldwin Smith, to use the words of the old Oxford "leading prayer" which he must well remember, all Cornell men, whether among Faculty, alumni, or students, "are duly bound to pray."

"Cleanliness Next to Godliness."

The letter in last week's TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW from the Hon. James D. Porter, who was Assistant Secretary of State under Mr. Hayard in Cleveland's first Cabinet, saying he as well as Mr. Choate had made the error of attributing the saying "Cleanliness is next to godliness" to the Bible, has called out the following interesting letters.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

In your issue of to-day James D. Porter asks the origin of the saying "Cleanliness is next to godliness." I sought that saying at various times for ten years, but sought in vain, until a friend found it for me in the Talmud, as it is evidently an old Jewish saying. I have heard many a one ascribe its origin to Holy Writ.

EDMUND A. ANGELL.

New York, Dec. 9, 1899.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

In response to the request for light upon the quotation, "Cleanliness is next (or akin) to godliness," I inclose a clipping from my scrapbook which I have had therein for at least twenty-five years. I believe it was taken from the "Question and Answer" column of The Journal of Commerce.

"The sentiment is often quoted as sacred Scripture, and indeed we need not wonder since it was written by a Hebrew, and is older than many parts of the Bible. It first appears in Ecclesiasticus, as the last Mishnah of Sota, Chapter IX. It is afterward found in other Hebrew works, from one of which that learned rabbi, the Rev. Dr. Bartholdy, gives the following translation: 'Purification leads to piety' says the doctrine of religion are resolved into (or are next to) carefulness, carefulness into temperance, temperance into guiltlessness, guiltlessness into chastenedness, chastenedness into cleanliness, cleanliness into godliness (or holiness), &c.' The wording of the original is that cleanliness is next to or akin to would perhaps by a closer rendering godliness or holiness. We have an old Latin rendering of the same, which for many years we took to be the original, until we discovered the earlier authority. For the benefit of the uninformed we may add that 'Mishna' (from the Hebrew 'Shanah' to repeat) is used to describe a collection of Jewish traditions and explanations of Scripture, and the oft-quoted sentence made its first appearance, as we have said, in such a work."

RICHARD T. DAVIES.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Noting the letter of ex-Gov. James D. Porter in the last issue of your SATURDAY REVIEW and also your reference to it in today's TIMES, I am confident of having read that "cleanliness is next to godliness" as an original sentence either in "Handy Andy" or in "Tristram Shandy." Having neither volume at hand, I cannot verify my impression. Certainly that familiar quotation is frequently used by learned and unlearned alike as from "the Bible." "Rules of speech" of course exhibit themselves without wishing to extemporize speech.

Tennyson's Writings and the Memoirs Complete.*

There are two reasons why the Macmillan Company should be congratulated in combining "The Memoirs of Tennyson," written by his son, with a convenient and valuable edition of the poet's works. In the first place, it puts the former within the reach of a larger and possibly more worthy public than the original elaborate edition of "The Memoirs" appealed to; and in the second place, the instruction offered in the pages of "The Memoirs" makes the work of the son an invaluable commentary on the poems themselves.

It has possibly been pointed out that "The Memoirs," which occupy the first four volumes of the edition at hand, do not compose a biography in the general acceptation of the word; nor, indeed, are they like any work of memoirs with which we are acquainted. Alfred, Lord Tennyson, lived a round, full life, but in all that he did, in all that he believed or conceived, his career, if whatever conditions surrounded him or whatever influences moved him, was never separated from his art. He was everywhere and at all times the ideal poet. It is for this reason, therefore, that any true story of his life must be absolutely identified with the origin, expression, and development of his verse.

To present such memoirs the son has called many and varied resources to his aid. His own journal may possibly be said to form the background to the scenes which are filled in with letters, reported conversations, reminiscences obtained from a multitude of sources, and extracts from reviews and from other memoirs that tend to explain or to emphasize incidents and events in the life of the poet that were important to himself or to others. Two examples will suffice to show how elaborately this treatment has been carried out. A description of the visit made by Dr. Holmes to the poet in 1866 is augmented by a footnote containing extracts from the doctor's "Hundred Days in Europe," wherein we learn what the impressions of the genial Autocrat were. Again, to the brief account of Miss Mary Anderson's visit in 1886 is appended an interesting account of the visit taken from her own "Memoirs."

The intimate character of much that is contained in the present Lord Tennyson's work is emphasized by the interpolation in the text of about a hundred hitherto unpublished poems. In short, the volumes of "Memoirs" are what the memoirs of such a man ought to be who appealed to and who was touched by humanity at so many and varied points. The index at the end of the fourth volume contains back references to every significant fact mentioned, however trivially, in the text. A mere glance through the list of items will strongly impress one. Names great in the history of the nineteenth century appear there, members of almost every profession who have achieved greatness in their chosen callings, names of the nobility and of royalty extending even to the Queen and Empress. No person seemed too humble to gain the attention of the poet, and no personage seemed too exalted to pay him homage.

The last six volumes of the set before us contain the poems, arranged, for the most part, in chronological order. The portraits of the poet, particularly those that serve as frontispieces, are also made to follow this scheme. Among the illustrations certain photogravure reproductions especially appeal to one—for example, the reproductions of the portraits painted by Samuel Laurence and G. F. Watts, R. A., and the engravings made from photographs taken by O. G. Rejlander, John Mayall, Mrs. Julia Margaret Causeron, and others. The entire work, too, is presented in a manner that does credit alike to the biographer and the publisher.

Historic British Homes.*

The writers whose work is presented in "Famous Homes of Great Britain" have contributed a genuine service to the more personal history of the United Kingdom. How often the names of "Belvoir," "Warwick," "Cawdor Castle," and "Battle Abbey" appear upon the pages of English history so full of the achievements of individuals and families, and yet how little is known of these great mansions, whose inmates once made the history we are reading and trying, perhaps in vain, to comprehend! In the volume before us these "homes" are written about for the most part by their present owners. We are taken into familiar confidences, and are presented with charming bits of family history that it has never been the fortune of the guidebook scribe to secure. Thus the present Duke of Marlborough has written the article on "Blenheim"; Viscount Emlyn, the article on "Cawdor Castle"; the Duchess of Cleveland, "Battle Abbey"; the Dowager Lady Newton, "Lyme"; Lady de L'Isle and Dudley, "Penhurst," and the Countess of Warwick, "Warwick Castle."

Before venturing to indicate what these distinguished authors have to say concerning their ancestral seats it seems appropriate to mention the illustrations of the work, which vastly enhance its value and interest. The frontispiece is a photogravure showing the exterior of Alnwick Castle—a morning view of the south front. In the pages that follow are half-tone reproductions of photographs showing exteriors, halls, courts, saloons, chambers, guard rooms, libraries, stationary, and paintings of the mansions described. Over thirty pictures accompany the article by the Duke of Marlborough concerning "Blenheim and Its Memories," which probably occupies the most attractive pages in the book. Quite naturally this article chiefly concerns itself with the associations of the great Duke, and includes the fac simile reproductions of part of a love letter written by John Churchill, he who was later to become the first Duke, to Sarah Jennings; of two letters of Alexander Pope to the Duchess, and the copy of a letter by Richard Steele addressed to the same lady. "Probably," remarks the present Duke, referring to the beginning of one of the letters, "the Duchess was too clever to be deceived by Pope's cunning, by being addressed as 'Doctress in Divinity,' and being told of 'Your Grace's ghostly father, Socrates.' At any rate, Pope had his revenge, and helped to perpetuate the popular opinion of a woman at whose pettiness it is as easy to laugh as it is difficult to find a parallel to her ability." There, too, there are copies of letters from the first Duchess to her husband and to the Duke of Somerset, all ill-spelled, but revealing in every line the character of the writer.

Americans who have followed the career of the present Countess of Warwick will be interested to read what the chatelaine of Warwick Castle has to say concerning it. Here again we have another phase of intimacy expressed, which is different in character from that noted above, although quite as charming. Here at once the reader is made aware that it is a student well versed in feudal architecture who is writing. The Castle is technically yet entertainingly described, but it is not until the part that Warwick has played in English history is explained that the Countess becomes confidential concerning her husband's ancestry. But even here the impression is not weakened that we are reading the effort of a trained writer who has gone about her work with a preconceived plan and an idea of knowing just what to say and how to say it.

The article on "Holland House"—that mansion in Kensington which played such an important part in the social and political life of two centuries—is written by the Hon. Caroline Roche. Holland House is so intimately associated with the Whig politicians during the life of the late Lord Holland as it was with the intrigues of the Courts of the Georges. It was here that the youthful King George III. attempted to attract the attention of Lady Sarah Lennox, who afterward, it was said, jilted her royal lover. But, with whatever memories of the past the mansion may be filled, its architecture was never one of its strong points. Sir Walter Scott once wrote that "it resembles many respectable matrons, who, having been absolutely ugly during youth, acquire by age an air of dignity."

The articles on "Inwick Castle," "Chatsworth," "Hardwick Hall," and "Belvoir Castle" are by A. H. Malan, who in preparing his material has enjoyed many special privileges. "Charlecote," associated with the tradition of Shakespeare's deer stealing, is the work of Richard Davey.

Taken all in all, "Famous Homes of Great Britain," with its beautiful pictures, fills a gap in the history of English families and English history, which, because of the identity of the writers, is made especially important in our own time.

*"FAMOUS HOMES OF GREAT BRITAIN. Edited by A. H. Malan. Elaborately illustrated. Large octavo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $7.50.

The Recovery of Pompeii.*

The eighteen silent centuries that have enshrouded the lost life and mystery of Pompeii have at length been made to speak in no uncertain voice. It is almost as though the city had come to live again in all its throbbing existence and color and light—an illusion made possible through the genius of a German savant, Dr. August Mau.

To be sure, Pompeii has an extensive bibliography that during the century or so of excavations has gradually built itself up around the known facts that were being revealed year by year. There have been monographs written, mostly in German, French, and Italian, on the architecture, the mural paintings, the houses, and the market place of Pompeii, and occasionally an author has from the material gathered attempted, with more or less success, to give a picture of the actual life of the city just previous to the calamity that overwhelmed it on that August day 1,830 years ago. But the books that have been published on the subject, both for the most part not readily accessible to the English or American student, deal with such a variety of themes, and are so uneven as regards scholarship, that even if one were able to read them all the city could hardly be made to live again before one's eyes. Although the work by Dr. Mau cannot but appeal to specialists in the various phases of his subject, he has so happily combined all known results with his own broad experience extending over a quarter of a century that "Pompeii: Its Life and Art" forms the most complete and trustworthy story of the buried city, its ancient culture, its arts and industries, its gradual uncovering of itself to modern eyes, that has ever been written in any language. And it is a compliment to American scholarship no less than to American enterprise that the translation of the work has been permitted to appear before the publication of the book in German. Prof. Kelsey, who made his translation direct from Dr. Mau's manuscript, should be congratulated also for his beautiful and scholarly interpretation.

The book is admirably arranged in every particular, and the pictures, some photogravures, some half-tones of reconstruction, and some fine drawings of plans are most valuable. The introduction briefly sketches the situation and history of the Campanian city previous to the catastrophe. For some reason or other people have been prone to believe that the city was buried beneath tons of hot ashes, if not by the actual lava thrown up from the crater of Vesuvius influenced, no doubt, by the tales of fiction in which this annihilation of a complete community grew rife, the reading public has not always stopped to consider the inconsistency between these theories and the fact that the remains of human bodies discovered amid the ruins were perfectly molded, and that some of the mural paintings still retain their original colors—things impossible had showers of hot ashes engulfed the place. To be sure the woodwork of some of the buildings has been found in a charred condition, but it will be seen that this is easily explicable on other grounds. Says Dr. Mau:

> With the ashes copious rain must have fallen, for the bodies of those who perished in the storm of ashes left perfect molds, into a number of which cast plaster of paris has been poured, making those casts of human figures which lend a melancholy interest to the collections in the little museum at Pompeii. The extraordinary freshness of these figures, without any suggestion of the crushing away after death in consequence of the crushing away after death in consequence of the weighing down upon them, and so completely immediately to harden into a permanent shape.

The author concludes therefore that the evidences of burial conflagrations that have been discovered simply indicate the presence of masses of glowing slag in the ashes or the effect of fires left burning in the houses. The last chapter of the introduction gives a careful description of the architectural periods which made their influence felt in Pompeii, and the student is ready for the work of excavation to be followed by that of reconstruction. The forum and its surrounding public buildings are described in the light of the most recent research.

It is impossible even to touch upon the many and varied points of knowledge that the life labor of Dr. Mau has brought forth, the new and rational theories that he has set up, or the clinging fallacies that he has swept away. There is one point, however, upon which we must dwell for a moment, for it settles a much disputed question concerning the use of the stage in the Greek theatre. Dr. William Dorpfeld has contended that the stage first came into existence in the Roman period, when there was no longer any chorus, and that a platform five feet high was then built for the actors, extending into the middle of the orchestra, which in turn was occupied by the seats of the spectators. This theory Dr. Mau shows to be erroneous. The theatre at Pompeii was built at least a century before the oldest Roman theatre, and its ruins reveal the presence of a stage three feet high, which was accessible by steps, thus showing that the actors descended to the chorus when required so to do by the ancient Greek plays that were at times produced on the Pompeian stage.

Space will not permit further comment of this work, yet it will be well to bear in mind that, while its technical descriptions and criticism of the excavations leave nothing to be desired on the part of the specialist, the graphic treatment of the subject and the marvelous skill with which the city is reconstructed and made to throb with the life of former days have a splendid interest and instruction for the general reader whose imagination is awakened and who welcomes assistance in his bid by histories of dead civilizations.

HOLIDAY BOOKS.

Howells's text, forms one of the most appropriate gift books of the season. As for the story itself: admirers of this author's art will find nothing that will cause to waver their former appreciation. The peculiar literary method of Mr. Howells is now an established institution in American letters, and to criticise his latest book, which in point of view, movement, and incident, is in no wise different from the novels which provoked his early fame, would be both superfluous and impertinent.

Mr. Howells's people are very nice people, with delicately strung consciences, a naïve desire to make confidences, and the happy knack of expressing the simplest ideas in the most subtle figures of speech, possessing all the exasperating charm of mental riddles. The people given us in "Their Silver Wedding Journey" easily maintain the reputation of their prototypes in former novels. And, when their mental activity seems for a moment to be losing its grip, the author comes to their rescue. Mr. Howells as a fabricator of startling phrases is as adroit and alert as ever: "—— March asked with an obscure resentment," "She made a little petted mouth of deprecation," again, "She clutched her husband's arm and stayed him in rich conjecture," while certain luggage is spoken of as having "an effect of polite experience." All this is charming and keeps the guessing faculty of the reader at high tension.

But with all his foibles, which time has come to smooth out into the mere mannerisms of genius, Mr. Howells is as quietly entertaining as ever. The small world of a transatlantic liner, with its monotony of little happenings, is given us full of life and the joy of living. The young people who are destined for marriage—beyond the pages of the book—approach each other with proper decorum. The courtship moves with the regularity of well-oiled and delicate machinery, and, like a delicate machine, a tiny clog throws it out of order for the time. Mr. Howells's pictures are small, but he works in his details with such cunning care that every atom has its part, and that part is always interesting. And—how marvelously well he does it all!

Miss Cary's "Browning, Poet and Man."*

Miss Cary has written a fit companion to her admirable book on Tennyson published last year, and the publishers have made it a joy to the eye, in its binding, paper, type, and illustrations.

If the delightful volume cannot be said to supply "a long-felt want," it certainly supplies a long existent want which, perhaps, we have been too stupid to feel. Now that Miss Cary has divined and supplied the need, we perceive that hers is the one book which no lover of Browning, and none who wish to love him, can possibly do without. Her style is so full of ease and grace that the casual reader will scarcely appreciate the difficulty of the task she has triumphantly accomplished; the enormous amount of material mastered, and the fine selective skill which has resulted in this fascinating "survey." She has compressed into something less than three hundred pages all that really needs to be known of the poet's life, with one chapter devoted to Elizabeth Barrett and another to that story of married love of which the world never grows weary. She gives succinct and elucidating criticisms of the principal poems, glancing at them in their order of composition, as well as grouping them in relation to their subjects. She gives an exposition of the poet's ethical teaching, and adds copious quotations from contemporary critics, French as well as English. To all this is added an account of the principal Browning societies, with an excellently balanced judgment of the value and the disadvantage of their work to the poet's reputation.

Indeed, in a certain sense, Miss Cary's book is intended to protect Browning from his friends. While the Browning societies have explained obscure passages and have illuminated for their members the poet's meanings, they have undoubtedly frightened away a large public that is his right. "What!" says the plain-minded reader, "when the strenuous study of a whole society is needed in order to understand Browning, can I, a single individual, hope to gain anything from him by the mere reading?" And so thousands to whom he would have been an inspiration have passed by on the other side, leaving him to the Browning societies. This is the tendency Miss Cary deprecates. She says in her modest preface: "If I strengthen in any degree the feeling that Browning's poetry is to be read like that of other poets, not as a task, but for the reader's pleasure, I shall be content." How perfectly she succeeds in her aim, let her book testify. Apropos of the laborious elucidations of the Browning societies, she slyly tells an apt anecdote: "The readers who love Browning for Browning's sake are reminded of the Judge who having intimated to the defendant's counsel that the case would probably go in his favor was yet obliged to listen to a long argument on the side of the defense. 'Nevertheless,' said the Judge at the end, 'the Court is still with you!' The Court is still with Browning, certainly, but whether because or in spite of the efforts of the Browning societies can hardly be determined satisfactorily."

We note in passing a little slip of the writer's memory or pen—on Page 14 a quotation from Rabbi Ben Ezra being accredited to Abt Vogler—a mote in the sunbeam of the accuracy of the work.

The volume is enriched with twenty-five photogravures of great interest. The face of the youthful Browning fairly radiates poetry, while in all the later portraits the poet seems sedulously concealed under the "wesen" of the man of affairs. Only in Mrs. Cameron's photograph is the seer made to reveal himself. Who else, by the bye, ever photographed the soul? Of Mrs. Browning we have at last a satisfying portrayal, spiritual and charming, wholly unlike the drawn, sickly countenance painfully familiar. There is a fine face of John Morley, and we welcome Mrs. Cameron's Tennyson and her wonderful Carlyle. To these are added other portraits and various places associated with the poet.

Not the least gift Miss Cary bestows is a fresh appreciation of Browning the man—one of the few men who gain something from every revelation, even the most intimate. "What you are speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say," exclaims Emerson—true, alas, of a long line of preachers of righteousness since the son of Beor. But what Browning was adds new strength to the voice that more and more we perceive to have been freighted with a message for the ages.

*BROWNING, POET AND MAN. A Survey. By Elizabeth Luther Cary. Illustrated. G. P. Putnam's Sons. $3.75.

Among English Hedgerows.*

In his interesting preface Mr. Mable reminds us that there is a "race memory" as well as an individual memory, and that the country in which "a race has once lived, whose fields it has tilled, and whose cities it has built, can never be quite unfamiliar to the children of its makers." This accounts, he thinks, for the pleasure with which we read books about English life and English landscape. Undoubtedly it is true to an extent, but our cisatlantic sentiment has been strained to the utmost by some of the travelers who have been inspired to write commonplace books about commonplace experiences at Stratford or in Lincolnshire or in the Lake country. Mr. Johnson's title, in itself so felicitous, is at the same time perilously suggestive of these other books, in which a superficial observation has supplied the text for indifferently pretty pictures of English hamlets and roadsides, seen by a Kodak from the vantage ground of a travel-stained bicycle. It is, therefore, a satisfaction to find so much good meat in these descriptions of rural life, with its simple, monotonous, and ceremonially dull and mean routine. The author has been curious about significant, not insignificant, details, and whether his background is flat and shabby colored, as in his picture of the Gray Goose Inn, or charmingly picturesque, as in the description of "A Springtime Walk," we feel that he adds to our knowledge of the real world. He tells us, pleasantly enough, of the dark, rich color of English foliage, of the velvety grass fields and tangled lines of hedges, of tiny, wayward footpaths through the wheat patches, of swallows and rooks and daws and blackbirds and lapwings and skylarks, but he also tells us of the laborer's wages, of his meal times, the food he eats, and the clothes he wears, and of life in the collieries, of weddings and funerals, and market days, of the churches and the types of sermon preached by the clergy of different denominations, of game and game laws, of farm tools and machinery, of cricket and hop-picking, of chimney sweeping, and the customs of country drinking houses. He has made the acquaintance of sextons and shoemakers, ploughmen and farmers and shepherds, and he reports their conversation without superfluous comment and with a keen appreciation.

In most of the villages he found great sociability among the inhabitants, and the "publics" are perhaps the most important institution to be noted. "The ordinary English inn," he says, "is something half way between a hotel and a saloon. Only on occasional use will take customers, yet while the main business is confined to selling liquors, an important item of trade consists in serving the traveling public with light lunches. Many landlords do better still, and will set forth an elaborate dinner when it is called for. But above all else the inn as an institution is notable for the unanimity with which its bar and taproom draw to themselves the local population. The inn is the villagers' chief public meeting place, the centre of the community socially, and as such possesses special interest." The clean Chaucerian figure, standing for the general type and a barrel of beer and "quantities of other liquors" every day, yet the village in which it was situated was "a very quiet little hamlet of hardly a dozen houses, with a prominent farming country round about of green fields and hedgerows and scattered dwellings." The hour for closing is 10 o'clock, a rule universally enforced, and before this time the visitors make way with from two to eight pints of beer apiece, cost of a wage of 30s. a week the laborer with a large family to support must nevertheless indulge to his drink.

Mr. Johnson's photographic aid much to the attractiveness of his volume. They are well-chosen and well-taken, but they are not at all the book's excuse for being. Without them it would still be in itself an admirable picture of scenes of interest of a land "that really owns the attractions of antiquity." The style is direct and unpretending, the author succeeds in impressing his own enjoyment of scenes and characters in his readers, and as an observer he is to be encouraged.

have made a deep but not a very definite impression upon the popular mind. A troubadour is commonly conceived as a picturesque figure not associated with any especial country, race, or history, his songs possessing a sentimental interest without representing his individuality. To reconstruct him as nearly as possible as he really was, surrounded by his actual environment and set against his true historic background, is the purpose of Prof. Smith's book, and certainly no pains have been spared in qualifying for the task. The author has consulted a large number of authorities, basing his account upon the conclusions of that "body of scientific Provençal scholarship represented by 'Romania,' the 'Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie,' and a few other periodicals in France, Germany, and Italy," and not upon old ideas or "popular" writers; he has traveled over the ground most closely connected with the lives of the more notable troubadours to gain the local color of the charming Provençal region; he has photographed the characteristic details of such delightful old towns as Tornac, Anduze, Beauville, Gaillac, each of them identified with romantic episodes; he has translated specimens of troubadour poetry, with authentic illustrations of the music to which it was sung, and he has imparted his information with very little, perhaps with too little, of what is called the "historical style," endeavoring rather to appeal to the general reader with an easy and colloquial fluency that hardly does justice to the real sobriety of his effort. For the benefit of those who wish either to verify his impressions or to go deeper into the subject, he has given a copious list of his sources, and has arranged his various indexes with a somewhat cumbersome but praiseworthy particularity, and upon a systematic plan. He has no new theory to support, but has tried to gather and present in a readable form "facts already established by investigators." The notes, which are very full, supplement and in a sense dignify the text by their precision of statement and by the authority of their contents.

In a work of this sort it is, of course, impossible to sustain an even pitch of interest throughout. The troubadours were as different one from another as the poets and musicians of our own day. Some of them like Guilhem de Cabestaing, Pons de Capdueih, Marcabru, and Bernart de Ventadorn, were men of more than ordinary mark, and the record of their adventures has the true flavor of romance, suggesting not merely impetuous words and deeds, but individual genius, old thoughts run into an original mold, and depth or solidity of character. Others, like Peire Raimon and Peire d'Alvernhe, were commonplace and dull, and their peaceful piping has no special charm about it. Their principal use in the book is to illustrate the manners and customs of their time and country. Some of these are sufficiently odd in the light of the present order.

"The towns have many curious usages," a troubadour announces in an imaginary conversation with the author. "At Montpellier a man who lends money at interest cannot testify in court; a debtor compelled by process of law to pay is fined a third as much as he owed; no alloys of gold or silver are tolerated; no unreasonable agreement, even in writing, can stand; a woman, unless a widow, cannot marry without the consent of her parents or kin; shaking hands makes a bargain legal; none but citizens can dye woolens or sell more of them than they can carry on their persons; in wedding processions torches and open candles cannot be displayed and there can be no music but trumpets; the bridegroom is allowed neither garments of silk nor a shirt worked with gold, silver, or pearls; wedding presents are rigidly limited, and the procession cannot include more than twenty persons besides the two households. At Limoges a betrothal is celebrated by the relatives with a banquet of bread, cheese, salt, pepper, an ordinary wine, and when it is time to try on the bridal crown the young man may invite three or four friends to the lady's home and give at his own expense another modest banquet. This is all that may be done. The money to be spent for each part of the trousseau is fixed by law, and an outfit that disregards the rigid limits is publicly burned. At the wedding feast pastry is not allowed, or even roast meat. Neither are those who marry controlled more strictly than others; for example, a baker who cheats is hung at the end of a pivoted pole and dipped a sufficient number of times in a dirty pool."

The rules of etiquette were minute, and a well-bred lady took food only with her thumb and two fingers and was careful "not to drink before her mouth was clear." The requisites for a fine supper were as admirable as those we find to-day in George Meredith's novels—"1, a suitable hour, neither early nor late; 2, a safe, pleasant, and ample space; 3, an air of good humor and liberality on the part of the host; 4, a plenty of viands, so that the guest might please his taste; 5, a variety of drinks; 6, willing servants; 7, agreeable and friendly company; 8, pleasant music; 9, a plenty of lights; 10, delicate and fine cooking; 11, a seasonable conclusion; 12, quiet and repose afterward." The rules for lovemaking were as carefully formulated as any and as binding. In considering the relation between the troubadour and his lady, the author reminds us that much of the ordinary love-poetry fashionable between the eleventh and fourteenth centuries was merely poetry of compliment "in return for what was, in effect, pay," and also that the ideal of "courtly love," as it was called, when honorably carried out, was high enough, involving the most chivalric and unselfish devotion on the part of the troubadour. On the other hand, the ideal was one that could seldom be entirely carried out, and recommended on its formal side [illegible] and as its conditions [illegible] of poetry marked by a fine accord between the substance and the form.

Comment on the technical excellences of Prof. Smith's work must be left to specialists, but its value as a serious and careful attempt to illustrate one of the most fascinating and romantic pages in the history of literature can hardly be denied.

Poussin's Life and Work.*

That Nicolas Poussin never "biased" in spite of his admirable qualities as a painter is probably due to the fact that he was essentially a literary painter. His present biographer says that he "reasoned more than he observed," that he "became absorbed in his studies of ancient and Renaissance masters, and, although he loved nature and sought truth, these scholastic pursuits hindered intimate contact with living things." In other words, he followed too closely the letter that killeth. Hence his pictures, despite the beauty of their execution and the nobility of their conception, leave us cold.

Desiring above everything perfection in his art, he failed to attain the imperfection essential to what we call charm. "I have neglected nothing," was his modest boast in response to an inquiry as to how he had reached his place among the greatest artists even of Italy, and it is partly owing to this conscientiousness that he missed in his work the personal note that often fills acceptably the place of genius.

Nevertheless his art was in one respect almost revolutionary. In his fondness for and treatment of landscape he so far surpassed his contemporaries and immediate predecessors as to make it his individual field. His studies, made in the direction straight enough from nature and with a certain enthusiasm not seen in his figure painting, show the strength of his talent when he was driven upon himself. We think of him now as a landscapist because among all his subjects, historical, religious, or genre, landscape is what he saw with his own eyes alone and painted according to his own fancy, having but the scene and his imagination to work with.

The fact that he was an intensely self-conscious painter, continually reminding himself of the importance and dignity of his vocation, gave him what is frequently called an "elevated style." His sense of tactile values was so strong that much of his work suggests sculpture, and his method of developing his theme emphasized this effect. "From the time of his first residence in Rome," his biographer states, "he had employed wax models for groups in pictures. After he had conceived a subject, he made a sketch of such a nature as to afford him an idea of the whole composition. Then he shaped wax models, about half a hand high, of all the figures, and arranged them so as to show the theme in relief, in order that he might see light and shade effects on their bodies. Afterward he made other larger models of his figures and clothed them, that he might notice the disposition and fall of the folds over the nude. To this end he used fine linen or wet muslin to secure the shading and values. He formed the drapery on his mannikins with a pointed stick; then, taking soft wax, gave them hands, feet, and heads, or made out of other pieces angels, buildings, and ornaments, all most skillfully and with great tranquillity."

Color he used sparingly, fearing to so much persuade the eye as to distract attention from the idea represented in the painting. He had many theories and expressed them in letters to friends, but the writings upon art, with which he has often been credited, do not exist. It was his sensible conviction that "so long as precepts are not put into action they cannot produce a habit of work whose result is skill," and by this conviction he consistently lived, following out systematically the methods he advocated, with remarkably few changes in style. Thus, although possessed of scanty originality, and lacking the exuberant vitality of the greater Renaissance masters whom he followed, his sincerity and dignity gave his work a considerable [illegible]

Naturally [illegible] was so regular and [illegible] considered as his painting containing no great vicissitudes or startling events. He was always in delicate health often suffering greatly, and in early life he was very poor, [illegible] hardships which he was ill-fitted to bear, and frequently dependent upon the generosity of friends. Fortunately he married young a woman who was devoted to him, and whom when she died after thirty-four years of almost unbroken companionship he mourned with pitiful intensity. Nowadays, his biographer declares, it is easier to find fault with his work than with his character. He was free from avarice, scrupulous in his dealings with others, true to his friends, and deeply affectionate. In his later life he grew melancholy with illness, but his strong will enabled him to paint almost until the end.

The author has shown great industry and enthusiasm in preparing her monograph, and has made use of many original authorities. She states in her preface that Maria Graham's "Memoirs of the Life of Nicholas Poussin" has hitherto been the only authority on the subject in English, and her own idea has been not to recount old facts, "as if they had been freshly discovered," but "if possible, to contribute some fresh material and to attain a better standard by which to measure Poussin's real worth and importance." The appendix contains documents relating to the Poussin family and to Poussin's death, and some selections from his observations on painting. There are also a bibliography and two catalogues of his paintings, one arranged with reference to the galleries, the other with reference to subjects, and with the names of engravers who have reproduced his work. The only fault to be found with the book as a biography is the somewhat disconnected and confused way in which the facts are brought together, as if the writer had not spent enough time on arrangement of her material after obtaining it, or else had not let it ripen quite long enough in her mind. Style is a work of this sort, however, is

A History of American Privateers.

By EDGAR STANTON MACLAY, A. M., author of "A History of the United States Navy." Uniform with "A History of the United States Navy." One volume. Illustrated. 8vo. Price $3.50.

By Edgar Stanton Maclay.

After several years of research the distinguished historian of American sea power presents the first comprehensive account of one of the most picturesque and absorbing phases of our maritime warfare. From forgotten monographs, the records of historical societies, from unpublished logbooks, and from descendants of noted privateersmen, he has obtained intimate and vivid accounts of the fitting out of the vessels, the incidents of their voyages, and the thrilling adventures of the brave sailors who manned them. Mr. Maclay's romantic tale is accompanied by reproductions of contemporary pictures, portraits, and documents, and also by illustrations by Mr. George Gibbs.

The White Terror.

A Romance by FÉLIX GRAS. Translated from the Provençal by Mrs. Catharine A. Janvier. Uniform with "The Reds of the Midi" and "The Terror." 16mo. Cloth, $1.50.

By Félix Gras.

In "The White Terror" M. Gras paints with singular vividness the strange conditions offered in the Midi after the more familiar events of the French Revolution in Paris. He shows the alternating triumphs and feverses of Whites and Reds, and the lengthening of the shadow cast by Napoleon, while throughout all these stormy and adventurous scenes there passes the appealing figure of Adeline, daughter of a murdered Royalist. This romance throbs with life and holds the reader tense with suspended interest.

Hunt's Art Life.*

This fifth history of William M. Hunt's career is written by the editor of the "Talks on Art," and is obviously a labor of love. It is difficult to say what definite impression Hunt made upon art, but the impression he made upon his pupils is unmistakable, and the object of his biographer appears to be the unbending of a reputation that has not held its own, perhaps, in the twenty years that have passed since the memorial exhibition of his work held the year of his death. Whatever is thought of him as an originator, his appreciation of excellence in the work of other artists gave him genuine distinction at a time when to know the good from the bad meant more than it does now on account of our surpassingly debased standard. Studying for a time under the guidance of Couture, he had the acuteness to perceive that the method he followed readily and to the great satisfaction of his master was superficial and limited. In 1852 he came upon Millet and the two men proved singularly congenial companions in spite of the differences in their temperament. For Hunt friendship was equivalent to valorous championship. He both glittered and was gold as a sympathetic comrade, and it is easy to believe that he gave Millet some good half hours to lighten his struggle with desperate poverty, the incivility of critics, and the sombre tendencies of his own nature. They trudged up to the Paris exhibitions together, Hunt dressed as Millet was in the peasant costume, with blouse and sabots, and in the same way they roamed about the country in the neighborhood of Fontainbleau. On these excursions they gathered material and trained their eyes to observation. "We would start out together," Hunt says in one of his accounts of his intercourse with Millet, "and perhaps come to a cart by the roadside. We would sit down, and he would make me notice how it sagged, how the light fell upon the wheels, and all sorts of things about it. Anything was interesting to him. We would be out all the afternoon, and perhaps walk no more than half a dozen roads." Hunt's worship of Millet and lavish purchase of his work gained him the name of "the mad American." The later development of Millet's fame proved, however, that from a worldly point of view he was anything but mad to accumulate his pictures. The story of this early period is told picturesquely.

"When I first saw his pictures in Paris," Hunt is quoted as saying, "I was walking through the exhibition with one of my friends, and we were delighted with them. No one else cared for them. They were called des tristes affaires.' I was in Couture's studio at that time. He cared nothing for them. I went to Barbison, where Millet lived, staid there two years, and was with him all the time. I found him working in a cellar three feet underground, his pictures mildewing with the dampness, as there was no floor. I bought as much of his work as I could, and after a while the idea was started in Paris that a rich Englishman was buying up all his pictures. The people in the city were alarmed, and began to come to Barbison and get from him what they could. It will give you some idea of the low prices at which his work was sold then to know that for "The Sheep Shearers," the most expensive picture of his which I bought, I gave $800. He never touched any of the money. The man from whom he bought his colors had written that he must either send him some money or a picture, so he set to work to complete this painting. When I saw it I knew that I must have it, so I paid the man $200 and took a receipt for his bill. When I thought that the picture was done, when any one would have thought so, he was still dissatisfied with the girl's left hand, which pulls back the fleece from the shears. He thought that it had not the right action, so he kept it ten days longer. Whenever I went to see him he was still at work upon it. I asked him why he put no wrinkles or markings into the girl's cap. He said 'because he was trying to make it look like a tea rose leaf.' And that was the man whom the critics call careless and slovenly! I wouldn't let them see my Millet drawings. Their dry eyes would burn holes right through them."

Hunt's strong convictions and power of persuasion were undoubtedly of great value to Boston in developing and fixing her standards of art. He patronized his brother artists wherever he found merit in their work, and his home contained numbers of pictures by young men just returned from Paris, and depressingly "let down" by the atmosphere of indifference in their own country. At the same time, he encouraged people in the purchase of such modern French masters as Corot, Millet, Diaz, and Barye. One proof of his excellent judgment is his appreciation of Daumier's drawings. In his own work he was much influenced by his environment, and, while the statement of his biographer, that had he remained in Europe he "would have left a name second to none," must certainly be considered extreme, there is no doubt that the absence of stimulus from contact with art greater than his own, and possibly also the temptations of social opportunities that led away from rather than toward his artistic ambitions, hampered him and kept him from doing consistently good work. Although we are supposed to receive from this study of him the im-

They were called des tristes affaires.' I was in Couture's studio at that time. He cared nothing for them. I went to Barbison, where Millet lived, staid there two years, and was with him all the time. I found him working in a cellar three feet underground, his pictures mildewing with the dampness, as there was no floor. I bought as much of his work as I could, and after a while the idea was started in Paris that a rich Englishman was buying up all his pictures. The people in the city were alarmed, and began to come to Barbison and get from him what they could. It will give you some idea of the low prices at which his work was sold then to know that for "The Sheep Shearers," the most expensive picture of his which I bought, I gave $800. He never touched any of the money. The man from whom he bought his colors had written that he must either send him some money or a picture, so he set to work to complete this painting. When I saw it I knew that I must have it, so I paid the man $200 and took a receipt for his bill. When I thought that the picture was done, when any one would have thought so, he was still dissatisfied with the girl's left hand, which pulls back the fleece from the shears. He thought that it had not the right action, so he kept it ten days longer. Whenever I went to see him he was still at work upon it. I asked him why he put no wrinkles or markings into the girl's cap. He said 'because he was trying to make it look like a tea rose leaf.' And that was the man whom the critics call careless and slovenly! I wouldn't let them see my Millet drawings. Their dry eyes would burn holes right through them."

Hunt's strong convictions and power of persuasion were undoubtedly of great value to Boston in developing and fixing her standards of art. He patronized his brother artists wherever he found merit in their work, and his home contained numbers of pictures by young men just returned from Paris, and depressingly "let down" by the atmosphere of indifference in their own country. At the same time, he encouraged people in the purchase of such modern French masters as Corot, Millet, Diaz, and Baoye. One proof of his excellent judgment is his appreciation of Daumier's drawings. In his own work he was much influenced by his environment, and, while the statement of his biographer, that had he remained in Europe he "would have left a name second to none," must certainly be considered extreme, there is no doubt that the absence of stimulus from contact with art greater than his own, and possibly also the temptations of social opportunities that led away from rather than toward his artistic ambitions, hampered him and kept him from doing consistently good work. Although we are supposed to receive from this study of him the impression that he was a great teacher, the list of his pupils is not impressive, and the only one who has attained distinction is John La Farge. Hunt's own work is not of a kind to endure, and his influence as an artist will be felt only through the memory of his personality. He was a man of strong convictions, and his opinions were expressed with a vigor that left no doubt as to their meaning. He was a man of the world, and his manners were those of a gentleman. He was a man of culture, and his conversation was that of a scholar. He was a man of genius, and his work was that of a master. He was a man of character, and his life was that of a hero. He was a man of courage, and his death was that of a martyr. He was a man of faith, and his hope was that of a saint. He was a man of love, and his charity was that of a father. He was a man of wisdom, and his counsel was that of a sage. He was a man of power, and his influence was that of a king. He was a man of peace, and his rest was that of a child. He was a man of God, and his reward was that of a servant.

Parkman's "Montcalm and Wolfe."*

Dull blue, the faded blue of the royal regiments of France, with the English bearskin romping on a field sown with the Bourbon lily, makes the livery of this holiday edition of a story that needs no embellishment and has a catastrophe as sad and splendid as ever dawned upon the imagination of a Greek dramatist. From the title page of each of the two volumes looks the face of one of the heroes, Montcalm, inscrutably smiling; Wolfe, earnest and determined, and scattered along the reader's way are those who played in the drama of New France and those who, safe in Europe, pulled the strings to guide the puppets or shifted the scene as pleased monarch, Minister, or favorite. Normanville and de Chatesault; astute Franklin and Penn; De Levis, De Vaudreuil, and Diereville, and as many more are pictured as they stand today on canvas; Sir William Johnson, Putnam, Carver, Bouquet, Loudon, Amherst, and another group appear in portraits taken from memoirs, and to these are added Canadian views, battle scenes, a portrait of Parkman, and maps and battle plans, everything needed to illuminate the history of the seventeen years that left England dominant in the North.

English Artists of To-day.*

The book is an admirable example of the modern gift-book. It is handsomely bound, finely made, luxuriantly illustrated, and moderate in price. The artists written of are all men who have achieved a high reputation, and the examples of their art chosen for reproduction are those commonly accepted as in their most characteristic manner. The frontispiece is the lovely "Hope," by Watts, in itself enough to furnish any picture book with an excuse for being, and no fewer than ten of his remarkable portraits are given. The volume, moreover, is far from being merely a picture book. It provides the reader with a clear and agreeable account of the works of Watts, Millais, Leighton, Burne-Jones, Orchardson, Alma-Tadema, and Poynter, and with a brief statement of the outward circumstances of their lives. The critical part of the text is not of great importance, but Mr. Monkhouse shows a discernment in his appreciations that is not fairly rendered by his style of writing. A certain deprecatory kindliness in his criticisms frequently obscures their real freedom and justice. His comparison of the temperaments of Watts and Tennyson is more suggestive than the casual thinker will at first suppose, and his discussion of the transition period in the art of Millais is at least a basis for interesting criticism. The best commentary on the amazing contradiction of Millais's painting, however, is the series of pictures marking his progress and decline. In these chosen for the present volume various stages are most delicately indicated. We pass from an etching for the "Gorm," made to illustrate a story by Rossetti, enchanting in its directness and severity, to the gracious portrait of Lady Rigaud, then to the "Lorenzo and Isabella," the "Order of Release," and the "Ophelia," from these pictures overborne by the pre-Raphaelite theory to the perfect flowering of his unique genius in "The Autumn Leaves" of 1856, and thence by gradual degrees to "The Minuet" and "The Stitch, Stitch, Stitch."

Moore's "Lalla Rookh."*

Last year a costly edition of Moore's masterpiece appeared, with almost 11 illustrations in color made by the photo-etching process from designs by American, Persian, and European artists, and this is now reproduced in a more simple but beautiful form. The photo-etchings are replaced by half-tones, and the vellum paper by "enamel," and the cover differs somewhat from that used in 1899, but those who have not seen the original will be well content with this, inasmuch as it is printed from ten plates and is much less expensive. Nobody needs to be told the story of Moore's writing this book, self-isolated from the Britain of the day, reading nothing not Oriental, surrounded by as many Oriental objects as he could bring together, his mind saturated with Persian colors and odors, his pen allowed to use none but Persian images and phrases. Persia still waits her Kipling, and nothing brings her more clearly before the vision than these verses of the one Celtic poet who deliberately cultivated the imagination. Those who read them for the first time in this edition will find them, as the bumpkin found "Othello," "chuck full of quotations," for Moore's contributions to that species of literature are enormous. The beautiful songs, too, are familiar to many a singer unconscious of their source, and will be here found in a harmonious setting.

A List Not Restricted to the Publications of 1899.

Last week we gave as the special feature of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW a list, with short reviews, of 100 books adapted to purchase during the Holiday season. It was a list restricted to books actually published during the year 1899. While a few were books of older date than 1899, as to first publication, they had been brought out in new editions this year usually with illustrations. With a few exceptions of this kind, the list embraced only books which made their first appearances during the present year.

Readers who may wish to have a list not restricted in this way will find one in the columns that follow here, the number of books being 200. Some of these works first came out a half, or even three-quarters, of a century ago; indeed, Charles Lamb appears among the authors. For the preparation of this list we are indebted to the Buffalo Public Library, an institution which has done a great deal of advanced and wholesome work in directing its patrons to the best books. As prepared by that library, the list was arranged alphabetically as to authors, and no attempt was made at classification. But for the purposes of THE SATURDAY REVIEW it has seemed best to make a classification under such headings as our readers have already become accustomed to in our Holiday, Summer reading, and Spring lists, and in our Books Received.

A year ago this library placed on exhibition in Buffalo a collection of books appropriate for Christmas gifts to children. The experiment proved a great success. The exhibition was largely attended, and led, it may be assumed, to the purchase of many good books instead of poor ones, and to the wise substitution in numerous instances of books in place of senseless toys. That interesting list of titles for which there was large demand, was published in THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, and was commented upon. It was not difficult to find fault in some cases with selections and omissions, but the general plan was so excellent and was so cordially approved that there is little wonder that the experiment has been now repeated on a more ambitious scale.

On Nov 28 of this year the Buffalo Public Library put on exhibition in the Directors' room the present collection of 200 books, and officially recommended the books as appropriate, on general principles, for Christmas gifts. The collection was not limited, as a year ago, to books appropriate for children, but the other features that had made the former exhibition popular—the attractive room, the long hour, (from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.) the refusal of the library to sell the books or to act as agent for their purchase, the listing of the publishers' advertised price with each book, the restriction of the collection to volumes for sale in the Buffalo stores, and the printing of an attractive catalogue in which a few explanatory words were added to each title—all these features were strictly retained.

The books are to remain on exhibition to Buffalo until nearly Christmas Day, and there is little doubt that they will again influence many purchasers. Every facility is extended, indeed, for the examination of the collection. The room is light and pleasant. A large table and plenty of comfortable chairs are provided, and it is noticed that the visitors often linger over the display for several hours. In observing the operation of the plan one is impressed by the thought that, in so far as the function of a public library is to direct the literary taste of the community, it could hardly gain its end better than by thus suggesting which books, from the continually vast output, are, generally speaking, the best worth buying. The list, which is of no slight popular interest, is as follows:

HISTORY.

NEWBOLT. Henry. Stories from Froissart. Illustrated. Macmillan Company. $1.50

The Diary of a Librarian

(Not written by Dorothy C. Whitcher.)

It is said that advice is a good thing not to follow, yet my advice as to the choice of reading is so frequently asked that I have almost persuaded myself that it is of some value to book users and buyers.

Monday.

The first caller this morning was in difficulties. He had just listened to an exponent of what is called "the higher criticism"—he needed a tonic; fortunately I had one at hand. It was George Adam Smith's Biography of Professor Drummond. I certainly know of no other book that will so impress on his mind that Christianity is immeasurably bigger than all criticism—that the advanced thought and Christianity do go hand in hand. I wonder if he will enjoy as much as I did this picture of a great man's struggles and triumph. . . .

Tuesday.

To-day the only incident worth noting is one that has happened frequently of late. Among the visitors was a woman who must see the librarian—no, the assistant would not do. She only wanted me to recommend "something as interesting and good as 'David Harum' or 'Richard Carvel.'" I had solved this problem before, so I handed her "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington. I knew when she took it that she felt doubtful; however, the first few chapters will clear her mind of doubt on that subject.

Wednesday.

Oh! the questions they ask and the books they seek. For instance: "I want a book to read aloud—light but not frivolous—humorous but not machine made—and it must have pictures—the children do enjoy the pictures so." This woman carried away "The Court of Boyville," by William Allen White—but what shall I do when she calls for another just as good next week. . . .

Thursday.

To-day I'm sure I pleased at least one book hunter. He was a boy. His hobby, natural history. Birds and butterflies his special study. I showed him three books—"Bird Neighbors," "Birds That Hunt and Are Hunted," and Dr. Holland's "Butterfly Book." I will have to qualify my first statement, as he was very much displeased, or at least only one-third pleased, when he left. I only allowed him to take one volume, when he wanted all three.

Question—Should the rules of our library be more liberal?

Friday.

The next visitor who found his way into my sanctum also had troubles, but far less serious they seemed to me; possibly to him just as serious. He had a boy who, as he expressed it, devoured everything he could get in the way of books, but who, he feared, was getting an entirely false idea of life—too much blood and thunder. "Is he fond of water?" I asked. On being assured that he was my task was an easy one. He went off with "A Gunner Aboard the Yankee" under his arm. His face still wore an anxious look. I shall hear from him again.

The first thought of the critic as he runs over this catalogue is that the departure from a year ago is possibly too ambitious, that it over-reaches itself in attempting to name in 200 titles the best for all, when most of these titles have to be chosen from late publications, since the books preferred for Christmas presents are generally new. It is surely easier to make such a list comprehensive when the range of age is limited. The second thought is expressed in the query as to how far one can justly criticise a list when the limitations imposed by the restriction to "books on sale in Buffalo stores" cannot be accurately pictured. If a good title be missing shall we blame the list-maker or the bookseller? In spite of this drawback, however, the catalogue has value and interest. Two hundred books in a number large enough, in all conscience, to give the cream of the volumes that can properly tempt to Christmas purchase the general reader of any age, and Buffalo is too large a city to have such a list of books appreciably cut by the slimness of the range of choice on the book store counters. So the critic can put on his spectacles.

In a section by themselves are shown seventeen picture books for "very little folks." There is only one out of the number which has not the imprint of E. P. Dutton & Co., and two-thirds of the whole number are listed at from 25 cents to $1.50, which seems a good deal for just "a picture book." They are good picture books, of course; but in a year when recent book sales held by Bangs & Co. have contained many items of unusual interest, few books of extreme importance have been offered. The collection of J. C. Cleaz, sold Dec. 5-7, contained, however, a copy of the first edition (London, 1822.) of De Quincey's "Confessions of an English Opium Eater" in the original boards. The sum of $11.50 was paid for the book, which is seldom seen in such condition. At the sale held on Dec. 1 of "Cuttings from the Library of an Amateur," a large number of scarce sporting books were offered. Surtees's "Handley Cross," 1854, first edition, half morocco, fetched $11.25; his "Mr Facey Romford's Hounds," 1865, first edition, half morocco, going for $10.75; his "Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour," 1853, first edition, original cloth, for $10.75, and his "Plain or Ringlets," 1860, first edition, original cloth, for $11.50.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec 12 and 13, Bangs & Co. sold the collection of the late William Kelby, long the librarian of the New York Historical Society. Many books relating to New York State and the city were thus brought forward, in addition to a great number of Confederate laws and civil war literature. The most important book sold was John Beard's "Vindication of the Worship of God According to the Church of England," printed in New York in 1726 by William Bradford, which, though unbound and stained, reached $27, William A. Woodward securing it. Despite its condition, it was a bargain at that price, as its rarity is extreme, no copy apparently having been sold in recent years. Neither William Menzies nor George Brinley had a copy. Other prices at the Kelby sale were as follows: "List of Persons Interred in the General Burying Grounds in New York and at Bellevue and Potter's Field from Aug. 1 to Nov. 14, 1799," $30. Bought by "Tuo."

"The Picture of New York and Stranger's Guide to the Commercial Metropolis of the United States," New York, 1828, fine copy, $20. Bought by Frederick W. Morris. (A copy sold last season for $25, and in 1896 for $21.)

Edmil's "History of the Town of King's Bridge," New York, privately printed in an edition of fifty-three copies, 1865, $15. Bought by "Tuo."

The sum of $11.50 was paid for the book, which is seldom seen in such condition. At the sale held on Dec. 1 of "Cuttings from the Library of an Amateur," a large number of scarce sporting books were offered. Surtees's "Handley Cross," 1854, first edition, half morocco, fetched $11.25; his "Mr Facey Romford's Hounds," 1865, first edition, half morocco, going for $10.75; his "Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour," 1853, first edition, original cloth, for $10.75, and his "Plain or Ringlets," 1860, first edition, original cloth, for $11.50.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec 12 and 13, Bangs & Co. sold the collection of the late William Kelby, long the librarian of the New York Historical Society. Many books relating to New York State and the city were thus brought forward, in addition to a great number of Confederate laws and civil war literature. The most important book sold was John Beard's "Vindication of the Worship of God According to the Church of England," printed in New York in 1726 by William Bradford, which, though unbound and stained, reached $27, William A. Woodward securing it. Despite its condition, it was a bargain at that price, as its rarity is extreme, no copy apparently having been sold in recent years. Neither William Menzies nor George Brinley had a copy. Other prices at the Kelby sale were as follows: "List of Persons Interred in the General Burying Grounds in New York and at Bellevue and Potter's Field from Aug. 1 to Nov. 14, 1799," $30. Bought by "Tuo."

"The Picture of New York and Stranger's Guide to the Commercial Metropolis of the United States," New York, 1828, fine copy, $20. Bought by Frederick W. Morris. (A copy sold last season for $25, and in 1896 for $21.)

"Riker's Harlem: Its Origin and Early Annals," New York, 1881, presentation copy, $27. Bought by "City."

Edmil's "History of the Town of King's Bridge," New York, privately printed in an edition of fifty-three copies, 1865, $15. Bought by "Tuo."

THE WEEK IN ART.

The first large picture auction sale of the season at the American Art Galleries, a display of portraits by A. A. Anderson at the Avery Galleries, and the first of the season's monthly art displays at the Union League and Lotos Clubs, made up the sum total of the week's art events in New York.

The auction sale was that of the pictures owned by M. Lamoriniere. The collection was a dealer's collection, and hence as most of its examples were well-known, it did not attract any particular attention. There were some good names represented by fair examples, and many of the works by the painters of the modern Italian and French-Spanish schools told good stories and were attractive in color. The works of these schools, however, have not as yet obtained a permanent hold on the affections of New York art lovers, and the attendance at the exhibition and sale was not large and the prices obtained not high.

A. A. Anderson is a portrait painter who has the reputation of securing, as a rule, for his sitters people of social or business position and influence. His portraits hang in many of the most fashionable houses of New York. Those he now shows at the Avery Galleries will not, on the whole, add to his reputation. They are uneven in merit, and, as a rule, while well drawn, are stiff, hard in color, and with florid and over elaborated backgrounds and details. The most successful of the portraits shown are those of Miss Katherine Neilson, which has a rather daring but successful color scheme of red, is easy in pose, and an excellent likeness; the full-length standing portrait of Mrs. Arthur Kemp, formerly Miss Belle Neilson, which has been noticed before in this Supplement, for its dignified and graceful pose, flowing lines and solidity; the full-length standing portrait of the Hon. John Wanamaker, which has force and good color, and the refined seated portrait of Mrs. Henry Steers, Jr., which strikes a good and full color note in its yellow gown whose texture is well rendered. The portrait of Miss Endicott, seated on a garden bench with a background of foliage, is stiff and artificial, and there is over-elaboration of detail and too much smoothness in the portraits of Mrs. J. C. Ayer and Mrs. Henry Steers, Sr. The portrait of Dr. William H. Pepper, whom Mr. Anderson has painted standing by a bed in a child's hospital ward, feeling the pulse of an invalid child, whose body suggests that of a corpse, fails of success, for while the color scheme of the composition, soft grays and blues, is well carried out, the light is well managed and the figure of the nurse standing at the head of the bed is excellent, the physician's face and form are so smoothed out as to give the impression of weakness instead of strength. In brief, it may be said that the artist's draughtsmanship, composition, and poses of his subjects are far in advance of his color sense and treatment.

Once again, and appropriately at Christmas time, comes M. Paul Helleu with an exhibition of seventy-eight of his charming little dry-point etchings of women and children, three or four lithographs, and seventeen drawings, also of the same subjects, at the Keppel Gallery. There is really nothing new to be said of this graceful and refined artist's work this year. It was fully described last year in this Supplement, and it is again worth study as an example of what remarkable results can be achieved by an etcher who so thoroughly understands the use of the line as M. Helleu. The artist has given us a number of portraits, as he did last year, of his wife and young daughter in many graceful poses engaged in household diversions and occupations. It is given to few artists to be able to so charmingly and faithfully interpret the sentiment and grace of refined women's household work and occupation, and in studying these little glimpses of a Parisian household's life, one recalls George Herbert's line:

"Who sweeps a room as by God's law makes it and the action fine."

The newly formed American Society of Miniature Painters will hold its first annual exhibition at the Knoedler galleries from Tuesday, Jan. 9, until Saturday, Jan. 20, inclusive. The exhibition will consist of original miniature paintings, and works from photographs will not be admitted. The jury of selection is composed of W. J. Baer, Lydia F. Emmet, Laura C. Hills, I. A. Josephi, John A. MacDougall, and W. J. Whittemore, and W. J. Baer and W. J. Whittemore are the Hanging Committee. I. A. Josephi is the President of the new society; Laura C. Hills the Vice President, Lucia F. Fuller, the Treasurer, and William J. Baer the Secretary, and there are ten founders. Miniatures are now again in fashion, and many a man and a woman prefers a miniature to an oil portrait.

An exhibition of paintings by Philip L. Hale, the well-known Boston music and art critic, opened yesterday at the Durand-Ruel galleries and will continue there until Dec. 30. Due notice of the display will be made in this Supplement next week.

Mr. John Aspinwall will give a talk at the Camera Club, 3 West Twenty-ninth Street, next Thursday evening, Dec. 28, entitled "New Orleans to the Pacific," and which will be illustrated with lantern slides. There is now on exhibition at the rooms of the club a collection of pictorial photographs by various European and American makers (not members of the Camera Club) taken from the private collections of Miss Weil, Miss Watson, Alfred Stieglitz, John Beeby, Joseph Obermeyer, Joseph T. Kelley, and others.

A remarkable find has been made in the studio and house occupied by the late Rosa Bonheur, at the village of By, in France, of some 2,000 works by the artist, 200 of which are finished canvases in oil, and the remainder sketches and studies in oil and water color, together with a number of drawings, many of them important, and all characteristic of the great woman painter. The collection, which is valued at over 1,000,000 francs, is being prepared and arranged for exhibition and sale next Spring in Paris. Mr. Edward Brandus of this city secured permission to bring here and exhibit the 200 finished works, but found that he could not do so without paying prohibitory duties, as the tariff regulations now prevent the introduction of the works of any foreign artists for exhibition here even under bond, unless accompanied by the artist. As Rosa Bonheur is dead, there did not appear to be any way of complying with the American tariff regulations, and so America will be deprived of the opportunity of seeing this interesting and remarkable collection before its dispersal by auction.

The meetings that have been held during the week in Baltimore under the auspices of the Municipal Art Society of that city, and which have had for their object the discussion of subjects pertaining to the beautifying of a city, have been well attended and very successful. Illustrated lectures were given by Mr. Edwin H. Blashfield of New York on mural decoration, and by Mr. George Kriehn, lately of the Stanford Junior University of California, on the development of European and American cities. Among those present from New York at the meetings were Edwin H. Blashfield, Charles de Kay, Frederick S. Lamb, Russell Sturgis, C. Y. Turner, and J. Q. A. Ward.

The Society of American Artists, whose annual exhibition will be held at the Fine Arts Building, between March 14 and April 29, elected its jury on Tuesday night, as follows: Douglas Volk, A. N. A.; Edwin H. Blashfield, N. A.; Herbert Adams, A. N. A.; Henry O. Walker, A. N. A.; Daniel C. French, George R. Barse, A. N. A.; Albert Herter, William T. Smedley, A. N. A.; Otto H. Bacher, William H. Hyde, Kenyon Cox, H. Bolton Jones, N. A.; H. Siddons Mowbray, N. A.; William Thorne, William M. Chase, N. A.; Charles C. Curran, A. N. A.; Samuel Isham, Frederick W. Kost, Leonard Ochtman, A. N. A.; Walter Clark, A. N. A.; Alfred A. Collins, Bruce Crane, A. N. A.; Ben Foster, Francis C. Jones, N. A.; John La Farge, N. A.; Howard Russell Butler, A. N. A.; Abbott H. Thayer, A. N. A.; Louis Paul Dessar, William A. Coffin, A. N. A., and Irving R. Wiles, N. A. The last three members were elected to serve as the Hanging Committee.

The bridge to be built in Washington to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the death of the first President of the United States will probably lead to other monuments taking this form. The idea is not a new one, by any means. It is, at any rate, as old as the Romans, but in modern times the possibilities of a departure from the usual sculptured group, or monolith, or building, seem to have been overlooked. There is one specimen of a memorial bridge in Connecticut, but doubtless the idea for the Washington structure came from the Alexander Bridge, now being built in Paris to commemorate the visit of the Czar to the French capital. The advantages of a bridge as a medium for beauty of form and ornamentation are too obvious to need recapitulation.

When the new building of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on the east side of Madison Square is completed, the public will be astonished at the elaborate character of the interior decorations and the beauty of the paintings and sculptures. It is seldom that a public building has been erected with so little reference in the newspapers to its features, and it is the more strange in this case, because it is the ambition of the architect, James Brown Lord, that the structure shall be the finest of its kind in the United States.

The building is rapidly nearing completion, and it is expected that it will be formally opened early next month. The courtroom will be on the lower floor. This chamber is lighted by a number of fine stained-glass windows and a dome of similar material. Beneath the dome, extending around the room, are paintings, while there are also three large panel paintings by Edward Simmons, Henry O. Walker and Edwin H. Blashfield, respectively. Talbots of the Tuscumcot American sculptors have also contributed figures and bas-reliefs, while the other decorations and materials are rich in the extreme.

The exterior of this building has attracted much attention, since it neared completion, but all except those engaged on the work have been kept in entire ignorance of the beauty of the interior.

Our country, peculiarly fortunate in its historians, finds the most fascinating of all of them, in point of literary style, in JOHN FISKE, says the Boston Herald.

The truth of this judgment is confirmed by

Mr. Fiske's New Volumes

DUTCH AND QUAKER COLONIES IN AMERICA

With 8 Maps. 2 vols., crown 8vo, $4.00.

The Springfield Republican observes that "his book is not merely an admirable piece of historical work, but fascinating to the general reader, and full of picturesque incident and enlightening obiter dicta. A word of praise should be spoken for the exceptionally attractive manner in which it is printed."

"There is no more delightful literary and artistic sensation than that of turning suddenly from crowded, bustling Twenty third Street into Messrs. E. P. Dutton & Company's beautiful and commodious store (No. 31). Here the holiday season blossoms in all its luxuriance and variety, for 'Dutton's,' as the shop is commonly called, is not merely a place where books are sold. The firm has for years been celebrated for its stock of stationery, its writing-table accessories, its Christmas cards, and its almost unrivalled collection of Photographs, mounted and unmounted. This season we note that there is no diminution in the attractiveness of the store. It is a treat to wander between the long lines of counters, stopping here to examine a photograph, there to admire the exquisite beauty of a picture frame. One does not feel that he is in a shop, everything is so 'homey' and intimate. Yet we know that the Messrs. Dutton's business is very large. The enormous stock attests this, as also does the crowded store. Here, for instance, is the book department. Among the larger sets and classics no author of any note has been overlooked. In the art department conspicuous among this season's display is a collection of recently imported Vienna bronzes, offered at a moderate price. We advise any one who is looking for suggestions in gift-making by all means to visit 'Dutton's.'"—Examiner.

GOOD-WILL FROM AUTHORS AS PUBLISHERS' ASSETS.

The early history of bookselling is very interesting reading, both as showing how a business which began in a very humble way—printer, publisher, and bookseller being united in one man—has reached its present position; but even more so as indicating the difference in birth and breeding between the booksellers of the past and our present publishers. The earliest men of letters were mainly dramatists, but their plays were printed only after being acted, and apparently as a mere afterthought, it being said that Shakespeare himself never made a penny through the publication of his plays. But as the use of the printing press spread a race of authors by profession sprang up—clever men, although inhabiting Grub Street, who made a living by writing for the booksellers; existing wretchedly, however, and at the beck and call of their employers.

Thomas Fuller states in a preface to his "Worthies" that "no stationers have hitherto lost by him," and the booksellers continued to describe the last two impressions of his "Holy State" as the "third edition"—as if really ashamed of its popularity—a condition quite unlike our own methods, the number of editions into which a book has gone being considered a valuable advertisement.

In the seventeenth century all great writers either had private means or depended on the patronage of rank and wealth; an author's reward lying more in the hope of place and favor from the great than in money compensation from his publisher. Dryden's popularity and the cleverness of the "Prince of Booksellers," Jacob Tonson, brought about a slightly better condition of affairs. In the eighteenth century Sintot and Edmund Curl were the leading publishers—the latter's life being one long quarrel, both with the authorities and with authors. Curl was pilloried in the "Dunciad," a note thereto reading as follows:

> He (Curl) carried the trade many lengths beyond what it ever before had arrived at; he was the envy and admiration of all his profession. He possessed himself of a command over all authors whatever; he caused them to write what he pleased; they could not call their very names their own. He was not only famous among them; he was taken notice of by the State, the Church, and the law, and received particular marks of distinction from each.

The above "note" is remarkable for two reasons. First, as showing the servile and miserable condition of authors; but equally so, it might seem, as indicating the patronizing attitude the world assumed toward the early publishers. Perhaps the man who did most to raise both author and publisher in the estimation of the world was one who united in himself both characters—Samuel Richardson, our first great novelist and, after 1754, master of the Stationers' Company.

But, after all, was the author of the latter part of the eighteenth century in a much more dignified position? We find Dr. Johnson writing a bookseller: "I am obliged to entreat your assistance; I am under arrest for £5 18." Yet, even though forced by circumstances to work for the most beggarly pay, we can see how much more self-respect Dr. Johnson really had—the best example of which is the story of his knocking down the bookseller Osborne with a folio. As Boswell tells it, Dr. Johnson said, "Sir, he was impertinent to me and I beat him."

Of course, in the early days of our own century the condition of things was very different. Publishers sprang from a better class, and the author was no longer the literary hack only. If we are to take Thackeray's point of view, however, as indicated by the struggles of Arthur Pendennis, Clive Newcome, Philip Firmin, and Warrington to get on in the literary world, which we have good authority for thinking were drawn more or less from his own experiences, Grub Street was still much in evidence. The various publishers' imprints shown by the early issues of the great writers of the beginning of the century go to prove that the relations between publisher and author could not have been entirely satisfactory, each new book showing a new imprint.

But the history of the last fifty years, for both publishers and writers, shows a quite different condition. Of course there are instances to the contrary, but in the majority of cases publishers seem to have realised that their authors' good will is a far more important factor in their financial prosperity than almost anything else. Naturally there are authors and authors, as well as great differences in publishers—as indeed in men in general.

There are some writers who seem to think of nothing but present gain, and who do not recognise or remember the courtesy shown them by various publishers, bringing out their books first with this imprint, then with that. One case in particular we might mention, a writer of many and good books, who seems to seek a new publisher for each new venture.

An early and striking example of the pleasant relations between publishers and writers will be found in the case of Ticknor and Fields, whose imprint and plain brown cloth covers are such a guarantee of a book's excellence. Mr. Fields in particular seems to have realised how much an author's good-will adds to a publisher's prosperity, and many and interesting are the stories of that firm's courtesy and kindness toward young authors—both English and American—whose friendship they gained by kindly and generous treatment, and whose later fame—aided in no small way by their publisher's kindly attitude—reacted in giving that house a name whose beneficial results have been felt through all its various changes of title down to the present day.

Naturally there is a very evident reason for the work of a young writer bearing the imprint of one of the less important publishers; nor can there be found any ground for criticism, should such writer's later books issue from better and better houses. In such circumstances, however, we often find the later publishers acquiring from the smaller men the right to publish such early work, the very fame of the better known and often better books, and the weight of the publisher's imprint contributing materially toward increasing the sale of the earlier books.

The very fairness and generosity shown authors by some of our better-known publishers carry with them the latter's own reward; both from contributing toward the fair fame of the house as well as from a financial standpoint. The Stevenson Letters, so lately published, afford a striking case in proof of our assertion. The American editions of Stevenson's books were formerly brought out by various houses, but in late years they have all been acquired by the Scribners for their Thistle Edition. The result was doubtless brought about, if we may judge from the letters, largely through the pleasant relations established between author and publisher shortly after their first meeting.

Writing to William Archer, Stevenson comments upon some of the business relations he had made, adding: "It is worth while, perhaps, to get in tow with the Scribners; they are such thoroughly gentle folk in all ways that it is always a pleasure to deal with them." Again, writing to Mr. Burlingame, the editor of Scribner's Magazine, in regard to "The Master of Ballantrae," Stevenson says: "This tale (if you want it) you are to have, for it is the least I can do for you." The friendly relations between the Scribners and Stevenson is shown by the very familiarity of the letters published in these volumes. For instance, when, after asking that certain books be sent him to read, he adds: "I have to thank you for the accounts, which are satisfactory indeed," and, again: "I desire nothing better, than to continue my relations with the magazine, to which it pleases me to hear I have been useful—" or, and it is surely only when we are on exceptionally pleasant terms with people that we ask favors, and especially in such an off-hand way—"I might add that if there was a good book or so—new— • • • such would be welcome."

In fact, the tenor of the entire second volume of these letters shows the friendly atmosphere enveloping his relations with his publishers. The advantageous offers made to Stevenson by the Scribners in 1887, including not only his books, but a series of articles for the magazine and the serial rights in his stories, made up on the pleasant relations existing between them and Stevenson's family, which enabled them to show the family scrap books, interior views, amateur photographs, and all sorts of interesting relics of the Samoan days.

It is quite possible, too, that out of these amicable relations—such conditions usually being very well known—came the initial steps which eventually led to the publication of the Outward Bound Kipling, the Scribners thus having control of American editions of two of the most important sets of books of the present day. More recently the Scribners have begun a collective edition of Frank R. Stockton's writings, to be called the Shenandoah Edition, in which enterprise it would be possible to find similar conditions leading, at last, to similar results.

Therefore all such instances (and we have cited the Scribners here because it was a reading of the Stevenson "Letters" that really gave the suggestion of a text for this article) go to prove our original statement that a publisher can have no more valuable asset than an eminent author's good-will. It is quite possible, also, that loss of prestige in a publishing house might be due, in some degree, to carelessness or absolute neglect and indifference in these matters, and a resulting dissatisfaction, which would prevent younger writers from seeking an imprint for their books which their fathers had thought most valuable. At any rate, taking a look ahead, we might predict failure for houses which should become negligent of that important asset, good-will from its authors.

A PUBLIC PRINT COLLECTION.

To the general public progress at our Public Library is made evident by better service, longer hours, better catalogues, more books, improved methods, and all the other factors which make for the fullest utility. To the specialist, interest is centred in his own particular line of study, and here, too, there is felt the increase of literature and the greater accessibility thereof.

During the three and one-half years of the existence of the New York Public Library as such the Board of Trustees has on many an occasion—often hardly apparent to outsiders, yet important in influence and results—proved its public spirit. The amplification of certain departments, the establishment of others, have formed progressive steps in the upbuilding of a library worthy of this city and its wants.

Of distinct innovations, an exceedingly important one is the recent decision by the board to accept Director Billings's proposition to establish a print room, such as we find in the British Museum, the Bibliothèque Nationale, and other large European libraries. Using the word prints in the broadest possible sense, such a collection would not only include engravings to delight the connoisseur and the collector, but would comprise also such which have a historical interest apart from their artistic value—portraits, views, costumes, historical scenes, pictures of individual houses, &c.—material for culture-history and of distinct value to those carrying on research in special lines. We need hardly insist here on the value of exhibitions of prints to the greater public.

There is no public print collection in New York City—soon nearly than Boston, in fact. While our library's collection of prints is as yet comparatively small and does not comprise many engravings of great value, yet there are a number of interesting prints here. Such are those in the sumptuously extra-illustrated Emmet books, a fairly good collection of portraits (made up from the Lenox, Tilden, Emmet, and Ford collections,) and specialties like the caricatures of the War of 1812, by W. Charles, and the aquatints of J. Hill, (both from the Ford collection.) "Iconophile" publications, Easter prints, &c.

The decision to establish a print room in the New York Public Library is not only a wise and far-seeing one, but it also carries with it the assurance of growth. For many probably most, of the private collections in the city will sooner or later find their way here once it is understood that such gifts will be preserved, properly cared for, and put to good use. Some collectors have simply been waiting for such an opportunity to place their collections before a wider public. In fact, the first important gift is already noted. Mr. John Durand offers a complete set of the engravings of his father, A. B. Durand. One may thus entertain the brightest hopes for the development of this newest and very important branch of the library's activity.

AUTHORS AND RED HERRINGS WITH RULES.

A contributor to The Author of London tells a harrowing tale of how, on the very morning that an appreciative review of a certain book appeared in The Times, he discovered the writer of the said book frying a red herring for his breakfast. This leads the contributor to ask pathetically, "Can a man live by authorship?" The reply seems easy. "Can a man live by shoemaking?" He can if he knows how to make good shoes and keeps pegging away.

A point to be considered in a scientific examination of this subject is, "What constitutes a living for an author?" Doesn't he oftimes want too much? Why should he not be content with a red herring for his breakfast? Luxury would be a bad thing for him, engaging his energies and making him dull. Authorship, like other forms of virtue, should be largely its own reward. The fact is that Hobbins, who conducts the corner grocery, and has a smaller intellectual equipment than the author, (in the latter's opinion,) but more money, ought to be unworthy the notice of any self-respecting author. Would the author like to carry on the grocery store and have the molasses barrel burst all over him the first hot day?

One of the most charming of American painters has formulated the proposition that material things are a burden and ought to be beneath any man laboring in whatsoever branch of art. He has always carried his idea into practice. He never, for instance, bought a cradle for any of his babies. One of them had the measles in a trunk, and came through all right, and has lived to be a credit to his sire. By leaving the lid up and taking out the top tray a trunk is not a bad place in which to have the measles. You are ready, too, to move in case the landlord becomes obstreperous about the rent.

In the breakfast-getting instance first cited, it would seem to the impartial observer that the herring, not the author, had the greatest cause to complain. Indeed, it is not recorded that the author did complain. Your red herring is no bad meat. Fish is said to be good brain food, and though many authors are eulogised from requiring any brain food, it is quite possible that this one may have had call for it. Happy the author who can fling to the appetising steam of his own red herring while he reads a good criticism of his new book! Far better this than that the herring should listen to the abuse of the author as the Scottish reviewer gives him the second turn in the skillet and dashes on a touch of red pepper!

But to return: the rates now paid by the better periodicals ought to enable any man with the necessary ability and with reasonable industry to live and pay for his herrings, with a box of sardines on Sundays and holidays, made from young herrings. True, he may occasionally have to fry his own herring, but if he is wide awake this ought eventually to enable him to write a cook book, perhaps entitled "The Author's Own Cook Book: Fifty Ways for Preparing Red Herrings. With an Appendix Containing a Directory of Herring Dealers and of Periodicals Which Pay on Acceptance."

Authors who fail to make a living at their profession may be roughly divided into two classes—those who have not the special talent required and those who won't work. Many authors spend too much time in front of the photographer's camera; the camera should be left to the actor and the man who has been cured of something. A man writes a book, and while it is selling, instead of writing another, he gets his picture taken. There are too many solemn interviews with authors. The author should spend less time telling how he wrote his book, less time at clubs talking with men of his own kind and trying to brave them with the impression that he has read their books, less time worrying over the too obvious fact that they have not read his. Instead of making grave treks about the country looking for local color, color which nine times out of ten won't wash, let him write a story which will stand alone and not have to lean on a background picked up through a car window. Local color, to be "fast," must be absorbed in one's youth, while one is impressionable, and not after having become hardened by rejected manuscripts, the hideous grimaces of the critics, and the baleful glare of the camera. Let the author plant his talent against a background which he has long known: the longer the better. let him also write English and shun dialect as he would a specklove orchard. Our author may not patronize more than one newspaper clipping agency, nor read over the flattering personal notices of himself oftener than twice a day. Under no circumstances may he contradict a critic or argue with an editor. If a publisher send for him he is to make all haste to go, take off his hat when he enters the room, and in no case attempt to offer any advice concerning the publishing business. He is not to criticise other and more successful authors in a loud and gamesmy voice, and when asked if autograph hunters bother him he is to tell the truth and reply that their requests give him genuine pleasure. He is not to tell how many times he rewrote a given story, nor respond to any inquiries as to the color of the ink he uses or his hours of work, and he shall use his best endeavors to discourage the literary labors of brothers, cousins, great-uncles, &c. In short our author is to strive to be a modest gentleman. Keep the salutary rules above given constantly in mind, work as hard the day after he gets a check as the day before, thus he shall retain the respect of mankind and the spatter of the good red frying herring shall be heard in his household.

ONE HE LIKES BEST OF ALL.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Please give me a little space to wish to thank you for the "one hundred books" number of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. Not only have you clearly and interestingly touched upon the new books which have come to light this year, but you have handled the rare editions of our old favorites with so much kindness and such a true appreciation of their worth that this number of THE REVIEW (always good) may be suggested above all the rest of them—a perfect of perfumes, a book of books.

Fortunately am I endued with the amount of talent—mechanical and mental—expended on it, and the painstaking care devoted to the particular character and personality of each of these many minds. The authors and publishers should feel grateful to you. Certainly your readers if they can understand the magnitude of this labor of love for a higher mental development, will join me in heartfelt congratulations.

POE AND MRS. WHITMAN

Her Own Version of His Visit to Providence Given in a Private Letter.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

The inclosed letter is from an octogenarian friend of mine in Denver, Col., George W. Eveleth, M. D. I know him in my teens as a correspondent of Poe. I have been ill and remiss in forwarding this.

Poe, I remember, deferred to Eveleth's critical judgment and to the latter's suggestion that footfalls could not "tinkle on the tufted floor." Poe said he wanted thereby to convey an idea of the supernatural. Z. T. HAINES,

Winthrop, Me., Dec. 11, 1899.

Dear Haines: With particular pleasure I acknowledge the receipt of your clipping from THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, giving an account of "Poe and Mrs. Whitman." The reading of it started me upon a hunt into my collection of ancient epistolary literature. I found twenty contributions by the lady named, bearing dates from Dec. 15, 1864, to Nov. 30, 1875. Our correspondence began fully ten years earlier, but by some means my share of the effects is "among the missing." In one of these now before me there is reference to a letter written by me in 1853. Jan. 17, 1860, the following passages were indited by Mrs. Whitman:

"I cannot, I think, stay long 'on this bank and shoal of time.' Before I go I want to put into your hand the accompanying statement about one of Griswold's myths. It is a statement which I have made to but one person; and that one has met with a sad, strange fate, so that the record is lost in oblivion. From a rough sketch, prepared in 1860, I send you the inclosed. If you will copy it, and send me the copy, I shall be glad. * * *

"'To S. E. R., March 10, 1860.

"'Dear Sir: It is not a little singular that within a few days of your note, forwarded to me by Messrs. —— of New York, I received one from a gentleman in Philadelphia (who was to be connected with Mr. Poe in the publication of The Stylus) announcing that he had prepared, and was intending soon to publish, a vindication of Edgar Poe. I do not think it will affect the success of your book, nor that, from its scope and purpose, it will appear for a considerable while yet, if at all.

"'He questioned me with regard to some of the charges brought against Mr. Poe by Dr. Griswold, especially to the story of his riotous conduct at the house of a New England lady, rendering necessary a summons of the police.'

"You will have seen that some of the critics of my little book have chosen to assume that, since I make no reference to this pleasant and piquant fiction, the story was undoubtedly a true one. If I had not wished my vindication to be entirely impersonal, in so far as it related to my own connection with its subject, I most certainly could have acquitted him of all the grosser accusations in that most improbable narrative.

"Mr. Poe came to Providence on the occasion referred to, by invitation of the Providence Lyceum, to deliver the second lecture in its course. (Daniel Webster having delivered the first.) Before leaving New York he said to a lady of that city: 'I am going this evening to Providence.' 'To be married, I hear,' rejoined the lady. 'No, but to deliver a lecture before the Lyceum.'

"On that slender foundation Mr. Griswold raised a fabric—a Temple of Fame—that was made immortal. 'You will go down to posterity,' said a witty friend, 'as the brilliant New England lady who sent her Raven lover to prison on the evening of his bridal!'

"Now for the facts of the case. In an interview with Mr. Poe some three or four weeks previous to his lecture he had vehemently urged me to an immediate marriage. As an additional reason for delaying a union which under any circumstances seemed to all my friends full of evil portents, I read to him some passages from a letter which I had recently received from one of his New York associates. He appeared to be deeply pained and wounded at the result of our interview and left me abruptly, saying that if we should meet again it would be as strangers. He passed the evening in the barroom of his hotel, and after a night of delirious frenzy returned the next day to my mother's house in a state of great mental excitement and suffering, declaring that his welfare for time and eternity depended upon me. A physician—Dr. A. H. Okie—was sent for by my mother, who, perceiving indications of brain fever, advised his removal to the house of his friend, G. W. Pabodie, where he was kindly cared for until his recovery.

"The incident naturally caused much talk and gossip, and was, I suppose the basis for Griswold's doctored statement.

"'Only this and nothing more.'

"'S. H. W."

That, I presume, may be taken as the original authoritative pronunciamento upon which both E. S. T. (of THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW) and Ingram (in his "Life of Poe") have reared their versions of the affair. Concerning the portrait which formed the subject of the beautiful poem reproduced in THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, Mrs. Whitman wrote:

"The one (daguerrotype) taken in Providence expressly for me was photographed and sent to Ingram, and was selected by him from a number of other photographs to illustrate his memoir prefixed to Black's Edinburgh edition of Poe's Complete Works. It has been admirably engraved, and is thought by those who remember the original to be more like him than any of the other portraits extant."

Here enters the query, whether said piece of poetry, "The Portrait," is the same to which its author alludes as follows:

"I have an unpublished poem, the best, I think, that I have ever written, which I should be glad to see in print before I leave the planet, as I am preparing to do soon!"

Work of Some Artist Binders.

An important collection of bindings is now being exhibited by Meyer Brothers & Co. of this city. In point of variety of items, in number of master artisans represented, in exquisiteness of decoration, in gilt work, in inlaid leather, and in emblematic designs the exhibition will particularly appeal to collectors. The modern theory that the binding of a book should be emblematic of its text has here its most recent and finest expression. Meunier, more alert than many of his rivals, has caught the spirit of the times, and has undoubtedly established a standard for the future. His Reliures Symphoniques are perfectly in harmony with the books that they cover. Specimens of his best work occupy a conspicuous place at the present exhibition.

Among the work of other artist binders shown are the large edition of "Paul et Virginie," bound in full levant by Marius Michel, four sets of the plates being printed on satin; the famous copy of Duval's "Les Baisers," edition of 1770, full margin, leather lining, tooled edges, by Chambolle-Duru; the early poems of A. Dumas, fils, called "Fechez de Jeunesse," with five extra portraits, inscribed by the author, bound by Charles Meunier; an exquisite edition of Mérimée's "Carmen," illustrated with original water colors, by H. de Sta and bound by Ruban. Kaufman is also well represented by his chefs d'oeuvres, as are also David, Sambianck, Workmen-Petit, Kaster, in the binding of special or rare editions of Fortunio, Molière, de Musset, Boileau, "Liaisons Dangereuses," Murger, Feuillet, de Grammont, Flaubert, &c.

Scott's Best Works.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

A young girl, whom God has singularly gifted, has asked me to mark out for her a course of reading in Walter Scott's romances. Here is my tentative list: "Guy Mannering," "The Antiquary," "Old Mortality," "The Heart of Midlothian," "The Bride of Lammermoor," "A Legend of Montrose," "Ivanhoe," "Kenilworth," "Quentin Durward," and "The Talisman." As to the wisdom of this my choice I should be very glad indeed to hear from the multitudinous readers of THE SATURDAY REVIEW. JOHN BAXTER.

COLONIAL PATRIOTISM.

The Queen's Rangers.

A Story of Revolutionary Times.

By CHARLES LEONARD MORTON.

Illustrated by WILLIAM F. STECHER.

12mo. Cloth, $1.50.

The Colonial wars developed a type of heroes whose acts have won the admiration of all. The product of a new nation, they dared and did even more than the trained soldiers who opposed them. Charles Morton depicts in "The Queen's Rangers," with historical accuracy, those sturdy men, who enlisting under both British and American arms, proved their worth.

The scene of the tale is laid in and about New York City, and faithfully portrays the life in those Revolutionary days.

Our other notable new books for this Winter's reading are:—

"A Revolutionary Maid."

SIXTH THOUSAND.

THE MARKET-PLACE

By HAROLD FREDERIC.

The last work of the greatest American author of this decade, and the author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "March Hares," etc.

A story of finance and business schemes and men—and of genial characters and English country life for women.

With excellent illustrations by Harrison Fisher.

"The 'Market-Place' is a fine piece of work, one of the best novels of the year, a literary legacy that will be remembered and read on and on, hereafter. . . . From title-page to colophon it is emergent of virility. As a study of character it is supreme, for there is not one single failure in the book, and as a panorama of the City has no equal in modern fiction."—The Bookman.

Size, 6¾x7¾ inches, 466 pages, cloth, $1.50.

(SECOND EDITION.)

ACTIVE SERVICE.

By STEPHEN CRANE.

Author of "The Red Badge of Courage," etc.

A new novel by Mr. Crane, the first important one he has written since "The Red Badge of Courage." Mr. Crane was in the Greco-Turkish war as a correspondent, and he has laid the scenes of his story in the region where this occurred. Both the hero and heroine meet with many exciting adventures, and the interest in the story is never allowed to flag. There is also a charming sketch of life in a New England college town.

"Stephen Crane has reached maturity at a bound in his new novel. He has dropped his mannerisms and acquired a manner. . . . He tells his story swiftly, vigorously and always with limpid clearness. The story is worth the telling."—The New York Herald.

Size, 4¾x7½ inches, cloth, 345 pages, $1.25.

THE CROWN OF LIFE.

By GEORGE GISSING.

A strong novel by the author of "In the Year of the Jubilee," "Eve's Ransom," etc.

Mr. Gissing's latest work. In this, as in "The Town Traveller," he shows little of the cynicism that marked his early books. He has forsaken the lower strata of society and has written a charming story of love—"the crown of life."

"To the thoughtful reader, the story will be worth a dozen 'tales of love and marriage.'"—Providence Journal.

Size, 4¾x7½ inches, cloth, 300 pages, $1.50.

THE SHIP, HER STORY.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The story of the birth of the ship, her launch, her growth from the "dugout" to a great ocean steamer or an armor-clad ship of war, is described in this work. In his introduction, Mr. Russell says:

"My pages will not be accepted as a very learned and gravely important contribution to the literature of the ship. They will be regarded as mere prattle, as we wander about the ship building yard. We tell what we know and what we believe to be the truth, and if we are wrong, we apologize. . . . At the same time, it is perhaps due to myself to say that this book is the issue of considerable reading, and of my lifelong admiration of that most beautiful and poetical expression of the handiwork of man—the sailing ship."

With 50 illustrations by R. C. Seppings Wright, which Mr. Russell pronounces beautiful and in many respects faultless.

Size, 7½x10 inches, cloth, 158 pages, $2.00.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE DUCHESSE.

A Page from the Life of the Vicomte de Championnet.

By S. WALKEY.

A stirring story of adventure that should take rank with the best romances of the day.

The Vicomte was a soldier of fortune, and one of the most famous duellists of his time. For love of the Duchesse de Berri he undertakes to secure some papers necessary to expose a political intrigue, and to do this he has to personate another man whom he resembles.

The story deals with the exciting complications that ensue.

Size, 4¾x7¼ inches, 247 pages, boards, covers in colors, 50 cents.

"The resources of the book is as charming as anything in recent years."—Albany Argus.

THE DOMINION OF DREAMS.

By FIONA MACLEOD.

Author of "The Mountain Lovers," "Pharais," etc.

The spirit and the dreams of the Gael are the author's theme, and she has treated them with wonderful skill.

"For sheer originality, other qualities apart, her tales are as remarkable, perhaps, as anything we have had of the kind since Mr. Kipling appeared."—London Academy.

"Miss Macleod's work has a peculiar, aesthetic charm."—The New Era.

"Of the extreme beauty and subtlety of Miss Macleod's work, there is no need now to speak."—Literature.

Size, 4¾x7½ inches, cloth, 327 pages, $1.50.

"The Piano and Its Players."*

The present volume is not so much a translation as a free version of Dr. Oscar Bie's "Das Clavier," which, written for Germans, is in a form unchanged could there would be generally understood in England and America; so that its editors, E. E. Kelsett and R. W. Naylor, with the author's permission, have made many additions and omissions. The volume presents an exceedingly interesting history of the origin and development of the modern piano, from the days of Queen Elizabeth and her spinet down to the latest product of our best piano makers. The book is a very valuable addition to musical knowledge, tending, of necessity, not only upon its special subject, but also upon the development and perfecting of musical forms; to graceful rise of orchestral music and the opera; the great composers, and their influence upon the clavier and the final evolution of virtuoso players, with the important influence they exerted. Both in the great scope of the book and such in the richness of its contents that it is extremely difficult to a review to attempt to indicate its value. The volume is very profusely illustrated with reproductions of old musical pictures, photographs of musical instruments, old and new, bits of scores, and photographs of musicians of all ages and countries—the whole adding very much to the interest of the book.

"Old England; a Prelude," forms a sort of introduction to the book, its object being to show that music is at the present time flourishing more at home than in public; that the playing of chamber music is more popular than opera, and that, therefore, in this our own day, it is eminently proper to study the history and scope of the instrument which makes this condition possible. This may be true in Germany, but hardly so in America; however, let Dr. Bie state his own case:

> When once the clang of the violin and of the cor Anglais has faded from our ears, and all comparison has been laid aside, then, and then only, the soul of the pianoforte rises before us. * * * Is it no good thing to have the whole material of tone before one's ten fingers, to penetrate it, truly to penetrate it; to feel beneath one's nerves all the subtilties of all music—the song, the dance, whispering, shrieking, weeping, laughter—all, I mean, voiced in the tone of the pianoforte, * * * which embraces the lyrical nature of the violin and the dramatic nature of the orchestra? In such all-embracing power, the pianoforte in the twilight chamber, a strange and dear (alle tal) art, a rhapsody for the intimate spirit which can express itself by improvisation, and an archive for the historian, to whom it unrolls the whole life of modern music in its universal speech. * * * Then only do I love the piano—then is it faithful, then noble, genuine, unique.

In the days of Elizabeth the clavier began for the first time to play an important part in the world; the clavier music of that day charming us with the "extreme simplicity of musical form, and we have it because it comes before us in an archaic dress; exhaling an aroma whose popular sweetness mingles beautifully with the slight harshness of its naïve style." Among the first published clavier collections is "Chansons Madrigals, and Dances," Lyons, 1589, while in England there were to be found many manuscript collections of virginal music—"Queen Elizabeth's Virginal Book," and others belonging to the Earl of Leicester, Lady Neville, and many others. The first collection of such music, however, to be regularly published there was one engraved on copper plates by William Hole, 1611. The included pieces by Byrd, Dr. John Bull, and Gibbons, and was called "Parthenia," the title page, besides its letterpress, containing a vignette of a young girl seated at her virginal playing.

The clavier cymbal, an improved form of the clavier, owes its origin directly to the organ, its tone being heavier than that of the clavier. It would be most interesting to trace the influence of the old instruments upon the early English composers, as well as the latter's gradual downfall; "England's musical fame—omitting Purcell, the evening star—rests on this early period." English clavier music was closely connected with and influenced in its development by the song, while in France dances are the beginning of all instrumental music. In the seventeenth century the dance "still rules French music, and not merely French music, but French life"; so that a proper understanding of clavier music in France must start from a knowledge of the dance—"almost all its pieces are dances, whether they declare themselves as such or not." Couperin and Rameau were its leading exponents.

Scarlatti, "remarkable to us in the present day in that he occupies the position of an early writer whose pieces still play a part, though a small one, in modern public concerts," was the greatest clavier player that Italy ever had. Technical ability, too, is said to have been appreciated in Venice earlier than elsewhere, the Register of Organists at St. Mark's going back to 1318. At the beginning of the seventeenth century, Frescobaldi, who had gained an important position as organist and clavier player, could at his recitals in St. Peter's command an audience of 30,000 people. The author writes:

> It was inevitable that the Italians should invent the opera—the opera in which everything tends rapidly to the spectacular, singers, scene painters, musicians, and the public. Apart from its relation to opera, all Italian music is unintelligible, and it is no accident that for centuries the Italians stood in the forefront of opera.

The best-known Italian clavier, or, as they were called, cemballo, players were

The present is the second edition of the above book, rearranged and revised, the first issue having gone out of print within a month after its publication. The book is a historical sketch of music in the Middle Ages. Mr. Hope states in his preface that his book is intended to show:

> How far abroad in all matters musical England was during the mediæval times over all Continental nations, excelling especially in part writing and part singing. The major mode, harmony, counterpoint, canon, fugue and glee were first made use of, if they were not invented and originated, in this country, in proof of which there is much evidence. Dreamers there were, Lamb said, who thought "the Elizabethans had the prerogative of having the most handsome women and of being the most accomplished in the skill of music of any people."

The wanton, wholesale destruction of our cathedral and monastic libraries during the reign of Henry VIII. and again during the course of the Great Rebellion, must, no doubt, many priceless musical treasures of the past. * * * Libraries were ransacked for ancient musical service books and orders were given that these books should be torn and destroyed and that the cathedral services should be abolished. Organs were to be pulled down and the pipes melted into quart pots or made into bullets. * * * It was a period of disorganization in musical art. In 1644 Cromwell issued a proclamation that players and other musicians should be considered rogues, vagabonds, and beggars. Thus the preeminence of England as a musical nation, held from the tenth to the seventeenth century ceased, and England was left behind other nations in progression.

The study of mediæval music is necessary to the musician if he would understand modern music, while the epitome of ancient music can only be comprehended through a thorough knowledge of the principles on which modern music is based.

It is impossible clearly to understand what the established forms of musical structure mean, unless we know how they have grown up. History is or should be a key to the true philosophy of music as an art, and both ought to be studied together, or, as such a mode of study will generally clear away many of the fallacies by which musical theory is at present surrounded.

The book first takes up the music of ancient Egypt, contemporary sculptures and inscriptions on old tombs indicating they may have known as much of the

*MEDIÆVAL MUSIC AS HISTORICAL SCIENCE. By Robert Charles Hope, F. R. A. S., author of "A Glossary of Ecclesiastical Ornament and Costume," &c. Second edition, revised. London, New York: Imported by Charles Scribner's Sons. $2.

Greeks, who found [illegible] music, and [illegible] the beginning of the Christian era, and other points, it being of the utmost value. The greatest instruments were then and [illegible] the water the natural instrument. Instrumental aids after the way of Asiatic origin, the Greek [illegible] used it in this way and never to accompany voices.

Pythagoras of Samos, who lived (580-500 B. C.) is said to have been the first to use monochords to express musical sounds. He is also credited with increasing the number of notes in the Greek, increasing also the octaves to the five, and improving the manner of using that instrument. Pythagoras, (470-427 B. C.) is said to have first made music a science, extending still further the Greek scale and increasing the number of the lyre to fifteen.

Mr. Hope describes very extensively the music of the ancient Greeks, stating also that all musical histories that are founded on the "Treatise on Music," by Boethius, are misleading because the latter took up music "simply as a branch of arithmetic. He had no practical knowledge of music. He could not even tell one key of a church tune began at the top or the bottom of the [illegible] stave of Southern's treatise."

Unfortunately, this work, though quite regarded as an indispensable textbook, is too elaborate and impractical to render any real assistance to the modern student.

As yet Mr. Hope says that, though "new harmonically represented in new orchestral settings are not to be refused upon, yet, until within a few years ago the tones of mediæval music, even a knowledge of our notation for obtaining musical degrees."

Antiphonal singing was introduced into Greece from Jewish and Syrian countries; the greater "unity" being used in the music of the Latin race, so that instead of being responsive, like the chants of the present cathedral service.

The Greek compilers were characteristic melody as entirely apart, and therefore, like our congregational singing, wherein the tenor of each [illegible] with those of women and children. The unison of the [illegible] being naturally to obtain lower than the others, under the antiphonal.

The term "Ambrosian chants," being very familiar to us all, it is interesting to note Mr. Hope's statement as to that term:

> Mr. Ambrose wrote * * * he merely wished to take upon himself the task of rewriting the hymnody and the modes of execution of the hymns, psalms and antiphonals that were sung in the church which he had founded at Milan. There is some probability that the work consisted of the introduction of instrumental music as well as antiphonal chanting into the Gaulish, to also ordained that the psalms and hymns should be sung after the manner of the Oriental churches.

Mr. Hope also quotes St. Cyril on calling attention

> To the breach of the apostolic injunction by allowing women to sing in the church. He says they should sing with their lips, but not let any sound be heard as St. Paul commanded them to keep silence in the churches.

St. Augustine wrote a treatise on music and rhythm in six books, which is still in existence. Preceding here congregational singing was introduced at Milan in 386, he says:

> The devout people kept watch in the church ready to die with the Bishop, they arrived * * * Then it was first ordained that after the manner of the Eastern churches, hymns and psalms should be sung lest the people should [illegible] through the tediousness of sorrow and from that day to this the custom [illegible] there, yea, almost all the congregations throughout other parts of the world following herein.

Mr. Hope carefully examines all evidence as to the origin of "Gregorian" or "Gregorianized music," thinking it a gradual development, and not the work of any one man.

It is therefore quite a mistake to suppose that what is called Gregorian music is of the age of St. Gregory the Great. The chief genuine outlining notes than the "use of Rome," "Sarum Gregorianized of non Ambrosiano," "We who follow the use of Rome and we who follow the use of Milan." It is more than probable—almost certain—that the system of music to which St. Gregory's name has without any reason been assigned came into existence through the introduction of the organ, between the eighth and tenth centuries.

The Greeks and Romans got their organs from ancient Egypt. Water organs were supposed to have been invented by Ctesibius the Egyptian, 270 B. C., and Mr. Hope describes old organs for us, boiling us that water organs, with ten pipes, a novelty in Nero's days, had in the seventh century become so common that a gentleman's house was incomplete without one. Portable organs, carried by slaves from house to house, were also common.

The whole chapter on the "Introduction of the Organ" is an interesting one, but space will permit no further extracts, and it is only possible to add that among other chapters Mr. Hope's valuable book talks up the subjects of the "Mediæval System of Music," "Notation," (which is to music what the alphabet is to literature,) "Polyphonic" and "Measurable Music" being the subjects of the last two chapters, while an appendix contains "Monody or Harmonic Music," and a discussion of the subject of Gregorian versus Anglican music.

There are a number of interesting Mediæval musical facts scattered through the volume, such as the statement that Dunstable was the first to conduct in England with the baton, that the Italian terms for various degrees of tempo—adagio, andante, allegro—were introduced into England by Henry Purcell in the seventeenth century; that the first book printed in England with mensural notes was Higden's "Polychronicon," (Wynkyn de Worde, London, 1495;) and that a collection of twenty English songs by various writers was also printed by de Worde in 1530. Both these books are to be found in the British Museum, as is also a copy of the earliest book containing engraved music.

A Guide to Opera.*

In a remarkably well printed and attractively paged volume, the work of the University Press, appears an ably written "Guide to the Opera," containing as a general introduction an explanation of the form and structure of operas generally, their origin and gradual development; also accurate definitions of the general classes into which such works are to be divided, as well as a concise explanation of the different constituent parts, making up the general framework of such musical form.

The opera grew out of the masques and Court ballets of the Middle Ages. The first work to secure the name of "dramma in musica" was "Dafne," the poet Rinuccini writing the words and Jacopo Peri the music. This the first music drama was performed in Florence in 1597, before a private audience, the representation being so successful that Peri was commissioned to write another for the marriage festivities of Henri IV. and Marie de Medici. This opera, "Eurydice," given in 1600, was the first to have public presentation. The orchestra to whose use it was adapted consisted of a harpsichord, a large guitar, a viola di gamba, a large lute, and three flutes.

In 1607 the marriage of di Gonsaga to the Infanta of Savoy led, in imitation of the earlier celebration, to Monteverde's being commissioned to compose a second music drama, "Arianna," and the following year the same composer produced his "Orfeo," (Mantua, 1608,) with a greatly increased orchestra of thirty-six instruments, including every variety of tone—such as trombone, strings, and brass and wood winds.

Nineteen years before Peri's "Eurydice" was first heard, "Circe," a ballet comique de la royne, was given at the Louvre in honor of a royal marriage, by its composer, Baltazarini, the best violinist of his day. "These early masques and ballet operas were so magnificent, both with regard to dresses and scenery, that it is easy to see why they were a luxury for the aristocratic class."

So the introduction goes on, showing the construction of the early forms of operas—a series of arias or airs, connected by recitatives; next defining the different arias—aria cantabile, aria di portamento, aria di mezzo carattere, aria poulante, and aria di bravoura. In time the construction of operas was gradually altered by the addition of new forms—concerted pieces and finales, which added variety and animation to the existing forms, until Gluck's time, whose aim was to bring the words and music of an opera into greater uniformity, which, followed by Mozart's efforts in the same direction, had such great and important bearing upon the development and growth of our modern opera.

Wagner's reforms are too familiar to need discussion. We may recall, however, his symphonic use of the orchestra, his neglect of the aria, and his concerted finale; his banishment of ensemble pieces * * * and his employment of the leit-motifs as the foundation of his musical framework."

Miss Singleton next takes up the recitative, the earliest example of which is contained in Peri's "Eurydice," explaining its gradual development, which, like that of opera in general, owes so much to Gluck and Mozart. Passing next to the classification of all music dramas, under the four general heads of Opera-Seria, Opera Comique, Grand Opera, and Opera Bouffe, she next touches upon the overture, telling us that "an opening instrumental prelude to the musical drama, opera, or even the Court ballet, seems to have been always used. * * * Sulli's model * * * an allegro in fugue form, followed by one or two dance movements, was used for nearly a century. Gluck was the first to feel the need for preparing the hearer for the musical play." Mozart's overtures are unsurpassed, "a regular return of subject and episode, obeying the same laws of form that govern the first movement of a symphony or sonata, without a repetition of the first section." Beethoven's Lenore overture, No. 3, is more like a dramatic prelude than an overture. In her preface Miss Singleton says:

> For complete enjoyment it is as necessary to understand the music as it is the words and action for it is incontestable that every great composer considered his part in the work at least of equal importance with the dramatist's, and that he never wrote a meaningless musical phrase. The function of the orchestra thus merits the most careful attention in the old as well as the modern operas. * * * I have abstained as much as possible from mere criticism, though in some cases I have thought the opinions of great musicians and critics of sufficient interest to be admitted. * * * Of course I must expect criticism regarding my choice of operas for treatment. * * * My purpose * * * was to enable those interested to trace the progress of the lyrical drama from Gluck to Wagner. The foreshadowing of modern methods is plainly visible.

In the carrying out of her design Miss Singleton takes up and describes in much detail twenty-nine typical operas, from Gluck's "Orfeo" down to and including Wagner's "Die Götterdämmerung," each opera being prefaced by a bit of criticism by some competent musical authority, von Bülow, writing of "Don Giovanni," Liszt of "Les Huguenots," the others being done by equally competent hands. The various operas are described, act by act, both from the standpoint of the music as well as of the libretto, in such fashion as to make them very clear to us, and to completely carry out Miss Singleton's aim to "make it easy for any one to take up my book and then go to the opera and never be in doubt throughout the evening as to why any character is on the stage, or what he is doing there."

Miss Singleton's work has been very well done, and the book should find a place on the shelves of all operagoers, as well as of many other music lovers. For the full enjoyment of many an overture or other portions of an opera to concertgoers depends for a considerable extent upon familiarity with its story and the musical motives therein contained. The book is illustrated with reproductions of photographs of the leading opera singers of the day—mostly in character—and typographically, as well as from the interest of its subjects, should find many readers.

Beethoven.*

An interesting life of Beethoven appears as the initial volume of "The Master Musicians," edited by Frederick J. Crowest, the present study being from the pen of the editor of the series. In his preface the author says that, while Beethoven has been the subject of numberless books and articles, "it has been difficult to find a handy volume at once illuminative and concise—a book which, while it would appeal to the average musician, would provide the larger public with a complete and proper view of the immortal master. It is hoped the present work will meet this deficiency."

The arrangement of the book is very good. The first chapter is a concise biographical synopsis of about fifty pages of Beethoven's birth, parentage, and environment. Coming of a musical race, his father and grandfather being both Court musicians, he alone, of a family of seven children, rose to eminence. The Beethovens were poor but respectable—the Van in the name being no sign of nobility—and the father's salary of £30 per annum being the only resource of a family of nine persons. Beethoven certainly could not look back to a happy childhood. Mr. Crowest lays special emphasis upon the important bearing of this poverty:

> But for stress of domestic conditions, this second child would not, probably, have received so large a share of the parents' musical ministrations. Impressed by what had been accomplished by the father of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart as a musical wonder, Beethoven, senior, set about the shaping of * * * a child with pronounced musical ability. * * * To this circumstance mainly the world owes its heritage to Beethoven—* * * four years old when he began to study music, and who at nine had learned all that his father had to teach him.

If this were entirely true, what a debt the world would owe the family poverty! However, it would seem in the case of a man of such supreme genius that in some way, at some time, his creative faculty would surely have found a proper outlet.

The first chapter, then, rapidly reviews the life of the greatest musician of all time, from his birth in 1770 to his death, fifty-seven years later. The second part of the book, "Beethoven the Man," is larger and more interesting:

> The natural temperament of Beethoven has been much discussed, and all sorts of ideas have got abroad respecting the manner of man he was. Probably the world will never know the real Beethoven, so difficult was it for any one to make a very prolonged study of his fitful disposition. We have his letters and music, which speak for themselves, but if we wish to know more we have to fall back upon the impressions of those whose fortune, good or bad, it was to come into personal contact with him. When all this information is sifted we are still confronted with much that is contradictory, much which, placed side by side, positively negatives not a little what we would fain picture of the genius. The explanation is found probably in the fact that he was rarely caught in two moods alike, and that impressions formed of him varied according to the degree in which his good will and sympathy were aroused and extended.

The fact that Beethoven's family relations, especially with his brothers and the nephew for whom he did so much, were, to say the least, uncongenial; that his genius set him apart from his surroundings; and, above all, on account of his deafness, is probably to be largely taken in account in all estimates of his personal character. But in spite of the fact that he may have been "gey ill to live wi'," Beethoven the man was without doubt a thoroughly good, conscientious, kind-hearted man.

But the most important and interesting portion of the book for all readers is the survey of "Beethoven the Musician," which forms the subject of the last chapter. Here, in a compass of nearly a hundred and fifty pages, is a careful analysis of the lifework of one of whom Mr. Crowest writes:

> "Beethoven the Musician" is a stupendous theme. From whatever view he is considered, whether as a symphonist, chamber music composer, sacred harmonist, and song writer, or judged entirely by his solitary opera, "Fidelio," * * * Beethoven stands alone, towering pre-eminently. Of the great ones of music, Palestrina, Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, * * * who have created periods and had followers in the history of music's art, Beethoven is most conspicuous. He soars to a musical height never before reached, * * * the like of which it seems hopeless to imagine will ever be attained again. * * * The title "ton-dichter," or poet in music, which Beethoven preferred to all others, was surely never more fitly applied.

In a short review it is impossible to do more than indicate the contents of this interesting volume and to add that a valuable set of appendices contribute largely to the interest of the book. The first appendix is a Beethoven bibliography—a full list of all the books and articles either bearing upon or written about him, with an introduction suggesting lines for further reading, most valuable to music lovers. A good list of the master's published works, founded on Nottebohm's "Thematic Catalogue," comes next, followed by a chronological list of the principal events in Beethoven's life, the concluding appendix being "Personalia and Memoranda," short biographical accounts of the principal persons mentioned in connection with Beethoven; the latter not only adding very much to the interest of the book for ordinary readers other than musicians, but also to its value for reference purposes.

The volume contains numerous interesting illustrations, and should appeal, both from the interest of the subject and the fulness of its treatment, to a wide circle.

Behind the Veil A remarkable book by an author whose name is not revealed. It is curiously in harmony with the speculative inquiry of the day regarding the nature of life after death.

Behind the Veil There is nothing repulsive or shadowy about the author's idea of individual destiny in the other world. The reward of efforts that are unfruitful here is a beautiful conception, the more agreeable as it implies the retention of that individuality which every normal soul craves. This is one of the strong points of the book. The book is a direct incentive to good efforts and unworldly living, and it is very interesting.—The Beacon.

Comments and Criticisms From Our Readers.

Hapgood's "Lincoln"—McClernand and Grant.

In your SATURDAY REVIEW of Dec. 2, Page 812, an article appeared which called attention, among other things, to a statement made on Page 243 of Hapgood's "Lincoln," which reads as follows:

While McClellan was drilling the army Lincoln was steadily keeping up his fight for the political solidarity of the North and the conciliation of the Border States. When Congress adjourned, Aug. 6, and Congressman McClernand, who had represented Lower Illinois for many years, came to say good-bye to the President, Lincoln handed him a Brigadier General's commission, and told him to "Keep Egypt right side up."

The paragraph refers, of course, to Gen. John A. McClernand, who afterward became a Major General, and who still survives at the advanced age of eighty-seven years, with his mind clear and vigorous.

This new life of Abraham Lincoln contains, perhaps, some little new material in relation to the subject of the memoir, but lest its statements should be held by future historians to be all true and correct, I beg to present the evidence that some of them are incorrect and without foundation in fact.

Having enjoyed the personal acquaintance of Gen. McClernand for the last thirty years, during which time he has been a resident of this city, Springfield, Ill., I called upon him on Dec. 8, 1909, at his residence, and in the course of the interview read to him the article referred to relating to his appointment by President Lincoln as a Brigadier General. The veteran listened attentively, and his eyes flashed with the old fire of his vigorous manhood, when he fought at Donelson and at Shiloh, as he said: "The statement is absurd; there is not a word of truth in it," and, continuing, he related the circumstances under which he was commissioned as Brigadier General. The disastrous battle of Bull Run had been fought, and in consequence the entire North had become fully awake to the situation. Congress had taken steps to meet the exigencies of the hour, and, pursuant to the authority given the President, a large army was summoned into the field.

Elihu Washburne of Illinois was one of Lincoln's intimate personal and political friends and advisers. At his suggestion the members of the Illinois delegation in Congress were called together to agree upon and recommend Illinoisans to be commissioned as Brigadier Generals from Illinois. McClernand was present at the conference, and with the others voted first to recommend the appointment of Ulysses S. Grant. It was at that conference that McClernand was also named by the other members of the delegation, and he was accordingly commissioned under the same recommendation as was Grant.

To show the absurdity of Norman Hapgood's statement, it is sufficient to say that, although McClernand was at one time a member of Congress for "Lower Illinois," and wielded extended political influence in "Egypt," he had, some years previous to 1861, removed to Springfield for the practice of law, but upon the death of Representative Harris he was elected to Congress from the Sangamon district, in which was Mr. Lincoln's home.

He was not, in any sense, in the position of a political boss, and thus to be depended upon by Mr. Lincoln to "keep Egypt right side up." So much for the truth of history.

EDWIN S. WALKER.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 12, 1909.

Does it not seem that the view of the ethics of politics assumed by Mr. Schumacher in your SATURDAY REVIEW of the 2d inst. is a misleading one?

Basing his conclusions on extracts from Norman Hapgood's recent book on Lincoln, he justifies McKinley by the example of his great predecessor.

That both men listened to the popular voice is true; that both men were politicians is true; but Lincoln was a politician only when he had seen no reason to defy the narrower considerations of policy. On Page 57 of Mr. Hapgood's book it will be seen that Lincoln, with only one other legislator on his side, took an unpopular stand against slavery. Is that like McKinley's vacillations on free silver?

In the chapter called "Facing the Storm," it is shown how firmly Lincoln kept his adherents from yielding an inch on the slavery issue. The fact that he was a strong man, willing to make certain compromises, does not reduce his actions to a level with the compromises of a weak man.

Hasty generalization is a too prevalent American habit. It leads Mr. Choate to bunch together Sampson and Nelson; it leads your correspondent to bunch together McKinley and Lincoln.

One is a great man—of a certain type; the other is a small man—of a similar type.

F. H. THOMPSON.

Crawford's Men Natural, His Women Loyal.

Kindly allow me the privilege of a small space in your columns to many thanks for words.

Many are the remarks which one constantly hears, and many the criticisms one frequently reads, in alluding to this so-called "grinding out" of books, in reference to Mr. Marion Crawford. To my mind, these casual remarks express a flippant and revolting contention, which demands some response for its alleviation. Of all the writers who are now contributing to this floodtide of novels, of every shape and form, on the public, Marion Crawford, more than almost any other writer, seems to me to have least deserved the above attack.

His books, I confess, did for a time appear with almost startling regularity, but who is there who can or will deny that they were one and all interesting and well told. From a literary standpoint, in regard to style, diction, &c., I hardly think he can be harshly treated by the severest of critics. He is a storyteller, and in that capacity he is a wonderful success.

He tells a fanciful and romantic tale in a natural vein with a fluency of which few can boast.

Although slight in plots, we find in all his works a wonderful mastery of emotions, pure and simple, a most human treatment of the romantic passions painted with the touch of a genius.

His simplicity of expression, purity of diction, and marvelous display of circumstance in his conversations have at least placed him on a higher plane than the other novelists of the day.

In his "Saracinesca" series, undoubtedly the finest results from his finest pen, we have perfect studies of Roman life and society in the days when the temporal power of the Vatican was first waning. They are books in which we find various characters drawn with a consistency and firmness attained by few other modern novelists. Even now, not leaving Dickens or Thackeray, I cannot recall a character that has been represented with more rigid consistency than the famous dueling figures, so prominent in "Don Orsino." And though Mr. Crawford does not in any place hold up to us the morally deformed or pseudo-heroic hero or heroine, he does not, on the contrary, run to the opposite extreme.

He seems to have hit upon that happy medium and given to men that are natural and women that are loyal, remembering all the while that they are perfectly human, with struggles to contend with, struggles both physical and moral, the necessary struggle of all natural people. That he has become prominent and successful is due undoubtedly to his fluency in writing, his power of portraying consistently human character and passion, and also his rare and well-developed storytelling faculty, which makes all of his works interesting and fascinating.

"Via Crucis."

In your SATURDAY REVIEW of Nov. 27 Mr. Hal Walsh of Milford, Conn., finds fault with Marion Crawford's references on "affinity."

Now, Mr. Marion Crawford is the equal a student and scholar to lay himself open to such a charge of assertion as opposed by his critic. "Via Crucis" is written from an eleventh century standpoint, and cannot be held to be informed of a later century's facts and utterances. At and within the period of the Abbot's speech it was true as he said. The Council of Lateran in the next century undid much ecclesiastical legislation, and in so much reinvesting the impediment of affinity. That council, confirmed still later by Trent, took away old views and gave birth to the dictum. "Affinity does not bring forth affinity." viz., Affinitas non parit affinitatem."

REV. JOHN PRICE.

Pittsburg, Penn., Nov. 30, 1909.

"The Degeneration of Dorothy."

I begin with the humble knowledge that the opinion of an Englishman is generally derided, in fact, some one, I believe, has gone so far as to denominate the Hub as being merely a state of mind rather than a locality. However, with the odds somewhat against me, I make bold to break a spear with "Honest Reader" in regard to "The Degeneration of Dorothy," even though I have the very vivid intuition that it is quite as futile as tilting with a windmill, inasmuch as this specimen of that type which Dingeree so diligently sought hails, I see, from Chicago, a locality further known for the windy quality of its atmosphere and windy proclivities of its inhabitants rather than any transcendent taste or judgment of literature.

To begin, I beg to regard this novel in an altogether different mind. I may venture to say, superior point of view. That is, while being mildly interested in the many amusing incidents and bright dialogue, I regard as paramount its purely serious features. This book is strong, and to my fancy there is no mistaking of that fact. I fairly revelled in Dr. Archbill's strange theory elucidated to a grief-stricken father with the dramatic accoutrement of the physician's incongruous masquerade costume of a Court fool, and the striking concomitance of the poor, duped mother, a victim of Spiritualism, lying dead up stairs, the whole coming at midnight after and in dramatic contrast to the feverish glitter and frivolity of the Pettibone-Peabody ball. And this was only one of the many such strong situations which appealed to me, a poor Bostonian, not lucky enough to be born in Chicago.

Again, there is a very beautiful lesson in the admirable and apparently father being brought out of the cloak of cold, scholarly reserve, and to a full world realization of the Maker through the sorrows inflicted upon him by his child's misfortune.

I certainly would venture to say that the use of such a strange plot as the translation of blood is fully justified when the author makes such very good use of it, and not only succeeds in entertaining, but also considerably edifies his readers. The purely scientific side of the story is also, to my fancy, very delightful, because it treats on highways of what we feel all the while is a plausible impossibility. I hardly think the author will lose very bad over this Chicago opinion of his work, considering that that impressario Maurice Grau declared only last week that he will never return to that town with his troupe again, simply because Chicago will not patronize the art.

Chicago, many will remember, was the very town where one of the papers denounced the arrival of the Grau opera company and a hanged day on account of the coming week. The poor benighted inhabitants—or denizens—of that city really could not see any difference between the two, which was proved by the fact that the paper in question published the pictures of the hanged boy and the chief prima donna side by side. Oh, la, la, la, la, la!

As I, on my part, can scarcely go back on the bridge which has so pleasantly carried me over the chasm of a couple of evenings, I would ask that you, also, kindly publish this letter from

ANOTHER HONEST READER.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 10, 1909.

I agree with "Honest Reader" in regard to "Degeneration of Dorothy" and endorse him for having the courage of his convictions. That is a novel that has no more excuse for existence than a play which I had the misfortune to see last Summer in Paris and which received on the opening night (!) proof of extreme nervousness. Beautifully clad in bright hues and adorned with the glitter of the words in questionably unrestrained, and while it may suit the alcohol-strung nerves of the French has no charms for the healthy mentality of the American public. This novel is a work that is only interesting as a psychological study in moral antipathy, and, while plausible, is consequently all the more dangerous. I condemn its so-called brilliancy and characterize its very moral incomprehension, its atmosphere as they only serve to degrade in a pleasant covering the lurking portents beneath, pretty much as a cancerous growth is administered to a glass of lemonade soda.

As to the moral or point or lesson or whatever Mr. Kennedy seeks to convey, making that endeavor to his credit he refers to "practical philosophers." I might say that in that phrase he has succeeded in describing himself very, very nicely indeed. The author may claim that all evil is finally resolved into good, but such final conclusions are only due obviously as many ways to the Carthage of prophecy. It may only ever avail to say to the forest and shed its leaving transformation of blood for its plot, an article in this wide, wide country can conscientiously survive it of being superfluous that is all.

FRANK J. ALLEN.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 12, 1909.

I must really beg to take exception to "Honest Reader's" remarks in regard to "Degeneration of Dorothy." His criticism, to my taste, is altogether too sweeping and biased.

Attracted by a glowing notice in The Item of my city (Philadelphia) I procured a copy of this novel, and finished it in two sittings. I found it like a mental champagne cocktail—sparkling, snappy, and exhilarating.

I think there is a great deal of ability displayed, not only in creating a very improbable story in such a very probable manner, but also in managing to retain the reader's sympathy for Dolly—I grew very fond of her—throughout, and even in her most misguided moments.

Again, there is the admirable and deliberate delineation of honest and light fancy lightening up the tragic background, and in an striking contrast as a fabric of black velvet embroidered with a pattern of gold and silver.

I may—being a Philadelphian—be benighted, but to my taste—which bows to be thrilled—the "Degeneration of Dorothy" has all the strangeness of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, with almost—I desire to be conservative—the personal fascination of "Trilby."

"Honest Reader" practically admits that he has been entertained—which is so much as can be expected from most novels—but complains of a lack of moral publishers. I would disagree with him, for to quote the words of the review above referred to, I, too, found in it "a depth and an opportunity for serious reflection rarely encountered in the latest day glare of fiction."

Asking that you kindly give me the same opportunity as afforded "Honest Reader," I beg to remain, sincerely, CYNICUS.

Philadelphia, Penn., Dec. 11, 1909.

The Browning Letters.

I was greatly surprised on reading the article in one of your Saturday Reviews entitled "More the Brownings Wrote About Us." It seems impossible that Mr or Mrs. Browning should have held our American men of letters in contempt, or that they should have shown ingratitude for intelligent appreciation in our country. On the contrary, Americans always found in the Casa Guidi a warm welcome and genial en-ception, and it is from them almost exclusively that we knew how Mrs. Browning looked and lived and labored in her happy Florentine home. Story, the American sculptor, was one of the favored visitors, and gives us charming pictures of the gifted household. The Hawthornes, who were living in Florence in 1858, also give us vivid and picturesque sketches of the Casa Guidi inmates. Mrs. Hawthorne writes on the occasion of her first visit to them:

We found a little boy in an upper hall with a servant. I asked him if he were Pennini, (a pet name bestowed upon the little boy, Robert, at his birth.) He said yes. In the dim light he looked like a waif of poetry, drifted up into the dark corner, with long, curling hair, and buff silk tunic, embroidered with white. He took us through an ante-room into the drawing room and out upon the balcony. In a moment Mr. Browning appeared and welcomed us cordially. The balcony was full of flowers, in vases, growing and blooming. In a church opposite a melodious choir was chanting. In the dark-blue fields of space overhead the stars, flowers of light, were also blossoming one by one as the evening deepened. The music, the stars, the flowers, Mr. Browning, and his child, all combined to entrance my wits. Mrs. Browning, small, delicate, dark, and expressive, looked like a spirit, a cloud of hair falling on each side her face in curls, so as partly to veil her features, but out of the veil looked sweet, sad eyes. Musing and far-seeing and weird, the smallest possible amount of substance incloses her soul, and every particle of it is infused with heart and intellect. We soon returned to the drawing room, a lofty, spacious apartment, hung with Gobelin tapestry and filled with carved furniture and objects of vertu. Everything harmonized—poet, poetess, child, house, the rich air, the starry night. Pennini was an Ariel flitting about—gentle, tricky, and intellectual.

Another writer says: :

Toward America Mrs. Browning had always a friendly feeling. She was an enthusiastic admirer of our country, and seemed to feel a gratitude for the appreciation shown here for her husband's work, as well as for the fondness evinced for her own poetry. She told of an English lady of rank asking if Mr. Browning was an American, and added that not the smallest village in America but would have been better informed on the subject.

The Brownings have been so loved and honored in this country that now, when they have passed away, it seems a pity that any disturbing impressions should be attached to their memory.

EMILY C. COBB.

Brewster, Mass., Nov. 23, 1899.

"The De Willoughby Claim."

One feels a bond of sympathy with the reviewer of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's recent story as regards the title of that bit of fiction. "In Connection with the De Willoughby Claim" is certainly formidable, and it is with some trepidation that we attack a book bearing so fearful a name. Unconsciously, to us who are uninitiated, pictures of deeds and musty law books crowd before our mental vision, and we vacillate between getting our "mouths fixed" for a dry tale of facts or a thrilling story of legal entanglement.

The question of a book title is a more serious one than the average reader imagines. The choice of a child's name is scarcely fraught with more interest and care to its parents than is that of a book to its author. There is always the danger of lapsing into the "light," and if the impression is created that a book is "trashy" it is done for. Then, too, there is the equal danger of "dryness." One does not take kindly to a book the title of which leaves nothing to the imagination. "When Knighthood Was in Flower," I feel sure, owes much of its popularity to the romance of its name. Proper names are, it is true, the most conservative. A simple title like "Richard Carvel," "Hugh Wynne," "David Harum," and the like leave nothing to be feared, but all to be expected. Mr. Paul Leicester Ford has a happy faculty of putting much in his titles. "The Story of an Untold Love" fills one with a delicious sense of dreaminess before he opens the covers of the book. His "Many-sided Franklin" gives greater scope to the imagination, and hence more vivacity to its perusal than would a plain "Life of Benjamin Franklin," &c., have lent.

Mr. Thomas Hardy's "Jude the Obscure" was rechristened several times while still in serial form before a decision was finally arrived at. As "John Gray," "The Choir Invisible" was but a fair success, and yet, when after a year or two the book reappeared, touched up but slightly and called by another name, it sold by the thousands. After all, this would lead to the conclusion that on the eve of this twentieth century of ours Shakespeare's theory is about to be refuted, and we find that there is much in a name. G. S.

"Letitia Berkeley, A. M."

Will you permit a reader to call your attention to a noteworthy new book—a first utterance? The note rings strong, withal at times strident, in Mrs. Josephine Bontecou Steffens's novel, "Letitia Berkeley, A. M." But it is a woman's tone, and as such is often full and low and warm—a real contralto, to pursue the simile in its characteristic impressiveness. It is the voice of a clear-sighted consciousness. Without digression, without ornamentation, suggestion, or any appeal to the senses, the story stirs the feelings of the reader to a glow in its climaxes, its cases of sympathy. And because of the single purpose dominating it, the work is evenly sustained on every page. "Scientific rather than emotional," a publisher's introduction explains, but, truly, a heroic reserve of emotional powers rather ponderously understays the tale.

The terse epithet is the only diversion the author allows herself—the contradiction of verbosity, as "A breezy, out-of-doors, cold bather was Philip," when the scarcely acknowledged lovers, Horn the toy gale which took them by surprise upon emerging from warmth and shelter after their struggle against the blizzard, "Ready Philip was fairly abashed by the suddenness of his opportunity. It was his opportunity, however, and—"

The author has something to say. Her novel is a problem novel. Life is made of such problems, and she speaks out, strikes out from the shoulder in straightforward honesty, though frequently, in the first part of the story, in the words of her creation, Mrs. Ball, whose coarse and perverse make-up lend themselves to the expression of certain ideas regarding society people. This character is not altogether repulsive, because she is strong and shrewd. Also, Mrs. Ball has truth to stand by. Truth, ugly, forceful, smites harshly through her talk from the first, and she uses the bluntest of terms for what she has to say. And the climax with Philip in which the brusque woman arraigns him for his love affair with Letitia, and breaks at the last almost into profanity, is brutal in its force. She has bruised her guilty guest as if with blows; she has torn the act of his mother from its hiding place, and "he, looking up, pale, * * * realized this—in his heart he understood it, 'Does she—my mother—know that you—'

"'Know of her sin?' concluded Mrs. Ball for him, as he paused, appalled at what her directness revealed in. 'I guess she does. It didn't take but one look from me—to send her—out of New York.'" Philip's knowledge of his illegitimacy is used by her then to force him to make reparation to Letitia, whom he considers unworthy of him. The girl who has been the object of Philip's desire leaves New York all but ruined. She studies medicine in Paris, where she refuses Philip's belated offer of marriage.

A minor love story runs its tributary course toward the great stream of Robert's and Letitia's passion. At its crisis it bursts into the current of a woman's agony, reinforcing the larger flood. Masterly, this bringing together of two sombre crises! This problem, the background loves of Jadwiga and Vladimir, the magnificent, world-large passion of Robert and Letitia receive their answer and the book is done.

In THE SATURDAY REVIEW of to-day's date appear two letters referring to my epistle on the "Children of the Ghetto," to which I should like to reply. The writer of one letter most emphatically condemns Reb Shemuel for his action, losing sight, it seems, of the fact that it was the "law" he was upholding, and to a Hebrew the law is infallible—"is God," as he tells David Brandon. Zangwill seems all through the book to be emphasizing the fact that to the orthodox Hebrew obedience to the Divine command is as necessary now as when in olden times Abraham willingly placed his son on the altar for a burnt-offering to God, and to Reb Shemuel, reared in the orthodox faith, taught to reverence the letter of the law, and responsible as a Hebrew father for his child's spiritual welfare, no other course was open. As to torture in Zangwill's book the "father suffers almost as greatly as the daughter, but, goaded on by duty, he never flinches. Such adherents form the stamina of all religions, for they are the weight that prevent the "spirit" from taking too many or too broad aspects.

Beneath, the dungeon is depicted as a creature ruled by her lusts; her passion from "self," "not a triumph of Jewish law." Indeed, I doubt very much if Mr. Zangwill did not intend to make her decision to stay at home an impulse or sentiment. This fact seems to be emphasized more in the drama, for after her deliberate resolve to accompany David Brandon has been taken, the action of her father handing her the ticket while she helps him with his shroud is so full of fatal meaning that she repents her decision, and through the love and pity for her father she renounces her lover.

In reading "Children of the Ghetto" we must not forget either the religious conditions in which the characters live, or the verse that says:

Don't laugh, but a sullen people
Thou hast like all Jews shall remain
The burden of all days and sorrow
Upon the house of your pain.

The Light of Scarthey

The story is one of Adrian Landale, a young English nobleman of a hundred years ago—"the days when in Liverpool the privateers were daily fitting out or bringing in the 'prizes' . . . the days of war and the fortunes of war; days of press-gangs, to kidnap unwilling rulers of the waves;" days of "the now rather incomprehensible pursuit of gold-smuggling—a romantic subject, if ever there was one."

"It is no times of now-a-days, no ordinary scenery that would suit such adventures as befell Adrian Landale or Captain Jack, or 'Murthering Moll the second,'" the chief characters in the story of the love and life of a light-keeper, "who was once a Dreamer of Beautiful things."

CHILD VERSE

Poems Grave and Gay.

By JOHN B. TABB. PRICE, $1.00.

"The prettiest, gayest tridling with words; brief songs, each concealing a lesson in natural phenomena; verses about animals; lyrics for babies; small homilies on etiquette; two little prayers; three gems collected under the head "The Child at Bethlehem" are gathered in this volume, on the cover of which a hare discourses wisely to his brethren and harebells ring out their changes. Like Stevenson's verses, these contain meanings which may not for many a day fully dawn upon the young reader, who is taken by their pleasant sound, but that is a merit. "The Insectarian" and the explanation of the famous Washingtonian remark as a mere device to avoid going to bed, are especially funny."—Boston Transcript.

RUBENS.

Russell Sturgis.

When the century was younger the traveling student was taught to look to the works of Rubens, in the north, with the same awful respect which he was understood to feel for those of Raphael in the south. Timidly was it admitted that there were other great northern artists as well. Van Dyke was allowed to be a great portrait painter, as well as by breevet an English gentleman; but Van Dyke's greatness was enhanced by the fact that he had been a pupil of the older and altogether supreme Flemish master. Rembrandt was not so much thought of as a painter—his reputation as an etcher and as a student of quaint and curious sides of life was gladly admitted, and it was recognized that this inquisitive looker-on had painted some pictures which had their own remarkable qualities. Still, partly because his most important works lay out of the regular Englishman's tour on the Continent, and partly because the vast technical merit of his paintings, which even now baffles and annoys all but the practical student of painting, had then been hardly brought into light by critical examination, Rembrandt was passed by.

As for the Continental public, it might almost be said that Fromentin was needed to teach to it what Rembrandt was as a painter; and Fromentin did not come till 1875. But Rubens was always the demi-god; and Thackeray's half jocose but really intelligent chat about him and his pupil Jordaens, which is lost somewhere in The Cornhill Magazine or in the bound-up series of Roundabout Papers, is to be accepted as rather a protest against the too exclusive admiration among Englishmen for the great man of Antwerp. With the years following 1860, and the increasing interest in what may be called the evolution of painting, as well as in the personality of the painter, artists of more peculiarly individual gifts were minutely studied, and each of these began to have his strong and enthusiastic following. One man, himself a painter if still more a writer upon art, found that he preferred Franz Hals. Another great artist and excellent judge is but the exponent of many less potent or less aggressive thinkers when he takes Rembrandt as his one master, who can never err. Still another who notes that the Dutchmen of a time still later than Rubens's own are almost the originators of the English school of landscape, and that directly and indirectly they have influenced modern French painting to an unspeakable degree, pronounces aloud for the unmatched excellence of Hobbema, Cuyp, and Ruysdael. So that for some decades now the traveler among picture galleries has been sent to other masters than Rubens as exemplars of what is great in painting.

It is time for a reaction to set in. Rubens may not appeal to us of the modern world as prophet, as mystic, as that which the modern world craves—something different from itself. He may not appeal to the seeker after an especial refinement of some especial kind. He is a modern himself, is Rubens; and as such he does not appeal to our modern longing for the remote, the foreign, the subtle—to that which is outside of our experience. He is the chief of moderns. He is of good family, well brought up, notably courteous, and gentle in his discourse, sensitive and sympathetic, pitiful and kind to those who depend upon him or to those whom he may injure or benefit almost at will; he paints because he loves to, and continues always to paint because he is paid highly, both in cash and in praise; and also because the world has grown modern and is no longer horrified at seeing a gentleman handling the brush; because mediævalism and the feudal system have lost their grip on the northern world, where the Flemish and Dutch artisans and merchants have carried their point and made their mark. Living, then, as a most successful painter, who is also known to be a man of rank, and furthermore to have won the confidence of sovereigns and to have served some of them on very private missions of their own, this socially powerful, highly taught, highly trained, vigorous gentleman, reasonably fond of pleasure, reasonably fond of show, a leader in society if ever there was one, takes a place in art which no conception of ours can transfer to antiquity or to the world of the Middle Ages. Even Raphael's personal charm, even Buonarroti's dignity, individual power, and prestige, even Titian's long and brilliantly successful career centred in a community itself given up to commerce, even Velasquez's intimacy with his Prince and his unquestioned position at Court—even these gifts and graces failed to give to their possessors that especially striking position, as of a successful modern artist, which Rubens seems to have gained without effort. The others had the time, or the social surroundings, or the traditional prejudices against them; Rubens alone seems to have found these non-existent or easy to disregard. And he has left the most prodigious amount of important work of high, if not of the very highest, character, the most numerous array of large and extremely well-painted pictures, which any great man of the past has left as his undeniable production. It is at Antwerp and at Munich that his paintings are collected in great masses; it is there that the student must go who would learn to know his Rubens; and yet, if these two museums, the old Pinakothek at Munich and the Palace of Fine Arts in Antwerp which replaces the old Academy—if both of these were swept away there would still in Rubens paintings enough and important enough left in the galleries and churches of Europe for the student to judge fairly both of the master's greatness and of the true nature of that greatness.

The time has come for a reaction, and the present book may be at once a sign that it has begun, and a powerful stimulus to it. One is pleased to see in the preface those very appropriate words, words which claim for Rubens what is assuredly his, and waive all that is doubtful: "When we think of his diverse gifts, of his taste for science, of his literary culture, of his understanding of the political ability that made him the adviser * * * we are apt to forget that he was a painter, that he loved his art first, and brought to it all the resources of a wonderful memory and an extraordinary intelligence, a firm will, and unceasing application." Given these qualifications, with the inexplicable gift of artistic insight and artistic expression, even in a less degree than as Rubens had them, and the resulting body of work must always command respect and invite study.

Rubens was born in the year after Titian's death and three years after the death of the chronicler Vasari. When he was eleven years old Paul Veronese died. When he was fourteen years old Tintoretto died. The other great Italians had been dead so long that they must have been nearly as much "old masters" to Rubens as to us. Even Michelangelo had been dead thirteen years when Rubens was born; and when Rubens started for Italy and began his more serious studies as an artist, thirty-six years had passed since the great Buonarroti's departure from the scene of his long and hard-worked existence. Only one great master was to be Rubens's contemporary. Velasquez was born twenty-two years after him and died twenty years after him; and Velasquez is as modern a man in his life and in his art as Rubens, except in so far that he lived in dreaming Spain, always behind the age, and then at the commencement of her rapid decline, instead of in energetic and commercial Antwerp, head of the Catholic Netherlands and reaching out a hand of commercial brotherhood to the Protestant Netherlands across the Scheldt. Spain in her death struggles, under the most narrow-minded of all able Princes, dragged Antwerp down with her to what would have been ruin for a less vigorous commonalty of merchants and artisans; but the modern spirit was in Antwerp still, and waited for a century and a half until its chance came again. And Rubens himself shows the modern spirit in everything; he is a good Catholic, so far as attendance upon mass and liberalities to the Church go; but there is no sign in his writings or in his paintings that he cared for religious matters at all. He lived without suffering interference or causing scandal alike in ultra-Catholic Spain, in divided and controversial Flanders, and in carelessly indifferent Lombardy. The author of the book before us, though he does not dwell upon Rubens's mental characteristics as much as he might have done, yet notes that "his strong common sense repudiated all superstition," and that "he could not believe in the miracles which were accepted by the crowd with complacent credulity." The conclusion (Vol. II., p. 166) is that "he was naturally reticent and bound to a large number of ecclesiastics by ties of affection," but that "he did not hesitate on occasion to criticise them impartially if he thought their doctrines dangerous or their acts reprehensible."

Considering now how this book does its appointed work, it must be noted in the first place, and especially, that there are eighty plates, each made so large as has been thought expedient and without much restraint caused by the size of the book, for the page is nearly nine inches in clear width by more than a foot in height. These plates are half of them photogravures, and the other half what are too loosely described as "colored plates," the truth being very commonly that they are printed in a tint in attempting fac similes of the original drawing, or the like. Actual coloring is used in certain cases, as in the first volume opposite Page 14, where a portrait head drawn in red and black, known as "Rubens's Mother," is reproduced with great apparent exactitude. There are also nearly two half-tone prints scattered through the text. One would not disbelieve the statement on the title page had it been that there were twice as many total illustrations as are actually claimed, so close do they follow one another throughout the two volumes. As for the text, it is even calculated to serve as a foundation for the study of Rubens's art. The qualities of the painting are justly enough reckoned up as the narrative goes on. It does not go into very subtle distinctions or minute analysis of any kind, nor is there any great profundity in the art criticisms offered; but neither are there any heedless or perfunctory talk. The criticism is from a sound and safe ground of true comprehension of the painter's point of view.

The single serious fault which the book has as a history and an artistic biography is in a certain wordiness. There are places where one would gladly omit a half page of mere conjecture or the long-winded statement of our entire ignorance concerning a given episode, which ignorance might have been expressed in ten words. The question arises in the reader's mind whether this too fluent wording in certain places has not been deliberate—whether there has not been felt the need of extending certain epochs of Rubens's life to proportionately as many pages as other and better known parts of his career, perhaps in order to find room for the desired pictorial illustration. At all events this is the chief regret that the reader feels, for it is not altogether to be complained of that the writer of so elaborate a historical work should leave to others or to himself at a different time the task of minute critical and analytical description of the paintings themselves.

COLERIDGE'S ALBATROSS.

"Not Best to Kill Your Moment."

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

One of the interested and greeting readers of your truly delightful SATURDAY REVIEW awoke with more or less suppressed ire to learn of Nov. 10, hoping that one of his able correspondents would point out the moral of "The Ancient Mariner" to the busy women who failed to find one after two careful readings of the poem. Their conclusion—"that it was not best to kill your moment"—is a view over on the fearful punishment of the mariner and the crew chiefly proves. The moral lessons taught by the poem are many and apparent. Coleridge, speaking of "The Ancient Mariner," said that for a work of such pure imagination the poem had too much moral, and that the only or chief fault of the work was the obtrusion of the moral sentiment so openly on the reader as a principal or cause of action. The writer traces a third reading of the poem will enable her busy sisters to appreciate the beautiful moral lesson which the supposing mariner conveys.

He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things, both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

MARGARET FORAN.

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 10, 1900.

Punishment for Ruthless Slaughter.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

While looking through the "Questions and Answers" column in the last very notable number of THE SATURDAY REVIEW I noted a paragraph sent in by The Boston Journal giving its idea of the moral of Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner." This enlightened publication, in the most naïve manner possible, remarks: "Ladies and Gentlemen, the moral of 'The Ancient Mariner' is to refrain from killing an albatross," and then proceeds to give a description of that bird which would lead to its identification in the Desert of Sahara.

Besides being very misleading the above explanation gives one the impression that the albatross is protected from injury by a special law of Providence, which metes out a far severer penalty for the killing of one than follows the slaughter of any other fowl of the air or beast of the field. I am sure Coleridge never wrote his grand poem with any such narrow purpose in view.

Do you not rather think that Coleridge meant to express allegorically through the killing of the albatross and its results, that the ruthless slaughter of any of its creatures, especially after they had rendered man a kindness, as the albatross had the sailors, is displeasing to the Almighty, and sure to be avenged? The moral seems to me to be that God watches over all his creatures, the brute creation as well as mankind, and is sure to punish any wanton cruelty exercised against the lower portion of living things. Indeed, the poet expresses exactly this sentiment in the following verse of the poem:

He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things, both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

If Jesus even that a great poem like "The Ancient Mariner" would have a broader moral than to preach protection for a single bird out of all the rest of the brute creation.

JOHANNA LOMBARD.

New York, Dec. 12, 1900.

Origin of the Poem.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Replying to your correspondent who asks the meaning of Coleridge's great poem, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," the following is submitted:

The poem was written according to an agreement between Coleridge and Wordsworth by which each was to write a poem embodying his own philosophy. Wordsworth was to take subjects from ordinary life, softening novelty to nature. Coleridge supernatural characters, giving them human interests. Wordsworth was a realist, Coleridge an idealist.

After this it had its origin in four sources. A young man, neighbor of Coleridge, had dreamed of a skeleton ship worked by a skeleton crew. The diamond sparks were suggested by Coleridge's reading of the Epistles of Pantinus, Bishop of Nola, and the symbolism was borrowed from Catholic theology. The shooting of the albatross was Wordsworth's suggestion, derived from "Shelvocke's Voyage Round the World." Shelvocke tells that he and his companions had sent, since passing the Straits of Le Maire, seen a living creature except one black albatross, which followed them several days, until the second Captain, to a dark mood about the bird, thinking it to be of evil omen. The sight of the poem and Coleridge's application changed the color of the albatross from black to white, and made it friend and comrade of the mariners. The suffering of the bird by the ancient mariner was a violation of the law of love. Having lost the love which is the harmony of life, his heart withered until purified by sorrow. To break the law of human sympathy, says Dante, is to strike a blow at the universe. He who loves not, wrenches himself away from God. It is significant that the purification of the mariner comes through his sympathy with joy rather than with sorrow. It comes with the happiness of living things and a sense of their beauty. And with the sudden rush of gladness to his soul he heard again the sweet landsounds he was wont to hear in the old days of peace, the skylark's song, the lonely note of the thrush, and

"A noise like of a hidden brook
In the leafy month of June
That to the sleeping woods all night
Singeth a quiet tune."

The Ancient Mariner blew to explain his wrong, and to have joy again in fullness of life, but his companions are fatally punished because they consented to the crime.

deliberately and for selfish reasons, whereas the Ancient Mariner acted from a hasty impulse. Dante teaches the same lesson. Hell is the deliberate choice of evil. Not even God can save us from Inferno if we choose it.

The reader of the poem, if at all familiar with Coleridge's life, sees in it an expression of the craving of his own soul for rest from doubt in a "world gone wrong."

"Alone, alone, all all alone Alone on a wide, wide sea!"

Like the mariner, he too came home at last to rest in the sweet peace of love and hope, and to believe

"He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small,
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

In an interview the other day Mr. W. D. Howells said, speaking of the promising younger writers of America: "Well, there is Frank Norris. He wrote 'McTeague.' I read that book with wonderful interest. Frankly, I consider it one of the best novels America has produced. It has its faults—never was a work of art that hadn't. It makes a promise, and fulfills it, in itself. Mr. Norris has arrived."

"To read a book and wish there was more of it is a high tribute to the author's ability to entertain. And that is the compliment the reader will pay to Frank Norris' 'Blix.' . . . This is a charming story, crisp and spicy, with touches of humor, and full of subtle commentaries of human nature. It is an excellent study of Mr. Norris' versatility."—Detroit Free Press. "It is a gladsome story, glowsome because it is so keen, so vivid. And yet it is a simple love story that touches realities. One would just as soon try to explain the fragrance of a flower . . . One closes the book with a full jag in the heart."—London Illustrated Times.

"THE GOLDEN VANITY."

"A ship I have got in the North Country
And she goes by the name of the Golden Vanity
O I fear she'll be taken by a Spanish Gentleman
As she sails by the Lowlands low."

This is one of the most fascinating of those Old English Ballads which have such peculiar charm. Friends of George Du Maurier in this country may like to know that another version of this ballad had charm for him. It was one of the favorite songs that he used to sing so delightfully, and he enjoyed having his friends join him in the chorus, which ran:

"Bluh diddle dee for the Highlands Low"

We are told that "Widdecombe Fair" was sung on the same occasions, when Du Maurier would take his turn in joining in the chorus.

You'll find the words and music of "The Golden Vanity," and of "The Green Bed," together with some stunning pictures stencilled from color drawings by Pamela Colman Smith, in the unique book we've just issued. (A separate and similar volume contains "Widdicombe Fair.")

The Tribune says: "There is a flavor of novelty in the artist's style, and in the process by which her work is printed, which will be appreciated by collectors of picture books that are genuinely artistic."

"You must see these to appreciate their peculiar charm as holiday gifts. At the booksellers' or send "on approval." Price, "Golden Vanity," $3, to net. "Widdecombe Fair," limited to 200 copies, each with original sketch, $5 net.

His Recollections of His Long and Beneficent Episcopate.*

The present volume appears in response to earnest solicitations made by certain members of the House of Bishops in the Autumn of 1891 that Bishop Whipple would give to the public a history of his great life work, most of it being spent among the Indians of our Northwest. Probably of all the laborers in the Indian missions none has been more untiring, more earnest, or more successful than our author, the Indians' true friend. He has lived his life for them, plead their causes with our highest officials, and will probably give the remainder of his days to this once great but now downtrodden race. No one can read the Bishop's book without being in deep sympathy with these people, who are not so bad as many believe. Bishop Whipple tells us of their numerous good qualities, which at times surpass those of their white oppressors. Bishop Whipple is a native of Adams, Jefferson County, N. Y., and says of himself:

My childhood was as happy as a tender mother and a blessed home could make it. I owe much to my holy mother, from whom I learned the blessedness of God's Word, and whose unfaltering voice in speaking of Divine truth saved me from skepticism.

At the age of ten years he entered Prof. Avery's boarding school in Clinton, N. Y.; later he was sent to a school under the charge of the Rev. Dr. Boyd and the Rev. John Covert. He then went to Oberlin, but was obliged to give up his studies there on account of ill-health. He accepted an offer from his father, and for a time was connected with him in business. The Bishop was always deeply interested in political affairs, and, through the influence of Gov. Dix, was appointed Division Inspector, with the rank of Colonel, on the staff of Major Gen. Corse. Of this period he says:

It afforded many pleasant hours of recreation with the fuss and feathers of military equipage. During the scare of the patriot rebellion in Canada we were ordered to the defense of the frontier, but the Government had wisely sent out some regulars, who settled the matter before we entered upon actual service, and our military reputation was saved.

His last service in the political world was as Secretary of a State Convention. When Thurlow Weed heard that Mr. Whipple had become a candidate for holy orders he remarked that he "hoped a good politician had not been spoiled to make a poor preacher." Mr. Whipple pursued his theological studies with the Rev. Dr. W. D. Wilson, and was ordained to the deaconate in Trinity Church, Geneva, N. Y., Aug. 28, 1849, and to the priesthood in Christ Church, Sacket's Harbor, N. Y., in February, 1850. He was called to Zion Church, in Rome, N. Y., in 1849. Mr. Whipple was married about this time to Miss Wright, daughter of the Hon. Benjamin Wright. Both Mr. and Mrs. Whipple found much to do in the church parish and among the poor, especially of Rome. On one occasion:

Like most young clergy, I was overconfident of my theological attainments and of the soundness of my philosophy. The Rev. Dr. George Leeds, my neighbor in Grace Church, Utica, had asked me to preach for him. I selected the sermon which I considered my best. The following day I met Judge Beardsley, who had known me from childhood, and, laying his hand earnestly on my shoulder, as I supposed to commend my eloquence of the preceding day, he said: "Henry, no matter how long you live, never preach that sermon again! I know more philosophy than you have learned. You must not try to preach to the Judge, but to the tempted, sinful man. Tell him of the love of Jesus Christ, and then you will help him." My aunt, Mrs. George Whipple, a niece of Daniel Webster, told me that when Mr. Webster was visiting in the country he attended the little church morning and evening. A fellow-Senator said to him: "Mr. Webster, I am surprised that you go twice on Sunday to hear a plain country preacher when you pay little attention to far abler sermons in Washington." "In Washington," Mr. Webster replied," "they preach to Daniel Webster the statesman, but this man has been telling Daniel Webster the sinner of Jesus of Nazareth, and it has been helping him." These taught me that God's message to Jesus Christ is to the heart.

In 1853, owing to Mrs. Whipple's illness, Mr. Whipple accompanied her to Florida and for a time was in charge of Trinity Church, St. Augustine, and held services in many places in the State. After spending the Winter in the South he returned to Rome in the Spring. About 1856 Mr. Whipple accepted a call to Chicago, to the congregation known as the Free Church of the Holy Communion, then holding services in Metropolitan Hall. Mr. Whipple entered upon his work with great zeal and became loved and esteemed by a large number of people to whom he endeared himself. Much of his work was among Chicago's poor and outcast. "Volumes would not hold the experience of those days." In June, 1859, Mr. Whipple was elected Bishop of Minnesota and was consecrated as such on Oct. 13, 1859, in St. James's Church, Richmond, Va. His first service in his diocese was on Nov. 10, at Wabasha, a missionary station, where he baptized an infant. Very soon after he visited the Indian mission of St. Columbia, Gull Lake.

No words can describe the pitiable condition of these Indians. Our Indian affairs were then at their worst; without government, without protection, without personal rights of property, subject to every evil influence and the prey of covetous, dishonest white men, while the fire-water flowed in rivers of death.

At Gull Lake he found a few Christians among the redmen, and after his return from this visit he resolved to ever be the friend of the Indian at his door. There were

The current idea that Indians are silent and morose in their presence of strangers they are reproved, but they are naturally observant and appreciative of kindness, and their hospitality is unbounded for Indians. They are generous to improvidence, and there is a chapter on some of the great white gatherers that would have not been found. It is a relief to be preserve a calm exterior and perfect self-control under all circumstances. Indians are rarely rude or wrathful. Mechanical appliances are a terror to the Indians with new powers, and are never made the ground for making his companions uncomfortable. His boredom in meeting persons and doing is proverbial. Mentally he is charred with the Indians. Their privileges are open, and they have as unwritten law that any one has a right to sleep in them. Permission is not asked, but when a stranger enters it is accepted as a matter of course, often nothing being said on either side. The Indian's standard of excellence is symmetry of proportion. Indians are not profane, and it is well known that they do not take the name of God in vain, nor are the senseless oaths common among profane white persons. Travelers usually learn their ideas of Indian character by the vagabonds of the border villages or railway stations, who have had manhood by contact with the worst elements of our own race. It would be as just for a foreigner to describe the character and habits of the American people from what he had seen in the slums of New York.

In 1869 Bishop Whipple moved his family to Faribault, and for years his work among his people was arduous. He drove 3,000 miles each year over the prairies, holding services in schoolhouses, wayside inns, the forest, in houses of worship loaned by Christians of other denominations, and in Episcopal churches. He founded schools and even went to Washington, the Nation's capital, to intercede for the redmen.

The frontier men were loyal-hearted, and when the civil war came they enlisted gladly. When President Lincoln called for troops the first regiment that was mustered in was from Minnesota, and Bishop Whipple preached to the men May 12, 1861, and was afterward elected Chaplain of the regiment, but duty to his diocese prevented him from accepting the office. During the civil war, three times a year, the Bishop went to Washington to plead for the Indians. In his labors for these people he had the sympathy of the officers of the army, and none knew better than they the shameless violations of treaties and the dishonesty which have caused so many wars. In the report of the Indian Commission sent to investigate the atrocities committed by Col. Chivington upon the Cheyennes, Gen. Sherman said:

The scenes which took place that day would have disgraced any tribe in the interior of Africa. This Indian problem, and a good many other problems, can be solved by one sentence in an old Book. "Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you."

The question of money-earning industries for the Indian women received much attention. They are very skillful with their needles. Miss Sibyl Carpenter became interested in these women, taught them lacemaking, and beautiful laces are now sent to all parts of the United States. There are at present eight schools for teaching this industry, and the teachers are true missionaries.

On July 16, 1862, Bishop Whipple laid the cornerstone of the Bishop's church in Faribault. The church was called the Cathedral Church of Our Merciful Saviour. The idea was to make the cathedral a centre around which would be built up schools. The first of these to materialize was the Seabury Divinity Hall. This cathedral was the first one of the American Church in the United States, and was consecrated in 1867. In 1866 St. Mary's Hall for young girls was opened, and later a boys' school.

In 1870 Bishop Whipple was obliged to spend part of the Winter in Florida, on account of poor health. He there met some of his old parishioners, and after the death of his daughter built a memorial church in Maitland. "In 1886, in response to an invitation from the Archbishop of Canterbury, on the nomination of our Presiding Bishop Williams, I preached the opening sermon before the Lambeth Conference in the chapel of Lambeth Palace." He also preached the sermon at the consecration of the Croyden Church, and delivered another sermon before the University of Cambridge, which institution conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

During his remarkably useful life Bishop Whipple has been quite a frequent traveler. In 1890 he started on a trip to Egypt. When en route he stopped in England, spending a Sabbath at Windsor, where he delivered the morning sermon in St. George's Chapel and met the Queen in the afternoon. The following day she sent to him a portrait of herself, also a copy of her "Journal in the Highlands." After a delightful trip the Bishop returned in better health and again resumed his work in his diocese, for to him there seems to be no work so dear.

This autobiographical sketch is most entertaining and instructive. It gives the experience of a man whose broad, active life has brought him into close contact with all classes of people and with all great questions of his time. He has been acquainted personally with most of the contemporary men of note in all walks of life. The history of his own life involves to a measure the history of our country. As told by him, it is delightful reading, and one feels as if acquainted with the author and his friends. His great work has been with the Indians, but to tell of it all requires the space of his large book, by no means too large for perusal, but not to be condensed into this brief notice. The work, those "lights and shadows" of a brilliant and noble man's life are of immeasurable value, both to churchmen and men of the world. It is a most complete description of many years grandly spent, yet all is told without ostentation.

Sermons and Obituary Notices at the Time of His Death—Buried Before His Death Was Generally Known.

In remaking the death of George Washington, which has been recently brought to memory in view of the anniversary of that event on Dec. 14, it seems almost as though one's attention were carried back into ancient history, so rapid has been the material growth of our country since 1799. How swift has been the advance in all those things that pertain to the higher civilization. Take one—that of travel and methods of communication; what a parody upon the present system seems the slow, cumbersome way of our forefathers that now arouse both contempt and wonder.

It is easier to hear from Manila and South Africa than it was to learn of Washington's death. In many parts of the country it was long after Christmas before the fact was known, and in spite of the comparatively short distance between Mount Vernon and New York, the truth remains that Washington had died and was buried before the residents of this city knew anything about it. He died Saturday night, Dec. 14, and was buried with simple honors on Dec. 18 on his Mount Vernon estate. On the morning of Dec. 19 the New York papers published their first accounts of his death. Deep black lines bordered most of the pages, and in many cases these were continued for several days.

The New York Daily Advertiser, then published by Charles Holden, at 71 Pine Street, added black lines between every column on Saturday, Dec. 21, and embellished the leading column with a crude cut of a funeral urn, under which were the words "Hung in the heavens with black. Geo. George Washington, covered with glory and rich in the affections of the American people." A brief editorial eulogy was closed by the following contributed lines, which are a fair sample of the numerous poetical tributes called forth at that time.

From Vernon's mount behold the hero rise!
Resplendent forms attend him through the skies.
The shades of war-worn veterans round him throng
And lead onward, their honored chief along.
A laurel wreath th' immortal Warren bears,
Ascends triumphal Mercer's hand prepares,
Young Laurence, next th' avenging bolt of war,
With port majestic guides the glittering car.
Montgomery's godlike form directs the way,
And Green unfolds the gates of endless day.
While angels, trumpet-tongued, proclaim
Thee all
Due honors for the first of men prepare.

Every newspaper in the United States, irrespective of political differences, contributed its share in eulogy of Washington, and for many days their columns were filled with accounts of Washington's funeral services and orations in other places.

The Alexandria Times was the first newspaper to print the news of Washington's decease, which it did on Monday morning, Dec. 16, in this simple paragraph:

It is our painful duty first to announce to our country and to the world the death of Gen. George Washington. This mournful event occurred last Saturday evening about 11 o'clock. On the previous night he was attacked with a violent inflammatory affection in his throat, which in less than twenty-four hours put a period to his life.

Funeral services were held in all the large cities, those in Philadelphia and New York being the most impressive. In the former city the memorial services were attended by President Adams, his Cabinet, and all the members of the House and the Senate. Gen. Henry Lee, the Revolutionary "Light-Horse Harry," delivered the oration in which occurs that well-known phrase, "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." All the rest has long since sunk into oblivion, although at the time it was one of the most popular of the Washington eulogies and was widely published in pamphlet form in this country and in London. In New York services were held on the last day of the year, and Governeur Morris gave the address, in St. Paul's Church. Every society in the city had its representatives. Gen. Alexander Hamilton was one of the chief mourners, and with him were many members of the Cincinnati and old Revolutionary veterans. All theatrical performances in the new Park Street Theatre had been abandoned for over a week, and when the doors were reopened on Monday evening, Dec. 23, the interior looked more like a temple of mourning than a house of gayety. The chandeliers and pillars supporting the balcony were covered with black, and the exercises were in keeping with the somber appearance. Besides the exhibition of a funeral urn surrounded by figures commemorative of Washington and his deeds, the chief feature was the recital of a monody by the English actor, Thomas A. Cooper. The poem consisted of ninety-eight lines, and was composed by Charles Brockden Brown, the first American to adopt literature as a profession, and who at that time was publishing a magazine that had the usual ephemeral existence. About ten days later the monody was repeated by request.

The proclamation of President Adams, setting apart Feb. 22, 1800, as a day of mourning, furnished an opportunity for hundreds of eulogies and sermons. Many, to be sure, were given before that time, but the published records bear witness to the fact that the great day of oratorical tribute to Washington was on the 22d of February. Franklin B. Hough in 1865 enumerated 220 titles, and it is quite probable that a number escaped him.

Some of these sermons make very curious reading to-day, and were it not for the fact that Washington formed the subject of

OPINIONS FROM AUTHORITIES

EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN says of "In Chimney Corners," Mr. Seumas MacManus's book: "Not the least doubt as to the prerogative of your Donegal boy, Seumas MacManus. We are on 'the old sod' at once, whether reading his folk-lore and country sketches, or—having him read them for us."

Says Col. John F. Finerty, of Chicago, editor, author, and, above all, Irishman: "I consider Seumas MacManus the premier Irish sketch and character writer of the day. His dialect is easy and natural, and since Carleton, no novelist has given a truer delineation of Irish peasant character."

William McAdoo, late Assistant Secretary of the Navy and a native of Mr. MacManus's own Donegal, says: "His work breathes the very spirit of the soil and is charmingly fresh and natural. . . . Mr. MacManus is one of the writers of the new Celtic school who are doing a great work in taking Irish literary effort out of the rut into which it had fallen."

The Dublin Daily Express says of the illustrations, which have "created a sensation" across the water:

"Celtic folk-lore and legend has at length found an artist . . . The illustrations which Pamela Colman Smith has supplied for a volume of Donegal folk-lore, by Seumas MacManus, will make the book as widely talked of in art circles as among folklorists.

"The pictures are colored prints, simple, brilliant, and decorative, suggestive of the Japanese style. The Irish princesses and peasants, the beggar men and kings, are fantastic and brilliant, yet full of life and character."

their theme, they would not even interest the collector of Americana. Not only was Washington compared to all the worthy characters in Biblical history, but the heroes of Greece and Rome were held up as parallels of his greatness. One of the best samples of this method of eulogy is found in the very able sermon delivered by the Rev. Dr. William Linn before the Cincinnati Society in this city. Dr. Linn was one of America's strongest pulpit orators. The Cincinnati members were so pleased with his discourse that they made him an honorary member. Among his tributes to Washington, he said:

Like Fabius, he was prudent; like Hannibal, he was unappalled by difficulties; like Cyrus, he conciliated affection; like Cimon, he was frugal; like Philemon, he was humble; like Pompey, he was successful. If we compare him with characters in the sacred records he combined the exploits of Moses and Joshua, not only by conducting us safely across the Red Sea and through the wilderness, but by bringing us into the promised land; like David, he conquered an insulting Goliath.

Timothy Dwight, the versatile President of Yale; Joseph Willard, President of Harvard, and Samuel Stanhope Smith, President of Princeton, all delivered eulogies on Washington, that of the Harvard President bearing the unique distinction of being the only one given in the Latin language. Dr. Dwight's sermon was honored by being published with a portrait of Washington, now very rare. Only three or four of the large number of orations that were published in pamphlet form contained a portrait. Engravers were scarce in those days, and it took some time to make a plate, and most of the sermons were printed as soon as possible after being delivered. A pamphlet containing two sermons by the Rev. Dr. Uzal Ogden of Newark is sometimes found with a copperplate portrait of Washington.

The Right Rev. Bishop John Carroll preached a birthday memorial sermon in St. Peter's Catholic Church of Baltimore. The Rev. Dr. James Madison, Bishop of the Episcopal Church in Virginia, preached on the same day in Williamsburg, choosing as his text, "I have fought a good fight and have finished my course." This was one of the few Washington orations that was republished in London. Simon Chaudron delivered an oration in French before a Masonic lodge of his countrymen in Philadelphia on the virtues of Washington. His discourse was printed in pamphlet form and also appeared in many newspapers.

All classes sought to do honor to the memory of Washington, and a review of the names of the speakers reveals many who held prominent places in various walks of life a century ago. The muse of poetry was also invoked, and the papers of the day published scores of odes, monodies, elegiac poems, and hymns, the majority of which are unmistakably crude in construction, but they struck the popular chord of condolence, and show no lack of patriotic sentiment.

It may be well, in closing, to give one of the best of these poetical tributes, and the lines will surely lose none of their interest when it is said that they were written by Dr. John Aikin, an Englishman of considerable literary and scientific abilities:

Point of that pyramid whose solid base
Rests firmly founded on a nation's trust,
Which, while the gorgeous palace sinks in dust,
Shall stand sublime and fill its ample space:
Elected chief of Freedom! greater far
Than Kings, whose glittering parts are fixed by birth,
Named by thy country's voice for long try'd worth,
Her crown in peace as once her shield in war!

Deign, Washington, to hear a British lyre,
That ardent, greets thee with applausive lays,
And to a patriot hero homage pays:
O, would the muse immortal strains inspire
That high beyond all Greek and Roman fame
Might soar to times unborn thy purer, nobler name.

"English Cathedrals always have a certain fascination for American tourists, and more than one well-known American has put in book form his impressions of these venerable monuments of the English Church. That the present enthusiasm bears a deeper sentiment from the fact that the history of such structures is entwined so closely with the early development, and therefore may be accepted as carrying more accuracy of impression than such work by an outsider. The beautiful illustrations add materially to the value of the books and their artistic binding leaves nothing to be desired."—NEW YORK TIMES.

FROM WEST TO EAST.

On Tuesday every book-jobber in New York City sent in "re-orders" for "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington, and when they ordered 250 or 500 we had to cut the order in two to supply these demands and those from other cities. (This, by the way, did not include Wanamaker, who sells as many of the books at retail as most jobbers.)

It has taken New York just five weeks to discover "The Gentleman from Indiana." The book has been selling very rapidly through the Middle West—particularly in Chicago. Indianapolis alone has already had over a thousand copies.

It's easy to see why Mr. Tarkington's first book has so soon made its way. It's a strong, clean, wholesome love-story of the Middle West, real but charmingly romantic, and with a vein of irresistibly subtle yet kindly humor.

It's here to stay. You'll hear a good deal of it within the next months.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Items Gathered During This Week's Tour of the Publishing Houses.

I.—NEW YORK.

"The Charming Rinks," by Arabella Kenealy, author of "Dr. Janet of Harley St.," and "Mrs. Ames Such Gentleman," is being prepared for publication by Harper & Brothers. It is a romance, very much in the style of "Jane Eyre." A new volume by Cutcliffe Hyne, "The Lost Continent," is also in active preparation by the same house.

Edward F. Bigelow, editor of Popular Science, a well-known specialist in nature studies, will conduct a new department in the St. Nicholas to be called "Nature and Science for Young Folks."

An Irving and Terry souvenir has been published this week by the Doubleday & McClure Company. Besides other drawings the leaves contain four pictures in color by Pamela Colman Smith. They represent Sir Henry Irving as he appears in the last act of "Robespierre," and Irving and Miss Terry as they present themselves in "The Merchant of Venice," "Nance Oldfield," and "The Amber Heart." A descriptive text, which has also a biographical tendency, is contributed by Mr. Bram Stoker, Sir Henry's manager, and the author of "Dracula."

Mr. H. T. Finck, having allowed himself a fortnight's rest after reading the final proofs of his "Primitive Love and Love Stories," which has just been published by Charles Scribner's Sons, has begun work on a book of 40,000 words, which will be entitled "Songs and Song Writers." He has promised to have it ready for his publishers by early Spring. The volume will chiefly concern itself with the neglected treasures of lyric song.

Mr. Caspar Whitney has resigned from Harper's Weekly, and propose to found a home for the literature of the "free people," as Kipling happily calls them, which will include not only the publication of books on sports, travel, and adventure, but a monthly magazine devoted to the same subject. A weekly paper is also projected which will cover current comment, news, and criticism.

Three weeks after publication George Ade's "Fables in Slang," published by Herbert S. Stone, has passed into its nineteenth thousand.

La Grande Revue, a periodical started in Paris under the editorship of Maitre Labori, who defended Dreyfus at the recent trial in Rennes, has sought to attract American readers to its pages by advertising in THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW. We certainly hope that the confidence of the proprietors of La Revue has not been misplaced. Time will show them better than anything else. It may properly be added that THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW has many friends abroad who take a keen interest in its success, and whose letters of appreciation have appeared from time to time in these columns. La Grande Revue is something on the plan of the New Lippincott's. Novels by André Theuriet, Jean Richepin, Leon Daudet, Jean Aicard, and G. Rovetta will shortly appear in it. Articles are also promised by Anatole France, Gabriel Monod, Havet, Clémenceau, de Prés-ensé, Joseph Reinach, and Emile Duclaux.

In the first ten days of December 23,000 copies of "David Harum" were sold. The book has now reached its three hundred and ninety-first thousand. A short time ago we mentioned the fact that the story was rapidly making its way in the West. We are now enabled to present documentary evidence that this is a fact. The following extract is taken from The Emporia (Kansas) Gazette: "The Gazette is pleased to note that culture is pushing through the great American desert very rapidly, for in Smith Center the public library advertises that great and good book, 'David Harum,' by that popular young author, R. Kipling."

Richard Le Gallienne's new book, "The Worshipper of the Image: a Tragic Fairy Tale," is being published by John Lane of the Bodley Head.

Pancoast's "Standard English Poems," published by Henry Holt & Co., together with Kleuze's "Deutsche Gedichte," and Canfield's "French Lyrics," also published by this house, constitute quite a little library of the world's best poetry. And to this list might be added Lucas's "Book of Verses for Children." "Standard English Poems" is the most complete work of its kind since Dana's monumental "Household Book of Poetry." It is interesting to note that the only poem by a living author included in Mr. Pancoast's work is Kipling's "Recessional."

In the "World's Wheat Supply," which is presently to be published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, Sir William Crookes, President of the British Wheat Association, runs a tilt against Mr. Edward Atkinson. Mr. Atkinson criticised severely the statement made by Sir William at the meeting of the British Association, to the effect that by 1930, at the present rate of increase of population, not enough wheat-producing land would be left in the world to supply bread eaters with the average eight bushels a year now consumed by them. Mr. Atkinson asserted that this was absurd and averred that in the United States alone new land fit for wheat raising could be brought into use to supply all the world with wheat. To this statement Sir William now replies, taking up the States of the Union one by one and pointing out how small are the areas of land fit for wheat growing which are not now in use. He still maintains that by 1930, if the population increases at its present rate, there will not be land enough left in the world fit for raising wheat to supply the bread eaters with food. He is supported by two eminent American authorities, Mr. C. Wood Davis and the Hon. John Hyde, Statistician of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The Roycroft Shop has now ready in a limited edition, "Ali Baba of East Aurora," by Fra Elbertus, "being an appreciation, discreetly done, of the life, labors, and pub-

Harper's Magazine for January will be marked by several important special articles. Archibald Colquhoun will write on the spread of Russian power in Northern Asia in an article entitled "The Occupation of Siberia"; Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University, will contribute an article on "What the Founders of the Union Thought of Territorial Expansion"; Chalmers Roberts will give a portrayal of social life and customs in Cairo; Arnold White will write on the British Colonial Office, and Julian Ralph will present a paper on one of the most beautiful and unknown Indian cities, Oudeypore.

David D. Wolf's "Her Ladyship's Elephant," published by Henry Holt & Co., is now selling in its ninth edition. "The Cow Gaddy," in spite of the failure of the play based upon this novel, has now gone into its twenty-first impression. By a curious whim of the reading public more copies are being sold during the present month than were disposed of during the corresponding period last year.

Apparently all the energy in the publishing business is not confined to this side of the Atlantic. Here is an example of what a London publisher can do when put to the test. When Mr. Edward Arnold found that his first edition of 5,000 copies of "Red Pottage" was leaving him at the rate of a thousand copies a day, he promptly ordered 10,000 copies to be printed, bathered, bound, and delivered within six days from the date of his order. And, lest his customers should suffer in the meantime, he informed them that, as he had sold 2,000 copies of the first edition of "Red Pottage" to Mudie's Library, the book could doubtless be seen there without any undue delay. It is not an unusual thing for authors to think and say that if only their publishers would pay a proper amount of attention to their particular books, there would be no difficulty about their reception by the public, but it is hardly probable that Miss Chetwynd-Ley will feel that she has any cause for complaint against her publisher on the ground of lack of enterprise. Harper & Brothers are presenting the American issue of this book.

Collectors of Omar Khayyam editions may be interested to learn that in 1887 Frank Siller of Milwaukee issued a booklet of translations which included thirteen epigrams from the Persian of Omar. The little duodecimo volume was called "Songs of Manitoba and Other Poems," and was published through a local book firm, T. H. Gray Company. It is now quite scarce. The poems include translations from the German, Spanish, Russian, Pseudo-Omar, and a few from the Persian of Djelladin Rumi, in addition to the thirteen Omar epigrams. The book antedates by one year the "Strophes," issued by Leslie Garner, also a Milwaukee author. Siller translated "Evangeline" into German, and the translation was Longfellow's commendation. His Omar translation is not so well done. The form made familiar by Fitzgerald and later translators is not preserved, the too evident desire to be literal has caused the translator to sacrifice considerations of greater importance.

The haughty Englishman who never ask years ago "Who reads an American book?" would hardly believe his eyes if he could have taken up THE NEW YORK TIMES a week ago and read the announcement of The Illustrated London News, one of the most conservative of British papers, which declared that "nothing in Europe or America could be found so fitting to offer to its friends at this holiday time as that princely American work, the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary, edition of 1898." This British journal states further that it is itself devoted to pictorial art, and is captivated by the art features of the Standard Dictionary, with its many full-page colored plates and its thousands of illustrations, to say nothing of its rank in lexicography.

Dr. D. T. Callahan has just published through the Cambridge Encyclopedia Company a new satirical comedy, entitled "Wall Street; or, the Making of a President; a Crime in Four Acts."

A new edition in ten volumes of the works of Jane Austen has just been published by the Macmillan Company. A colored frontispiece accompanies each volume. The edition is uniform in size and binding with the Temple Classics. The same house is also publishing "Literary Reminiscences," by Edouard Grenier, translated from the French by Mrs. Abel Ram; "Henry Irving, a Record and Review," by Charles Hiatt, author of "Ellen Terry and Her Impersonations"; the fourteenth volume in the series of the novels of Ivan Tourgenief, "A Desperate Character and Other Stories," and Clement Scott's book on the English stage.

One of the interesting features of the publication of the late John Bartain's "Reminiscences of a Very Old Man, (1808-1897)" is the attention given the book by collectors and extra illustrators. Many copies have been purchased by collectors of prints, who are making most valuable volumes by the insertion of numerous and rare illustrative engravings.

The current issue of Harper's Weekly is the Christmas number. Many of the illustrations are in tints or colors. Frederic Remington, for example, has made some striking pictures for Fitz-James McCarthy's "The Military Search for Betty McKeever." There are also pictures in color by Howard Pyle and E. Herbig. A timely article has been contributed by Brigham Young, entitled "Shall the Mormon Question be Revived?" Two full pages are given up to the reproduction of photographs taken during the first battles around Ladysmith.

The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia will present its Christmas number Dec. 21. The opening story will be by Rudyard Kipling; it is a tale of Private Ortheris and his dog. Garm; Joel Chandler Harris will tell "Why the Confederacy Failed," a thrilling story of the Secret Ser-

II.—BOSTON.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Under Two Flags is Cuba" was the title by which Capt George Clarke Musgrave intended to publish a book early in the spring of 1898, but, being arrested as a spy and sent to Spain, the circulation of both the manuscript and the photographs by which it was to be illustrated was limited to Gen. Blanco and those members of his staff who were able to read English. Released upon the demands of the British Government and ridden, on pain of death, not to return to the island, he embarked with the American military expedition, and, after the fall of Santiago, recrosse his track, adding another flag to the gaily in the title, only for the publication to be again delayed by a wound received in what he calls an impromptu duel with a Spanish Colonel, and it at last appears from the press of Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. as "Under Three Flags in Cuba."

Capt. Musgrave's first landing in Cuba, before he wrote "The Cuban Insurrection," was as a filibuster, and acquainted with the patriotic resolves of Spain and strongly sympathizing with her, and he writes with uncommon impartiality. More than two-thirds of the book is devoted to the period between his landing in 1895, and the American declaration of war, and his opinions are changed by what he saw, although he makes no claim to perfection or even for conveying humanity for the Cubans. Indeed, he writes with real impartiality, and his closing chapter, summarizing the present needs and proper policy for the government of the island, is worth more than the entire contents of some of the volumes written by clever persons whose acquaintance with Cuba, land or free, is reckoned only by months.

Mr John Trevitt Trout's "The Iron Star," issued by the same firm, is a remarkable series of historical sketches, each a link in a chain formed from the iron of a meteorite which fell to earth in prehistoric times. It takes the young reader through the ages of stone and bronze, introduces him to the lake dwellers, the vikings, and canutes, England, tells him of the Crusades and Magna Charta, and at last of Columbus and Miles Standish. The scheme is very skillfully worked out, and the author's wide line illustrated the book with examples of ancient implements and strange foreign weapons, and scenes occurring in the story. Mr Trout's stories and verses for children are good, but he has written nothing approaching the merit of this book.

A pretty little book, entitled "Bruno" and written by Byrd Spilman Brown, has been added to Messrs. Little & Brown's list since the catalogue was prepared. It is a story of a dog's life and death, and of the faithfulness which made him a genuine companion to his masters. Not a learned dog like Dietrich, but an elegant morsel of refinement like Lowell's Brunetto is a dog whose character is not likely that lovers will be quite complete for them until they can go over to the "Happy Hunting Grounds" to get Bruno to live with them again.

With this book will come the long-delayed "The Nabob," the first issue of the new edition of Daudet. It is in two volumes, each with a frontispiece, and it has a long critical introduction by Mr. Brander Matthews, who thinks that Daudet has more humor and more charm than Balzac, Hugo, Flaubert, Maupassant, or M Zola, more sympathy than any but Hugo, more sincerity than any but Flaubert, and to perhaps a rarer combination than any of them. The translation is Miss Wormeley's. Two other pieces of French fiction will accompany it—M Bourget's "Pastels of Men," ten stories published eight years ago by Messrs. Roberts Brothers, and now given the author's portrait as a frontispiece, and M Cabanton's "The No 13," in a new translation by Mr. Queen Saunders (yes, and a name of a dusky red with wickedly suggestive dark lustres, for to a rose coloring he took. No author has been more translated than M Cabanton, for he has been the victim of pirates with whom style is of no consequence. The present version is in English rather better than the French of the original.

Literary Boston will remember the gentle Charles T Brooks, who made German translations a labor of love, starting patiently for hours over an intractable verse and happy as a child when he had discovered its exact English equivalent. A smaller circle remembers him as the author of a spiritual portfolio hymn, in the same measure as "America," but written to "Hark," a much better and more inspiriting air, but the last generation of children knew him as the translator of "Max and Maurice" by Wilhelm Busch. The two heroes of this book are combined practical jokers, whose horrible end was taken as a warning to the primitive days of 1870. A second book, "Plisu and Plum," describes the descendants of a malicious man, who also comes to grief. The former book is printed on terra-cotta paper, the latter on bluish-green, and both are illustrated with German pictures, funny with a species of innocent ugliness—something like the ugliness of a Brownie.

Mme Stevenson made "The Child's Garden of Verses" a standard of comparison, nothing has so nearly approached it as some of the brief poems in Pauline Tabb's "Child Verse," recently issued by Messrs. Small, Maynard & Co., but they do not in any way resemble Stevenson, who wrote as a child would wish to write. Father Tabb writes to make the child think or else to make it smile and prefers the latter result. Even the little prayers are quaint, as if he would make the little ones smile even while kneeling. Mr Goodhue has given the book pretty end papers with line drawings, showing a child who opens its eyes to the Christmas dawn to find a new rocking horse impatiently awaiting its rider, and the same youngster kneeling to say his evening prayer with the stars looking in at the window. Inviting blank spaces solicit one to write the name of some small child therein. Father Tabb himself writes a stanza for each lucky children as have "author's copies."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"E. M. S.," New York City: "Will you kindly give me the poem of which I herewith quote two lines, and the author's name?

'Love me little, love me long,
Is the burden of my song.'"

This should be found in any good collection of old ballads. The two lines quoted occur in a ballad published about 1570. Marlowe used the first line in his play, "The Rich Jew of Malta," acted in 1591, though not published till 1630.

"J. McM.," Ithaca, N. Y.: "In answer to the inquiry of T. H. Loomis, 191 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, I would say that the poem, beginning 'Hast thou sounded the depths of yonder sea,' is, I believe, by Frances Ridley Havergal, the English writer of religious verse."

"J. L. S.," New York City: "What is the value of an old copy of St. Thomas Aquinas, 1487, in the original binding?"

Without knowing which of the works of Aquinas this is, the value is hard to determine. Possibly it is worth from $10 to $30.

"Lennox Rose," New York City: "I should be glad to hear any particulars about the first folio (1623) edition of Shakespeare's Works; the present value, about how many copies now in existence, and if any are on exhibition in New York City."

In 1623 thirty-six of Shakespeare's plays were printed in a folio volume of nearly 1,000 pages at the charges of W. Jaggard, I. Smith Weeke, and W. Aspley, as well as of Edward Blount, the plays being arranged under three headings: "Comedies," "Histories," and "Tragedies." The volume contained on the title page an engraved portrait of Shakespeare, and was sold at £1 a copy. Sidney Lee says Jaggard and his associates probably printed about 500 copies, about 200 of which have been traced within the past century. (George Steevens believed that only 250 copies were issued.) Lee states that only twenty copies are now known in a perfect condition, and mentions Conigsby Sibthorp's copy, (13½ inches high;) Daniel's fine copy, (13¾ by 8¾ inches,) purchased by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts for £716 2s. in 1864, and the British Museum, Devonshire, and Huth copies. At least six other fine copies, however, are owned in Great Britain, and about a dozen in excellent condition are in American public and private libraries. At the Lenox Library our correspondent can see four copies of the first folio, (another, the Phoenix copy, is in the Columbia College Library,) as well as copies of the other folios and the best literature on the subject. The article on Shakespeare by Bohn in his edition of Lowndes's "Manual," pages 2,253-2,386, has much interest; Justin Winsor's "Bibliography of the Original Quartos and Folios," Boston, 1876, possesses great value; Sidney Lee's article in the "Dictionary of National Biography," fifty-first volume, elaborated in 1898, and published separately by Macmillan & Co., has importance. Last Summer a copy of the first folio brought £1,700 in London. This is the record price. Other high prices paid at auction are as follows: Ives sale, New York, 1891, $4,200; sale in London, 1896, £750, (now in America;) Daniel sale, 1864, £716 2s.; Thorold sale, 1886, £900, (now in America;) Ashburnham sale, 1898, £585; Henry Perkins sale, 1873, £585; Tait sale, 1878, £480, (now in America.) Charlemont sale, 1865, £455; Tite sale, 1874, £440, (later sold at the Ives sale and now owned here;) Frederick Perkins sale, 1889, £415.

"Buffalo," Buffalo, N. Y.: "Will THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW kindly define or explain what is meant by 'naturalism,' 'impressionism,' 'realism,' and 'symbolism' in literature, and name authors who stand as exponents of these various schools? What are the titles of two or three of the best books of George Moore?"

1. Volumes have been written in defining these "schools" and in establishing or demolishing the claims of their disciples. Generally speaking, "naturalism" may be defined as a careful adherence to nature in literature, or the attempt to depict persons and things as they actually are; "realism" may be said to be the depicting of character and scenes as they are believed to exist. The writers of neither school pretend to give "all," but in matters of selection "naturalism" may be said to take the average and "realism" the significant. Realists themselves deny this, however. Mr. Howells once wrote, "The realist finds nothing insignificant; all tells for destiny and character; nothing that God has made is contemptible." Nevertheless, Mr. Howells does not hesitate to omit all that seems to him to be inconsistent with his theme. "Impressionism" is neither the attempt of the literary artist to represent the actual (naturalism) or the significant, (realism,) but the attempt to set before the reader the exact emotions that moved the writer at given times, without opinions, without judgment, and without moralizing. "Symbolism," as its name implies, consists of the use of symbolic words and phrases in poetry that have a significance beyond their dictionary meaning. It is an appeal to the emotions rather than to the mind, and produces its effects quite as much through phonetics as by figures of speech, strange words, and strange combinations of words. It is hard to name any author as the exponent of any particular school, for the simple reason that the self-avowed exponents are rarely consistent with their respective creeds. M. Zola has been called the high priest of naturalism; Balzac has been called the father of realism; M. Pierre Loti is considered the best exponent of literary impressionism, while the promoters of symbolic or decadent verse were Paul Verlaine and Stéphane Mallarmé, whose laurels are now said to be worn by M. Henri Régnier.

2. "A Mummer's Wife," "Esther Waters," "Celibats."

"Childe Harold, Jr.," Washington, D. C.: "A. J. Phillips, 17 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J., will find the lines he seeks in Wordsworth's 'Rob Roy's Grave.' They are also used by Walter Scott on the title page of his novel, 'Rob Roy.'"

"The creatures see of flood and field,
And those that travel on the wind!
With them no strife can last; they live
In peace and peace of mind
For why? because the good old rule
Suffices them, the simple plan
That they should take who have the power,
And they should keep who can."

Wanted and to Exchange.

William Henry Shelton, Librarian, Subscription Clerk, 34 West Twenty-fifth Street, New York: "I wish to inquire of you each week if subscribers, who have ordered Book or Peterson's Magazine, on the afternoon of the day of publication a lady brought me the plates from six years of Godey's. Letters and postal cards came from all parts of the country, (particularly from Brooklyn,) and within two weeks we have covered more than thirty years of those or similar publications.

"The plates from Graham's Magazine I find more desirable than those from Godey's or Peterson's. They were furnished to that magazine by a French publication called Le Follet, and were much superior to the plates made here. It seems to have been the custom at that period with several of the ladies' magazines, in England as well as in America, to buy their color fashion plates from one or another of the Parisian magazines. An extra edition of the plates, which were steel engravings with stippled faces and draperies colored by hand, was printed for London or Philadelphia. The Le Follet plates have descriptions of the costumes in engraved French script, as they appeared in that magazine, with "Graham's Magazine" printed below. Peterson, on the other hand, produced equally fine plates in the sixties, which were engraved in Philadelphia, that fact being thinly disguised under the inscription "Les Modes Parisiennes." Godey's was first published in 1830, boldly announcing its embellishments as Philadelphia fashions, but affording its fair patrons only two plates a year, which were of excellent quality. By the year 1841 Godey's had advanced to publishing one fashion plate with each monthly issue. The Journal des Dames, first published in Paris in 1817, seems to have been the pioneer of this class of publications. A number was issued with colored plate every five days or seventy-three plates each year. The publication for the first two years was oblong in form, the single costume figure standing in the middle section of the page flanked by patterns for embroidery.

"It is the purpose of this library to expend its available funds from year to year in the creation of a working library of costume and reference books for the use of painters and illustrators. The first important work will be the collection and classification of plates showing the costumes of the century, and the first step in this direction is the collection of the monthly plates issued by the ladies' magazines that flourished between the thirties and the seventies. From 1800 to 1830 will be a difficult period to cover, but a member of the club who is warmly interested in the plan will be in Paris this Winter with plenty of leisure and every facility to make some valuable acquisitions in that particular period."

J. E. Horton, Box 108, White Plains, N. Y.: "I will pay cash for 'Peter Parley's Own Story,' New York, Sheldon & Co., 1864, and 'Recollections of a Life,' by Samuel Goodrich."

Charles H. Ward, 159 West Seventy-third Street, New York City: "If C. R. V., New York City, will state price and condition of 'Journal des Opérations Militaires du Siège et du Blocus de Gênes,' by Paul Thiebault, Paris, 1891, which he wrote about in THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Nov. 25, I will make him an offer."

C. H. Kyte, 95 Broadway, New York City: "I will exchange Ruskin's 'Stones of Venice,' (three volumes, in half calf,) almost new, for other standard works."

Henry Paret, 207 West One Hundred and Seventh Street, New York City: "I offer for exchange a set of 'Foster-Lore,' four numbers, (complete;) 'The Bibelot,' Volume I., loose numbers, the same bound; Volume II., loose numbers; Harper's Magazine, March, 1894, (with suppressed reference to Whistler, in 'Trilby;') set of 'The Poster,' five numbers, (complete;) 'The Vampire,' and 'The Conclusion.'"

Mrs. William Rothery, Matteawan, N. Y.: "I should like to dispose of the following books: 'Illustrated London News,' London, 1858, two volumes, cloth; Allen Cunningham's 'Lives of Painters and Sculptors,' New York, 1852, three volumes; Voltaire's 'Age of Louis XIV.,' London, 1752, first volume; Dearborn's 'Republic of Letters,' New York, 1826; a book by William Cheselden, surgeon, with forty copper plates, published by David West, Boston, 1808; Napier's 'History of the War in the Peninsula in the South of France, 1807-14,' London, 1828, and a book published in Rome in 1811, with forty-eight illustrations, once owned by H. K. Brown, sculptor."

L. B. Thomas, 6 Aspen Ridge, Elmira, N. Y.: "I want to dispose of the following: Kipling's 'Plain Tales from the Hills,' (Indian Stories,) Numbers 1 and 4 of the Rupee edition, Allahabad and London, 1890, four volumes, picture covers, $3; Lang's 'Red Fairy Book,' London, 1890, first edition, cloth, $3; Steurlen's 'Manuel de l'Amateur, d'Illustrations,' Paris, 1875, (useful for the extra illustrator,) $3; Bulwer's novels, complete set, London, 1896, twenty-six volumes, cloth, $7.50; the same, New York, recent date, thirteen volumes, cloth, $5; Brehm's 'La Vie des Animaux,' Paris, 1868, four volumes, half morocco, nearly 1,000 illustrations, $5; 'Literary Souvenir,' London, 1828, large paper copy and plates on India paper, $2; Cicciaia's 'Views at Rome,' about 1800, 100 copper plates, $2; Capt. Ayloffe's 'Pocket Historical Companion for Gentlemen and Ladies,' London, 1762, 49 plates, calf, $2; a collection of engraved portraits, 28 on copper, 49 on steel, and 63 on wood, (the latter neatly mounted,) 26 being English Kings in folio, published by Caudee & Co., London, about 1795, $5; also genuine specimens of early printing, being 10 leaves each of Martial's 'Epigrammata,' Venice, 1493; St. Bonaventura's 'Opuscula,' Brescia, 1495, and Cicero's 'Epistolæ,' woodcut initials, Milan, 1498."

W. W. Bennie, 806 East One Hundred and Sixty-third Street, New York City: "I have 'The Tatler' complete in five volumes, London, 1730, in pretty good condition, which I would like to dispose of for cash."

Dr. H. A. Laurent, 54 West Ninety-seventh Street, New York City: "I wish to sell or exchange 'Natural History of the State of New York,' nineteen volumes, in perfect condition; several volumes with hundreds of hand-colored plates. No reasonable offer refused."

J. H. Richardson, 69 Second Street, South Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I have for sale an extra illustrated copy of the Century Club's "Eulogies on Julian C. Verplanck," in one volume, with seventy-eight inserted plates."

"W. C. A.," 940 Diddle Avenue, Pittsburg, Penn.: "I desire to secure a copy of the 'Life of Joseph Story,' by W. W. Story, in two volumes, published about 1851."

John H. Saylor, Brandywine, Caroline County, East Va.: "I want to get a good copy of the complete poetical works of Lord Byron, including his suppressed poems up to 1827."

Appeals to Readers.

R. Haynes, 28 South Market Street, Boston: "Who is the author of 'My Son's Manual,' published anonymously by the Appletons about 1845?"

William Tyler Olcott, 207 East Forty-sixth Street, New York City: "Can you tell me who is the author of 'The Child's World?' The first stanza is as follows:"

"Great, wide, beautiful, wonderful world,
With the beautiful water round you curled,
And the wonderful grass upon your breast,
World, you are beautifully dressed."

"Shenandoah," New York City: "I should be glad to have the name of the author of the following poem, which I have seen in print, but cannot find:"

"Who was it sorry alms bestowed
Upon a woman, then a maid?
Who was it that his heart and hand
Gave to the Queen of Samarcand?
They called her Golden Hair'd for she Was—"

R. H. Cunningham, 33 West Thirty-eighth Street, New York City: "Will you notify me if you have any of THE SATURDAY REVIEW'S in bound or unbound form, and the price per copy? Even though the bound copies of some numbers are not to be had, I should be glad to have the unbound copies, as I desire to complete my collection, as I intend, if possible, and would greatly appreciate the receipt of any illustrated periodicals that readers may send to my address."

Walter Malone, 105 Fifth Avenue, New York City: "I desire to secure a copy of the 'Life of Joseph Story,' by W. W. Story, in two volumes, published about 1851. Also, I desire to secure a copy of the 'Life of Lord Byron,' including his suppressed poems up to 1827."

The Attractions of Our Store Are Their Low Prices.

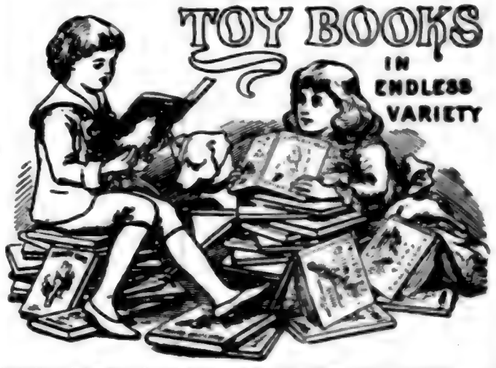
Macy's

R. H. Macy and Co.

Both sides of 14th St. (Running from 13th to 15th St.), Sixth Ave.

Our Prices Are Always the Lowest, but at No Time Is the Difference So Pronounced as During the Holidays.

NOTICE:—Beginning to-day our stores will remain open evenings until Christmas.



Melodies of Mother Goose loom up in red, yellow, green and black. In many twilights to come, as in many twilights past, mothers will hold their children spellbound with the pathetic stories of Little Bitty Pringle, Jack and Jill, Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son, and the legends of Bo-Peep and the Little Crooked Man. No Greek dotes over the marvellous history of Agamemnon or Achilles, nor does any normal baby doubt the adventures of Jacky Horner and the Cow That Jumped Over the Moon. The child-mind accepts each as literary and lyrical art. A brilliant jumble of rhymes and jingles, fairy tales, stories of war, travel and adventure—firmly bound, pictorially embellished and low priced.

LETTERS FROM JAPAN. By MRS. HUGH FRASER.

A Record of Modern Life in the Inland Empire.

A reproduction of rare bits of native art or of views in Japan supplements charming letters written by the wife of a British Minister in Japan to her family (the Crawfords) in Rome. Two volumes, silk. $7.50.

SARACINESCA. By F. MARION CRAWFORD.

Mr. CRAWFORD'S most dramatic story of Italian life—"a perfect story perfectly told"—illustrated by Mr. ORSON LOWELL, whose artistic complement to the beauty of Mr. Allen's "The Choir Invisible" made it not only a favorite gift book but a permanent art treasure. Two volumes, sateen. $5.00.

CHILD LIFE IN COLONIAL DAYS.

Mrs. ALICE MORSE EARLE'S companion volume to "Home Life in Colonial Days" is even more perfectly illustrated. Here are the toys, the school books, the tasks, the dress, the whole surroundings of the colonial child, and many of the serious small faces themselves. Cloth, crown 8vo. $2.00.

AMONG ENGLISH HEDGEROWS. By CLIFTON JOHNSON.

Mr. Johnson's work has that perfect local flavor which is to be expected when a man takes his camera and pen and simply lives the life he intends to describe. His pictures of English rural life are then of a high quality, and the work as a whole one of the most delightful of its kind. Cloth, gilt top. $2.25.

AVE ROMA IMMORTALIS. By F. MARION CRAWFORD.

"The ablest popular work on Rome published in recent years," is also one of the most suitably illustrated. Photogravure reproductions from the finest photographs obtainable show the present conditions, while pen drawings in the text show the varying aspect of the "heart of the world" from the earliest years till now. "It is delightful on every page," said The Sun. Silk, two volumes. $6.00 net.

THE NEW STANDARD BOOKS.

LORD TENNYSON'S LIFE AND WORKS.

This is the only complete library edition of Tennyson's Poems published in this country and the first to include the indispensable Memoir by the poet's son, in which are a number of poems not elsewhere published. "As for the form of the edition," says The Tribune, "it seems to us ideal." Ten volumes, cloth. $20.00.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: The Man of the People.

Mr. NORMAN HAPGOOD has succeeded unquestionably in that most difficult task of writing a new life of Lincoln, which takes rank from the first as a view which was not only new but needed. As Judge MELLEN CHAMBERLAIN writes, "it is a remarkable book . . . one that will live in literature." Half leather. $2.00.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF A LONG EPISCOPATE. Being Reminiscences and Recollections of the RT. REV. HENRY BENJAMIN WHIPPLE, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Minnesota.

Bishop Whipple has given us a book which seems as if it had been "talked rather than written, informal," as The Churchman says, "of varied and absorbing interest"—a most interesting biography. Cloth. $3.00.

THE UNITED KINGDOM: A Political History.

Prof. GOLDWIN SMITH has in this review of the political development of England followed practically the method used in his earlier work, The United States, showing, says The Chicago Tribune, "the same intellectual grasp and power of lucid condensation." Two volumes, cloth. $4.00.

THE STORY OF FRANCE. By THOMAS E. WATSON

The first volume of Mr. WATSON'S picturesque and brilliant book aroused such interest that The Evening Telegraph of Philadelphia, alluding to the second volume, then in press, remarked: "We have the right to expect it to be an exposition which will attract the notice of the world." Two volumes. $3.00.

THE DIARY OF SAMUEL PEPYS.

Probably no single "source" of the English history of the Restoration Period is so frequently quoted, or is on the whole so really valuable, as the little Secretary's frank description of his affairs and friends. The most complete edition ever published is that edited by HENRY B. WHEATLEY just now completed by the new volume of Pepysiana and an exhaustive index. Nine volumes. $13.50 net.

THE BEST NEW NOVELS.

VIA CRUCIS. By F. MARION CRAWFORD

A Romance of the Second Crusade. 7th Edition. 38th Thousand.

Of unusual attractiveness is Mr. Crawford's latest novel, said to be "an exquisite romance . . . a thrilling, tender story," to which a warm welcome has been given, seven editions or 35,000 having been ordered within the first month of issue. Illustrated by LOUIS LOEB. Cloth. $1.50.

YOUNG APRIL. By EGERTON CASTLE.

Perhaps no words describe this better than those of The Boston Evening Transcript, "A drama of mingled passion and mirth, of laughter and tears and chivalry." Illustrated by A. B. WENZELL. Cloth. $1.50.

THEY THAT WALK IN DARKNESS.

GHETTO TRAGEDIES by ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Characteristic tales with all of the author's keen insight into human nature and power of displaying it, with changes of mood as far from each other as the varying scenes of these intense strange stories. Cloth. $1.50.

SOLDIER RIGDALE. By BEULAH MARIE DIX.

How He Sailed in the "Mayflower" and How He Served Miles Standish.

A story of the settlement of New England. A vivid picture and one which as The Boston Herald says, "is doubly valuable for the note of sympathy which it strikes." Cloth. $1.50.

LITTLE NOVELS OF ITALY. By MAURICE HEWLETT.

Sharing that rare quaint quality of which "The Forest Lovers" was the charming even fascinating embodiment, Mr. Hewlett's new work is, as The Times-Herald said, "one of the most pronounced literary successes of the year." Cloth. $1.50.

RICHARD CARVEL. By WINSTON CHURCHILL.

A success of 200,000 within six months means the possession of some compelling quality: here it seems to be the charm which attaches to a simple, sincere, human picture of life and character: perhaps as much also the thoroughly good workmanship which makes it, as Literature says, "a production of which not only the author but his countrymen have reason to be proud." Cloth. $1.50.

NEW ILLUSTRATED BOOKS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

WABENO, THE MAGICIAN. By MARIE OSGOOD WRIGHT.

A Sequel to Tommy-Anne and the Three Hearts.

Mrs. Wright's nature stories are always welcomed as the best of their kind, and of this new one, The New York Tribune writes, "A more delightful and healthy book for the young could hardly be written." Delightfully illustrated by JOSEPH GLEESON. Price $1.50. In a box, with "Tommy-Anne and the Three Hearts," $3.00.

BOY LIFE ON THE PRAIRIE.

"Hamlin Garland is a writer of great originality and more than ordinary power," says The Churchman, "and in the description of farm life in this book he is at his best." The illustrations are by E. W. DEMING. Cloth. $1.50.

THE JINGLE BOOK. By CAROLYN WELLS.

No more delightful gift for young people could be imagined than this charming book as amusing as it is ingenious and unexpected. Author and artist are so happily in sympathy with each other that the clever drawings seem essential to the verses, and each strives to outdo the other in whimsical comicalities. Cloth. $1.00.

DRAKE AND HIS YEOMEN. By JAMES BARNES.

A TRUE ACCOUNT OF THE CHARACTER AND ADVENTURES OF SIR FRANCIS DRAKE, AS TOLD BY SIR MATTHEW MAINWELL, HIS FRIEND AND FOLLOWER. WHEREIN ALSO IS SET FORTH MUCH OF THE NARRATOR'S PRIVATE HISTORY.

A story of which all except the introductory account of the hero's boyhood is based on actual records in history, but as thrilling as any novel. Cloth. $2.00.

THE LISTENING CHILD. By LUCY THACHER.

A SELECTION FROM THE STORIES OF ENGLISH VERSE, MADE FOR THE YOUNGEST READERS AND HEARERS.

Admirably adapted to arouse love for poetry and the poetical in verse or prose. With an introduction by THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON. Cloth. $1.25.

STORIES FROM FROISSART. By HENRY NEWBOLT.

These old stories, which never grow tiresome, are illustrated after the quaint style of the old MS., or of Kenneth Grahame's Golden Age, and were never put into a more fascinating setting. Cloth. $1.50.

GLOOM AND FEAR IN LONDON

Great Excitement Over the Many Serious Repulses.

THE WAR OFFICE IS BLAMED

Gen. Buller Was Ordered to Attack the Boers at Once.

To Obtain More Troops Will Be Difficult—No Hospitals Ready for the Wounded—Anger at the Transvaal's Use of Delagoa Bay.

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—It is still the war with us, and nothing but the war. Three defeats in one week have fairly upset our equanimity, and the population of London is becoming excited to a degree that has rarely been witnessed.

You have had the news as fast and as fully as it came to us, and the subject is too painful to be gone over again. It may, however, be interesting to offer some explanation of the passion of rage, disappointment, and I might almost say fear that has swept over the country to-day.

Gen. Buller's defeat has been brought about by orders from home. Our inept War Office and scared Government were alarmed on Thursday by the terrible blow inflicted upon Lord Methuen's force. I explained last week that his position was a dangerous one, because he was so far from his base of supplies as to be compelled to strike swiftly or else fall back. He struck, and was beaten so completely that if the Boers had possessed a strong cavalry force it is probable that he would have had to surrender.

The country began to be angry, and the noisier part of the population to clamor for instant revenge. In their alarm lest the reaction should grow there can be no doubt that the War Office telegraphed urgent orders to Gen. Buller to attack the Boers on the Tugela River bank, drive them back, and relieve Ladysmith. Had Buller been a man of the fibre of Wellington or your Gen. Grant he would have put the telegram in his pocket and bided his time. Unhappily, brave man though he be, he is a Court party soldier and has never enjoyed an independent command of a magnitude to give him confidence in his own judgment. Therefore he obeyed orders, and rushed on to defeat.

BULLER'S DANGEROUS POSITION.

What will happen now I cannot prophesy, but it is plain enough even to the man in the street, that unless Buller's force is increased to a strength sufficient to enable him to threaten the Boers in the front, while a formidable command is detached to work around behind the Boer intrenchments, he may hammer away at the enemy without any more success than he had yesterday until his army goes to pieces or ceases to obey orders. Already our finest troops have been mown down like grass, putting all Scotland and half Ireland into mourning, and there is only too much reason to fear that raw, half-trained regiments may shirk the call of duty and refuse to face the deadly fire of the enemy when the next pinch comes.

As for Lord Methuen, it is obvious that unless he makes up his mind to withdraw his troops to the Orange River he runs great risk of having his communications effectively cut, and of being obliged to surrender to avoid starvation. Neither Gen. French nor Gen. Gatacre, the latter of whom led off with the first defeat, is in any position yet to send forward sufficient reinforcements to occupy the sixty miles or more lying between the Orange and Modder Rivers.

Altogether the South African position is as gloomy as our worst enemy could desire, and all the Continent is chuckling with delight at the mishaps that have befallen us. Herr Bebel said the other day in the German Reichstag he trusted that more disasters to the British arms would follow, and that the result of the war would be the establishment of an independent Republic embracing all South Africa, with more to the same effect. His words were received without one symptom of protest from the German Government or from any party in the House; indeed they little more than re-echoed the words of Von Bülow.

The clamor now is for more troops—to send out instantly more troops. The Sixth Division has been hustled on board ship, or the greater part of it, and is now underway, and a seventh is somehow to be raked together by calling out the last of the regular army reserves and all the remaining militia reserves. When these have been mustered and the whole of our regular army sent abroad, including all the cavalry that should have gone to the Cape first and is being sent last, we shall have nothing but a few militiamen and volunteers to draw upon for the defense of other portions of our Empire, and no militiaman or volunteer can be sent abroad except on his own consent. He must elect for foreign service, a step that so far comparatively few men have taken.

DIFFICULTY IN RECRUITING.

Indeed, our most serious difficulty lying immediately ahead is just this one of recruiting. Not long ago the popular and famous Gordon Highlanders marched and pibroched in detachments through their own country, Aberdeenshire and Northeast Scotland, on a recruiting expedition, making the most of their recent exploit. The result was seventeen recruits. While all of our working population is comparatively well off, finding abundance of employment and good wages, the ranks of the army cannot be filled up, and such punishment as has fallen upon our crack brigades in South Africa damps the ardor of the most enthusiastic would-be soldier.

But as we have made our bed, so we must lie in it, and the present temper of the nation is unquestionably to persevere with the war at all hazards, at no matter what cost. Already counsels are being tendered not only to draw a further portion of the white garrison from India but to transport Ghurka and Sikh Regiments to fight against the Boers.

As yet the War Office has betrayed no desire to accept the latter part of this advice, and indeed it opens up possibilities too appalling to think about. What would be the effect upon the nation and upon the civilized world if we were to send our Indian mercenaries to fight against a white race descended from the best and noblest blood of Europe? What might be the effect upon the natives of India when those that survived among their countrymen went home to tell how the Boer sharpshooters and artillery mowed down the race so long their masters? Only the counsels of insane desperation could suggest such a step as this, and I believe it will never be taken.

THURSDAY'S FALSE REPORT.

What makes the rage and despair of the country so extreme to-day is the false hope with which it was buoyed up on Thursday and yesterday. All Thursday morning people went about gloomily, disposed to think the worst of everything, and plentifully cursing the Colonial Secretary, the War Secretary, the Commander in Chief, the War Office, the Generals, and all concerned. Then in the afternoon a wild rumor was started, as you know, and scattered over every money market in the world, about a great British victory in which from three to ten thousand Boers were captured. No confirmation of this sensational news came yesterday, but the tale was persisted in. Not only so, but people from fashionable society rushed into the City to inform their brokers that they had been at the War Office, that they had dined with the War Minister or this, that, or the other influential personage, and had been assured that there was a great victory, only the facts could not be told until this morning. Every one, therefore, went to bed in the highest hopes of a triumph that would end the war. "It will all be over by Christmas yet," more than one sanguine individual said to me last night, and lo, we open the papers to-day to find that Gen. Buller has shared the fate of Methuen.

How did this false story arise? Doubtless out of the orders sent by the War Office to the Commander in Chief in Natal. These orders leaked from the offices of the telegraph company, and were interpreted to mean that victory was certain. At the War Office the same feather-headed optimism prevailed, and I have not the least doubt that Lord Wolseley, who was dining with the Queen, went to bed fully persuaded that he would read this morning how Buller had crossed the Tugela River and driven the Boers away from Ladysmith.

Words cannot depict the extent of the reaction from which we now suffer, but an episode such as this serves to display better than any disquisition the spirit and temper with which the nation has entered upon this appalling conflict.

NO PREPARATIONS FOR WOUNDED.

Another contrast has its suggestiveness. We have been sending away regiment after regiment, division after division of our little but splendidly equipped army amid great popular rejoicings and boastful anticipations of a military triumph to come. Already the wounded from our hosts in the field are streaming back again in miserable plight, and no preparation has been made for their reception. Convalescent hospitals that should have been ready are not ready, nor beginning to be ready. The great national fund of upwards of £400,000 collected for the families of the soldiers and for the sick and wounded is being so twisted round with red tape that complaints are already pouring in to the newspapers about its uselessness and inefficiency.

The soldier goes forth to fight, and is hailed as a splendid fellow, a hero of heroes, when he goes. A bullet strikes him, he falls wounded, and is sent home to be neglected like a worn-out shoe. We shall remedy this in time, doubtless, if time is given to us, but for the present the contemplation of contrasts such as this has a tendency to make the quiet citizen hot about the heart.

EUROPE AT PRESENT TRANQUIL.

Of foreign politics, I have nothing much to say this week. In most places all is a dead calm, and in Austria still a dead-lock. It may be the calm before a storm in some places, but on the whole I see no indication that the surface of affairs will be seriously ruffled outside of the Austrian Empire. Should that burst asunder—and the Emperor's attempt to smooth away the differences have been absolutely futile—then all Europe may drift into a caldron of social and racial disturbances. The Eastern question would almost certainly be opened anew, and no man can foretell how events would shape themselves or what sides would be taken by the Western nations when it was opened.

At present, however, nothing happens in Austria, and possibly while the Emperor lives the different raging nationalities within the empire may abstain from striking at each other's skulls.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA.

In the Far East it is likewise calm. Japan energetically repudiates any design to make an attack on Russia, and declares that her vast military preparations, far beyond her real strength to bear, are only commensurate with her own dignity as a great power. That may be believed by those of easy faith, but Russia is unquestionably not in that class, for her preparations for both defense and attack go on unremittingly, straining her finances, and curtailing the Czar's programme of peaceful international development.

DIPLOMATIC CHECK IN CHINA.

As for China, we have lost the thread of the intrigue going on there, and not even the Peking syndicate has been able to pick it up again for us. We begin to fear that our Ambassador has been outwitted, perhaps through no fault of his own. His energetic protests and equally energetic proclamation of Great Britain's rights have rather thrown the temporizing Chinamen into the hands of those who would not mind hurting us if it did not cost them much money or trouble.

The Anglo-American Hankow-Canton railway concession has not yet been definitely given to the capitalists who propose to build it, and Russia and France are said to be doing their best to prevent them from getting the contract ratified.

Perhaps you are in a position to see that no nonsense of this kind is permitted; at present Great Britain is not. Our hands are full, so full that we can think of nothing except this South African business, not even of India, with its thousands perishing every day from famine—it has 2,500,000 on relief works—its plague spots, and increasing misery.

But we may soon have to wrangle nearer home, about Delagoa Bay, for our rage is great that the position of Portugal as a neutral power allows the Transvaal to use that port far more effectively than if it were the owner thereof. A. J. W.

CURRENCY DEBATE CLOSES

Republicans Taunt Democrats on Failure to Talk Silver.

COURT OFFER OF AMENDMENT

Debate Grows Warm as Many Democrats Rise to Offer Substitutes—Levy Defends the Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The six days' debate upon the Currency bill closed to-day in a sensational manner. The Republican leaders had evidently set a trap for the minority, to show that discord existed on the money question, and it was timed so as to make the scene as dramatic as possible. Just at the close of the debate to-day three of the heavy-weights, Gen. Grosvenor, of Ohio; Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Dolliver, of Iowa, were put forward to call the attention of the country to the fact that in the long debate very little had been heard about free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 from the minority side of the house, and that not one had offered an amendment containing such a proposition.

Mr. Grosvenor said it was one of the signs of the coming regeneration of the Democratic Party. Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, indignantly denied any intention of abandoning silver, and called attention to the fact that under the special order under which the House was operating neither a substitute nor a motion to recommit was in order.

Then Mr. Dalzell challenged a number of the opposition to offer a free-coinage amendment. In response, half the Democratic membership rose and demanded the privilege, but only here and there was an Eastern Democrat shouting his approval. There were cries of "Bluff!" from the Democratic side, but the Republicans, after the parliamentary obstacles had been removed, through Mr. Overstreet, who was in charge of the bill, asked unanimous consent for an amendment to the rule to permit this amendment to be offered. Then Mr. Driggs and Mr. Levy, two New York Democrats, blocked this game with objections.

No amendments were offered to this bill to-day, and only one section of this bill was read. The whole time was occupied in speeches. The incidents of the day were a sensational speech by Mr. Lentz (Dem., Ohio,) denouncing the prosecution of the war in the Philippines, and charging an alliance between Great Britain and the United States to subvert liberty—one in South Africa and one in the Orient—and an attack upon the memory of ex-President Hayes by Mr. Clark, (Dem., Mo.) Mr. Brown, an Ohio Republican, warmly defended the memory of Mr. Hayes.

The vote upon the Currency bill will be taken immediately after the reading of the journal on Monday. Mr. Overstreet, in charge of it, says it will have 35 majority. He says eight Democrats will vote for it and seven will not vote either way.

GROSVENOR ANSWERS BAILEY.

The general debate upon the bill closed yesterday, and to-day the bill was read for amendment under the five-minute rule. Upon motion of Mr. Moody (Rep., Mass.,) the Senate resolution was adopted for the appointment of three members of the Senate and five of the House to make arrangements for the unveiling of the statue of Daniel Webster presented to the Government by Stilson Hutchins on Jan. 18, 1900.

The clerk then entered upon the reading of the Currency bill.

Upon a pro forma amendment, Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) got the floor in reply to some of the statements made by Mr. Bailey (Dem., Texas,) yesterday. He wondered, he said, whether if the Democratic Party had been successful in 1896 and a free-coinage bill had been enacted the tide of gold which had flowed into this country to stimulate industry would have come.

He had read a quotation from a speech made by Mr. Bailey during the debate upon the Dingley bill, predicting that if that bill failed to bring prosperity the Republicans would not live long enough to secure an audience from the people upon the proposition that they could be made happy by increased taxation. In view of that prophecy, Mr. Grosvenor thought the Republicans could view with equanimity Mr. Bailey's forebodings of yesterday. "There is hope for us yet," said he, amid Republican laughter and applause.

Mr. Clark (Dem., Mo.,) made an amusing speech, poking fun at the Republicans for their efforts to secure consolation from the late elections. It reminded him, he said, of the boy who, in response to a question as to affairs at home, replied:

"Oh, very well; mother and sister are dead, but we managed to pull the old man through."

With combs cut, both wings broken, and tail feathers out, the Republicans were crowing because the old man had pulled through. The only person who, he thought, was entitled to extract comfort from the elections was Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio. He had pulled the old man through. [Laughter.]

Mr. Mahon, (Rep., Penn.,) criticised Mr. Bailey for not frankly admitting, as Mr. Sibley (Dem., Penn.,) had done, that the return of prosperity was due to the restoration of the Republican Party to power.

LEVY SUPPORTS THE BILL.

Mr. Levy, (Dem., N. Y.,) announced his intention of voting for the bill, although he did not agree with some of its provisions. His voice was scarcely audible and he could be heard with great difficulty.

Mr. Levy said:

"While this bill in all its features is not the best bill that might be presented for enactment, and while I regret that no opportunity has been given to us either to amend or consider it in committee, I am prepared to vote for it, confident in the hope that it will meet in conference the same fate that every other important measure originating in this house has met with, and that it will emerge purged of some of its imperfections and in that respect, at least, a better bill.

DEFENDS NEW YORK.

"While I have the opportunity I would like to say in this connection a few words regarding the attacks on New York. Every Currency bill or financial measure which comes before this House for discussion is made the pretext for these unjust attacks. She is characterized as the abiding place of all the evils that ever have or ever will afflict this Government, and as the home and refuge of all the enemies who seek to destroy the welfare of our Nation.

"New York rejoices in the prosperity which has come to every State in the Union, and her own prosperity is only an index of the advancement of our country. She does not hoard her wealth—she is constantly applying it to the betterment of the various sections of our country seeking her aid.

"She builds railroads and highways, she sells your securities and finds a market for your properties, she is the clearing house and clearing port of a majority of the States, she is their market for supplies to be purchased from or sent abroad. She contracts, as it were, the markets of the world and brings them to your feet; she moves your crops and finds investment for money from East, North, West, and South. You prosper when she prospers—you advance as she advances, and you fall when she fails.

"I am in entire sympathy with the chief purpose of this bill—the maintenance of the parity of all our money. This was one of the most pronounced principles of the Democracy of Jefferson and of his followers in the apostleship of Democracy for generations.

"The enactment of this bill will remove from the arena of political agitation a question that, of all questions, is most disturbing to the material interests of the country. An uncertainty respecting the standard of value for our currency, coinage, and bonded obligations tends to retard and cripple the business of the country at home and abroad, while certainty and fixedness upon that question stimulate and perpetuate the conditions that promote natural and individual prosperity.

"The settlement of the question thus agitated, removing that question from the sphere of politics and serious controversy, must afford a mighty impetus to this Nation in its progress in the fields of commerce and finance, extending to all parts of the world, strengthened, as we shall be, by unimpeachable and unlimited credit at home and abroad, and moving on to the manifest destiny of becoming the great commercial and financial centre of the world.

"But this measure is not only sound in policy—it is sound also in ethics, in common honesty. There should be only one dollar, whether for public or private transactions, and common honesty as well as sound policy demands that the standards of value, whether in gold, silver, or paper, should be fixed according to the value of that form of the circulating medium, the intrinsic value of which is the highest."

OTHER DEMOCRATS SPEAK.

Mr. Fitzgerald (Dem., N. Y.,) announced his intention of voting for the bill, but bitterly denounced its banking features. He had no apology to make for his advocacy of the gold standard, he said. In doing so he was not obliged to execute the grastronomic performance of some of the Republicans on the other side. He had always favored the gold standard. He gave it as his opinion that the enactment of the bill into law would be of incalculable service to the Democratic Party in removing the money question from politics for at least six years.

THE CULMINATION OF A TRUST.

Mr. Norton (Dem., Ohio,) expressed the belief that the pending bill was the culmination of a gigantic money trust. This trust, he declared, was at the foundation of the alliance between Great Britain and the United States which existed at this hour. The Republicans jeered this utterance.

The Democrats gave Mr. Glynn (Dem., N. Y.,) a round of applause when he announced that he would keep step with the National Democracy and vote against the bill. The measure, he said, was inconsistent in its terms and "a play to the galleries" to secure the backing of the wealth of the country in the next campaign. There were, he thought, some good features in the bill which he would vote for if he could. But as a whole it did not meet his views and he would vote against it.

Mr. Grow, (Rep., Penn.,) in speaking for the bill, gave an interesting résumé of the history of the National debt to show that the pledge of the Government to pay its bonds and redeem the greenbacks in "coin" meant "gold."

Mr. Carmack (Dem., Tenn.,) said he did not believe that it was ever intended by this bill to strengthen and reform the currency. The real purpose was to make all Government obligations payable in gold.

CHAMP CLARK ON HAYES.

The debate was enlivened at this point by a bout between Mr. Brown (Rep., Ohio,) and Mr. Clark, (Dem., Mo.) The former resented what he regarded as a slight put upon the memory of the late President Hayes in some remarks made by Mr. Clark earlier in the day. Mr. Brown paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Hayes. In reply Mr. Clark declared that Mr. Hayes was a "counterfeit President" for whom he had a supreme contempt, even though he was dead.

"He stole the Presidency," said Mr. Clark savagely, "the greatest crime in the tide of times. I wish he could have lived forever and borne the scorn of decent men to the end of the world. His sepulchre should bear the words, 'This man was guilty of the monumental crime against human liberty.' Now," concluded Mr. Clark, as he retired to his seat, "if they can make anything of that let them make it."

Mr. Clark's words were received in silence on both sides of the House.

The debate then lapsed into dullness for an hour, interrupted only by a brief but sharp exchange between Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.,) and Mr. Bailey, (Dem., Texas,) the former making a covert reference to his fight for the Senate, and Mr. Bailey countering by saying that the gentleman from New York was never so serious as when he tried to be funny, and never so funny as when he tried to be serious.

Later Mr. Landis (Rep., Ind.,) created considerable amusement by reading an extravagant eulogy of Grover Cleveland, made by William H. Wallace of Missouri, in seconding Mr. Cleveland's nomination in 1892. Mr. Landis read the extract to contrast it with the bitter denunciations of Mr. Cleveland in which Democrats in the House were indulging.

It happened that Mr. Vandiver (Dem., Mo.,) got the floor next, and his appearance caused an outburst of laughter.

"The speech of the gentleman from Indiana," said he, "is the most unkindest cut of all. It is true that we once believed that the fat-witted occupant was a Democrat. But now we know he is a Republican. And you are welcome to him," he added, with a wave of his hand toward the Republican side, amid Democratic applause.

LENTZ ARRAIGNS REPUBLICANS.

Mr. Lentz (Dem., Ohio,) charged that the pending bill had been prepared by the 3,000 National banks, a secret combination that wielded more influence than the Masonic fraternity, the Odd Fellows, and the Red Men combined. The bill was intended to increase the power of the National banks. All the rest that was in it was already in the law. As he proceeded Mr. Lentz's remarks became sensational.

"We are in favor of renominating William Jennings Bryan," said he, "and we will put in a plank against trusts; we will put in a plank against imperialism, and we will put in a plank against the British alliance, an alliance that is now open and apparent. [Applause on the Democratic side.] They are shooting down liberty in South Africa while you are shooting it down in the Philippine Islands. [Applause on the Democratic side.] That is evidence sufficient that both Governments are operating upon parallel lines.

"The first blossom of liberty in the Orient to be cut off by the Republican Party of the United States; the first substantial struggle for liberty in Africa to be mowed down in its infancy by the Queen of England, with the Czar asking for a peace conference!

"If things are not inside out, how can the Republican Party stand impotent and silent while England is shooting to death a republic in South Africa, and while, under the military and imperialistic powers that patronage has delivered to the President here, the crime of crimes is being committed under the Stars and Stripes of the Union?

"The President at Madison, Wis., said: 'One small fraction of one small tribe resists our authority in the Orient.' Aye, my friends, with an army there and on the way of 75,000 to subdue one small fraction of one small tribe, an army larger than Sherman needed to march to the sea, an army larger than Grant needed to take Vicksburg, is now called into requisition and kept there for nearly a year to subdue one small fraction of one small tribe.

"Is that the source of your prosperity? Is your Egan pension of $75,000 for being reduced, degraded, and dishonored, is your Beef Trust that murdered 4,800 men, while the Spaniards killed only 350, is that the source of your prosperity? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

"Is your humiliation and subordination of the man who won the most magnificent naval victory that the world has seen, Winfield Scott Schley, [applause,] is that the source of your prosperity? Is your subordination of Brooke and Miles and Merritt, the men who had been trained, together with their associates, at an expense of millions of dollars to this country, and the putting of politicians in the army saddle, is that the cause of your prosperity? [Applause on the Democratic side.] You will live to be ashamed of your record."

BRYAN ON THE BILL.

In the closing hour of the debate, Mr. Gaines (Dem., Tenn.) produced a telegram from W. J. Bryan denying a purported interview with him.

"I believe the bill is bad in every particular," said the telegram, "but I did not say it would injure the Democratic Party. But it will injure the country, and should drive out of the Republican Party all sincere believers in bimetallism."

Mr. De Armond (Dem., Mo.) closed the debate on the Democratic side. He called attention to the fact that only one section of the bill had been read, and no opportunity had been given to amend the bill. He declared it was the opinion on the minority side that the bill was designed to create a huge, far-reaching and all-pervading bank trust. He had intended to offer an amendment, but the section to which it would apply had not been reached.

He had the proposed amendment read at the clerk's desk. It provided that it should be unlawful for any bank under its provisions to combine with any other bank for the purpose of increasing or restricting the coin in circulation, credit, or interest. That amendment, Mr. De Armond said, if adopted, might help to prevent the fruition of the scheme in this bill. By this bill the Government would issue no more money. Its issue was to be turned over by it to the banks so long as they operated the power in the interest of themselves and the Republican Party.

A CHALLENGE TO DEMOCRATS.

The scenes attending the close of the debate were exciting and dramatic. When Mr. De Armond concluded but twenty minutes remained before the debate was to close under the rule. Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, protested against what he assumed to be the purpose of the Republicans to take that time to close the debate. He demanded the regular order.

Thereupon Mr. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) got the floor for five minutes, which he occupied in taunting the Democrats for their evident desire to abandon free silver at 16 to 1. During the six days' debate, he said, the House had heard no arguments for free silver and he humorously hailed it as a sign of the coming regeneration of the party in conclusion he said that out of the debate had come the settled conviction on both sides of the House that the enactment of the pending measure would put into law the policy which had governed and guided the country for nearly thirty years.

Mr. Richardson indignantly denied Mr. Grosvenor's assertion of the proposed abandonment of the issue of free silver. He said that if the gentleman from Ohio had followed the debate he must have heard some strong speeches in favor of free silver. He called attention to the fact that but one section of the bill had been read and charged that the special order, which did not permit the offering of a substitute or a motion to recommit, had been framed for the especial purpose of preventing the offering of a free silver substitute.

"Does the gentleman desire to offer such a substitute?" asked Mr. Overstreet (Rep., Ind.).

"The rule was passed to prevent me from doing so and the debate has been deliberately conducted with this same end in view," responded Mr. Richardson.

The Republicans laughed derisively as Mr. Richardson went on to characterize Mr. Grosvenor's covert charge as a cheap attempt at political capital, which was beneath the dignity of a great party. He inveighed against the hypocrisy of the other side.

"You tied our hands," said he, "in the beginning. This bill is a bill to establish the gold standard and break down the bimetallism power. The free coinage of silver is not involved."

Then Mr. Dalzell (Rep., Penn.,) took the floor and in half a minute the House was in a furor. He pointed out that any Democrat could have demanded the reading of the bill, and, alluding to Mr. Richardson's charge of hypocrisy, he waked the echoes as he said:

"I hurl back the charge. You do not dare," he shouted, shaking his finger at the other side, "not one of you dares or would dare if you had the opportunity to offer a free-coinage amendment and risk a vote upon it. No gentleman on the other side is so much a leader that he would dare expect to rally his cohorts upon that proposition."

A dozen Democrats jumped to their feet as Mr. Dalzell concluded. Mr. Bailey, Mr. Richardson, Mr. Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.,) and Mr. Williams, (Dem., Miss.,) were all clamoring for recognition, but Mr. Hepburn, (Rep., Iowa,) who was in the chair, recognized Mr. Dolliver. The Iowan looked across the aisle when order had been restored.

"Before I begin," said he, blandly, "I will agree to yield the floor if any gentleman on the other side desires to offer a free-coinage amendment."

Almost half the Democratic side seemed to rise en masse. Mr. Bailey was foremost. "I ask it," he called. "I ask it." "I ask it," shouted others, amid wild cheers on the Democratic side.

"Dozens of us ask the privilege," cried Mr. Williams. "We challenge you for the opportunity."

Rushing down one of the side aisles came Mr. Driggs, (Dem., N. Y.,) shouting. "I object." "I object."

"Does the gentleman want any further evidence?" called Mr. Williams.

CALLS IT A BLUFF.

The confusion was indescribable. Mr. Hepburn pounded with his gavel, while the Republicans seemed to be enjoying the scene of discord. Mr. Dolliver had aroused. When order was restored Mr. Dolliver yielded to Mr. Bailey, who preferred the request for unanimous consent.

"The gentleman from Texas," said Mr. Hepburn from the chair, "well knows that in committee it is not competent to entertain a request to change the order under which the House is operating."

"Your bluff is called," shouted Mr. Williams, his index finger pointing at Mr. Dolliver, while the Democrats cheered lustily. Meantime the hour of 5 o'clock came and the committee rose and reported the bill to the House without amendment.

Mr. Lentz (Dem., Ohio,) asked whether it would be in order for him to ask unanimous consent to offer an amendment to the tenth section to provide that any individual as well as a bank might deposit bonds with the Treasury and receive their par value in currency. To this the Speaker replied in the negative.

Thereupon Mr. Overstreet asked unanimous consent that the special order under which the House was operating be so amended as to allow a substitute providing for the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 to be offered. Instantly Mr. Driggs of New York, who had not relinquished his position on the right of the chair, shouted, "I object!" Mr. Levy, (Dem., N. Y.,) from the rear of the hall also objected.

"Objection is made," announced the Speaker, amid a shriek of Republican laughter. The House was then at 5:05 o'clock declared adjourned until Monday under the terms of the special order.

PREPARING FOR THE VOTE.

Mr. Tawney Says 170 Republicans Will Be Present To-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The final arrangements were being made to-day for the vote on the Financial bill in the House on Monday. Mr. Tawney, the Republican "whip" said about 170 out of the 186 Republican members would be present, and those absent would be paired for the bill. It is estimated also that about 150 Democrats would be present.

A proposition has been made to allow a vote on a motion to recommit, with instructions to the Banking and Currency Committee to report an amended bill, if the Democratic managers desired this procedure. Mr. Richardson, the Democratic floor leader, says, however, that the proposition is too indefinite, and he will give no intimation of the parliamentary procedure he will adopt.

CONGRESSMAN MAY'S ATTITUDE.

His Talk About His Vote Excites Comment in Brooklyn.

The position of Congressman Mitchell May of Brooklyn with regard to the Currency bill is exciting much speculation among politicians and others in the borough. Mr May was in Brooklyn yesterday, and when seen discussed the bill freely. While he intimated that his vote would be cast in favor of the measure, he would make no positive statement one way or the other.

"I was elected to represent the Sixth Congressional District," said Mr May. "It isn't a question of how I feel, but of how my constituents feel. If it were possible for the whole Democratic Party to be united on any measure nothing would give me greater pleasure than to help bring harmony by my vote.

"As it is, I can take but one of two positions. If I favor the bill I am not aiding my country by speaking of it now. My vote can accomplish the end my constituents wish, and it shall be given on Monday. If I should vote against the bill, I would not be doing my country any harm, because the bill will pass, and nothing I can say will do any possible good.

"It would be very distasteful for me to be called upon to give my first vote against my party, but I realize that I speak only for my constituents and the interests I have in them as well as the duty I owe and the obligations I am under to them. My vote shall always be cast in the interests of Brooklyn."

PRISONER EXCITES SYMPATHY.

Fishkill Landing Woman Will Not Prosecute a Man Who Robbed Her to Obtain Food and Medicine.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Stephan D. Brundage, a young man in the last stages of consumption, pleaded guilty to-day to the charge of highway robbery in Judge Rogers's court, and was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. The prisoner stole to provide food for himself and family.

A week ago Josephine Kelly, twenty-three years of age, was held up on one of the principal streets of Fishkill Landing while on her way to church. The robber took her pocketbook, which contained $20, but returned a Prayer Book which she also carried. The only clue she could give the police was that he had a sallow complexion. Chief of Police Mara suspected Brundage, and yesterday arrested him at Goshen. He had shaved off his mustache.

When brought into court Brundage's condition was pitiful. He is only twenty-three years of age. His weight is not more than ninety pounds, and his lungs are in such a condition that he can hardly speak above a whisper. His wife, a handsome young woman, was in court. When he was arraigned yesterday he pleaded not guilty, but after he had been taken back to the jail the excitement produced a severe coughing spell, and he made a confession.

"I haven't long for this world," he said. "I am sick and out of work. I had no money and not a crumb in the house to eat. I was released from the Elmira Reformatory some time ago, because they said I would live but a short time. Since then I have tried to be good and get work. There was nothing for me to do, and I wandered aimlessly about. My family had no breakfast, and I felt that I must have some medicine or I would die. I saw Miss Kelly coming with the pocketbook in her hand, and the impulse to seize it overcame me, and I took it from her. Then I bought some bread and medicine and went home."

The condition of the prisoner excited the sympathy of the spectators. Miss Kelly was much affected, and will not appear before the Grand Jury against him.

A STOCK EXCHANGE ENJOINED.

Chicago Directors Cannot Interfere with Ware & Leland.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—L. K. Boyesen, acting for Ware & Leland, appeared in Judge Tuley's court this afternoon and asked for an order restraining the Board of Directors of the Chicago Stock Exchange from interfering with the business of the firm. A temporary injunction was issued, as is the case in such matters. No date was set for the hearing.

Mr. Boyesen's contention was that the Directors had violated their rules in expelling E. F. Leland without preferring written charges and giving him a chance to answer them.

MARRIED POST OFFICE WOMEN.

Those Now in the Service May Stay Under the Recent Ruling.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—First Assistant Postmaster General Heath recently made a ruling affecting married women in the postal service. To-day he made a statement in which he said that the ruling had been misconstrued to mean that every such woman must immediately resign. No such sweeping was intended, he declared.

"The case upon which I made the ruling," he said, "was that of two clerks in one Post Office who married. The women insisted upon remaining on the pay-roll. I held that the presence of husband and wife as clerks in the same office was inimical to the service, and that the woman should vacate and permit her husband to support her, thus allowing her position to go to some one who had no means of support. I intend to apply this ruling to women clerks in Post Offices who in the future marry, but women who are already married and who hold positions as Post Office clerks and whose employment under their married names has been approved by the department will not be disturbed."

DEMOCRATS FAVOR THE WEST?

National Convention May Be Given to Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Now that the Republicans have decided to hold their National Convention in Philadelphia, the Democratic managers are more inclined to listen to the suggestion of choosing Chicago for their convention city next year. They believe it will be good politics to cater to the West, while the Republicans, for the first time in many years, have arranged to go East. The Democratic National Committee is to meet within three or four weeks for the purpose of settling the question.

When the committee last met in Chicago there were two avowed bidders for the convention—Milwaukee and Kansas City. Since then New York has made a tentative effort to secure it, and Cincinnati has also been talking of its facilities for entertaining the state and platform makers. Buffalo also wants the Democratic event, but its claims have not seriously impressed the party managers.

The visiting committeemen have invariably told the local leaders that Chicago can get the convention if an organized effort is made in that direction, but the local men so far have refrained from encouraging the idea, and the impression has gone forth that Chicago's influence would be exerted in Milwaukee's behalf.

MONEY FOR MT. VERNON FUND.

Every Person Entering the Grounds Thursday Paid Admission.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The observance of the anniversary of the death of Washington was of very decided interest to the ladies of the Mount Vernon Association. They have charge of the grounds, and it is a rule of the association that no one shall be admitted to the estate except upon payment of a fee, usually 25 cents, which goes to the fund for the maintenance of the house and grounds, and for the purchase of Washington relics.

The rule that payment for admission must be made was not relaxed Thursday. Every person who attended the ceremonies—the President and Cabinet, Masons, Red Men, black men, and white men, not of any organization—was obliged to pay to get in. Almost everybody secured the benefits of a rate made with the transportation companies, but no one entered without pay.

The result was that about 5,000 persons contributed from 15 to 25 cents each to the Mount Vernon maintenance fund.

DRESS SLASHER STILL AT WORK.

Washington's Queer Criminal Commits Further Depredations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Washington's dress slasher is still at work, having evaded the watchful eyes of specially detailed police officers.

Mrs. L. H. Blake, while shopping on Seventh Street last night discovered that her skirt and velvet cape had been cut in several places and ruined. A reward of $100 was recently offered for the detection and arrest of the vandal who commits these outrages, and the police have been looking for the person, supposed to be a woman who does the cutting, but have obtained not the slightest clue.

Labels for Washington Trees.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Washington streets are shaded in Summer by something like seventy-five thousand trees of different varieties. It has been suggested to the District of Columbia Commissioners that a valuable and important educational work would be accomplished by applying labels in a liberal way to indicate the botanical and common names of the trees, about which most people are profoundly ignorant.

ine that a few reverses make it necessary to drain the country of every man able to carry a rifle. The volunteers are greatly worked up, and numbers of applications to serve in regiments, from individuals, have been received. It is learned, however, that Lord Wolseley believes that, though these men are excellent as volunteers, they lack the evenness, in the ranks and among the officers, which marks a line regiment. To use his own words, they are "brilliant in spots, but weak in others," and, while he appreciates the offers, he sees no way to accept them at present.

The action of the National Liberal Federation this week in deciding to support a vigorous prosecution of the war, but reserving the full right of criticism, now and in the future, while stating that there is much to be deplored in the conduct of the negotiations preceding the hostilities, may be said to voice the opinion of the bulk of the Liberal Party.

LONDON EDITORS DESPONDENT.

British Press Comment Goes So Far as to Intimate that the Empire Is in Danger.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—As might have been expected, the desperate state of the British arms in South Africa, as revealed by the defeat of Gen. Buller at Tugela River, where, at one stroke, he lost treble the number of guns Wellington left in the hands of Napoleon during the six years' fighting in the peninsula, while adding to the determination of the authorities to send every available man to the front, caused something in the nature of a momentary panic.

It is long since the tone of the newspapers has been so chastened and pessimistic. Some of the comments go so far as to say the crisis is so far reaching that Great Britain stands "where she stood over a century back, when the American colonists, men of British and Dutch blood, were in arms."

The Evening Standard declares the situation calls for all the equanimity and determination and perseverance of the empire, and demands the immediate calling out of all the volunteers, embodying all the Outlanders expelled from the Transvaal, to guard the lines of communication, thus freeing all the regulars for service in the fighting line.

The Star urges the "commandeering" of all the great English Atlantic liners for the transportation of reinforcements and says the country must "set herself the task of plucking victory out of defeat," adding:

"The guilt of the Government is superseded by the danger of the empire. We are thinking of a hostile Europe, we are thinking of India, and, whatever happens, we implore the Government not to move another man from Calcutta or Bombay. We remember the mutiny."

The St. James's Gazette is also apprehensive of foreign complications, and thinks France is preparing for some venture which will be in the nature of a defiance of Great Britain, and urges the Admiralty to form a new squadron of the ships in the reserve.

The Globe, after facing the situation and urging the immediate dispatch of reinforcements and the use of the militia, continues:

"And we can turn with equal confidence to the strong arms and loyal hearts of our fellow-subjects in Canada and Australia. Those offers which were so liberally made and which were not too generously received at the beginning of the war, will, we are confident, be renewed, as the urgency of the contest reveals itself. They can see as keenly as ourselves that not only our supremacy in Africa, but the maintenance of the empire is at stake."

The Pall Mall Gazette's review of the situation says:

"It is no use crying over spilt milk. Surprises of all sorts must be expected in war. Our position for the advance is intact. Nothing has occurred to shake our belief in Gen. Buller. Let us steadily trust him and furnish him as rapidly as possible with more guns and more horses and men."

GERMANS JUBILANT OVER DEFEAT.

Disaster to Buller Delights Berlin Press and People.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—The German press and people are jubilant over the news from South Africa, and everywhere in the streets people stop each other and offer congratulations.

Among the press comments to-night is that of the Kruz Zeitung, which says:

"Thus the fighting power of the third column is destroyed; and the campaign against the Boers is disastrously ended. What, however, means more, is that England's decadence, long ago apparent to far-sighted statesmen, has thus become visible before the whole world."

The Vossische Zeitung says:

"The English yesterday met the greatest defeat in this campaign, so productive of disappointments and losses."

The National Zeitung says:

"The second chapter of this war is now also ended, and is much worse than the first. Its effect upon the Afrikanders in Natal and Cape Colony must be very unfortunate for the English cause."

The semi-official Post, after making merry of the British pretensions in this war, says:

"England had better not have counted upon her colonies," citing the New South Wales Lancers as specimens of the colonial troops.

The Deutsche Tagezitung calls it the beginning of the end, and concludes its article thus:

"We, in Germany, do not wish England to get off cheaply. The more they are humbled in the Boer war and the more completely their power in South Africa is broken, the better for us."

The Boersen Courier says:

"The attitude of the English people in view of these hard knocks deserves every praise;" and the paper adds, "that in any case England's position as a world power is secured by her navy."

The Tageblatt compared Gen. Buller's defeat with that of the Italian Gen. Baratieri at Adowah.

The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"Surely a severer trial the British world and empire never had to meet, for, as things are now, England will have to thank the other powers for their sincere love of peace only if she emerges from this war with a whole skin and mere loss of prestige."

FRANCE VIEWS IT CALMLY.

Paris Public Not Demonstrative Over News from Buller.

PARIS, Dec. 16.—For the third time this week Parisians met hoarse-voiced news venders running along the boulevards today shouting "Crushing defeat of the English," "Great victory for the Boers," and displaying the front sheets of their papers bearing big headlines—"The English Routed," &c. The French people heard and read the news with interest and discussed these British defeats in the cafés without a display of sorrow or sympathy for the British; but, at the same time, without any outward demonstration of gleeful satisfaction that could be regarded as offensive by British spectators.

The violently anglophobe press, such as La Libre Parole and La Patrie, naturally treat the British disasters as joyful tidings; but the respectable journals—Le Temps, Le Journal des Débats, La Liberté, and others—discuss the news soberly and moderately.

Le Journal des Débats expresses admiration at the wonderful calmness and sangfroid with which the British nation has met blow after blow. The paper concludes its article with the remark that it would be a heavy blow to the social organization of Great Britain if Mr. Chamberlain's venture brings her to conscription.

Le Temps also comments upon the weakness of Great Britain's army to cope with the present emergency, and says:

"Mr. Chamberlain little suspected that in letting loose this war he was going to reveal the insufficiency of the military forces of the British Colossus."

La Patrie, which tells its readers that Mr. Chamberlain is seeking to bring about a war with France in order to restore in the eyes of Europe Great Britain's prestige, so shaken by the defeats of her army by the Boers, says that a few more disasters like that at Magerfontein and Tugela River will mean a British war with France in the coming Spring, and declares that the concentration of the French northern fleet at Brest and the recall of the Mediterranean Squadron to Toulon are the first precautionary measures taken by the French authorities.

"The British Army," La Patrie adds, "has lived a century on the reputation of the Duke of Wellington; and perhaps the navy also lives solely on the reputation of Nelson. The war in the Transvaal has demonstrated the weak points of the British Army, the weakness of the British Empire, the incapacity of its military chiefs, and the fictitious strength of its troops, who only had to fight savages."

The same paper publishes the report of an interview with a French General, whose name is not given, who describes the ignorance displayed by the British officers as "unheard of," and declares that the Boers are evidently superior in tactics and strategy and, perhaps, in courage.

ITALY COMMENTS ON THE DEFEAT.

Great Britain's Loss Causes a Profound Impression.

ROME, Dec. 16.—Gen. Buller's reverse produced a profound impression in all circles here, where it is regarded as most serious for the military prestige of England. The afternoon papers devote long articles to the subject.

The Avanti says:

"It is a veritable disaster for Great Britain, and the chief responsibility falls upon Mr. Chamberlain. The probability is that the final success of the British troops will thereby be considerably delayed."

The Italia is of the opinion that the cause of imperialism in South Africa has sustained a severe check.

The Tribunal says the defeat brings into prominence the weakness of the British artillery.

AUSTRIAN PRESS IS MODERATE.

Reviews the British Defeats from a Philosophical Standpoint.

VIENNA, Dec. 16.—Gen. Buller's reverse was the subject of almost universal comment in the Austrian press to-day. Most of the papers incline to the assumption that Gen. Buller's military motives in hurrying engagements are found in the situation at Ladysmith, and they conclude that the capitulation of that place may shortly be expected.

The Neue Freie Presse says:

"If the attack was the outcome of a political consideration, there could only have been the excitement prevailing among the Afrikanders and the state of public opinion in England."

The Frendenblatt fears these successes will bring the Boers fresh auxiliaries from the Dutch Cape Colonists, but adds:

"Yet it is to be seen whether the Boers know how to follow up victory."

The Wiener-Abenblatt thinks that the consequences of the two last reverses may, in so far as human judgment can foretell, be the fall of Ladysmith and Kimberley, the outbreak of an Afrikander rebellion, and that, unless something wonderful happens in the meantime, an improvement can only be secured by reinforcements, which are not expected till January.

The Deutsche-Volksblatt believes the cause of Gen. Buller's defeat, as on previous occasions, was faulty reconnoitring.

Has Sympathy for Great Britain.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 16.—The Magyar Neuzel, commenting on the British check in South Africa, expresses the warmest sympathy for the British Army in its misfortune, and adds:

"Every liberal nation in the world would deeply regret if the position of Great Britain, the standard bearer of civilization, were shaken. Austria-Hungary would sorely feel the consequences of any loss of power by England."

LONDON MARKETS DEPRESSED.

War News Sends the Prices of Stocks Downward.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The news of the defeat of Gen. Buller at Tugela River caused a momentary panic on the Stock Exchange here to-day, where there was intense excitement in all departments. Immediately after the opening jobbers started realizing, and all prices opened from one to six points below the closing prices of yesterday, Consols being down 1¼. Rand Mines were heavily affected, starting at 33, as against yesterday evening's closing price of 33¾. De Beers opened at 25½, as against 27. Chartereds at 3, as against 3½, and Gold Fields at 5⅞, as against 7 5-16.

Americans were very flat and were freely offered by local and Continental holders, at prices which they found difficulty in obtaining. Foreigners moved in sympathy with the other securities. Parisian stocks, however, held their own comparatively well.

After the first rush the market steadied somewhat. Still, speculators were reluctant to engage in fresh commitments, confining themselves to the closing of open accounts.

The market views of the situation are of the most serious character, both politically and monetarily, the latter mainly because a fresh defeat of the British troops will delay longer the supply of South African gold.

Two unimportant failures were announced early in the day.

Prices closed better than they opened, but prices were below the best. Rand Mines, 33; De Beers, 24½; Gold Fields, 6 15-16; Chartereds, 3⅛.

BRITISH CABINET IN COUNCIL.

Denied, However, that It Was Called Because of the Disaster to Gen. Buller.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—A hastily summoned meeting of the Cabinet was held at the Foreign Office this afternoon. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, was not present.

Lord Salisbury, who came to London today to attend the meeting, returned to Hatfield House this evening. Regarding the suggestion that the Premier came specially because of the news of Gen. Buller's reverse and summoned an emergency meeting of the Cabinet, it is announced that the gathering was simply one of a series of meetings of the Cabinet Committee on National Defense, to which only a limited number of members belong, and which did not necessitate their presence.

GERMANY'S MENACE PASSED OVER.

Buller's Defeat Almost Obliterates von Buelow's Speech.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The grave situation confronting Great Britain in South Africa almost obliterates the effect of the speech of the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Count von Buelow, in the Reichstag, Monday last, though scarcely any announcement of recent years has had so much bearing on the future of Europe. In spite of the uninformed comment in some English quarters that Count von Buelow spoke merely for political effect, in other words, "jollied" the Reichstag by means of jingoistic sophistries for home consumption, to vote for the new navy in Vienna—which is in closer touch with Berlin than any other capital—Count von Buelow is interpreted as flinging down the gauntlet to Great Britain.

The Neue Frie Presse, which has personal connection with the Foreign Minister of Germany, declares Germany is determined to obtain the greatest possible advantage from the South African complications, and adds:

"The cool mention of England dissipates all apprehensions caused by Emperor William's stay at Windsor, and it is not impossible that England's difficulty may, in certain circumstances, be Germany's opportunity."

The Vienna correspondent of The Standard, retailing much more similar comment, reiterates what has often been heard here, namely, that Great Britain is more hated on the Continent on account of her interference in behalf of the United States, when the latter was at war with Spain, than for any other recent cause. Why Count von Buelow should have gone out of his way to indicate the possibility of Great Britain's hostility and belittle the friendship between her and Germany is an enigma yet unsolved by any British authority.

A concensus of the best opinion tends to the belief that the German Minister wished to offset Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's rash speech at Leicester. Yet, this seems a small excuse for such language at this period, while the suggestion that Count von Buelow spoke for purely political effect is dismissed as being entirely uncharacteristic of the man who is rapidly achieving the reputation of being the first statesman in Europe.

"So far," says The Saturday Review, referring to the war, "we have been able to answer each reverse by the potent argument of another division, but that cannot last forever."

Such an expression, appearing in an ultra-Conservative and optimistic publication, is significant.

While the Von Buelow anti-Britishisms have not stirred resentful criticisms, the public is just beginning to realize that, with 100,000 men in the field, no progress is being made in any direction, and Kimberley and Ladysmith seem as far off as ever from the promised relief.

QUEEN VICTORIA DISTRESSED.

Great Britain's Ruler Much Concerned Over Buller's Defeat.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Queen Victoria was greatly concerned about the latest reverse.

The Commander-in-Chief, Lord Wolseley, was at Windsor Castle when the news arrived, and he took a special train back to London.

WILL REORGANIZE WAR OFFICE.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Criticism of the military authorities is finding vent in quarters that heretofore have studiously avoided, as premature, any strictures on either the War Office or the Generals in the field. Unless some striking change for the better soon marks the course of the British arms, there bids fair to break over the head of the Government a storm of indignation such as has not been seen since the Crimea.

That such a movement is not without cause is evidenced by information gleaned by a correspondent that the authorities have already decided that a reorganization of the War Office is absolutely necessary and that it will not be delayed a day longer than can be helped, though it can scarcely be done until hostilities cease.

METHUEN'S LOSS PLACED AT 963.

Revised List Shows Seventy Officers Among the Casualties.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The revised list of the British casualties at the battle of Magersfontein shows the total to be 963, of which number 70 were officers.

The Black Watch were the heaviest sufferers. Of the rank and file 42 were killed, 182 wounded, and 111 are missing.

METHUEN RENEWS THE FIGHT.

Shells the Boers for Two Hours and Then Retires.

MODDER RIVER, Dec. 15.—During a demonstration in force this morning the British guns shelled the Boers for a couple of hours. The Boers did not reply until the British were retiring.

The Boers are further intrenching and strengthening their old defenses, with the evident intention of fiercely disputing control of the railroad.

GREAT VICTORY, SAYS CRONJE.

Transvaal Commander Reports the Fight with Methuen.

PRETORIA, Dec. 13.—An official dispatch from Gen. Cronje, Boer commander at Modder River, says:

"The Boers captured a great quantity of loot, including 200 Lee-Metfords, cases of cartridges, and hundreds of bayonets. Great numbers of the British have retired from Twee-Rivieren in the direction of Belmont. The loss of the British was very great. There were heaps of dead on the field. The wounded are being attended to, temporarily, at Bissett's farm. The Sappers and Miners must have suffered severely.

"The Boers suffered heavy losses in horses. I cannot otherwise describe the battlefield than as a sad and terrible slaughter. Monday was for us a brilliant victory. It has infused new spirit into our men and will enable them to achieve greater deeds."

MAFEKING HOLDS BOERS AT BAY.

Asserted that Col. Baden-Powell Has Forced Them Back.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 16.—Advices from Bulawayo say that a dispatch from Mafeking, dated Dec. 6, announced that the scheme of advancing the military works was acting well, and had forced the Boers to evacuate the strong, commanding fortification northeast of the town.

It was added that the British continued pushing back the Boers and were then working toward their main siege batteries. The British casualties were trifling. The Boer force was then reduced to about 2,000 men, with four field guns and some siege guns.

PRETORIA, Dec. 13.—Advices from Mafeking say an attack on a small British fort has been made with good results. The fort was demolished. Heavy cannon firing is proceeding.

Col. Baden-Powell has sent the Boers a notice advising them to lay down their arms and return to their homes, promising them that protection will be given them as soon as Great Britain has taken over the Transvaal.

ROYALTY HONORS THE MAINE.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The West India docks were gay this afternoon with about 6,000 prominent people present, including a number of royalties. The occasion of this gathering of celebrities and others was the presentation of the Queen's flag to the American hospital ship Maine. The Duke of Connaught, surrounded by the ladies of the committee, on the poop deck, presented the flag to Lady Randolph Churchill. He said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: In the name of her Majesty the Queen, I present this union jack to the hospital ship Maine as a mark of her Majesty's appreciation of the generosity of those who have found money for the ship, and also as a mark of her appreciation of the charity which a large number of American women and men have shown toward the soldiers or the Queen, speaking their own language, who are now fighting gallantly in South Africa.

"It is a great pleasure to me to be asked to perform what I believe to be a most unique ceremony. Never before has a ship sailed under the combined flags, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, and it marks, I hope, an occasion which brings out the feeling of generosity and affection which the two countries have, I hope, for each other. I cannot thank those who have come forward in this manner sufficiently for what they have done. As an officer in the English Army I feel, I can assure you, most deeply for what you have all done, and I am sure the officers and men who, I hope, will reap the advantage of this well-found ship, will ever bless those who have done so much for them. I would like to mention many names, but I am afraid it is impossible.

"But I will ask Lady Randolph Churchill to accept, in the names of those who have worked with her, the thanks both of the Sovereign of our country and of all Englishmen and women, for the splendid present of this hospital ship."

Simultaneously with the Duke of Connaught loosing the Union Jack the Stars and Stripes were broken out from the mizzenmast.

Lady Randolph Churchill replied, thanking the Queen and the Duke of Connaught.

The Bishop of Islington blessed the ship and the flag was hoisted by the Duke. After several unsuccessful tugs he broke out the stops, and an immense Union Jack with a red cross in its centre flew out in the sunshine. "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the Queen" were played by the Scots Guard Band. The crowds cheered, and the dockers, clustered along the river banks, joined in the applause. Lady Randolph called for three cheers for the Duke of Connaught, which were given heartily.

The royal party included the Duchess of Connaught and Princess Louise of Lorne. They drove away after having inspected the Maine, which is expected to sail for South Africa in about a week.

Lord Beresford Ordered to Sea.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, this morning, confirmed the announcement of his appointment to second in command of the British Mediterranean fleet. He has informed his constituents that this necessitates his resignation of his seat in the House of Commons, where he has represented York City in the Conservative interest.

WINSTON CHURCHILL RECAPTURED?

LOURENZO MARQUES, Delagoa Bay, Dec. 16.—It is rumored that Winston Churchill, the newspaper correspondent who recently escaped from Pretoria, has been captured at Waterfalboven.

This is about half way between Pretoria and Portuguese territory.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—A special dispatch from Pretoria, dated Wednesday, Dec. 13, says that before the escape of Mr. Winston Churchill he wrote to the Transvaal War Office declaring that, as a correspondent, he considered his detention as a war prisoner unjustifiable.

He expressed in his letter the highest appreciation of his treatment. His escape was cleverly executed, but there is little chance of his being able to cross the border.

CANADA OFFERS MORE TROOPS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.—As soon as the dispatch announcing that a second contingent had been accepted from Australia by the Imperial Government, the officers of the Ottawa Field Battery, headed by Major Hurdman, renewed their offer to send the battery. The Governor General sent for the Premier, and a Cabinet council was called.

The Cabinet was in session all afternoon and Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, reported that he had a number of offers for service in a second Canadian contingent for South Africa. The offer for this contingent is now before the British authorities. The Government will wait until such time as the War Office authorities notify them of the need of the contingent. As soon as it is accepted the regiment will be sent forward.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The St. James's Gazette this week, commenting on the Canadian contingent, says:

"They have shown that their long home training and colonial campaigning experience have not been lost on them, and they are now getting their reward in being pushed to the front. We should like to see a little more notice of this taken in the London press. The colonists are intensely loyal, but they are a little sensitive, and appreciative notice of the work they are doing would be good imperial cement."

Gen. Montgomery Moore, formerly in command in Canada, has been selected to succeed Gen. Kelly-Kenny, at Aldershot, where the latter has been in charge of the mobilization.

MAY SEND ALL TROOPS TO WAR.

Predicted that Halifax Garrison Will Go to South Africa.

Special to The New York Times.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 16.—The series of reverses culminating in the repulse of Gen. Buller at Tugela River, has had a disquieting effect on the soldiers in this garrison. Officers here freely predict that England will call out every available man, and it is thought that Halifax may be left without a regular garrison. If the imperial forces are withdrawn for service in South Africa, the forts here will be manned for the first time by the Canadian militia, and possibly by a detachment of Canadian artillery.

Lieut. Dwyer, an officer of the Royal Artillery stationed here, who has a superior knowledge of gunnery, has been ordered to report for service in South Africa at once.

BULLER'S WOUNDED OFFICERS.

Sketches of Some of Those Shot at Tugela River.

The Hon. St. Leger Henry Jarvis, who was wounded in the battle at Tugela River, is the fifth son of the third Viscount St. Vincent, who died in 1879. John Jervis, Earl St. Vincent, received that title on account of the splendid victory he achieved over the Spanish fleet off Cape St. Vincent in 1797.

Capt. Vincent was born Sept. 7, 1863. He is an aide de camp to the Queen and well known in London society. Another brother, the Hon. Ronald, is Captain of the Third Battalion of the Northumberland Fusiliers.

Capt. Joseph F. Radcliffe, also wounded, is the second son of Sir Joseph Percival Pickford Radcliffe of Rudding Park, York, and Caverswall Castle, Stafford. Capt. Radcliffe was born in 1862, and married, in 1898, Miss Gertrude Coventry, daughter of John Coventry of Burgate House, Hampshire. His mother is the only surviving daughter of Sir Edward Doughty Tichborne, the ninth Baronet of that name, and the uncle of Roger Tichborne, the man who is supposed to have been drowned at sea, and who was impersonated by the celebrated Tichborne claimant.

Among the other wounded were Capt. H. D. White-Thomson, a son of Col. Sir Robert T. White-Thomson, K. C. B., of Broomford, Exbourne, Devonshire, and Major Robert Henry Gage Heygate, who is the eldest brother of and heir to Sir Frederick Gage Heygate, third Baronet. The latter was born July 26, 1859. His grandfather, the first Baronet, was a Lord Mayor of London, and his father was Member of Parliament for Londonderry for many years. His mother was the only daughter and heiress of Connolly Gage of Ballarena, Londonderry.

Lieut. Gerald Maurice Ponsonby is a grandson of the second Lord de Mauley and the eldest son of the Hon. and Rev. Maurice John Ponsonby, vicar of New Swindon, and Honorary Canon of Bristol Cathedral. His grandfather on the mother's side was the second Lord Sudely. He was born Oct. 7, 1876.

More Mules Shipped to South Africa.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 16.—The British transport Hermes, with 900 mules, sailed for Cape Town to-day. The Hermes is the sixth vessel which has left this port with mules for the English Army in South Africa.

SULZER WOULD AID THE BOERS.

Introduces a Resolution in the House Protesting Against Great Britain's Mode of Warfare.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Representative Sulzer (Dem., N. Y.,) to-day introduced a joint resolution in the House declaring that a state of war exists in South Africa, and according belligerent rights to the Transvaal Government.

The resolution is as follows:

"Joint resolution, declaring that a state of public war exists between Great Britain and the Transvaal Republic and that belligerent rights be accorded to the Transvaal Government.

"Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives, That the Government of the United States recognizes a condition of public war between the Government of Great Britain and the Government of the Republic of the Transvaal, and the United States of America hereby declare that they will maintain a condition of strict neutrality between the contending powers and accord to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory of the United States. The Congress of the United States protest and remonstrate against the barbarous manner in which the war has been conducted by Great Britain, and the President is hereby authorized to take such steps as may be expedient in his judgment to secure an observance of the laws of war as recognized by all civilized nations and bring about an honorable peace."

Mr. Sulzer said of the resolution:

"My sympathy is with the heroic Boers. They are making a brave and gallant fight against great odds for their homes, their firesides, and their liberties. We should not secretly or openly help Great Britain to their disadvantage. We should accord the Boers all the rights of belligerents. I want to see the Boers win, and I hope they will. I am opposed to the pig-sticking mode of warfare Great Britain is carrying on. If what I read in the papers is true, this cruelty and inhumanity puts England beyond the pale of civilization.

"I shall do all in my power to pass this resolution. It will come up in the House, and I want to go on record in favor of the Boers and their republic and against England or any Anglo-American alliance, expressed or implied."

SAYS THE BRITISH WILL WIN.

Johannesburg Man in Chicago Discusses the Situation.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—John McCracken, for nine years representative in Johannesburg of a large mining machinery house in this city, arrived in Chicago to-day. He said of the situation in South Africa:

"The British cannot overcome the enemy without heavy losses. The Boers have meant war for ten years and have prepared during the last four. They have stores of ammunition and the best modern rifles. The atmosphere of South Africa is so pelucid and clear that to one not a native the distances are deceptive. A kopje that seems a mile away is in reality nearly two miles off. The British soldiers are new to the country, and this atmospheric illusion undoubtedly handicaps them. You will notice that so far in the war the British have used their heavy guns first and then trusted to the bayonet, whereas the Boer rifle fire has been terrific."

Mr. McCracken declares Great Britain will finally conquer and settle the South African question forever. He says:

"It may take millions of pounds and another hundred thousand men, but the job will be cleaned up."

More Australian Troops Accepted.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 16.—The Imperial authorities have telegraphed to the Governor of New South Wales, Earl Beauchamp, accepting the offer of a further Australian contingent for South Africa, and suggesting that the men should be mounted and good shots.

MUNITIONS OF WAR SALES.

Government Not to Interfere with Them, Despite Protest.

The Department of State in Washington will not do anything to interfere with the sale of munitions of war in this country to the British Government, to be used in fighting the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, nor with their transportation to England or anywhere else that the British Government wishes to have them sent. That is the substance of a letter which Secretary of State Hay has just written in reply to a protest made by Charles D. Pierce, Consul General of the Orange Free State, in this city.

Mr. Pierce's protest was due to a letter which he received from Dr. Hendrick Muller, Envoy Extraordinary of the Orange Free State at The Hague, Holland, calling his attention to the shipment by a cartridge company of Bridgeport, Conn., of 5,000,000 cartridges to South Africa. He also said that this company had received other large orders from the British Government, and directed him to protest to the United States Government against the sale of the munitions of war to be used against the Orange Free State, with which this country is at peace.

Mr. Pierce accordingly wrote to Secretary of State Hay, and yesterday morning he received a reply from Mr. Hay citing authorities to show that in case of war belligerents have the right to purchase any kind of goods in a neutral country, subject to confiscation after shipment.

When asked whether he had to say anything in regard to this reply, Mr. Pierce said: "Nothing at all." He could not himself tell how American volunteers could get into the Boer Army, but if they went from here to a certain port in Europe, he added, there were funds on hand there to transport suitable men who wished to join.

MANY AUTOMOBILES BURNED.

Electric Vehicle Company's Factory, Next to St. Bartholomew's Parish House, Destroyed.

The four-story brick building, 211-219 East Forty-second Street, occupied by the Electric Vehicle and Transportation Company, was gutted by fire last night. The first two floors of the building were used as manufacturing and repair shops, while the third and fourth floors were utilized as store rooms for automobile manufacturing materials and new automobiles.

The fire was discovered in the rubber room by Watchman William Friedman. The first alarm was turned in at eighteen minutes after seven and was quickly followed by a second, third, and then a fourth alarm. Chief Croker, who hurried to the scene, personally directed the fight against the fire.

The Third Avenue Railroad Company is changing the power on the Forty-second Street road, and to move the gas and water pipes it has dug trenches on the sides of the street to receive the pipes. The torn up condition of the street somewhat embarrassed the firemen.

The firemen were able to prevent the flames from spreading to any extent, but could not save the electric company's building, and so rapidly did it burn that in about twenty minutes after the first alarm was given the roof fell in, carrying with it the upper floors. It is said there were fifty new automobiles on the third and fourth floors.

The cars of the Third and Second Avenue and Forty-second Street lines were stopped, because of the hose lines and engines, for over an hour. There was an enormous crowd to witness the fire, which was spectacular from the height to which the flames rose. The reserves of police from three stations were out to keep the crowd in order.

During the fire a hose of Engine No. 24 burst, and the stream struck John Murray, a passing citizen, in the breast, in front of 979 Third Avenue. He was knocked down and drenched, and the squirming hose, like a great serpent, fell on top of him, after pushing him up against the building. No one seemed to come to his aid, the crowd which had also been drenched running away. At last a girl of twelve years ran across the vacant space in sight of the crowd and lifted the cumbersome hose off the prostrate man, releasing him. He got up and went home, and the girl who was cheered by the crowd and refused her name, ran away.

St. Bartholomew's Parish House towered over the automobile building, and there are side windows in it. These are provided with iron shutters, but were all open when the fire started. The St. Bartholomew's Boys' Club was in session on the sixth, or top, floor, and Superintendent George McVicker got a number of the boys to help him close the iron shutters. The flames, however, got into the top floor later, and did about $2,000 damage.

There was also a girls' club of thirty or forty in session on the fifth floor, and a men's club of half a hundred on the fourth floor, when the fire started. There was not any great excitement, however, as all descended out of the building in safety, and they joined the crowd which had gathered to watch the fire.

The five-story factory building in the rear, at 212 to 222 East Forty-third Street, occupied by the John H. Stearns & Co. silk works, was partly damaged by fire.

The loss on the burned building was estimated by Chief Croker at $250,000.

FACTORY GIRLS IN A PANIC.

Stop for Their Clothes Before Escaping from Burning Building.

Two hundred girls lost their wits for a time yesterday afternoon when a fire started on the fourth or top floor of the brick factory building at 14 and 16 Ninth Avenue. They all rushed for the closets in which they kept their street clothes, and so much confusion was caused that the girls were thrown into a panic for a while. All escaped safely to the street, however. The fire did $30,000 damage, but its cause was not ascertained.

The building is owned by John Jacob Astor. It is occupied on the top floor by the Excelsior Dry Batteries Company, on the third floor by the S. G. Brewster & Co. candy manufactory, on the second floor by the Innovation Trousers and Trunks Company, and on the first floor by the William Cox Seed Company.

The flames were first noticed in the rear of the top floor. A girl screamed and then all the others screamed as they noticed both smoke and flame. They rushed to the closets for their street clothes, although the flames were gaining headway. With arms full of wraps of all kinds they hastened out to the stairs and down to the street. On each floor were met other girls, and on each floor a similar experience had been gone through by the women employed there.

The firemen had to pour an immense lot of water on the fire, and this caused a serious damage to the stock of candy in the Brewster place. Many Christmas boxes were destroyed. The company claims its loss is $10,000.

The fire damages only the top floor, where the loss to the Excelsior Dry Batteries Company was put at $5,000. The loss by water to the Innovation Trousers and Trunks Company is $5,000; to the Cox Company, $5,000, and to the building, $5,000.

TAILOR'S SHOP IN FLAMES.

Fire in Pearl Street Does $1,200 Damage—Dogs and Game Cock Saved.

The tailor shop of Michel Goldsmith, on the first floor of the four-story brownstone-front building at 125 Pearl Street, was discovered ablaze at 6 o'clock last evening by James Martin and William Powers, two boys, who were standing at Hanover and Pearl Streets. They ran as fast as they could to the house of Engine Company No. 4, in Old Slip, and gave the alarm.

Capt. Finn sent a fireman to investigate, and when he reached the corner of Pearl Street and Old Slip he shouted at the top of his voice, bringing the apparatus, which had already been hitched up. Goldsmith's shop was found on fire from end to end, and flames had already leaped into the big light shaft, which separates this from the other building at 78 Beaver Street.

The janitress of both buildings, Mrs. O'Neill, and her young son Jimmie, were in their apartments on the top floor, and the smoke was so thick that they had to escape by the shuttle to the roof of the next building, and then to the street. Mrs. O'Neill's canary bird was smothered, but she and her son succeeded in saving a game rooster and three pet dogs.

Mrs. O'Neill told the police that she had been afraid of a stove in a rear room of Goldsmith's shop. Materials for cleaning clothes were also kept in this room in which the firemen found the blaze had started. Mrs. O'Neill said she told Goldsmith that the stove was unsafe.

Goldsmith's stock was damaged to the extent of $1,000. The building, which is owned by William P. Douglass of 224 Broadway, was damaged about $200.

GOLD WITHOUT LABOR.

Nome City's Praises Sounded by a Successful Explorer.

"Nome City is the best place in the world to work for gold," said Arthur Vogt yesterday to several old friends among whom he had distributed a few gold nuggets, and then he added: "I am going back there next April."

Arthur Vogt formerly lived in Madison Street, near Hamburg Avenue, Brooklyn, and in April, 1898, he and a party of friends went to Alaska and the Klondike to search for gold. The company quarreled and disbanded, and Vogt and Benjamin J. Becker, also of Brooklyn, went to Nome City.

"Working the beach near Nome," said Vogt, "is better than staking claims and diggings. When the tide receded you could run your hands through the heavy moss and your nails would be covered with gold dust. Your boots, too, would be covered with gold. We found many nuggets, but no big ones to speak of.

"They have a newspaper up there, and the city when I left was rapidly filling up. The missionaries, who were the first to discover gold at Nome, have the best claims. Indians do their mining."

Vogt suffered a great deal from cold and hunger on his way home. For eight days he and others were on a schooner that went adrift in Bering Sea. The food gave out and they nearly starved. Finally the United States Revenue Cutter Grant towed the schooner into port. Vogt said he was perfectly satisfied with what gold he had found and was going to see his parents, at Egg Harbor, N. J.

Concessions to Boston Pressmen.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—Three additional concerns to-day conceded the new schedule demanded by the junior pressmen and press feeders of the city, and this noon the Master Printers' Association, acting for nearly all the remaining firms, requested a conference with the Scale Committee of the employes. The men employed by the 12 firms still holding out number less than 140 out of the Franklin Association's total membership of more than 500.

Strike at a Pennsylvania Colliery.

SHAMOKIN, Penn., Dec. 16.—Three hundred and fifty men were thrown out of employment to-day owing to the strike at Girard colliery. Several men were discharged last night for being impudent to officials. The men induced sympathizers to stand at the mine armed with clubs to prevent employes from going to work.

Machines to Replace Boston Lasters.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—A strike started by the lasters in the employ of the Thomas G. Plant Shoe Manufactory threatens to spread throughout the entire factory. Forty of the welt sewers joined the lasters to-day, and the strikers said that the cutters and stitchers were on the point of coming out. It is said that there is dissatisfaction over wages in every department. Mr. Plant said to-day that he would substitute machines for the lasters.

PROGRESS IN POISON TRIAL

Mr. Kinsley's Testimony and What Mr. Weeks Has Made of It.

LOOKING INTO BROOKLYN ERROR

Defense, However, May Not Refer to It —Experts in Conference—Change in the Programme.

The sixth week of the trial of Roland B. Molineux for the murder by poison in December last of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams will open in the Court of General Sessions to-morrow before Recorder Goff and a jury that has already listened to the evidence presented by the prosecution for two weeks. William J. Kinsley will be on the stand under cross-examination by Mr. Weeks, and the opening of the sixth week of the trial will also mark Mr. Kinsley's eighth day on the stand as a witness.

Mr. Kinsley had comparatively clear sailing in expounding his theories, on which he bases the assumption that the prisoner wrote the address on the poison package sent to Harry Cornish, until Friday, when Bartow S. Weeks, for the defendant, opened his cross-examination in earnest.

Slowly and skillfully he drew from the expert the admission that until as late as February last, after he had been examining the handwritings of the prisoner for nearly six weeks; when he had before him numerous admitted writings by him and was promised as many more as he should call for, and when he knew that the main efforts of the prosecution were directed toward finding Molineux guilty, he had nevertheless at this time "side-tracked" the defendant, as he called it, and had eliminated him from the case entirely for the time being, at least.

At that time Mr. Kinsley said he did not believe, after a close and exhaustive study of the defendant's writings, that he had written the address on the poison package, and, having led the witness to this point, Mr. Weeks then put the question to him which, it is said, will have more to do with determining in the minds of the jury the weight to give to expert testimony than anything which has so far been adduced at the trial.

It was the acknowledgment of the expert that not until he had Molineux write in his office with special pens and on special paper, under conditions prepared by the expert, in a style demanded by him, and the very words contained on the poison package, did he come to the conclusion that the man suspected was the guilty person.

Mr. Weeks sneered at a profession that based its conclusions on such matters. Again and again, in an effort to impress the jury, he made the witness admit that he had all the writings of the defendant that he wanted, but that he could not get the style he wanted. Early in the trial Mr. Weeks had brought out that Mr. Kinsley had asked Molineux to write vertically, in the style of the writing on the poison package, and that, when the defendant had protested that he never wrote in that style, the expert said he endeavored to move the paper under the writer's hands into such a position as to compel him to write vertically. It was this last writing that Mr. Kinsley admitted had acted as a key, and forced upon him the conviction that Molineux sent the poison.

Coincident with the obtaining of this admission from the chief expert for the prosecution came a story from Brooklyn to the effect that Mr. Kinsley had testified to one state of facts before the Grand Jury regarding the identity of handwriting, and when the case was ready for trial had refused to testify to the same state of facts, but had suddenly announced that he had been mistaken. This has caused Mr. Osborne a great deal of anxiety.

There is some question whether the matter can be brought before the jury in the present case, and there is also some question as to whether it will be used, even if it is available as testimony. Mr. Osborne and Mr. Weeks both observed great reticence on this subject yesterday, but it is known that the details of the Brooklyn case were being thoroughly investigated by the emissaries of the defense.

It was stated that the bringing before the jury of the facts contained in this Brooklyn mistake of the expert might act as a two-edged sword. Mr. Kinsley had already admitted to Mr. Weeks and the jury that he is not infallible, but for all that he stuck to his assertion that his fallibility did not extend to the Molineux case.

With fallibility admitted, it was said yesterday by a person closely connected with the case that it might not be wise for Mr. Weeks to bring up the Brooklyn matter, for Mr. Osborne would use the same state of facts to prove Mr. Kinsley's conscientiousness, and that it was problematical which view of the situation the jury would take.

That Mr. Osborne intends to strengthen his lines of expert testimony was evidenced yesterday when there was a long conference in his office between Mr. Kinsley, Col. Hay of Washington, who came to the conclusion that Molineux wrote the address on the package before Mr. Kinsley did, and who was called to account by the latter for his alleged hasty judgment; Dr. Persifor Frazer, the Philadelphia expert; William E. Hagan, the Troy expert, and David H. Tolman of Chicago. Mr. Osborne already knows just what these experts will swear to, and he refused to state why he had called them into conference.

It was learned, however, that as soon as Mr. Weeks is through with Mr. Kinsley, Mr. Osborne will put his other experts on the stand at once. He does not purpose to cut in with other testimony at this stage, but he will keep the minds of the jurors on commas and spacing and shading and pen holding as long as he can. This is another change in Mr. Osborne's programme, brought about, it is said by the cross-examination of Mr. Kinsley by Mr. Weeks.

In the week just past one of the most important matters has been the admission by Molineux that he used blue tinted paper on which was a crest made up of three crescents entwined. This admission was made on the day Mary Melando was trapped and brought into the jurisdiction of this State as a witness. The woman, who acknowledged that she had been bribed by Molineux and that she was in the habit of visiting his rooms in the Newark factory of which he was Superintendent, swore that she had seen paper of that kind in Molineux's room, and that she had purloined three sheets of it.

Her testimony on this point, coming as it did, after the admission by the defendant that he used such paper, failed to make an impression, and the feature of her examination was the questioning by the Recorder, who established that as early as January last Miss Melando had visited Mr. Weeks's office and had been questioned concerning the paper. Mr. Osborne admitted, however, in his opening address that this kind of blue paper was sold in at least two stores in New York and two in Newark, and the defense will show that a large amount of it was sold by the manufacturers, and that therefore it was much in use.

There has been a rumor in circulation recently of more or less persistence that the person who bought the silver bottle holder from Hartdegen & Co. in Newark has been found and will be put on the stand. The rumor cannot be traced to any reliable source, and Mr. Osborne has refused to talk about it. If this person has been found the discovery of his identity and whereabouts was made since Mr. Osborne opened the case for the State, for in his opening he made the positive statement that the jury would never know either where the bottle holder or the cyanide of mercury was bought.

Another feature of Friday's session was the admission in evidence of a piece of paper containing pencil writing by Gen. Molineux which was given to Capt. McClusky the day after the defendant was first accused of the crime. Mr. Kinsley admitted that he first thought this writing was by young Molineux and that Capt. McClusky had given it to him as such. It has not yet developed whether this paper was given to the detective with the statement that it was written by the defendant, or whether McClusky, having obtained the writing and knowing its origin, was desirous of putting the expert to the test.

Much has been said and written of the demeanor of the defendant. Not once since the case opened has he appeared either surprised or worried. The sudden switches of evidence made by the District Attorney have had no terrors for him. He has the air of a man who is extremely confident of his acquittal, in fact his bearing seems to preclude the possibility of any other thought ever having entered his mind.

Gen. Molineux, his father, who has been at his side since the trial opened, has much the same air of confidence. Mr. Weeks and Mr. Battle, Mr. Carvalho and Dr. Hamilton evidence the same state of mind. The surprises of the prosecution have not as yet caused any panic in the ranks of the defense.

AGUINALDO GETS AWAY.

Major March Abandons Pursuit of the Rebel Leader, Who Continues His Flight to Bayonbong.

MANILA, Dec. 16.—Major Peyton C. March of the Thirty-third Infantry has abandoned his pursuit of Aguinaldo, and has reached Bagnen, in the heart of the Grand Cordilleram, where the range is 10,000 feet high, and food is scarce and travel almost impossible.

From native couriers and Spanish prisoners it was learned that Aguinaldo left Bontoc, in the province of the same name, with three women and two soldiers, three days before and headed southward, evidently for Bayonbong, in the Province of Nueva Vizcaya, where, it is thought, he may encounter the Americans.

Major March's command was depleted 20 per cent. by the two days' march from Cervantes to Bagnen, so he returned to Cervantes Dec. 10.

Scattered bands of Macabebes which have been operating in the north are being collected, with the intention of sending them back to Manila, as there is much sickness among them and they are unfit for further mountain work.

Lieut. Chadwick, with thirty Macabebes, visited the mountain town of Pamposa and received the surrender of a company of insurgents, including three officers, with their arms and ammunition.

Gen. Concepcion and other Filipino officers who have surrendered have been taken to Vigan. Concepcion, who is cheerful, insists that the insurgent organization will be maintained even in the districts where the Americans are operating, also claiming that the Filipino leaders can use their troops whenever they desire. He suggests that the only method of terminating the war is the capture of Aguinaldo and the obtaining of an order from him for the troops to surrender their arms. But Concepcion believes Aguinaldo will never be captured.

NEGROS NATIVES IN FLIGHT.

Went to Mountains on Hearing of Alleged American Defeats.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Gen. Otis cables as follows to-day:

"Manila, Dec. 15.

"On the 8th inst., Gen. Smith at Negros reports that early in December a number of the inhabitants of four coast towns entered the mountains, believing the statements of Panay and Luzons that the Americans had been overwhelmingly defeated in those islands, that Aguinaldo was about to dictate terms of peace, and the American Congress to confer independence, when the established civil Government of the island would be overthrown. They also were told that all Negros were about to rise and drive out the Americans. No depredations were committed, and no consequences of importance apprehended."

THE BROOKLYN AT MANILA.

Cruiser Is Four Days or More Ahead of the New Orleans.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The Brooklyn arrived at Manila to-day, winning easily the long race from this country, which she has been running with the New Orleans. The New Orleans sailed from Singapore to-day for Manila, so that she is about four days behind the Brooklyn.

While the Brooklyn is this distance ahead of the New Orleans, it is pointed out at the Navy Department that unless something befalls the New Orleans before she reaches Manila from Singapore, she will actually have made the trip from the United States to Manila in the same, or even less, time than the larger cruiser.

The Brooklyn sailed from Fort Monroe on her long voyage Oct. 16, and it was five days later, Oct. 21, when the New Orleans got away from New York, so that the elapsed time occupied in the voyage, allowing the New Orleans five days to make the run from Singapore to Manila, will be about the same in such case.

Capt. Jewell, who took the Brooklyn out from this country, has been relieved at his own request from the command and ordered to return to the United States. He has completed his tour of sea service and will give place to Capt. C. M. Thomas, who will sail on Jan. 6 for his station.

DISEASE THREATENS SOLDIERS.

Capt. Finley Says a Terrible Malady Prevails in the Philippines.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Capt. J. P. Finley of the Ninth United States Infantry arrived here to-day from the Philippines. He acted as Quartermaster there. He is on crutches owing to a terrible malady, which, he says, is shockingly prevalent among the officers and men there. The first stage of the disease is dysentery, which becomes cronic. Then nerve paralysis sets in, and some are crippled for life.

"I have seen men," said Capt. Finley, "with their feet drawn out of shape, arms swollen and almost useless, while their facial muscles were so drawn as to prevent them from talking intelligibly. As to myself, when I left Manila both of my legs, below the knees, were so affected that I had to use two crutches."

CATS FOR PHILIPPINE SERVICE.

Newark Man to Send 300 for the Storehouses at Manila.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 16.—Frederick Butler of 103 Roseville Avenue yesterday advertised in the local newspapers that he would pay 15 cents apiece for full-grown cats, which he declared he wanted to ship to the Philippines.

About a week ago Mr. Butler received a letter from John Montgomery, an old friend of his, who is now at Manila. Montgomery wrote that he had secured a contract from Gen. Otis to supply 300 cats for the United States Government storehouses there. The buildings are said to be overrun with rats, and the American officers expect to get rid of the rodents by important cats from the United States.

Mr. Butler said this afternoon that he has thirty-five cats already enlisted for service in the Philippines. As the felines were purchased they were tagged and numbered and placed in a box in Mr. Butler's cellar.

Mr. Butler says he will make his first shipment of cats on a transport which will sail from Brooklyn on Dec. 27.

Spaniards Will Be Sent Home.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Under the terms of the treaty of peace with Spain, the United States agreed to send home all the soldiers of the Spanish Army held in captivity by the insurgents in the Philippines. Congress made an appropriation of $1,500,000 to carry out that purpose. The recent successful operations of Gen. Otis resulted in the release of about 4,000 additional Spanish prisoners and instructions have been cabled to Gen. Otis to contract with the Ceballos Transportation Company for their return to Spain.

Hoar Will Not Talk on Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Senator Hoar has written a letter to ex-Senator Edmunds replying to an invitation to be present at a meeting to be held, to-morrow night to discuss the Philippine question. Senator Hoar declines to attend, because he thinks that what he will have to say on the Philippine question would be more effective if said in his place in the Senate than elsewhere.

Negro Troops Will Leave This Week.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Arrangements have been made to send the Forty-eighth Volunteer Infantry, colored, to Manila on the transport Grant, which is now undergoing repairs at San Francisco. It is expected that she will sail next week.

The Forty-first Reaches Aden.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The transport Logan, with Col. Richmond and the Forty-first Volunteer Infantry, arrived at Aden at noon to-day. All on board reported well.

Lieut. Brumby's Condition Worse.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The condition of Lieut. Brumby was reported as slightly changed for the worse this afternoon.

Albany Municipal Appointments.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—Mayor-elect Blessing to-day announced all of his important appointments except that of Commissioner of Public Safety. He has offered this position to a number of prominent business men, but all have declined. The more important of the officials named are: Commissioner of Public Works—Charles M. Bissell; City Engineer—Walter Melius; Commissioner of Charities and Correction—Edward B. Cantine; Civil Service Commissioners—Edward N. McKinney, Calvin W. Edwards, Republicans; Gerrit Y. Lansing, Democrat.

CUBANS TO ENTER THE ARMY.

Several Regiments of Natives Will Be Recruited on the Island.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—It is intimated that several regiments will be recruited in Cuba from among the natives to relieve our troops, so that they may be sent to the Philippines to replace returning soldiers. The Cubans have been found anxious to enlist in our service, and are believed to be capable of performing military duty in a proper manner.

A number of applications have been received at the War Department from officers of the army for appointments in these regiments, and it is probable that the Colonels will be selected from among Captains of the line who have had some experience in Cuba, and who have an intimate knowledge of the Spanish language. The junior officers are likely to be taken from among non-commissioned officers and from civil life.

The organization of the regiments will be arranged in detail soon.

WOOD'S AUTHORITY IN CUBA.

Editor of La Lucha Says It Must Be Supreme Throughout the Island.

HAVANA, Dec. 16.—Señor San Miguel, editor of La Lucha, said to-day:

"It is extremely important that all the military commanders in the island shall be subordinated to the command of Gen. Wood. Nobody must be able to say, 'In this province I command,' 'In this town I am the head,' as was said with Gen. Brooke. If this is not clearly understood beforehand, friction among the department commanders is sure to occur, particularly between those in the same city. Gen. Wood being the personal representative of the President should have every barrier cleared away and be given a full chance to carry out his policy."

Señor San Miguel declares he does not see how it is possible for Gen. Wilson to remain under Gen. Wood. He believes that Gen. Ludlow is the best man for Governor of the Matanzas-Santa Clara Department.

Gen. Wood Off for Havana.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, the new Governor General of Cuba, sailed for his post yesterday on the Ward Line steamship Mexico. He arrived at the pier but a few minutes before the vessel sailed, and stopped only long enough before getting aboard to shake hands with some friends who had come to see him off. With Gen. Wood was his aide, Lieut. E. C. Brooks of the Sixth Artillery.

TROOPS TO LEAVE CUBA.

Gen. Brooke Will Send Cavalrymen Back to Western Posts.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Gen. Brooke, at Havana, has telegraphed the War Department that he has arranged to send the following troops on that station to the United States:

Troops A, B, C, and D, Eighth Cavalry, with Major Stanton, and Lieuts. Donaldson, Dixon, Williams, and Lott, to go to Fort Riley, Kan., by way of New York. Capt. Sayre will join the squadron at Fort Riley.

Troops E, F, G, and H of the Tenth Cavalry, numbering 400 enlisted men, with 300 horses, and Capts. Hunt, Ayres, and Carlton, and Lieuts. Whitehead and Whiteside, will be sent to Galveston for distribution along the Mexican frontier.

It is expected that the Fifteenth Infantry will leave about the 30th inst. The regiment will go to New York and be distributed between Governors Island and Plattsburg.

More Immigrants Reach Havana.

HAVANA, Dec. 16.—To-day 1,500 immigrants from the Canary Islands arrived here, making a total of 7,000 who have arrived thus far during December.

TO TEST A PRACTICE SHIP.

Board of Inspection Will Witness the Trial of the Chesapeake.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 16.—The United States practice ship Chesapeake, Commander Joseph G. Eaton, was towed from the Navy Yard to President's Roads this afternoon. She will lie at anchor there until Monday morning, when she will hoist sail and go to sea for a trial lasting about forty-eight hours.

The orders of the Navy Department at Washington are that the vessel shall have a trial to the satisfaction of the Board of Inspection, beginning on Dec. 18 and lasting not longer than Dec. 22. The board consists of three naval officers, and Commander W. H. Emery is President.

To-morrow the Chesapeake's crew will be drilled, and the ship's gear will be shaken up to be in readiness for Monday. The sailing will depend on the weather conditions.

Cruiser New York Sails.

The United States cruiser New York, flagship of Rear Admiral Farquhar, commanding the North Atlantic Station, sailed yesterday for West Indian waters for the Winter's cruise and manoeuvres. She will touch first at Santo Domingo City, where she will be joined by the Machias and Detroit.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The Detroit has arrived at Colon.

The battleship Massachusetts has been ordered into reserve at League Island. Her men are wanted to supply the crew for the battleship Kentucky, about to be turned over to the Government.

URGED BETTER ARCHITECTURE.

Not a Decorative Example of It in the City, Says Prof. Hamlin.

"Architecture and Citizenship" was the subject of a paper read by Prof. A. D. F. Hamlin of Columbia University before the League for Political Education yesterday morning.

"Citizenship," said Prof. Hamlin, "implies responsibilities and duties which, though founded in ethics, extend to the arts, and particularly to architecture. These duties in respect to architecture are likely to be neglected unless the importance of architecture itself in our life is appreciated. It is the one art which constantly surrounds us, frames our life, and teaches us at innumerable points. Since the arts teach us through the emotions, and since the multiplication of healthful and cheerful sensations of pleasure cannot fail to affect the community beneficially, the establishment of material surroundings which produce such sensations is most important.

"Our cities have recognized one aspect of this truth in their generous provisions of public parks, but they have failed wholly to see that precisely the same considerations warrant generous expenditures for decorative architecture. There is not a single work of decorative architecture in all Manhattan. Third-rate capitals of Europe are far ahead of this great city in that respect. Here is a field for agitation and activity. The city can at least give us good architecture in all its public buildings. The scandal of Horgan & Slattery, municipal architects by the grace of Tammany, and the official slights to Messrs. Withers & Thomas in the Tombs Prison and Hall of Records affairs should be made impossible by the pressure of public opinion.

"In the field of private and commercial architecture there should be developed the sentiment that the individual owes to the public in all his building operations the duty of providing the most beautiful structure within his power, embellishing thus to the utmost his fifty or more feet of street frontage, since all the value of this frontage is derived from its use by the public. An ugly building is an insult to the public and a moral crime. Good architects cost no more than bad ones. The citizen who does no building has, also, a duty in the promotion of good taste and high ideals by direct agitation and personal influence. To this end architectural study, itself a liberalizing pursuit, should be more general."

Heavy Foreign Holiday Mails.

Christmas activity was shown at the General Post Office last week in the immensity of outgoing foreign mails. The three liners Trave, St Louis, and Lucania, carried away, besides an almost unprecedented number of mail bags filled with presents of various kinds, international money orders representing an aggregate of over half a million dollars. To facilitate the rapid delivery of Christmas mail, the Post Office Department at Washington has ordered that all foreign mail deposited at the New York office since the sailing of the Lucania yesterday morning shall be sent to Boston to-morrow night, and carried abroad by the Dominion liner New England, which sails for Liverpool Tuesday morning.

One Hundred Years Old To-day.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Thomas S. Barnes of Olmsteadville will celebrate his one hundredth birthday to-morrow. He has 186 living relatives, and well remembers his father's account of the battle of Bloody Pond, of which he was a witness.

ALBANY LEGISLATIVE PLANS.

No Definite Decision Yet to Make Mr. Kelsey Chairman of the Cities Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—As legislators drop into town, ostensibly to pick out quarters for the Winter, and in reality to ascertain the situation, little information is gleaned as to the coming session of the Legislature. Speaker Nixon of the Assembly was here early in the week to attend State board meetings. He held conferences with Assemblymen Allds and Kelsey and the Governor. There was talk of placing Mr. Kelsey of Livingston at the head of the Cities Committee, but nothing was decided. Mr. Kelsey prefers the places he has on the Ways and Means and Judiciary Committees. Moreover, he is well aware that the secret purpose of putting him there, when it is known that he has not a city in his county, is to have him stand sponsor for bills amending the New York Charter, which no New York City Republican, it is believed, dare introduce.

The idea of placing a rural Republican at the head of the Cities Committee, it is said, springs from the fear that a city member might be defeated by his constituents for "jamming through" the bills which Mr. Platt and the Republican organization will have introduced. Mr. Kelsey's district is independent of all metropolitan influences, and it is said to be Mr. Platt's intention to have the burden of all city bills borne by the farmers. In the discussion over Mr. Kelsey's selection the fact has been lost sight of that he does not depend on the Platt organization for his election. He is said to have declared that he will not bind himself to do the bidding of the Republican machine.

Various programmes have been outlined for legislation, the latest being a general negative policy. This is not thought to be the real intent. One subject which will demand attention and positive action is inland commerce, the Canadidan waterways having diverted commerce from New York to such an extent that something must be done. The Governor and the Advisory Canal Board will call attention to the subject and suggestions will come from other sources. What form the legislation for canal improvement will take is not known.

Various amendments will be proposed to the corporation franchise tax law. The Tax Commission wants $50,000 to pay lawyers to collect special information. The advocates of good roads will insist on a larger appropriation for the payment of the State's share of the cost of improving highways. Gov. Roosevelt will endeavor to oust the present Fisheries, Game and Forest Commission, and will encounter the same sort of opposition in the Senate that blocks his desire to get rid of Louis F. Payn.

SOLDIER RUNS AMUCK.

Inspired by Alcohol He Does Some Shooting—Now Under Guard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Nicholas Davis of Kentucky, a member of Troop B, Third Cavalry, stationed at Fort Myer, Va., who had been drinking heavily, armed with a Krag-Jorgensen rifle and several hundred rounds of ammunition, barricaded himself in an upper room of the company quarters yesterday. He imagined the place was assailed, opened all the windows commanding the various approaches, and proceeded to shoot aimlessly about.

Bullets flew in all directions until the Colonel gave orders to a Sergeant to take a guard and shoot Davis. The Sergeant obeyed, but instead of ordering the guard to fire did so himself. The bullet struck the butt of Davis's rifle, shattering it. The flying splinters knocked Davis senseless and scarred his face somewhat, though giving him no very serious injury. He is now closely confined, and is receiving treatment.

ON BRYAN'S CANDIDACY.

Senator Jones Says His Nomination Cannot Be Prevented.

"It is impossible to prevent the nomination of William J. Bryan for the Presidency by the National Democratic Convention next year," said United States Senator John P. Jones of Nevada to a TIMES reporter at the Hoffman House yesterday.

"The attempt may be made," he continued, "to spring other candidates, but it will amount to nothing.

"Do I think that Bryan has a chance of election? Certainly I do. As matters in the financial market are to-day, his chances are excellent. There is a great dearth of money, and it is being keenly felt in many quarters. If these conditions continue, Bryan stock will steadily advance. That is certain. It's all well enough for the people to say that President McKinley will have a walk-over, but there are a whole lot of people in this country who have got in the habit of doing their own thinking, and they are voters.

"While business is generally very good, there is not sufficient money to carry it. We must have more money or less business or there will be trouble.

"Bryan is a more formidable candidate than many are inclined to consider him, and I think that time will confirm my opinion."

STATE EDUCATIONAL SCHEME.

The Governor Indorses the Bill and Hopes for Its Passage.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—Gov. Roosevelt today expressed himself as highly pleased with the general plan for unification of the educational system of the State as agreed upon by the special commission appointed by him for the purpose. He said:

"I believe that the general plan for unification, as adopted, is admirable, and I feel confident that we all can come to a substantial agreement. Above all things the friends of unification, who desire to put an end to the present anomalous condition with all its attendant friction, must agree to disregard differences of detail in order to put through a scheme that will bring substantial justice."

The Governor took this opportunity of publicly thanking the members of the commission, Messrs. Holls, Daly, Kernan, and Wilkinson, who have given their time and labor to the subject without remuneration of any sort. He also said that he was anxious to get the bill in satisfactory shape for the consideration of the Legislature, and that it was immaterial to him whether the Regents or himself should have the power of appointing the Chancellor.

LABOR FEDERATION BOYCOTT.

Declared in Operation Where Union Labor Is Employed.

DETROIT, Dec. 16.—The question of boycotting concerns which employ part union and part non-union workmen, caused considerable contention at to-day's meeting of the American Federation of Labor. The matter was brought out by a resolution declaring the boycott against Swift & Company universal, applying to the Swift packing establishments in cities where the concern employs union labor as well as in those where it does not.

Treasurer Lennon differed from most of the speakers on this subject. He held that it was inconsistent and unfair to organized labor and only retarded a boycott to push it against industries in which union labor was employed. The resolution was adopted.

The adverse report of the Committee on Organization on a proposition for a National Union for the paper hangers was adopted.

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN ALIVE.

Boat He Sailed On Lost, and Ship that Picked Him Up Had a Close Call.

WOODBURY, N. J., Dec. 16.—Jacob Hendrickson of this place, who was believed to have been lost at sea, is alive and well, his wife, who had mourned him as dead having received a letter from him announcing that he is on his way home.

Mr. Hendrickson sailed from Philadelphia for Canada, Oct. 9, on the schooner H. and J. Bienderman. In the letter received by his wife he says that on the return trip the vessel encountered a snowstorm and gale off St. John, N. B., on Nov. 12. The ship was partly dismasted and began to leak. All hands were kept at the pumps for forty-eight hours.

At last, with eight feet of water in the hold, order was given to abandon the schooner. One boat carried all hands, eight in number. The gale had moderated, although a cold wind was blowing and the sea was rough. The shipwrecked men were 400 miles from land.

After drifting for two nights and a day they were rescued by the steamship Hestia, Capt. Ferguson, bound for Glasgow. Three nights after their rescue they were called on to help the crew of the Hestia, which was in danger of foundering in a gale. Fifty-five head of cattle were washed overboard and the vessel was badly crippled, but succeeded in reaching Glasgow in safety. The schooner Bienderman foundered.

RIO THREAD MILLS MAY MOVE.

Clark Company Protests Against Passaic River's Condition.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 16.—The Passaic Interests Committee of the Board of Trade has received a letter from the Clark Thread Company, in which it is stated that through the pollution of the Passaic River and filling up of the same, the conditions have become such that the company may be compelled to move its plant and 4,000 employes to some other place. The letter was one of several hundred in reply to a circular sent out by the committee inviting complaints, and asking for suggestions on this subject.

The committee has decided to arrange for a hearing before the Finance Committee of the Common Council and the Board of Works with a view of obtaining an appropriation for dredging around the outlet of sewers. It was also decided to lay the facts regarding pollution, together with such other data as could be obtained, before the State Sewerage Commission. Finally it was determined that in the event of an appropriation from the city being obtained, to ask Congress for an appropriation of $100,000 for the improvement of the river, from the Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge to Belleville.

REFERS TO McCLUSKEY.

ROME, N. Y., Dec. 16.—George Washington Kennedy, arrested yesterday while trying to pawn one of eight gold watches in his possession, protests his innocence and pleaded not guilty before the Recorder. His case was set down for Monday. He says he got the movements from a man named Frye in Chicago and the makers of the movements say they sold such to Frye. Kennedy has wired a friend in New York, asking him to request Chief of Detectives McClusky to vouch for him.

The detective department yesterday morning received a letter from the Chief of Police of Rome, N. Y., inclosing references given by Kennedy in New York City. The references were investigated, and it was found that Kennedy was a traveling salesman for a jewelry house. His character was vouched for by men to whom he had referred. The information obtained by the department was wired to Rome.

Magazine Has Changed Hands.

Negotiations for the sale of the weekly magazine Success, which have been pending for some time, came to a conclusion yesterday afternoon, when the magazine passed from the ownership of Louis Klopsch to that of J. H. McGraw, President of the McGraw Publishing Company. Mr. McGraw and Dr. Orison Swett Marden are now the sole owners of the magazine. Under the new management the policy of Success will be radically changed. The weekly edition will be discontinued and the magazine will become a monthly.

QUAY CONTEST IS ARGUED

Senate Committee Listens to Attorneys in the Case.

EX-SENATOR EDMUNDS APPEARS

Mr. Penrose Intimates that Counsel Is in the Employ of Mr. Wanamaker, but This Is Flatly Denied.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—An investigation of the right of former Senator Quay of Pennsylvania to a seat in the Senate by appointment of the Governor of Pennsylvania was begun to-day by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. The hearing to-day was purely a legal argument on the right of the Governor to make the appointment in the circumstances which arose in the case of Mr. Quay—a question which repeatedly has been thrashed over by the Senate in other cases.

Every member of the Privileges and Elections Committee was present and several Senators interested either on personal grounds or in the legal arguments to be presented, and a large sprinkling of prominent Pennsylvanians attended the hearing.

John P. Elkin, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, stated that he would address the committee on behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Ex-Senator Edmunds announced that he would appear for those who remonstrated against the seating of Mr. Quay, and that he had as coadjutors Hampton L. Carson and George Wharton Pepper.

W. J. Brennen, an attorney of Pittsburg, announced his appearance for the Democratic members of the Pennsylvania Legislature, and that he had associated with him James A. Stranahan.

Senator Chandler said the committee had decided to limit to-day's hearing to four hours, one and a half hours of which would be allowed to Mr. Elkin, two hours to former Senator Edmunds, and one-half hour to Mr. Elkin in which to close the argument. This time, he said, might be distributed by Mr. Elkin and Senator Edmunds to suit their convenience.

In the coufse of his opening argument Mr. Elkin contended that a sovereign State was at all times entitled to full representation in the Senate, according to the spirit and letter of the Constitution. The intention of the framers of the Constitution was to keep the representation of each State complete, and he maintained that the Governor, having authority to appoint a Senator to fill a vacancy caused by death, resignation, disqualification, or expulsion, had also full power to appoint in the event the Legislature failed of its duty to elect. He held that the failure of the Legislature to perform its duty ought not and could not operate to the State's disadvantage in the Senate. The true position, in his opinion, was that the Governor enjoyed the full power to fill any vacancy that might occur in the State's representation for any reason whatever. That was the broad and liberal view to take of the intent of the Constitution's framers, and he cited many authorities in support of his position.

Attorney General Elkin was followed by Hamilton Carson. As he was about to begin his argument Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania interrupted to inquire: "Do you not appear here as the paid attorney of John Wanamaker?"

Mr. Carson replied that he did not apnear in the pay of Mr. Wanamaker or in that of anybody else.

Ex-Senator Edmunds then seized the opportunity to disclaim for himself any connection with Mr. Wanamaker in the case.

"My only relations with Mr. Wanamaker," said he, "are that I sometimes buy tinware at his establishment."

Senator Pettus, (Dem. Ala.) a member of the committee, entered a sharp objection to any Senator not a member of the committee interrupting counsel.

Mr. Carson presented an elaborate legal and Constitutional argument against the seating of Mr. Quay. He maintained it was important that each State's representation should be kept full, but he regarded it as equally important that the Senators from the several States should be selected properly and in accordance with the Constitution. He doubted the desirability of according to the State Executive such authority as was exercised by the Governor of Pennsylvania in this case—to appoint anybody to the Senate whom he might choose. He argued that the wording of the Constitution conferred only a limited power upon the State Executive in the matter of appointments to the Senate, and that that limitation was placed upon the Executive with full knowledge of the express meaning of the words employed. He urged the committee and the Senate, in considering the case in hand, to follow the well-established precedents of the Senate in not recognizing the right of the Governor to appoint when an opportunity had been afforded the Legislature to elect which it had not embraced.

Mr. Carson concluded his argument with the declaration that the Legislature of Pennsylvania had actually been prevented from performing its duty of electing a Senator by the Governor of the State, and that it was the first time in the history of Pennsylvania that the power of the Executive had been exercised in that manner.

Ex-Senator Edmunds followed Mr. Carson elaborating some of the legal and Constitutional points made by his colleague. He declared that the authority to make appointments was constantly being trenched upon by the executive power, not only of the States, but of the Nation itself.

The President was exercising such power by making recess appointments of men who had previously been rejected by the Senate. This he regarded as dangerous, and urged the Senate to take a firm stand against such usurpation of power as a protection to itself.

Mr. Edmunds maintained that, the vacancy having occurred during a session of the Legislature and that after the vacancy had occurred the Legislature had endeavored but failed to elect, the Governor was barred from exercising his Constitutional right to appoint. He contended that the case of Mr. Quay did not fall within the authority conferred upon a Governor to fill a vacancy in the State's representation in the Senate.

Attorney General Elkin closed the hearing with an argument in rebuttal of the statements and arguments advanced by Mr. Edmunds and Mr. Carson. He adverted to the position taken by Mr. Edmunds in the Senate in 1879, in which he had contended for the Governor's right to appoint. He argued that Mr. Edmunds's position was correct then and his argument good law.

To this Mr. Edmunds assented, but maintained that the cases were totally different.

In conclusion, Mr. Elkin held that the judgment of the Governor as to the necessity for calling an extra session of the Legislature which had failed to elect a Senator was final and conclusive, and that he therefore had full authority to exercise his Constitutional right to appoint, in order that the State's representation should be complete.

A NEW ARABIC NOTATION.

Up-town Magistrate's Daughter, a Kindergarten Pupil, the Author.

There is a City Magistrate living up town who is possibly raising a mathematical prodigy in the person of his three or four years old daughter. She has only recently begun to attend the kindergarten and yet meditates changes in the system of enumeration now in vogue, which, while startling, are certainly suggestive.

When asked the other day to count, she hesitated some, and then lisped:

"None, some, one, two, free, fore."

To Refine Cuban Sugar in Florida.

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 16.—Plans have been perfected for the erection in this city of a big sugar mill and refinery. It is the intention of the men behind the enterprise not only to make Tampa the market for the sugar cane of Florida, but to bring the crude article from Cuba and refine it here. The men interested do not care to have their names made public at present, but they have authorized the statement that the refinery will be established.

Murder in a Minnesota Jail.

LITCHFIELD, Minn., Dec. 16.—John Dougherty, Charles Brobst, Philip Rowe, Casper Schmidt, and William Backbush have been indicted for the murder of a man named Miller in the Eden Valley Jail. Miller had eloped with Schmidt's wife and was found and locked up. The Grand Jury has discovered that a mob broke into the jail, choked him to death, and left his body hanging in his cell. The Coroner's jury had returned a verdict that Miller committed suicide.

PRICE OF SEALSKINS RISES.

Advance 40 Per Cent., and Furriers Look for Greater Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Furriers expect an advance of 75 per cent. in the price of sealskins by Jan. 1. According to advices there are about 26,431 Alaskan skins in sight, of which 18,922 comprise those from the 1898 catch and 8,420 of the 1899 gathering. The North American Commercial and Trading Company secured but 16,801 skins this year, and one-half of them will be held over until next Fall.

John T. Shayne said to-day: "I have been fortunate enough to secure 1,092 skins, which I have now on hand, and the advance in prices means to me about a profit of $30,000. In 1890, when there was a big leap in prices, I cleared $90,000 on the advance. This advance in prices means that a seal coat which this year sells for $300 to $400 will cost from $100 to $200 more in 1900."

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 16.—Owners of sealing vessels have received word from London, England, to-day, of an advance of 40 per cent. in the prices of sealskins at the sale just held. As a result of this advance $500,000 comes to this port for skins shipped from here. The skins sold at from 64 to 68 shillings.

INSURANCE AGENTS' REBATING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There seems to be some animated discussion in progress among high authorities in insurance circles upon the subject of agents' rebating. Little has been heard from the agents' standpoint, presumably because the ordinary life insurance agent would not be supposed to have any opinions worth considering.

It is a known fact that there are laws against rebating in the several States of the Union, and it is also perfectly well understood that these laws were framed and placed upon the statute books by and under direction of the insurance companies.

That these laws were not intended to prevent rebating is clear upon their face.

The laws were made in the nature of a law against conspiracy, which necessarily involves the coming together of two or more persons for the purpose of committing a crime.

Unlike laws against conspiracy, however, when the crime is committed only one of the conspirators becomes a criminal, while the other stands justified before the law, having committed no offense whatever.

The anomalous feature of this law further appears in the fact that the party benefited by its violation is the one who remains innocent, while the party who is injured is held to be a criminal.

The harsh application of the penalty (fine and imprisonment) which applies to the agent is a graceful acknowledgment by the companies that it is easier to find agents than customers.

It was found necessary for the complete fulfillment of this remarkable legislation to add the penalty of imprisonment to that of the fine imposed because, after the company's customer had robbed the agent, the agent had no money to satisfy the offended dignity of the State; hence nothing was left to give satisfaction but the jail.

For the enforcement of this law, which was founded neither in justice nor in common sense, the companies were obliged to form a union, which was known as an "anti-rebate compact" by which they eluded the courts of the country by appointing an arbitrator of their own, who was paid by them, and who took the place of the common courts of justice, who judged and executed the criminal conspirator who had been robbed by his innocent co-conspirator.

Hypocrisy, however hooded, is never fully concealed, and seldom succeeds.

Each company appeared to believe that its own agents would work wonders for its own benefit, while the agents of the other companies would be paralyzed by the terrors of the law.

The matter of rebating is in the hands of the companies, and always has been. Its only value is to the companies themselves, by bringing them business at the expense of the agents.

Its only evil is to the agent, by forcing him to give away his proper compensation in order to procure business for his company.

If the companies desire to stop the practice, either for moral or financial reasons, the anti-rebate compact has power to arrange a schedule of commissions, which would be quite as profitable to the companies and much more so to the agents, by deferring a portion of the commissions to the times of subsequent payments of premiums.

Such a course would be a saving to the companies on lapsed policies, would produce a better class of business, and would give substantial credit, standing, and respectability to the agent, and would also save our legislators from the disgrace of passing one-legged conspiracy laws.

So long, however, as the agents are willing to devote their earnings to the procurement of business for these corporations, the system of rebating will be deplored and continued by the companies.

For Abolishment of Death Penalty.

The abolishment of capital punishment in this State was the subject of discussion last night before the Committee on Philanthropic Labor of the Society of Friends in Rutherfurd Place. It was decided to draft a bill which will be presented to the next Legislature for the purpose of abolishing the death penalty. Among the speakers was Gen. N. M. Curtis of Ogdensburg, who said Senator Depew and William Bourke Cockran are among the prominent men of New York who have favored the abolishment of capital punishment.

Disastrous Fire in Chicago Store.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Unlooked-for realism attended the holiday illumination planned for this evening by the Division Street Merchants' Association, when the store and stock of Sidney Mandl, President of the association, was destroyed by fire. The store was filled with people at the time and a serious panic resulted, many women and children being thrown down and trampled upon. None of the injured will die. The fire, which was originated by the crossing of two electric wires, caused a total damage of $55,000, the loss being fully covered by insurance.

MISS ZEREGA AS A RESCUER

Saves Life of Her Mother in Crowded Fifth Avenue.

HER OWN INJURIES SERIOUS

Run Down by a Cab in Front of the Waldorf-Astoria, Her Temporary Home.

The heroism of Miss Florence Zerega is the cause of her lying dangerously ill in the Waldorf-Astoria, suffering from three fractured ribs, a fractured collarbone, a broken ankle and toe, and severe contusions of the body.

Miss Zerega saved the life of her mother, Mrs. Eliza Zerega, yesterday in Fifth Avenue, just outside the hotel, by dragging her out of the path of a recklessly driven horse handled by a cab driver declared to have been intoxicated. She was knocked down, and now she and her mother are ill, Mrs. Zerega having sustained a severe shock. The cabman, Walter Eastman, employed by J. Moulton, a liveryman at 217 Lexington Avenue, is a prisoner in the West Thirtieth Street Station.

Mrs. Zerega, her mother, and Miss Zerega's brother, Frederick, and his wife live at the Waldorf-Astoria. The Di Zeregas have a country house, Island Home, at Westchester village, where they live part of the year. They have been guests at the hotel for several weeks. Mrs. Zerega and her daughter went shopping yesterday morning. On their return about 1 o'clock they started to cross Fifth Avenue at Thirty-third Street, from the east to the west side. This has long been one of the busiest corners for traffic in the city, carriages and vehicles of all sorts continually passing during the daytime.

Mrs. Zerega led the way. She is a woman over sixty years of age. She thought herself safe, as the nearest carriages were apparently a safe distance away from her in all directions. But the daughter and a number of passers-by observed that a horse was being driven at a rapid rate down the avenue and that Mrs. Zerega would be hurt if she were not thrust out of the way. Miss Zerega sprang quickly forward and dragged her mother back by the arm.

In doing so she had to put herself in nearly the same position as her mother had been in, and this endangered her own safety. The cab horse bore down on her, and it was an impossibility for her to draw back in time. She saved her mother, but went down herself on the pavement; stricken by the horse's hoofs and the shaft of the cab.

Then a dozen men hurried out into the street. Miss Zerega had fainted from pain and fright and a few feet away on the sidewalk her mother saw in a swoon. Cabmen and carriage drivers pulled up their horses, and Policeman Ultridge of the West Thirtieth Street Station dashed out and picked up the young woman. She was bleeding from cuts on the head and body, and her rich gown was torn and soiled.

Another man picked up Mrs. Zerega, and mother and daughter were carried into the Turkish Room of the hotel. They were quickly recognized by employes of the hotel.

Dr. C. Thayer Adams, the hotel physician, was called. He brought Miss Zerega back to consciousness after a time, but she was in such intense pain that he had to give her an opiate, and she was yet under its influence last evening. Her mother's condition improved as the night advanced. Lated Dr. L. A. Di Zerega, who said he was a relative, was also called in and attended the women. Miss Zerega's recovery is expected.

Several men had held the cab driver Eastman, and after Policeman Ultridge had looked after Mrs. Zerega and her daughter, he returned to the corner and arrested the man. There were many persons ready to denounce Eastman, and not a few were outspoken.

Miss Fanshaw, who is staying at the hotel, said she saw the accident, and that it was Eastman's fault. One man said it was a "case of slaughter" in its recklessness. Others declared it was Eastman's negligence wholly that caused the accident.

Assistant Manager Thomas of the Waldorf-Astoria attributed the accident largely to what he called the negligence of the Police Department. He said he had applied for a policeman to be stationed at the corner, because it is the busiest one, he said, in the city during the day.

Eastman will be arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court this morning. He was sober last night and maintained that he was not at fault.

BRONCO MAKES A STIR.

Runs Away and Jumps Over a Bicycle Policeman's Wheel.

A bronco pony caused havoc and excitement in Eighth Avenue last evening by running away and jumping over the bicycle of a member of the Bicycle Squad police. The animal was first discovered coming down the avenue at One Hundred and Thirty-second Street by Roundsman John Cahill, who was on his wheel. The roundsman gave chase and soon got past the pony. The animal jumped over the policeman's wheel and again started down the avenue at a rapid pace. At One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street Bicycle policeman John J. Walsh joined Cahill in the chase. The animal had by this time turned into One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street.

The policemen followed the animal through One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, St. Nicholas Avenue, Manhattan Street, Amsterdam Avenue, and to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, where it was caught in a pile of building material in the street.

A great crowd had gathered in the thoroughfares traversed by the frightened pony and their yells and screams added to the excitement.

A rope was placed about the animal's neck and he was led to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station, where the policemen were instructed to place him in a near-by livery stable.

John W. Boyd of 309 West One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street later in the evening called at the station house and claimed the animal. When captured the bronco had a portion of his harness on. Many pedestrians had narrow escapes from being knocked down.

FIFTH AVENUE RUNAWAY.

A Team's Mad Race Northward Checked by Bicycle Policeman.

A team of horses attached to a carriage, owned by Thomas Kayton, a liveryman of 161 East Seventieth Street, and driven by Henry Coffey of 234 East Seventy-seventh Street, became unmanageable in Fifth Avenue, near Sixty-first Street, last night and raced northward. At Sixty-fifth Street the team ran into a horse attached to a delivery wagon coming out of Central Park, smashed the wagon, and slightly injured the horse. The driver, Christopher Martin, of 1,443 Second Avenue, escaped injury by jumping.

The team was caught between Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh Streets by Bicycle Policeman Leukuhl and returned to the owner.

EXPECTORATING IN CARS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The action taken by the Hoboken Board of Health on "spitting" in street cars, as reported in this morning's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES, is quite gratifying. Though the fines are reduced, it shows that their order is not a dead letter, and suggests the query why are we so far behind our smaller neighborhood in the work of reform? Is it, as I am told, hopeless under Tammany rule to expect the enforcement of laws? I am constantly annoyed and made indignant by this intolerable offense to all decency, not only by the passengers on our surface cars, but by the officials of the roads, who occupy seats while those who pay stand and make all about them foul with tobacco juice. Must such disgusting insults to a patient public be longer endured? Why are not the conductors held responsible for the cleanliness of their cars?

Is it not time to enforce the order of the Health Board of the City of New York?

New York, Dec. 9, 1899. M. C. B.

Bonner Horses to be Sold.

The horses of the late Robert Bonner, among which are Sunol, Ansel, and Praytell, will probably be sold by the Fasig-Tipton Company at their February sale. It was announced some time ago that the stable would be sold by Peter C. Kellogg at his November sale, but owing to the unexpected appointment of a temporary administrator for the estate, the horses could not be delivered to Robert E. and Frederick Bonner in time for Mr. Kellogg to sell them.

SHERIFF'S JURY AT DINNER

First Panel's Banquet at the Hotel Savoy an Elaborate Affair.

EX-SPEAKER REED THE GUEST

Speeches by William H. McElroy, Sheriff Dunn, Sheriff-Elect Grell, and Commissioner Keller.

The annual dinner of the First Panel Sheriff's Jury, at the Hotel Savoy last night, was one of the most elaborate and jovial affairs of the kind held so far this season. The banquet of 250 covers was spread in the ballroom, which had been profusely decorated with palms. The table decorations were pink and crimson roses, and the dais, in addition, was decked with broad crimson ribbons.

William H. McElroy presided. Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed was the guest of honor. Others present included Sheriff Thomas J. Dunn, Sheriff-elect William F. Grell, Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller, Justice James Fitzgerald, Justice Frederick Smyth, District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner, Randolph Guggenheimer, A. G. Paine, Augustus Thomas, John S. Wise, Justice P. H. Dugro, Judge Rufus B. Cowing, Justice David McAdam, Justice C. H. Van Brunt, John F. Carroll, Maurice Untermyer, Peter F. Meyer, Patrick Keenan, Major P. Bradlee Strong, J. L. Taylor, Justice Henry Bischoff, Jr., Arthur F. Bowers, Thomas I. Brady, Judge Newburger, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Justice Francis M. Scott, Justice C. H. Truax, J. Seaver Page, Andrew Miller, E. S. Innet, Charles E. Safford, and Frank E. Conover.

Mr. McElroy, in a witty speech, extended congratulations to retiring Sheriff Dunn and to Sheriff-elect Grell. Mr. Dunn, in responding, said that the position of Sheriff of the County of New York was as nice a position as any man would wish for, and he was sorry that he had to relinquish it. "If Mr. Grell gets as much pleasure out of the position as I have gotten during the past two years he will have lots of fun," he said.

How popular Mr. Dunn had made himself was evidenced by the fact that when he concluded his little speech the company applauded warmly and followed its applause by singing, spontaneously, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Sheriff-elect Grell, in a brief speech, expressed the hope that at the conclusion of his term of office he would also have earned a meed of the esteem enjoyed by Sheriff Dunn, in whose footsteps it was his desire to follow.

Commissioner Keller followed with a speech in which humor, wit, and sarcasm alternated. In eulogizing Sheriff Dunn, he related an anecdote. Some time ago, he said, there came to him a widow who had just lost her husband, and whose only realizable possessions had been a horse and cart that he had left her and that had been in the employ of the city.

A Sheriff—not Mr. Dunn—had seized the cart, and the woman wanted to know whether she could not find employment for the horse on city work. He (the Commissioner) met Sheriff Dunn and asked him whether he would not employ the horse. The Sheriff said he would think about it, but wanted to know whether the animal had passed the civil service examination! "The horse was employed," said Mr. Keller, "and I want to say that he manifested more intelligence than do a good many men in the public service."

The Commissioner then praised New York, to which, he said, every American of prominence came sooner or later, and men of all nationalities seeking to better their condition wended their way. "I have heard that McKinley will come to New York," he concluded, "and that William J. Bryan's itinerary will end here—with a stop-over pass in Washington. And why should they not come? Is not New York the first city in the United States, the one city we in our hearts believe will ultimately be the greatest city in the world? Talk about Athens, why, we have in our midst men so wise that their wisdom would astonish Socrates, such monuments in our parks as would stagger Phidias, could be see them. And Rome! Have we not noble Romans here in multitudes occupying positions under the City Government?

'Jerusalem never had the wealth that New York possesses, and the children of Israel are well represented in this modern city. It has been asked, what became of the Israelites who passed on dry land through the Red Sea. The signs on the stores in Broadway will answer that question. Then how about Ireland? The Emerald Isle may never enjoy the privilege of self government, but Irishmen will be representative in a government so long as there is a municipal administration in New York."

Mr. McElroy, in introducing ex-Speaker Reed, observed that there was one delusion Mr. Keller had shown in his speech that he was laboring under. The Commissioner's remarks that Bryan would come to New York, with the parenthetical addition that the aspirant for President would have a stop-over for Washington, reminded him of a line in Longfellow's "Excelsior": "Try not the pass, the old man said." [Applause.] "I was on a railroad recently," he said, "with a pass, and when I presented it the ticket man said, 'Not good on this train.' I believe that that is what the people of New York will say about Bryan's pass with the stop-over at Washington." [Laughter and prolonged applause.]

Ex-Speaker Reed's speech was brief and facetious. He said that he felt that New York, as Mr. Keller had remarked, was a cosmopolitan city, but that it contained Americans as well as persons of the other nationalities he had enumerated. While wandering in Hester Street one recent Sunday afternoon, and being athirst, he saw many signs on the store fronts that he did not understand. "Finally," he went on, "I happened upon some that bore such names as O'Connor, O'Shaughnessy, and Daly, and I said to myself with a sigh of relief, 'Now at last, I am in my native land.' I quenched my thirst at O'Connor's and went away satisfied that there were Americans in New York."

J. L. Taylor, an American who has long resided in London as the European agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, spoke on "Our Kindred Across the Sea." He lauded the hospitality of Englishmen, and said that when Americans went there from the Continent it was with the feeling that they were among their own kindred.

"Let us not forget," said Mr. Taylor amid loud applause, "that in our hour of gloom, when all the rest of the world was against us, England extended her sympathy and encouragement to us, saying, 'Brothers we are with you.' It behooves us now, in this England's moment of greatest trial, to assure her in turn of our sympathy."

Major Strong then entertained the company with reminiscences of his experience in the Philippines.

SARATOGA COUNTY WAR.

Vacant Judgeship Causes Trouble for State Senator Brackett.

There is disturbance in the Republican camp in Saratoga County. It is caused by the appointment of County Judge J. W. Houghton to the vacancy created on the Supreme Court bench by the death of Justice John R. Putnam. Judge Houghton's elevation has left the County Judgeship vacant, and it is understood Gov. Roosevelt is ready to appoint any competent man recommended by State Senator E. T. Brackett.

For a long time C. C. Lester, a son of ex-County Judge Lester, has had a longing for the place, but he and the Senator are not on good terms, it is claimed. Senator Brackett, so it is alleged, was attacked by a Saratoga newspaper at the instance of Lester's friends, who charged that Senator Brackett wanted to keep Lester in the background.

The Senator, so the story goes, tired of these attacks, and to stop them promised to aid Lester in getting the necessary delegates to secure him the County Judgeship nomination. Peace was patched up, but Senator Brackett, it is stated, did not take into account the possible death of Judge Putnam. Now, it is said, he must support Lester or submit to further attacks from the latter's friends, who will also do all in their power to prevent Senator Brackett's renomination if he does not keep faith with Lester. And it is said that Senator Brackett has another and favorite candidate.

Condemned Soldiers Escape Death.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The President has commuted to imprisonment for twenty years the capital sentences imposed by court-martial upon four American soldiers, members of a Washington regiment, in the Philippines, for attacks upon native women.

THE ROBERTS CASE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article on "The Roberts Case," by the Rev. Dr. Abbott, dated Dec. 5 and published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Dec. 7, claims the support of British Constitutional history and the custom and practice of Parliament in support of the way in which he wishes Congress to deal with the claim of Mr. Roberts of Utah to the seat in the House of Representatives to which he has been elected by the people of that State.

Dr. Abbott's magazine, The Outlook, takes this same ground in an article on the same subject, published Nov. 18 last. Congress in its early days had a difficult problem to deal with—to get orderly control of its sessions for effective Federal service, and at the same time to safeguard the State rights, of which the several States forming the Union were so jealous. A careful study of contemporary history shows very clearly how difficult was the task of the early statesmen of the Republic.

Dr. Abbott says the United States Constitution was largely borrowed from the British Constitution, which is therefore a guide to its interpretation. I am not here arguing the right of Mr. Roberts to his seat, but for the sake of historic accuracy I ask Dr. Abbott, who is a busy man, to make a further study of British precedents, which I contend are not s thoroughly in support of his views regarding the Roberts case as he now claims. He refers to the long contention of John Wilkes with the House of Commons. That case was not finally settled until 1781, and it was undoubtedly familiar to the American statemen who evolved the United States Constitution in 1787, after years of patient labor.

The Wilkes controversy had stirred the British people for nearly twenty years, but Mr. Wilkes, a worthless profligate, obtained that seat from which he had been expelled and prevented from taking during many years, both as member for Aylesbury and a several times elected member for Middlesex.

George III., by Lord North and his majority in the House of Commons, was determined to sustain the expulsion of Wilkes and to keep him from retaking his seat in opposition to the views of Lord Chancellor Camden and the Solicitor General of the Lord North administration, both of whom resigned, in opposition to the views of Lord Chatham and of Mr. Burke, and of nearly all the great statesmen of the day—Henry Fox excepted—while Grenville and others who at first opposed Wilkes's rights changed their view when it became apparent how seriously the House of Commons, subservient to the King's North administration, was putting in jeopardy the inherent rights and liberties of Constitutional government by the arbitrary strain on the Constitution, in the autocratic stretching of its own prerogatives, and by the curtailment of the privileges or immunities of its members, the people's representatives. The controversy ended in 1781, when the House of Commons had the whole record on the journal and all action against Wilkes from the beginning expunged, annulled, and abrogated "as subversive of the rights of the whole body of electors of this kingdom."

The disposition of the Bradlaugh controversy (1880-91) shows that the House of Commons still supports that view.

I respectfully refer Dr. Abbott to Sir T. Erskine May's (late Chief Clerk of Parliament) "Constitutional History from 1760," the complement of Hallam's or to Aubrey's "Rise and Growth of the English Nation," Vol. III. HOWARD S. JACKSON.

State Military Reorganization.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—The State National Guard Convention, to be held here Jan. 24, will discuss the proposed reorganization of the militia, as outlined by Gen. Butterfield. The bill subjects to military duty all able-bodied citizens and aliens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, and provides for a regular force and a volunteer body to be known as the Reserve Militia. Among the proposed amendments to the Military Code that may be submitted will be one providing for an increase of the allowance to batteries and troops of cavalry for horse hire from $1,500 to $2,000 a year.

Gen. Greene's Descendants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The term "presumptive genealogy" seems especially applicable to the claims of many people named Greene who allege their descent from Gen. Nathanael Greene of Revolutionary fame.

I beg them all to take notice that there is not now, and for some time past has not been, one single male descendant of the great General bearing the name Greene.

Possibly they regard their claim as a compliment to the General; or are they counting on the singular fact that it is not known where he is buried, so that if he turns in his grave at each new spurious claim, no one will be the wiser?

Ruling on Reimported Spirits.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Commissioner Wilson of the Internal Revenue Bureau has held that spirits reimported in a distillers' original package, may be reduced to a proof not less than 90 per cent. on the premises of a wholesale liquor dealer, under the regulations contained in Circular 542.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Numerous residents of this city are applying to Mayor Elwood for permission to carry revolvers, owing to the recent highway robberies and the presence of suspicious characters.

COLORADO TRAINS SNOWBOUND.

Several Leaving Denver Are Stalled in the Drifts.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 16.—While the weather was warm and springlike in Denver today, not a car wheel was moving Between Colorado Springs and Palmer Lake. This forenoon twenty trains were stuck in the snow between Palmer Lake and Pueblo, where drifts are reported up to the car roofs.

All freight trains were abandoned, and the railways bent all efforts to liberate the passenger trains. The Rio Grande train was stalled at Fountain, and a Colorado and Southern train was stuck in the drifts at Monument. The Santa Fé train leaving this morning before daylight was stopped at Palmer Lake, and the next passenger train was stalled at Castle Rock Hill.

Fresh snow is falling, and a heavy gale fills up the cuts as fast as the snowplows push through them. This evening two trains had been released.

PRAYERS FOLLOWED BY RAIN.

Meriden, Conn., Threatened by Drought Has Been Relieved.

Special to The New York Times.

MERIDEN, Conn., Dec. 16.—The copious rainfall of last night relieved the residents of this city from a serious situation as regards the water supply.

From the unstinted use of water, the residents had been gradually curtailing its use until in the higher sections of the city the supply was shut off entirely. Each succeeding day the weather reports were read eagerly in the hope that an area of low pressure would be found wending its way in this direction. The skies were scanned eagerly day and night, and every cloud was the signal for a gathering of city officials to discuss the probabilities for a precipitation. All the time the conditions were growing more alarming.

Last Sunday, by which time the feeling of gloom had become intense, special prayers were offered for relief from the threatened famine. Then a pastor of a Congregational church and the rector of a Roman Catholic church made special prayers the order of the day. The rain followed and the backbone of the famine, it is believed, is broken.

TO WIDEN THE STREETS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some ten or fifteen years ago I read an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES advocating the adoption of an ordinance, or law, to compel builders of tall structures in narrow streets to erect these buildings some distance back from the line of the old houses, so that gradually these streets would be widened and become light and broad thoroughfares and not mere gloomy cañons, reached by very little light and sunshine.

The article in question deplored the fact that such an ordinance had not been adopted before the erection of a certain building, (I think it was the Mutual, in Nassau Street,) but that it was too late to prevent that now, &c. But it was not too late then at all, and it is not too late to-day to advocate such a law, but it is the highest time that some such step be taken to widen the streets of lower New York, before they are entirely lined by ten or twenty story buildings.

Broadway and many other streets are much too narrow for the ever-increasing traffic, and this pertains not only to the street proper, but even more so to the sidewalks. On Broadway, for instance, at certain hours of the day you cannot walk fast without constant danger of running into somebody or of being in turn run down by some one who is as much in a hurry to reach his destination as you are yourself.

This overcrowding of the sidewalks could, I think, be partially remedied if all obstructions abutting from the buildings, such as stoops, railings, stairs, entrances to cellars, &c., be radically erased and done away with, so that the sidewalks would run flush up to the walls of the buildings and be unobstructed by anything abutting or protruding therefrom. This would add some three or more feet to the width of the sidewalks. Part of this, if only one foot on each side of the street, might in turn be given up to widen the middle part of the street, to give more room to teams and trucks. What such few feet would amount to in narrow and overcrowded streets needs no explanation.

And this widening of the streets seems to be entirely feasible, as it has been successfully accomplished in European cities. The stoops and the entrances to cellars can be drawn into the buildings, railings thus becoming unnecessary, and the lights over vaults can be easily made smooth and flush with the rest of the sidewalk and thus not obstruct pedestrians.

Fatal Collision at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 16.—A Cleveland, Akron and Columbus passenger train, running into this city forty minutes late, collided with a switch engine near the State Insane Asylum at 6 o'clock this evening, and as a result two railway employes are dead and one is dying. The coupling pin behind the passenger engine's tender broke and none of the passenger coaches left the track. The passengers did not suffer beyond a severe jolting.

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early.

The New York Journal published a day or two days ago an editorial concerning Christmas shopping—that was so full of good advice and sound common sense—that we think it best to repeat it in preference to anything we could say on the same all-interesting subject just now. Here it is:

Are you a prospective holiday shopper? Then remember that procrastination during holiday time is the thief of comfort.

We say this not only on behalf of thousands of clerks and shop girls, but for the benefit of the public.

If you have Christmas shopping to do, you should go about it at once. The results will be more satisfactory to you, as well as to the clerks who wait upon you.

In this connection a few "don'ts" will not be amiss.

Don't delay your holiday shopping any longer than you can possibly help.

Don't put off shopping until the afternoon when you can shop in the morning.

Don't be impatient with the store employes.

Don't jostle and push when by waiting patiently you can achieve the same end.

Don't take your baby into the crowded stores lest in the crush it be injured.

Don't expect the same attention from clerks two days before Christmas that you can get now.

Don't expect to be waited on at once, to the exclusion of other customers, and don't lose your temper. The young men and women who work in the department stores are obliged to stand on their feet from 8 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night during holiday week, and it is not surprising that their tempers are often worn threadbare.

Leather Goods.

Our stock this season is larger and finer than ever before, and there's hardly anything in this department that would not make a valuable and suitable Christmas gift. What would be more acceptable, for instance, to either man or woman than a fine pocketbook, a card case, a letter case, a writing tablet or a set of collar and cuff boxes? If purchased here the cost would not be great—less, in fact, than elsewhere, as these quotations will show:

Books for Holiday Presents.

"Books are a guide in youth and an entertainment for age. They support us under solitude, and keep us from being a burden to ourselves. They help us to forget the crossness of men and things, compose our cares and passions, and lay our disappointments to sleep."—Jeremy Collier.

Our collection of holiday books in quantity and quality is, we believe, without an equal in this city to-day. All the old favorites can be had in new dress and fine bindings, and all the newest and best books as well. The young and the old—all tastes, all minds and all purses can be suited here, and for less money than elsewhere. Nothing makes better presents than good books, and there's hardly any present that would cost you less. For to-morrow, these quotations:

It is almost noiseless, has self-threading shuttle, automatic tension and latest attachments, and comes in polished oak, 5-drawer, drop-head style, and has the appearance of a table when closed. We guarantee this machine for five years from the date of purchase. Instructions cheerfully given without charge. And to-morrow the price will be 14.95

the crowds were simply enormous all last week—and why?—Because the display and the variety beats anything to be seen elsewhere in America—and because we sell toys for so much less than others.

Yet, great as the crowds were—we have taken care of all very comfortably, for this Toy Department is over 50,000 square feet large, and has 250 trained salespeople at its command. For Monday we've prepared a very tempting list of values—as follows:

Doll Carriages at half price. Slightly damaged reed carriages, with strong gearing and superior upholstering, complete with parasol and rod, steel axles and wheels, reduced as follows:

TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY

Wherein People of the Eastern Sections Agree and Differ.

EFFECTS OF THE RAILROADS

Thrift and General Prosperity the Rule in Tennessee—Comparison of the Illiterates—Local Politics.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 26.—To get out of Eastern Kentucky and into the heart of Eastern Tennessee is a matter requiring little expenditure of time. It is but a passing from one side of a ridge of mountains to the other. From Middlesborough, in Bell County, Kentucky, to Knoxville, in Knox County, Tennessee, is but a railroad ride of about two hours. If you leave Middlesborough at 6 in the morning you will be put out of its magnificent hotel building without so much as a cup of coffee to fortify the system against the mountain mists, and you will reach Knoxville prepared, if your stay in Eastern Kentucky has been of a week's duration, to thoroughly appreciate such luxuries as baths, tidy and well-furnished rooms, an all-pervading atmosphere of comfort, and the unwonted entertainment of a band at supper. On the way, almost as soon as Bell County, has been left behind Cumberland Gap, a difference is observable. Claiborne County, Tennessee, is as distinctly different from Bell County, Kentucky, as two counties lying side by side could well be. In one there is but a repetition at most stations on both sides of Pineville of the scenes at many Southeastern Kentucky stations, of groups of men who appear to have acquired the habit of meeting every train to receive General Prosperity, evidently unaware that it is a condition and not a person, and that it has been arriving gradually and by stealth, instead of approaching in a charge and with banners.

In passing from Kentucky to Tennessee by way of Middlesborough the traveler goes through Claiborne, Grainger, and Knox Counties, and into a country of railroads. Whether it be altogether owing to the influence of the railroads or not may be disputed, but while Eastern Tennessee, traversed by railroads for many years, has many rough inhabitants, the general aspect of the farms is vastly better than in the neighbor State; there are more large houses, there are more painted houses, a better general appearance of thrift, more regard for tasteful surroundings, and less curiosity about a man who wears a derby hat. The kind folk out in Clay County do not take offense at a derby hat or its wearer, but its wearer is advertised as not a man of the mountains. No one might easily "mistake up" as an original mountaineer. A horse or mule, clothes not too new, an easy seat in the saddle with not too erect a carriage, a floppy hat, a genial "Good mornin'" or "Howdy" to men, and a doffed hat to women, even of the humblest sort, readiness to return the cheerful greetings of children, and the adoption of a soft and drawling manner of speech, are "properties" that would enable one to palm himself off as accustomed to the country.

It is but a hundred miles or thereabout south of Manchester, in Clay County, Kentucky, to Knoxville, Tenn. But of the two places seem to be a half century apart, instead of a matter of six or seven hours. From Knoxville to Chattanooga there is a condition of things for which Kentucky's mountain counties must wait, a territory of vast resources, within reach of many railroads, yet still scarcely touched. Enough has been done, however, in the direction of development of varied natural wealth to advance the comfort, taste, and ambition of a region teeming with riches that awaited only the command of capital and enterprise.

Chattanooga, a miserable village at the close of the war of the rebellion, in which 1,200 or so people smothered in the dust when they did not wallow in the mire, has come through a gay and intoxicating "boom" experience soberer and wiser, holding on to much of the gain secured during a period of overexpansion, with an aversion so great for "booms" that its wiser men deprecate even the use of the word to describe the present industrial activity. The city did not slip back between 1890 and the close of 1899. The last census reported a population of 29,100. The next will show, including some annexed suburbs, not far from 40,000. The output of manufactures in 1890 was about $10,000,000; the census of 1900 will report a yearly output of $20,000,000. The great "boom," which aimed to develop enormous growth, strained but did not exhaust the resolution and effort of the community. Its solid blocks of commodious buildings are well occupied by tenants, few stores or dwellings lack occupants, the brick street pavements are a vast and economical improvement over the soft streets of only a few years ago, and the business men are now moderately and prudently discussing propositions calculated to encourage the investment of capital to develop the mineral wealth so near at hand.

The restraint of that "personal liberty," which can be gratified only by the patronage of public bars at all hours, week days, and Sundays, is carried to an extreme in Chattanooga, quite unknown to New York. Bars must close at 10 o'clock each night, and must remain closed all day Sunday. There was difference of opinion about this regulation, and it was manifested in a recent municipal election. The early closing ordinance was approved by many order-loving citizens of both parties, who were willing to be restrained in order that some classes of the population should not be tempted. The dividing line zig-zagged through the Republican and Democratic organizations, and the contest for Mayor was made with three candidates, one, the Independent, running distinctly as an advocate of the early closing regulation. The result was that the Independent candidate, Mr. Frierson, polled a vote so large as to enable the Republicans to elect Mr. Wassman, their candidate, over Dr. Sims, the Democratic candidate, by about 30 plurality. The division was so considerable as to constitute a very good illustration of Tennessee, of the tendency to break parties and vote independently. The early closing regulations continue. It may be irksome, but it is a fact that drunkenness does not appear to be common. Just now the city appears to be interested deeply in the question of water supply, which is in the hands of a private corporation, but which should be, in the judgment of many citizens, acquired and operated by the municipality.

Knoxville boasts that it was never a "boom" town, and it very modestly insists that whatever of prosperity it has achieved has been gained steadily, and chiefly by the enterprise and capital of its own people. It has every superficial indication of prosperity. Its stores are fully stocked with goods intended in part for those only of cultivated taste and capable purse; its street railways are doing a good business; its great woolen, cotton, and marble works are operated with the largest number of employes that can be advantageously kept at work; in the great car shops of the Southern Railway 1,000 men cannot turn out needed rolling stock fast enough to keep down the "car famine" common to the country; the cotton mill employs 700 operatives all the time; the hotels were never so constantly filled up with commercial travelers, and the travelers have not in many years found it so easy to obtain orders. The city has shown its capacity to recover from disaster by completely rebuilding the business houses destroyed by a recent great fire, the new buildings being better than the old, and fully tenanted.

The civilizing and developing railroad has done much to give to East Tennessee its conspicuous prosperity. So it is natural enough that Tennessee should look with favor upon projects for new railroads. Knoxville is now considering the question of assisting the proposed "Black Diamond" line, projected to cross Kentucky and Tennessee to Knoxville, and possibly to be extended to Port Royal, S. C. If its route should bear far enough to the East to open some of the dark counties of East Kentucky, it will be doubly beneficial to that section; it will afford an outlet for the bituminous coal that is to be found almost everywhere, and it will provide the stimulation and the means for a better education of the people. Out of their timber and coal they may still hope to extract the light of knowledge as well as the cultivated taste that will require many things now regarded as superfluous for comfort and health.

Tennessee is not agitated by political questions now. The politicians of both parties have some small controversies on hand, but the largest home question appears to be that of the election, in 1901 of a successor to United States Senator Turley. There are several willing Democrats. The latest heard from is Judge D. L. Snodgrass, a lawyer of admitted ability, now on the bench in the highest court of the State. But Gov. Benton McMillin is not lost sight of. "Gov. McMillin," said a very capable Judge of Tennessee men and affairs, "is the best executive the State has had for years. He is honest, economical, and sensible; he cannot be used by designing men; under his administration the Treasury is able to report a balance this year of about $200,000. He may not be brilliant, but he commands confidence by reason of his strict devotion to duty and his official frugality. I do not think it at all unlikely that Gov. McMillin will outstrip all his opponents by simply jogging along in the path of duty."

There is more talk about the Senator who is to be elected in 1901 than about the Democrat who must be named in the Spring of 1900 for President. The Democrats whom it has been my fortune to meet have assumed that Col. Bryan will be nominated. A few of the Democrats I chanced to meet at Frankfort expressed the opinion that they believed he would be elected. They also asserted their belief that Goebel was elected to be Governor of Kentucky, and should take the seat, peacebly if permitted, by force if necessary. But there are other Kentucky Democrats who hope for his nomination for the reason that they regard it as a foregone conclusion that the Democratic Party is doomed to defeat in 1900, and that nothing would be so convincing as another defeat with Col. W. J. Bryan as the leader.

Tennessee is a fellow-sufferer with Kentucky in holding a vast mass of illiterate population. Indeed, according to the census of 1890 its illiterates were enumerated as 340,140, or 50,000 more than were found in Kentucky, with about 100,000 more of population. In Kentucky, however, the white illiterates were more numerous than in Tennessee; in Tennessee the black illiterates were about 170,000, as compared with 110,500 in Kentucky. In 1890, with a school population of 481,585, Tennessee expended $1,660,750 to educate them, thus devoting $1,327,500 more to schools for that number than Kentucky gave for more than 510,000 children. This comparative liberality put Tennessee in the twenty-fifth place among the States in the amount of money expended for public education, with seventeen States below her before Kentucky is reached. Tennessee did not have as many teachers as Kentucky, nor as many private schools by about 900. The start gained by Tennessee has been maintained, I am assured, and it is confidently predicted by competent observers that the figures as to illiteracy in the census of 1900 will show that white illiteracy has diminished greatly, and that more improvement has been made in the colored population than in any former decennial period.

The ignorant whites of Tennesse are largely mountain people, like the ignorant whites of Kentucky, but not a few of them are found in the cities, and a tenacious body of them along the rivers. Their manner of life, their fare, their needs, their enjoyments are the same. A few of them in both States make "moonshine" whisky. The quality in one State is identical with that in the other. It is all for neighborhood consumption. None of it is either palatable or comfortable to the taste or system of the man whose indulgence has been only in seasoned liquor. It is taken by some of the mountain types with apparent immunity from alarming toxic effects, but some of the non-drinkers told the writer that it kills more good men in a year than have been shot in all the mountain counties in fifty years, in single combat, in feuds, and in election rows. From a revenue officer I heard the assertion that most of the illicit distillers are non-resident and not dangerous. They will stand by at a bonfire of a still, see the revenue officers destroy their implements and product, and say nothing. This is the rule. It is the exception when the "moonshiner" fights, either from ambush or in the open. The spies who have betrayed him and wrecked his business would also discover him as the perpetrator of violence, and he would become an outlaw in some distant part of the mountain country, with all the regret that a mountaineer is believed to feel in parting from his original home.

The vagaries of types and the blindness of manuscript from the hand accustomed to the invariably legible typewriter may lead some of the Clay County readers of THE TIMES of Sunday, Nov. 26, to regard its correspondent as one of the writers who cannot desist from writing unpleasant or ill-natured things about them. When I am made to say that the women ride horseback "without skirts," which would be obviously strange without explanation, the word "long" was missing, the riding habit that I saw being simply the usual walking habit. The Lucas House at Manchester is not "a grand old house" architecturally. It is "quaint" as to its appearance; its grandeur is its hospitality, a quality of which you get with a conviction that it cannot be quite paid for with the paying of the bill.

BLAINE'S NEPHEW CHALLENGED.

First Threatens a German Count with a Revolver.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 16.—James F. Blaine, a nephew of James G. Blaine, and Secretary of the Minneapolis Wholesale Grocers' Association, to-day marched Count Meyerdorf of Prussia out of his office at the muzzle of a revolver. The exact cause is not known, as neither party will discuss the matter, but it is said the Count slapped Mr. Blaine's face and the revolver march followed.

The Count later challenged Mr. Blaine to a duel at Minnehaha Park at sunrise tomorrow morning, but the person to whom he gave it to deliver to Blaine tore up the document, informing the Count he must deliver such messages in person.

WILL SHIP LAFAYETTE DOLLARS.

Entire Coinage Soon to be Sent to Chicago.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.—The coinage of the 50,000 Lafayette dollars at the mint here for the Lafayette Memorial Commission has been completed. The money will shortly be packed in bags and put in small kegs, $1,000 to a keg, each weighing when filled sixty pounds, and be sent out to the members of the commission in Chicago, under the care of an express company.

The commission, under the direction of its Secretary and Treasurer, will then give the people generally an opportunity to subscribe for the dollars until a date yet to be decided upon, when all the dollars not disposed of will be taken to the Paris Exposition, and there sold.

It is expected that owing to the smallness of the issue, the value of the souvenirs will ultimately exceed the price of $2, which will be asked for them by the commission.

FIREMEN ON A FOOL'S ERRAND.

White Plains Volunteers Have Fun at Expense of Their Successors.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 16.—The old volunteer firemen of this place had the laugh on the new paid firemen early this morning, when one of the latter, seeing a quantity of smoke coming out of one of the towers of St. Mary's Church, turned in an alarm. The church was built some years ago, and the architect, in order to hide a big chimney, disguised it by building a tower around it.

The janitor had started his fire for Sunday, which caused the smoke. The new firemen did not know about the disguised chimney, and when they arrived with their apparatus the janitor came out and looked with surprise. When he learned the situation he enjoyed the joke immensely, and it was some time before he could check his merriment to tell the new firemen about the chimney.

The old volunteer firemen, who themselves had three times been called out on the same fool's errand before the paid department came here, stood on one side and enjoyed the joke on their successors as well as did many citizens.

Jersey City Hotel Changes Hands.

The Hotel Washington, Jersey City, has passed from the possession of Hamblen & Son to that of Frank M. Case, recently the manager of Taylor's Hotel, which has been razed to make way for a twelve-story office building. Mr. Case is the lessee and manager. Hamblen & Son contemplate a new hotel enterprise in New York.

Better Wages for Coal Miners.

LANSFORD, Penn., Dec. 16.—Notices have been posted by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company of an increase of 26 cents per week in the miners' wages and 21 cents for laborers. It will affect 3,000 employes.

BRITISH AND THE BOERS

AMERICAN LOVE FOR BOERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You have published a letter from Thomas G. Shearman asking Boer sympathizers to answer certain questions. Permit me the pleasure of answering them. I will put my answers in the same shape that he has used for his questions but my answers shall contain the facts without concealment or perversion so far as I know them and with a fairness which seems to me to be somewhat wanting in some of his.

I.—Suppose we New Yorkers were only sixty thousand in numbers when Mexican miners asked us if they would be protected if they exploited the mines along Harlem River, and we answered rather indignantly that of course they would, as all men would receive equal protection under our laws. Suppose on this all Mexico assumed that it had received a special invitation to come here and an assurance of special rights, and that thereupon 150,000 of them, some excellent gentlemen like Barney Barnato and others, the very scum of the mining camps, were to pour into our midst and establish themselves on the Harlem flats: would we not keep a watch on them even if they paid us in taxes no more than any other citizen and not as much as the British charge in the Klondike, and although they did us the inexpressible favor of carrying out of our country hundreds of millions of gold every year?

1. Suppose these 150,000 Uitlanders announced their intention to go to the City Hall, take control of the City Government, and dispose of our property, our persons, and even our nationality as they saw fit. Would we approve?

2. Suppose, in the same connection, having all the virtues and good habits of a mining camp, that we appreciate so clearly from our Western experiences, even with our own people and not with haughty Mexicans, they were to demand that all their taxes were to be spent on themselves: would we think they were wholly modest and reasonable?

3. Would we furnish those amiable gentlemen with firearms, especially in view of certain events which were long impending and which finally took place?

4. Suppose these excellent and philanthropic Mexican Uitlanders then planned a revolt by force against us, to seize our Government, to overthrow our institutions, and to give us up captives to Mexico: would we allow them to hold meetings, to organize such a revolt, to publish newspapers to encourage it, to criticise our Government, or in any way to complete their plans?

5. Would we permit our Mexican invaders to acquire the rights of citizenship without renouncing their allegiance to Mexico and assuming all the obligations of New Yorkers? Would we allow them to retain a double nationality, to be New Yorkers in order to cripple New York's defense against their plots and to be Mexicans in order to transfer the whole country to foreign jurisdiction?

II.—If a band of Mexicans in Mexico were then to arrange with these Uitlander conspirators in New York (of course, without the approval of the Mexican Government—that goes without saying, for the attempt failed) for an armed raid upon New York, at which the Mexican Uitlanders were to rise and murder all they could of the people who had received them and allowed them to make hundreds of millions of dollars out of the country, and a vigorously inclined gentleman of the name of Jamisino were to lead this raid against our city wholly unprepared for it, and this raiding expedition were protected in its preparation by the overwhelming power of Mexico, on whose soil it was wholly armed and organized. Suppose, then, that we hastily called out our gallant Seventh Regiment and captured the entire body of freebooters so suddenly and effectually that their allies in the city had no time to rise, and even Mexico had to disclaim all connection and all approval or knowledge of the attack (whereat the whole world smiled disagreeably and sardonically, even as though it doubted the virtue and truthfulness of honest Mexico.) Suppose, thereupon, that we said to these lawless freebooters that instead of hanging you, as was always done by England in similar cases, we will let you off, the rank and file free the leaders with a fine, and even Jamisino himself with a penalty that he could well afford to pay, all of which sums put together did not half defray the expenses we had been put to. Suppose we did this partly out of humanity, partly as a matter of wisdom, and partly through a desire to placate the terrible Mexican nation: should we not rather be praised by the world and have the sympathies of all right-minded men for our magnanimity than be abused for our harshness?

III.—Suppose that the Mexican Government, sensitive at this defeat of Mexicans, even though repudiated as outlaws, were to begin hunting for an attack upon the lamb peacefully drinking at the brook down stream and discover it was muddying the water, and loudly and fiercely demanded redress, and suppose we humble and weak New Yorkers offered to submit all questions of liability to any arbitrator the Mexican Government would name, even Spain itself: would not public conscience say we had done all that could be asked of us?

IV.—Suppose, instead of accepting this, Mexico raised its demands, never stating explicitly what it wanted nor what it would be satisfied with. If, for instance, it first demanded the franchise and with a fierce outburst of rage at our anticipated refusal sent 10,000 troops to our borders and, when we promptly and unexpectedly conceded their demand, they suddenly demanded the equal employment of the Mexican language in our courts and the Aldermanic Chamber and with another roar of rage sent 10,000 more armed men and commenced mobilizing the entire Mexican Army, casting cannon, preparing ammunition, and hiring transports: should we be blamed for thinking their intentions were hostile?

V.—If this went on till they had 50,000 soldiers on our borders or on the way, would we be regarded as very bloodthirsty if we began war without waiting till all the men and all the guns had arrived, and would we not be considered fools if we delayed to strike a blow for our liberties till all hope of defending them were gone and we were shackled hand and foot?

VI.—If, then, we whipped the 20,000 at our very gates and pushed on to meet the additional force, would we not be justified in invading the sacred soil of Mexico, even in stirring up our fellow-kinsmen there to dissension, even in capturing the capital and upsetting the Government if we could?

"Some wise men are anxiously inquiring" if we should not retain our friendship for England, right or wrong. Strange as it may seem and in spite of what I have written and much more that I have thought, I am one of those wise men. Put the war on the Boers as only a manifestation of the irrepressible conflict, don't offer any sham or hypocritical pretenses, and I go a long way with you. But, then, I think this war the most awful blunder of the century, and I believe that the self-complacent, cynical, contemptuous, narrow-minded Mr. Joseph Chamberlain will be the most deeply execrated man in England before it is over. It would have been easy enough to conciliate the Boers, even to induce them to accept a united Afrikander colony, in the long run, after the pattern of Canada, but to conquer them by arms is almost hopeless and absolutely useless. What is the good of the territory for peaceful arts when bitter hate and suppressed rebellion are smoldering day and night and only waiting for England's difficulties to break out into a fierce flame. Let us keep friends with England, who is our only natural ally—besides Holland—in the world. She has made an awful mistake and must lose everything she is fighting for, whether she wins or loses on the battlefields. It may be our good fortune to help her out and bring about pacification and measurable good will. People do not necessarily hate each other because they have met on hostile fields, and if the English were inclined at the outset to despise the Boers, they have got over that most effectually. Our Nation is essentially a Dutch nation in all but language, not an English one. In love of liberty, respect for law, generous hospitality, equal treatment of strangers, and in a hundred feelings, thoughts, views, ideas, and desires we are Dutch primarily, although the English have fed at the same pure fountain and absorbed many of the same views. And English, American, Dutch—including the little Boer republic—should go hand in hand, and if Continental Europe don't like it we will partition Continental Europe.

And now, Mr. Shearman, you close by saying the Boers "would shut Americans out of their country." That is a gratuitous assertion; "would do" is pure assertion; "have done" is proof, and you yourself say that 60,000 Boers have invited 150,000 Uitlanders to come in, possess, and make fortunes out of their mines. What, then, becomes of your gratuitous hypothesis?

ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.

BOER LOVE FOR AMERICANS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"It is not against the rules of modern warfare to shoot horses, but it is against all the rules of honorable warfare to calumniate and belie a brave enemy."

These are the noble words of Gen. Buller, addressed to journalists and others who support Great Britain in this war and retail slanders against the Boers. They do him great credit. But Gen. Buller is a brave and honorable foe.

For sheer recklessness I have read nothing on the war to outdo the letter signed by T. G. Shearman in your Sunday issue. Mr. Shearman either knows nothing of the facts or he deliberately misrepresents them.

Take one statement of many: "To be deprived of the right to hold any meeting, publish any newspaper, criticise the Government, or even petition for redress."

Every statement here is false. Newspapers were published by the Outlanders even up to the declaration of war. Moneypenny of The Star escaped in a woman's garb, after editing a paper that called daily for the destruction of the republic. The Transvaal Leader was quite as bad, edited by another Englishman named Fakeman. These papers were constantly threatening the Government, abusing it, demanding that England should come in and make an end of it. Suppose newspapers in America asked England to come here and "destroy our corrupt Government," what would happen? Mr. Shearman will do well to read again Gen. Buller's words. But the other statements are equally false.

I. There is a municipality in Johannesburg, elected by the people. (2) The sanitary conditions are not worse than in any new town similarly situated. Water, electric light, a great system of main sewers, trams, police, &c., were in full swing or were being inaugurated in 1896 or 1897, and the town is only a very few years old. (3) The right to carry arms was only denied after it was found that an organized insurrection was being planned, and that its leaders had arranged to overthrow the republic and hand it over to England. (In Ireland no man can carry arms under English rule to-day; nor even in Great Britain without a license.) (4) In no nation under heaven are men allowed citizens' rights if they refuse to give up their citizenship of their native country. British subjects desired to remain so, and yet to have a voice in the Transvaal Government. Does America allow that?

II. There is no Government that awaits "overt" acts before putting treason laws into force. A conspiracy to commit "overt" acts is enough.

III. Suppose a large body of Mexicans came into an American State, and, while refusing to become American subjects, demanded citizens' rights, and avowed their aim to be annexation of that State to Mexico, how would we treat them?

IV. If they arranged for an expedition of armed Mexicans, and the Mexican Government winked at the expedition, and these ruffians were captured and sent back to Mexico, and were made popular heroes there, how would America act? If after that invasion we put our defenses in order on the Mexican border, would we be warranted in doing so?

V. If Mexico surrounded our borders by troops, called out her reserves, told us she would discuss terms of settlement no longer, what would we do?

VI. If we were 40,000 or 50,000 farmers and Mexico were a mighty empire, and if we told her that we could not allow this massing of troops on our borders, would it not be an act of the most magnificent courage and would all lovers of liberty not applaud us?

And if our farmers held their own with the best troops in the world; if 800 (as at Elandslaagte) fought for hours against 4,000; if boys and old men met the crack regiments of a great army and acquitted themselves like heroes, what would we say?

With the rest of Mr. Shearman's production I have nothing to do. He is grossly absurd in his statements as to Europe and America, but in regard to the Boers he is utterly regardless of the facts, and he ought not to write about what he does not know. As far as I have been able to find out American opinion, as gathered from meetings and other evidences, it is with the Boers, pace Mr. Shearman and some press writers.

C. DIAMOND.

New York, Dec. 10, 1899.

P. S.—I hope you will raise your voice against the shooting of Boers who have surrendered. See the letters from British officers in the press. Who are the savages—the Boers, who take prisoners, or those who shoot down men who surrender?

ANSWERS MR. SHEARMAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Thomas G. Shearman in to-day's TIMES puts sundry questions to all sympathizers with the Transvaal and Orange State farmers, and I beg opportunity through the same medium to essay an answer, but only by putting the same questions to Mr. Shearman with a few trifling changes in the terms of them.

Suppose a colony of American Puritan farmers settled in South Africa for one hundred years. Suppose Russia in time acquires dominion over their territory, and holds it to this day. Suppose those American farmers were compelled twice to leave their seats, their homes, and their farms, and with unspeakable hardships to trek northward and to make new settlements in a howling wilderness infested with nations of fierce savages. Suppose after founding a republican State they are again compelled to give up their territory to the Russians; and thus once more they migrate and found republican states; in short, in the tragic history of those two States write "American Farmers" instead of "Boers," and then answer the following questions:

I. If 150,000 Russians were invited (or at least were suffered) to settle within the territories of those American Republican and Puritan farmers; if those Russians bought up all the valuable land—auriferous land, to wit—and carried on the entire productive industry of the country, viz., goldmining, for farming, it seems, is not an industry, at least not a productive industry—and paid substantially all the taxes, enough to support the 60,000 farmers, their wives and their children,—if the farmers were excluded so to apply the public income; but in point of fact those silly farmers chose rather to buy war material and erect forts against the coming of the inevitable conflict with the Russians, would those 150,000 Russians submit to the following conditions:

1. To live in cities built by the Russians, but denied any municipal government whatever. It would be a hardship, but the farmers act wisely in refusing those Russians any measure of self-government as long as they acknowledge allegiance only to the Russian crown.

2. To have those cities deprived of sanitary privileges. That is surely an injustice. Let the Russians make remonstrance. There are cities in the United States that are not very well policed in the sanitarian sense. Before crying out against the inhumanity of the farmers the Russians should prove that the South African Republic is answerable for this state of things.

3. To be denied the right to carry arms, while every farmer and his boy are armed. The rate of insurance on the continuance of the two republics would be pretty high if the farmers permitted the 150,000 Russian foreigners and enemies to have arms.

4. To be deprived of the right to hold any public meetings; to publish any newspapers; to criticise the Government, or to petition for redress. Hardships! But all the world knows that those grievances do not exist or did not exist until the war, or perhaps shortly before it.

5. To have no right to vote for candidates for office except on condition that they renounce all protection of the Russian Government. Correct! But then even though they renounce they must wait fourteen years before they are enfranchised. Correct again! The farmers know what value to set on such renunciation pronounced in South Africa by Br——I mean Russian subjects sojourning at the Rand.

II. If the leading men among the 150,000 Russians conspired to revolt against these conditions, yet committed an overt act (as understood in Anglic law,) were to be arrested, tried and on conviction of intent to levy war upon the republic, were sentenced to death, but let off on payment of a fine, what would those Russians say? What they ought to say is: Thank God, I got off easy. It is a pretty serious thing for foreigners to conspire against the life of a State while they are sojourning in its territory.

I think there is no necessity for answering the other questions put by Mr. Shearman. But by a change of the terms they can all be answered in a way which will deprive them of force as against American sympathizers with the two gallant little republics.

THE OUTLANDERS' GRIEVANCES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with amazement and amusement Mr. Shearman's contribution to the Transvaal controversy. He attempts to illustrate what he conceives to be the Outlanders' alleged grievances by picturing what appears to him to be a parallel case. He supposes that 150,000 Americans have been invited to locate in Mexico, recites that after they have by their skill gained all the wealth of the country, they are ground under foot by the natives thereof, who number all told 60,000, and who refuse to give them the right of suffrage unless they will forswear allegiance to the United States, and assumes that under these circumstances the United States Government would send an army of 150,000 men to Mexico to gain political rights for the American gold seekers!

Does not Mr. Shearman's argument refute itself? Would 150,000 Americans, possessing all the wealth of the country need to call on the Government at Washington for help against 60,000 Greasers?

The South African Republic has sent nearly all its own soldiers away from its territory and with them have gone voluntarily thousands of Outlanders (not British) including thousands of Americans, and the bulk of those left to patrol and defend the Transvaal are Outlanders themselves. Does not this fact indicate that the alleged grievances of the Outlanders are largely the inventions of the British gold hunters who desire to steal the country and add another chapter to that long history of greed and war upon the weak which has gained for England the title of the "Robber Nation of the World?"

We hear much of the beneficent rule of the British in Africa and how much better it is than the Dutch. How happens it then, that when the Boers reach Natal and Cape Colony the farmers and burghers who have been enjoying the blessings of English sway for a hundred years are eagerly rebelling against Britain and joining the army of the republics by thousands?

Mr. Robert B. Roosevelt in a recent letter in which he deprecates telling the truth about England because it patted us on the back in the Spanish and Philippine wars, admits that Britain well deserves the title of "Perfidious Albion." This morning's papers quote from the London Times and other English journals fearful accounts of British barbarity at Elandslaagte, so full of horror that even the English pulpit and press are aroused to protest, but these reports only show that "English civilization" has not advanced beyond what it was when it hired the merciless savage against the American colonies in 1776, and when it blew the Sepoys from the muzzles of its cannon and murdered wounded prisoners by the thousands in the Soudan to save itself from caring for them.

"The mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small," and it may be that the righteous retribution that should overtake this nation steeped in blood may come from the little despised South African Dutch Republics.

THEODORE M. BANTA.

THE SMOOTH BOER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Thomas G. Shearman in your Sunday issue asks some questions which he evidently thinks can be answered in but one way, and when so answered completely dispose of the whole Boer question. He asks what would we Americans do under certain conditions. Has it never occurred to him that it is far more important to know what we Americans should do than what we would do? As a teacher of ethics Mr. Shearman would probably justify any means by the end. It seems to me that he in his position could readily prove too much. If we ask what the Americans would do under certain conditions in justification of England's treatment of the Boers, we might easily justify the Philippine war by what England would do under similar circumstances. This, we understand, Mr. Shearman would be loath to do.

But, answer Mr. Shearman's questions in any way we choose, nothing in reality becomes settled. This question can only be settled by consideration of principles. Admit that England has a right to dictate to the Transvaal what its naturalization laws shall be, and we admit that every nation has a similar right under similar circumstances. With this admission China would have a right to demand the free admission of the Chinese to the chance of American citizenship.

The Boers, it seems to me, have looked through the intentions of the Uitlanders, thereby demonstrating the sharpness of their perceptions. The Uitlanders have no more intention of becoming properly assimilated Transvaal citizens than have the Chinese of becoming American citizens. Mr. Shearman has become suddenly very well satisfied with nineteenth century civilization; but it strikes me that the Boers show remarkable wisdom in fighting shy of it, especially when presented in the highly moral clothing of a mining camp.

WEIGERT SAYS HE IS SANE.

Declares There Is a Plot, However, to Make Him Out Insane.

Charles Weigert, a draughtsman, forty-six years old, who lives at 338 Central Avenue, Brooklyn, told to Magistrate Lemon, in the Ewen Street Police Court yesterday, such a peculiar story touching an alleged attempt to send him to an insane asylum that the Magistrate decided upon a thorough investigation. Weigert has a wife and five children. He was arraigned in court on a warrant obtained by his wife, who charged him with walking in his sleep and continually muttering murderous threats. Weigert denied the allegation.

He declared that ten years ago he had a prosperous tobacco business in Harlem. He made his brother-in-law the General Manager while he (Weigert) attended to the out-of-town trade. Returning from a long business trip one day, Weigert discovered, he alleged, that his business had gone to ruin. Afterward, he said, his wife had him arrested and confined in the insane asylum on Randall's Island, but friends obtained his release. Weigert told Magistrate Lemon that his committal to an asylum was part of a plot to drive him mad.

"I am not insane," he said. "I was never insane, yet all the trouble I have had is enough to have made me a madman. My brother-in-law and some others are now trying to make me out insane."

Weigert was paroled until Wednesday, when the County Physician will examine him as to his mental condition.

DECIDES ON RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 16.—Judge E. B. Adams has handed down an opinion from the bench of the United States Circuit Court, in which he established the precedent that questions involving the ownership of accretions to property along navigable rivers are matters for the Federal courts to consider. In the course of his decision Judge Adams says:

"I have found many cases announcing the general doctrine that local laws must determine the riparian rights of owners, but subject in all cases to the primary right of the United States in navigable waters for the purpose of commerce."

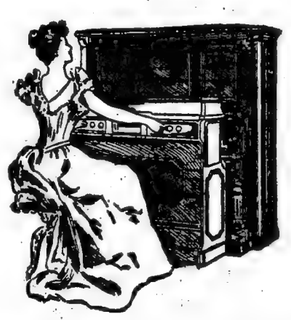
THE "ANGELUS" ORCHESTRAL PIANO PLAYER.



IT WILL PLAY ANY PIANO.

The New Angelus Orchestral Piano Player is a beautiful little cabinet containing mechanically operated fingers to play the piano, and two sets of beautifully toned reeds, producing a Violin and a Flute effect.

The Angelus can be instantly adjusted to ANY PIANO, Grand, Square or Upright.

It not only plays the piano perfectly, with all the touch and technique of the artistic musician, but it is also a Symphony (or self-playing organ), and can be instantly played as such when in ANY PART of the home.

When the Angelus is used with a piano the performer can at will produce any of the following effects:

1. A PIANO PLAYING ALONE.
2. AN ORCHESTRAL ORGAN PLAYING ALONE.
3. A PIANO WITH VIOLIN EFFECT.
4. A PIANO WITH FLUTE EFFECT.
5. PIANO AND FULL ORCHESTRAL ORGAN COMBINED ALL AT THE SAME TIME.

It plays any class of music you wish—operatic, dance, sacred, or popular songs. A child that has never before seen a piano can with the Angelus Orchestral Piano Player render the most difficult compositions in a manner possible only to the most accomplished and practiced pianists.

The New Angelus Orchestral Piano Player is so much better than supposedly similar instruments and is highly endorsed by leading musicians. You are invited to call and hear this wonderful instrument.

PAYNE RESOLUTION IS SHELVED

Opposition of Senator Hanna Prevents Effort to Change Basis of Republican Representation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The members of the Republican National Committee were received by President McKinley to-day at the White House. There was no speech-making, the members of the committee simply passing through the room and shaking hands with the President. After the reception the members of the committee returned to the Arlington Hotel, and assembled in session. Mr. Payne of Wisconsin, who had prepared a resolution to change the basis of representation, said that he would not offer it, but would make a statement to the committee.

He said:

"I ask the committee to honor me with its attention for a few minutes for a statement somewhat personal in its nature.

"It is well known, by members of the committee, both from the public press and correspondence with them, that I have intended to offer and advocate the adoption by the committee of a resolution recommending to the next National Republican Convention a change in the basis of representation in subsequent conventions. I some time since gave to the press for publication and discussion the resolution which I had prepared to present to the committee upon the subject.

"Briefly stated, it proposed to make the National Convention, which nominates Republican tickets and formulates platforms, fairly representative to those who vote for Republican platforms and Republican principles. The proposition has received the support of almost the entire Republican press of the country, and I have reason to believe that upon its merits, as well as upon grounds of expediency, it has the support of a large number of this committee.

"I have not in the slightest degree changed my conviction as to its justice, nor have I the slightest doubt as to its expediency. Within a day or two it has encountered opposition which I had no reason to anticipate, including that of the Chairman of this committee. It is sufficient for me to say that out of my regard for his opinion, and the opinions and wishes of others high in the councils of the party, to which, as a loyal Republican, I feel bound to defer, I am constrained not to offer the resolution.

"I thank the committee for its indulgence, and I have made this statement only in obvious justice to myself."

Senator Hanna took the floor and briefly discussed the Payne proposition, although it was not formally before the committee. He said that he did not believe it was the province of the National Committee to inaugurate any such radical changes. The committee was appointed for the purpose of assisting in every honorable way the election of the ticket nominated and to arrange the preliminaries for the next convention. Changes in the basis of representation he thought should be left for the convention to deal with. He did not believe that the committee should make recommendations to Congress as to legislation. In their individual capacity, members could ask their Senators and Representatives to bring about such legislation as they favored, but the committee, he thought, should maintain its position as an organization to conduct the affairs of the party under the instructions of the convention. If it assumed more, it would be charged with dictation. Mr. Hanna's remarks were cheered by the committee.

None of the other propositions on the subject was brought forward.

The Sub-Committee on Arrangements for the convention was announced as follows: Manley of Maine, Chairman; Price of Wisconsin, Scott of West Virginia, Kerens of Missouri, Kean of New Jersey, with Hanna and Dick, Chairman and Secretary of the National Committee, as ex-officio members.

The selection of delegates from the District of Columbia was referred to an election board.

There was some talk about the large representation from Territories, but no action was taken.

Senator Hanna, when asked how he regarded the work of the committee during its present meeting, replied emphatically: "Very satisfactory."

When asked when the committee would meet again, it having adjour

FROM THE FRENCH CAPITAL

Sensation Produced in Paris by Mr. Chamberlain's Speech.

NO ANTI-BRITISH ALLIANCE

Real Purpose of the Franco-Russian Compact Now Unattainable—Third Empire Beauty Dead.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The great sensation today is the news conveyed in Mr. Chamberlain's speech of an Anglo-German alliance. It is not too much to say that this has shattered the fondest dreams of ninety-nine French politicians out of a hundred, and that henceforward the scheme of a Russo-French and German alliance directed against Great Britain must be abandoned, probably for all time.

It is a delicate task to analyze the psychology of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs at this exciting juncture. The Franco-Russian alliance was concluded ostensibly for the purpose of preventing an aggression of Germany against France, which was still supposed to be nourishing sentiments of révanche and an undying, if unspoken, determination to regain possession of the conquered provinces. Russia, however, knew perfectly well that France had no sane hope of ever again trying conclusions with Germany. The claim of France on Alsace-Lorraine is exactly similar to that of Don Carlos on the French crown. It is a legitimist pretension, a thing beautiful in itself from many admirable and acceptable points of view, but devoid of all practical import.

That curious magnetism which brings together the champions of lost causes on the common ground of a Bohemia of broken reputations, dissipated youth, spoiled illusions, and disputed property is the force which attaches the dead or still-born movements of Boulangism, Chauvinism, Nationalism, Bonapartism, and Clericalism one to another. With the Whites of Spain, that pathetic band of madmen whose white banner no longer waves over their shocking annual banquets of yore since the "Roy" submitted to the republicanism of the Pope, with the Jeunesse Royaliste and the dissolved League of Patriots, may be reckoned the professional enemies of Great Britain and the partisans of révanche.

The Russians, understanding this, have managed without any difficulty whatsoever to make Great Britain support the only offensive consequences of an alliance with France, which in the beginning was of a purely defensive character, and ostensibly aimed at Germany. Russia and France, however, did not succeed in hurting Great Britain or putting any serious obstacles in the path of her political development. Russia's aim—the humiliation of the British, which is also the sole object of the Franco-Russian alliance—would have been obtained if Germany's collaboration could have been obtained.

It was a ticklish matter for France to make overtures to Germany, but she was willing to do so, and did so, nevertheless. Her press would have unanimously supported such a policy had it been publicly declared, and, if I except one or two papers such as the Aurore, whose influence may be practically discounted as valueless, they have made no secret of the fact. With the extinction of all sentiment of révanche Germany knows that she has nothing further to fear from France. And France has, moreover, nothing of any value to offer to Germany. The enlightened statesmen of Germany have grasped these facts, even if her press has not. They saw that Germany's interests lay in a cordial entente with a nation which has similar needs, and develops, to meet these, energies similar to her own.

The alliance of France is the clutch of a drowning man. France has now found out, too late for her purpose, that Germany no longer needs her, and will no longer help her against the foe she has secretly been fighting with the aid of Russia, ever since she lost Egypt. There is no longer question of a bargain or a price. Now in its desperation the French Government would like to repudiate the policy it has followed for the last decade, and bury the hatchet with Great Britain. But the opportunity has gone.

FORMER COURT BEAUTY DEAD.

A curious old relic of the Third Empire has just disappeared in the person of the Comtesse de Castiglione, whose beauty in its prime rivaled that of the Empress Eugénie. Comtesse de Castiglione was an Italian and had been a playfellow of Napoleon III. when he was a boy. Her beauty was so wondrous that crowds of people would follow her in the streets. The Empress was said to be jealous of her, and stories were told about family disputes at the Tuileries on her account. But they were mostly untrue.

It was said that she had gone to one fancy ball as Leda, the swan, in a costume which had been fashioned by rolling in a feather-bed after a bath of liquid gum. Report also accused her of having appeared on another occasion as Salammbô and said that the Empress, who objected to her bare feet, sent a chamberlain to conduct her to her carriage. But these tales were greatly exaggerated. The Comtesse de Castiglione, however, posed as a model to more than one famous sculptor, personating goddesses of antiquity. Her form was almost faultless and could be compared to that of the Venus of Milo. She died a couple of days ago in a little apartment at the corner of the Place Vendome, opposite the street which bears her name, but was not named after her. She spent the evening of her life in the strictest seclusion, seeing nobody. Her shutters were always closed, and the gas lighted daylight being tabooed.

"LA BELLE HELENE" REVIVED.

The Variétés Théâtre has revived "La Belle Hélène," perhaps the best-known of Offenbach's opera bouffes. It is almost exactly thirty-five years ago—the date having been Dec. 17, 1864—that, at this very theatre, the first performance took place. If the composer, whose death occurred in 1880, were only alive to-day, he would be more than agreeably surprised at the manner in which his work is now produced. Offenbach often bitterly complained of the deplorable mise en scène accorded to his pieces, of the poverty of the orchestra, of the lack of choristers. The wealth of his imagination suggested to him an infinity of incidents—arias, dances, choruses—all supplementary to the main line of his plot, but where his music often attained its highest charm and delicacy, far too many of these, to the composer's intense chagrin, had to be omitted, owing to the ruthless exigencies of funds and stage room.

At the present revival all this has been changed. In the place of an orchestra composed of 18 musicians there is now one composed of 50. The chorus, which in 1864 was made up of 9 or 10 persons, who, according to the needs of the case, left the stage as lords and ladies and returned by another entrance as peasants and maids, is now composed of no less than 90. At the first performance the mise en scène cost only 8,000 francs. The management of to-day boasts that the present revival has cost over 100,000 francs. Added to this many passages in the original manuscript formerly eliminated have now been incorporated for the first time. The result is a performance of a high order, with which no one would have been more pleased than Jacques Offenbach himself had he lived to see it.

As a matter of fact, the score of "La Belle Hélène" is exquisite. Here, more than elsewhere in his work, shines the fantasy of the master, his wit, his animation, and gayety, and his incomparable ease of rhythm. Amid a dazzling picturesqueness and color it is noticeable that the burlesque never degenerates into vulgarity, and that in the midst of the most mirth-provoking sallies there is always a note which borders on melancholy. The libretto, written by Meilhac and Halevy, consists of an enormous caricature of heroes of epic verse. Here figure Menelaus, victim, as in the tragedy of Sophocles, of the caprice and fantasy of the gods; Ajax and Agamemnon, Achilles and Calchas. This lack of respect for the heroes of mythology led to vigorous protest from the leading critics of the day. Théophile Gautier, Jules Janin, and Roquelplan all wrote to protest against what they regarded as an outrage on antiquity. "For us," said Gautier, "the gods of Olympia and the heroes of mythology live always, and we are filled with pain when parody Théophile Gautier, Jules Janin, and Roquelplan added: "Antiquity is so great that it is beyond our respect." But it was not long before all three joined in the chorus of the crowd and admitted the fascination of the music, and also the talent of the composer.

A number of genial jests in "La Belle Hélène" have become proverbial, and many scenes have become well-nigh legendary. The famous "concours des bouts rimés" and the noble "jeu de l'oie" are examples. There is also the passage when Colchas and Agamemnon try to persuade the unfortunate Menelaus to accept his conjugal mishaps without murmuring, because it is the will of Venus that it should be so. All that is genuine classic buffoonery. The principal rôle, that of Hélène, is now held by Mme. Simon-Girard. Many famous actresses have played the part, among whom Hortense Schneider, Anna Judic, and Jeanne Granier may be cited. Brasseur is the Agamemnon, and Baron is an inimitable Colchas. The three acts of the play represent in turn Sparta and the Acropolis, Hélène's palace, and the sands at Nauplia.

CONGRATULATIONS TO LABORI.

Although nearly three months have elapsed since the Rennes trial was brought to a conclusion, Maître Labori, the valiant counsel of Alfred Dreyfus, is still receiving many letters of congratulation from admirers all over the world. From Italy he has received numberless post cards with a uniform printed address. A few days ago he received from an American artist a beautiful portrait of himself, painted from illustrated papers. On this picture Labori is represented pleading at the bar of the Rennes court-martial. The likeness, I am told by people who have seen the picture, is very good. ROWLAND STRONG.

SEVERE COLD IN GERMANY.

Eight Deaths from Exposure in Berlin in Four Days.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—Severe cold weather and snowstorms have prevailed throughout Germany this week, and this has produced considerable suffering. From all the large cities there are reports to that effect, and there have been many deaths due to exposure. In Berlin alone there were eight deaths from exposure during the last four days.

The temperature was lower than for years past. At Koenigsberg it was 23 degrees below zero, in Berlin 18 degrees below, and at Breslau 22 degrees below.

The weather moderated to-day, but there have been heavy snowfalls in both the north and the south, and trains are everywhere behind time. Munich lies buried in snow. In Sprottau, Prussian Silesia, snow has been falling continuously for forty-eight hours.

24 Above Zero Chills London.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Americans wonder at the fuss made in London over the weather. The lowest temperature is 24 degrees above zero, yet everybody is complaining of the intense cold, and the newspapers are printing long stories from the weather sharps, comparing this with previous frigid periods, the most recent of which was in 1895.

THE "OPEN DOOR" IN CHINA.

Germany the Only Government Yet Asked to Give Assurances.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—From an authentic source it is learned, regarding the "open door" in China, that the Washington Government has not yet asked any other power besides Germany to furnish assurances, verbal or written, to maintain the open door, but now that Germany's answer is entirely favorable all the other powers interested will be asked, including France, Russia, Italy, and Great Britain.

It is expected that all of them will answer favorably, except perhaps Russia. But it is hoped that strong moral pressure can then be brought to bear on Russia to yield.

NEW LONDON PUBLICATIONS.

A Project Under Consideration to Start a Radical Daily.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Several new publications are on the eve of birth. Eyre & Spottiswoode are bringing out an illustrated weekly on the lines of The Illustrated London News, edited by Clement Shorter, who for ten years edited The News. Sir George Newnes, proprietor of The Westminster Gazette and other papers, is responsible for another sixpenny illustrated weekly, entitled The King.

A still more ambitious project under consideration is the starting of a radical daily in London. Since the anti-war editors were removed from The Chronicle and Echo, no paper in London has opposed the Government's policy, out and out. Radicalism, as represented by the weekly Speaker, is not representative of the metropolitan press.

STARVATION MENACES PERSIA.

United States Minister Bowen Asks Aid from This Country.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—United States Minister Bowen informs the State Department that great distress prevails in Persia in consequence of the high price of bread. He says the situation is growing worse every day, and that the prospects are that the poor will be face to face with starvation throughout the Winter. American missionaries cannot obtain bread enough for their servants or for the schools and hospitals under their care.

Minister Bowen asks that the situation be made known to the American people, with the suggestion that contributions of money be sent by draft on the Imperial Bank of Persia, at Teheran, made payable to the order of the Rev. Lewis F. Esselstyn, senior American missionary, who will use it for the relief of the suffering poor.

R. P. PORTER SAILS FOR HOME.

Pleased with Trade Treaties and with Gen. Wood's Appointment.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Robert P. Porter sailed for New York to-day on board the American Line steamer St. Paul. He says the completion of the German commercial treaty is of vital consequence to the United States foreign trade. He added:

"With the French treaty confirmed by the Senate, the German treaty buttoned up, and the existing satisfactory British trade relations, four-fifths of our European trade will be covered."

Mr. Porter, it is understood, represents most important private interests in Cuba, embracing $27,000,000 of British-American and Cuban capital. He thinks the appointment of Gen. Leonard Wood as Governor of Cuba is an admirable step, because he is "a military man imbued with the spirit of civil government."

GERMAN COMMERCIAL MUSEUM.

Government Aid Assures the Success of the Project.

Copyright, 1899, The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—With Government aid, including financial assistance, the projected Commercial Museum may now be regarded as secured for Germany. Consul General Mason regards this as the most important matter in relation to the commercial intercourse of the United States and Germany that has happened for years.

As a result of inquiries made to-day, it may be said that the plans have not yet been developed in detail. It may be decided to establish several branch institutions, one at Hamburg, another at Stuttgart or Frankfort, and a central one in Berlin. However, it is assumed that Germany's Commercial Museum will be under Imperial Government control, with financial support from the empire. Geheimrath Wermuth, Germany's ex-Commissioner at Chicago in 1893, has special charge of the project for the empire. All the remaining large industrial associations, among them the Bund der Industriellen, joined the movement yesterday. Practically there is no dissenting voice.

The Foreign Office also regards the movement most favorably, as also does Count Posadowsky-Wehner, the Minister of the Interior, who, after the reconvening of the Reichstag, will make a communication on the subject. A noteworthy feature is the intention to ask the leading agricultural representatives to join the movement by advice, thus frustrating possible Agrarian opposition to the project.

British Consuls' Work for America.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—A correspondent of The Standard suggests that the United States Government ought to present to the British Consuls in Spain a year's salary each as a recognition of their services during the war, as they had much extra work and were subjected to insults. There are only five of these Consuls. They received queries from the Secretary of State at Washington, regarding their extra expenses and fees collected while guarding United States interests, but nothing further resulted.

Dublin Degree for Mr. Chamberlain.

DUBLIN, Dec. 16.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain are the guests of Earl Cadogan, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Countess Cadogan prior to Mr. Chamberlain receiving a degree from Dublin University Monday.

GEN. HERNANDEZ IS DEFEATED.

Castro's Government Troops Crush the Venezuela Rebel.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Dec. 16.—The Government troops yesterday completely defeated those of Gen. Hernandez, near Tocuyo, a town in the State of Barquesimeto, thirty-four miles from Trujillo.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—United States Minister Loomis, at Caracas, has cabled the State Department that President Castro's forces have completely defeated the insurrectionists under Gen. Hernandez. No details are given, but it is believed that the engagement took place near Maracaibo, as that town was in possession of Hernandez at last reports.

PLAGUE ABATING IN CHINA.

Minister Conger Hopes the Measures Adopted May Stamp It Out.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—United States Minister Conger writes to the State Department from New Chwang, China, that, while the danger from the plague may not be entirely over, the disease is believed to be abating.

He says that the measures taken by the Tzotai in co-operation with the foreign Consuls toward improving the sanitary conditions, care of the sick, disposition of the dead, and disinfection of infected houses ought in the course of the Winter to stamp out the disease entirely and materially lessen the chances of another epidemic in the Spring.

Indian Plague Victim at Plymouth.

PLYMOUTH, England, Dec. 16.—The Peninsular and Oriental Line steamer Ballaarat, from Calcutta Nov. 15 for London, has arrived here with a native Indian fireman on board suffering from the plague.

NEW HOLLAND-AMERICA LINER.

The Potsdam Launched at Hamburg and to Enter the Service in May.

HAMBURG, Dec. 16.—The new twin-screw steamship Potsdam, built for the Holland-America Line, was successfully launched here to-day. The vessel is the third of the five new steamers which the Holland-America Line contracted for some years ago. The Potsdam will be ready to take her place in the regular service about May 1 of next year.

The vessel's dimensions are 565 feet long, 62 feet beam, and 44.6 feet deep, giving her a gross tonnage of nearly 13,000. She is fitted with bilge keels, and her two propellers will drive her at an average speed of fifteen knots. Leaving New York on Saturdays at 10 A. M., she will be enabled to land her passengers for the Paris Exposition at Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, on the second Monday afternoon after sailing, and her passengers for Holland and the Rhine on Tuesday morning. Besides a large cargo capacity, the vessel will have accommodations for about 250 first and 150 second cabin passengers, in addition to a large number of steerage passengers.

Cunarder Saxonia Launched.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The Cunard Line steamer Saxonia was launched to-day at the Clydebank yards. The Saxonia is planned to be of enormous carrying capacity. She will be put on the Cunard Company's Liverpool-Boston Line.

Salisbury's Daughter-in-Law Ill.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Lord Salisbury was no sooner recovering from the blow caused by the death of his wife than he was afflicted by another personal sorrow in the severe illness of his favorite daughter-in-law, Lady Cranborne. At one time this week her life was despaired of, but it is now hoped she will recover from her sickness, which started with a severe attack of influenza.

Nicaragua Cabinet Appointments.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 16.—President Zelaya has appointed Señor Fernando Sanchez Minister of Foreign Affairs and Señor Lugo, Minister of Public Instruction.

Count Tolstoi Resumes Work.

MOSCOW, Dec. 16.—Count Tolstoi, the Russian novelist and social reformer, has sufficiently recovered from his illness to resume work.

For a Monument to Emin Pasha.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—Steps are being taken to erect a monument to Emin Pasha, in Oppeln, his native place.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

Rhett—Tyler.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Miss Elizabeth Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Tyler, and William Brisbane Rhett were married to-day at noon at the Church of St. Michael and All Angels in the presence of a large assemblage, including relatives of both bride and bridegroom from this and other cities. The bride was escorted to the chancel by her father and was preceded by her cousin, Miss Caroline Clark of Paris, France, as maid of honor. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Turner, the rector. Thomas Rhett was best man for his brother. The bride's dress was of white satin trimmed with lace and chiffon. A tulle veil was worn, and she carried a large bouquet of white orchids. The wedding breakfast, at which fifty guests were entertained, followed at the Tyler home. The fact that both families are in mourning was the reason for a small reception. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Rhett left for their honeymoon trip. They intend to make their home in Brooklyn.

Wiman—Scofield.

Miss Louise M. Scofield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Scofield, and Henry Dun Wiman, son of Erastus Wiman of New Brighton, S. I., were married yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents on New York Avenue, Clifton, S. I. The Rev. John C. Eccleston, pastor of St. John's Church, Clifton, officiated. Miss Susetta Townsend Marsh, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The flower girls were the Misses Gladys and Constance Lord, the bride's cousins, and the Misses Eleanor and Gertrude Walker, nieces of the bridegroom. The best man was David Marsh. A reception was held after the ceremony which was attended by the immediate relatives and friends.

A Coming Washington Wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Miss Margaret Cox and Lawrence Vincent Benet, whose marriage will take place next Wednesday at St. Paul's Church, have been the recipients of frequent social attentions this week. Last night Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Le Gare gave a large dinner in their honor, and to-night Major and Mrs. Wallace invited a dinner company to meet them. Monday night there will be a dinner for Mr. Benet at the Metropolitan Club. The ushers at the wedding will be John Sidney Webb, Alexander Le Gare, Montgomery Blair, and Casper Crowninshield. Edward P. Casey of New York will be best man, and the bride's only attendant will be her sister, Miss Sally S. Cox. William Robinson Cox of New York, brother of the bride, will escort her to the altar.

HOLD-UP AT FRANKLIN SQUARE.

Charles Elkin of Jersey City Drugged and Robbed of a Watch.

A well dressed man, wearing diamonds, was found on the stairway of the elevated railroad at the Franklin Square station last night by Policeman Stephen Ryan, who took him to the Oak Street Station. There Sergeant Lindemann at once saw that the man had a wound on the back of his head, and instead of making a prisoner of him put him in the back room and sent for an ambulance from the Hudson Street Hospital.

Surgeon Smith found the man dazed, but he said he was not intoxicated, but acted as if he had been drugged. He sewed up the wound and declined to take the patient, saying he would come around all right. The man handed his card to the Sergeant, which read "Charles Elkin, 91 Mercer Street, Jersey City." He said he was a School Superintendent in Jersey City, and claimed that his gold watch had been taken from him.

Police Headquarters in Jersey City was called up on the telephone, and after a while a priest came over in Mr. Elkin's carriage and took him home. Mr. Elkin told the police that he did not remember coming to this city. He said he had had an engagement to meet his wife at Sixth Avenue and Thirty-third Street yesterday afternoon, but he had not kept the engagement.

Not long ago another man was "held up" at this same station and relieved of all his money. A policeman and some newsmen then chased the thieves, but did not succeed in catching them.

MUSIC HEARD YESTERDAY.

Mr. Paderewski's Second Piano Recital at Carnegie Hall Largely Attended.

The second piano recital by the famous Polish pianist, Mr. I. J. Paderewski, took place yesterday afternoon at Carnegie Hall. The audience was considerably larger than that which attended the first recital by the same artist, on Tuesday last. The assembly represented in money about $6,500, which is about $1,000 more than the amount of the receipts at the first recital. Every part of the house was crowded, and there was the usual gathering of standers at the rear of the orchestra. The attitude of the audience toward the pianist was precisely the same as it is at every one of his recitals, and since so much has been written that is not true in regard to this matter, it is time that a plain, unvarnished statement of exactly what takes place at each of these entertainments was printed. And here it is.

In the first place a Paderewski audience is different from the general audience which goes to a piano recital. It is made up in part of those who know all about piano playing, for these would naturally go to hear the most attractive artist of his time. But there are also hundreds of those who know absolutely nothing about the piano, and who cannot tell the music of Beethoven from that of Chopin. These are the persons who go to see rather than to hear the artist. They are curiosity seekers, and it is from their actions, mingled with the silly performances of a few sentimental girls, that the writers of the sensational stories about the behavior of the public at the Paderewski recitals get their material.

The first evidence of the presence of the ignorant is the interruption of well known compositions by applause before they are finished. But on the whole it may be said that the audiences listen to the player with rapt attention. Those who go out of curiosity soon find themselves under the spell of this man's wonderful witchery of music. When the recital is at an end, then begins the performance which is so often described with absurd exaggeration. The pianist leaves the stage. Then those who have been standing at the rear begin a systematic endeavor to call him out, while they press forward to points where they can see him better. The scene becomes precisely like that which may be observed at the close of the opera season. There are about 3,000 persons in the house. Of these 2,500 or 600 leave the auditorium the moment the programme is completed. Of the remainder perhaps two-thirds stand up expectantly, well knowing what is going to take place. The other third proceeds to push its way down the aisles toward the stage. It is composed chiefly of those from the back seats and the rear of the house. As this crowd goes, it keeps up a constant fire of applause. When this fire begins there are no signs of uncommon enthusiasm among the audience. But, as every one knows, applause is catching, and in a few minutes more join in the din. The pianist returns to the stage and bows. Then the men shout "Bravo!" and a few girls wave their handkerchiefs as the artist retires.

The pianist comes out again and bows two or three times. He makes a movement as if to retire once more. The applause doubles. He bows courteously and goes to the piano. The women in the aisles push one another somewhat eagerly in their desire to get near to him. Those who cannot reach a close position put their opera glasses to their eyes. Others stand up on the seats. These are very few. Most content themselves with twisting their necks in the attempt to see around those in front of them. The pianist plays an additional number. He goes off. Again there is a pushing of those who have not been close, and they make the burden of the applause for another piece. The pianist comes forth again and the former scene is repeated. Here and there one may see the waving of a handkerchief. Many women crowd as close to the stage as possible. They all seem to be calm. They behave exactly as they do at the end of the season at the opera, when they stay in the house and most phlegmatically call out the leading artist twenty or thirty times.

The pianist plays a second encore. The people who cannot see the movements of his hands push about uneasily in the aisles. Here and there some one stands on a seat. When he reaches a particularly brilliant passage, a few stand on their toes in the effort to see his hands. No one sees any of the crazy performances described with so much detail in some quarters. Women do not tear off their corsage bouquets, nor throw their jewels at him. No one screams. No one faints. Just what has been here set forth took place yesterday. He played three encores. Then a half dozen stalwart piano movers appeared on the stage and took away the piano. Before that had happened two-thirds of the applauders had started for home. And this is the true story of what goes on at the Paderewski recitals.

MERITS OF THE PERFORMANCE.

A Formidable Programme Played in a Masterly Manner.

Mr. Paderewski's programme yesterday consisted of the Brahms variations on a theme by Handel, Beethoven's sonata, Opus 54; Schumann's "Carnival," the fantaisie in F major, a nocturne, an étude, a mazurka, and a valse by Chopin, Rubinstein's A minor barcarcle, the pianist's own minuet in A minor, and the tenth of Liszt's Hungarian rhapsodies. Those who are acquainted with piano music will understand that this was a programme well chosen to show all that there was in the player. It can be said without attempting to go into details that the performance of it was masterly. Perhaps the Brahms variations have been given here with more power, but never with such a variety of intimate detail. The Beethoven sonata is not often played, and its beauties were probably not patent to the average hearer. But the manner in which Mr. Paderewski read it was simply lovely. He made of it a color piece of the softest and sweetest autumnal tints.

Schumann's "Carnival" was read with a most complete insight into its marvelous poetic content. This, indeed, was the performance of a great master, and if Mr. Paderewski had never done anything before, judges of piano playing would have known from this that he was a leader. In Chopin he is always happy, and he played the numbers of this composer very beautifully yesterday. He played the Rubinstein barcarole so that he made the piano as vocal as a soprano and as vibrant as a great bell. The Liszt composition was a display of agility coupled with color. As encores the pianist played the Tausig arrangement of Strauss's "Man lebt nur einmal," the "Butterfly" étude of Chopin and Mendelssohn's "Spinnerlied." His next recital will be on Jan. 6, but he will give an orchestral concert on Dec. 31.

THE WOMEN'S STRING ORCHESTRA.

First Concert of the Present Season at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The first concert of the present season of the Women's String Orchestra was given at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. The audience, as was to be expected from the fact that there is a large number of subscribers to this organization, was one of sufficient size to fill the Astor Gallery, in which the concert took place. The programme consisted of the following numbers: A concerto grosso by Handel, songs by Giordani, de Lara, Faure, and Tschaikowsky; theme and variations and a gigue by Rheinberger for violin and organ, a Nocturne for strings by Blasser, the prologue from "Pagliacci," a berceuse by Hartmann, "Vendredis," written by Sokolow, Glazounow, and Liadow in combination, and a bourree by Bach, arranged by Bachrich. The soloists were Miss Ida Branth, the concert mistress of the orchestra, and Mr. Emilio de Gogorza, baritone.

The Women's String Orchestra is in a flourishing condition, owing to the substantial backing which it receives, and its forces are now strong. There are twenty-four violins, six violas, four 'cellos, two double basses, and two harps, all played by women. The organization is composed of amateurs, with one or two exceptions, and is not open to the same criticism as if it were made up of professionals. The tone is substantial and full, and is of good quality. The playing is not yet free from roughness, and there are yet too many slips to suit the taste of the conductor. But the women who compose the orchestra are evidently in earnest about their work, and they deserve praise for the sincerity of their efforts.

NEW OPERA FOR THE AMERICAN.

"A Basso Porto" to be Sung There in English Next Month.

Henry W. Savage, proprietor of the Castle Square Opera Company, has purchased the American rights of the opera, "A Basso Porto," by Niccola Spinelli.

It will be presented by a company of his forces for the first time in English at the Exposition Music Hall in St. Louis Jan. 8. During the latter part of the month the production will be brought in its entirety from St. Louis and presented at the American Theatre.

BACK FROM OPERATIC TOUR.

Maurice Grau Talks of His Company's Successes and of the Salezade Nevers Controversy.

Maurice Grau, in advance of his company, returned to this city yesterday morning, after an absence of three months, during which time he has presented his operatic organization in seventeen cities in this country and Canada, fulfilling an exceptionally successful season in every city visited, with the exception of Chicago, where the engagement was not as good financially as was expected. Many members of the company have already returned to this city, while those of the organization who participated in last night's performance in Boston will arrive here this afternoon by special train. The season in this city will open to-morrow evening.

Mr. Grau, when seen at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon, said that he was indeed glad to get back after his long tour.

"I have endeavored," he said, "to give the music-loving public of the various cities my company visited the best performances possible, and in this I think my company has succeeded. In Boston we were more successful this year, both artistically and financially, than we have been for several years. At the performance of 'Faust' Friday night we had the largest audience and largest receipts in the history of that theatre."

Concerning the controversy between M. Salezade, one of his tenors, and M. Maurice de Nevers, a friend of Edouard de Reske, who, it was said, had insinuated that there were no tenors connected with the company this year, and for which it is also represented, he apologized, Mr. Grau said:

"It is unjust to drag into this affair persons who have no connection with it. Why should Jean de Reszke's name be brought into this matter, particularly as he has no opportunity to defend himself, he being in Europe? Whatever M. de Nevers has said or has not said never was said by either Jean or Edouard de Reszke. M. de Nevers is not the secretary, or is he the press representative, of Edouard de Reszke, and he has not come to this country, as has been said, to boom Jean de Reszke. Neither Jean nor Edouard de Reszke, therefore, should be held responsible for whatever M. de Nevers has said. If the impression has gone forth that I am endeavoring to give opera without tenors of ability, I want to say right here that my organization has five of the best tenors in the world to-day. Alvarez, Van Dyck, and Saleza form a combination that cannot be got together elsewhere, and my other two tenors, Dippel and Salignac, are exceptional in their respective ways.

"I can state most positively that M. de Nevers sent a letter of apology to the two tenors Van Dyck and Saleza, and under the circumstances I think the incident should be called closed."

PLAYERS GET A WEEK OFF.

"Round New York in Eighty Minutes" Ends Its Engagement.

The engagement of "Round New York in Eighty Minutes" was terminated last night at Koster & Bial's Music Hall. Manager Brady will allow the company to take a vacation this week, after which he will probably begin a road tour with the attraction at the Boston Theatre Dec. 25.

Referring to his retirement from Koster & Bial's, Mr. Brady yesterday said that, despite rumors to the contrary, he is not connected with the house in any way, and that he does not contemplate an alliance or co-partnership with a view of taking the theatre with Robert Blei, Thomas O'Rourke, Florence Ziegfeld, Jr., or any one else. Mr. Brady added that the possibility of his becoming connected again with the place was for the present as remote as it could well be, but that if he ever did become identified with it it would be with entirely different affiliations.

Minstrels for the Herald Square.

For the fortnight that must elapse between the close of "A Greek Slave" engagement at the Herald Square Theatre next Saturday night and the metropolitan production of David Belasco's new play, "Naughty Anthony," the boards will be occupied by Primrose and Dockstader's minstrels. The performances will begin at a Christmas Day matinée.

Symphony Concerts for Children.

The series of five concerts for children arranged to take place in Mendelssohn Hall will not be given this season. Instead, six symphony concerts will be given on Saturday afternoons in January, February, and March at Carnegie Hall, under the direction of Frank Damrosch.

Marie Tempest Quits Light Opera.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Marie Tempest has left Daly's Theatre because George Edwardes objected to her tights, requesting her to substitute knickerbockers for them. Miss Tempest now announces that she has abandoned light opera entirely and will devote herself to the higher branches of her art.

Zangwill's Play Fails in London.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Owing to its lack of success the last performance of "Children of the Ghetto," by Israel Zangwill, was given at the Adelphi Theatre this evening. The company will sail for the United States next Wednesday.

NOT MARRIED TO MAUDE ADAMS.

Charles Frohman Again Denies Old Story—Actress's Plans.

Theatrical circles last night were again discussing the rumor that Charles Frohman and Maude Adams were married recently in one of the Western cities where Miss Adams has been appearing in "The Little Minister." This report crops out at least two or three times every year, and is as often denied by Mr. Frohman and Miss Adams. Mr. Frohman, when asked about the story last night, said:

"THE NEW YORK TIMES has a standing denial from me of this report, and in this instance it can be said, as heretofore, that the report is absolutely false."

Miss Adams will begin an eight weeks' engagement in this city Jan. 9. During the period her repertoire will consist of "The Little Minister," "Peg Woffington," and "As You Like It." Later Mr. Frohman will probably present her in a revival of "Romeo and Juliet."

CHICAGO WANTS HER MONEY.

Will Employ a Man Especially to Look After Franchise Payments.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Frequent discoveries that large amounts of money are due the city under different franchises has spurred Mayor Harrison to a decision that a franchise bookkeeper must be employed by the city, either in the Controller's or Public Works office. A recommendation to this effect will be included in the next appropriation bill when it goes to the City Council.

As an example of how the city is deprived of what is due it until some accident brings some forgotten clause to the surface, the case of the Northwestern Elevated and the accumulated $10,000 just collected for the Wells Street bridge maintenance is cited. There are many cases where the street railways are supposed to pay for maintaining bridges, and even building them, that have been overlooked, and it is proposed to have an expert dig them up, so the city will not continue to be the loser.

UPSET SALVATIONISTS' POT.

Boys Have a Lively Scramble for the Money Which Rolls Out.

There was a lively scramble for the money in a pot, which stood on three legs in City Hall Park, near the Register's Office, yesterday afternoon. Some boys bent on obtaining the contents upset the pot and dumped out the money. Two of the boys, Arthur Messer, eleven years old, of 71 Cherry Street, and James Porrino, ten years old, of 57 Oliver Street, were captured after a hot chase, by Policeman James Brooks of the City Hall Station and finally sent to the Gerry society.

The pot was one of those which have been placed about the city by the Salvation Army for gathering funds to feed the poor on Christmas Day. It was in charge of Amolius Starkweather of 118 Avenue D, and he was talking to his relief, another man, when the boys seized the pot and upset it.

"Keep the pot a boiling!" was the motto inscribed on the vessel, which was covered on top with wire netting. Fifty-four cents were found on the boys, and it is said they got this money after upsetting the pot.

SAY HE IS A CLEVER THIEF.

Police Arrest Man Wanted for Robbing Houses While Looking for Furnished Rooms.

The police of the West Twentieth Street Station have in their custody a man for whom they have been looking for several months. He described himself last evening when arrested as George Grant, fifty years old, but refused to give his address claiming that his wife was sick, and that he did not want her to know that he had been arrested. Grant is a fine looking man, standing six feet tall in his stockings. He was well dressed.

Grant's method, according to the police, has been to enter a house for the purpose of renting a furnished room. Once inside, he would complain of having some trouble in his throat and ask for a drink of water. While the woman who was showing him the room was getting the water for him Grant would make his way to other rooms, it is alleged, and grab up all the jewelry he could see, putting it in his pockets.

The police say they have been able to trace him back to last September, when, it is alleged, he robbed the house of C. Wolf, who at that time lived at 18 West Sixty-sixth Street, but whose present address is not known.

Grant was arrested in the flat of Mrs. Julia Howe, on the second floor of 243 West Twenty-first Street. Grant asked Mrs. Howe to show him a room, saying that he wanted it for himself. The only fault he found with the room was that it had light-colored curtains on the windows. He then complained of being troubled with tonsilitis, and asked the woman to get him a glass of water.

Mrs. Howe, suspecting the man, asked him to follow her into the kitchen. He did so. After drinking the water, Grant asked for another and then stepped into another room while Mrs. Howe went to get the second glass of water.

When Mrs. Howe returned to where Grant was she saw a glove sticking out of a jewel case. The woman accused the man of being a thief and said that his glove was in the jewel case. Grant denied that the glove belonged to him, but when Mrs. Howe picked it out of the jewel case he took it and started to walk out of the flat into the hallway. The woman looked into the case and found that many trinkets, which belonged to her daughter, now deceased, were missing.

Once in the hallway Grant started up stairs and the woman started down stairs. On her way to the street she met Charles Handscome, another occupant of the house. She told Handscome that a thief was in the house. Handscome ran up stairs and caught Grant, holding him until the arrival of Detectives Walsh and McCarthy.

The other station houses were notified of the arrest and in a short while several complaints had been made against Grant. One of the first received was from Mrs. Bessie Smith of 162 West Eighty-ninth Street, who identified Grant as the man who had visited her flat four weeks ago. After he left she missed a watch, valued at $75; a purse containing $6 in cash, and a gold scarf-pin.

Mrs. Julia A. Bridge, of 105 West One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, identified Grant as the man who had entered her house two months ago under the guise of wanting to rent a room, and, it is alleged, stole a silver ring and a gold watch.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Capt. Arthur Barnes.

Capt. Arthur Barnes, sixty-five years of age, a citizen of North Carolina, and for eighteen years doorkeeper of the Senate Marble Room at the Capitol, and doorkeeper for many years for the Democratic National Committee, was found dead in his bed yesterday morning at Washington. He is supposed to have died from disease of the heart, having been for years subject to attacks showing weakness of that organ.

Capt. Barnes was a short, ruddy-faced, and silvery bearded man, of cheerful disposition. He had served in the Confederate Army as a cavalryman, and was brought to Washington by Senator Ransom. Wherever the National Committee had its campaign headquarters Capt. Barnes was on duty, and his personal acquaintance was large. He has held his place in the Senate under all changes of party control. He was a Free Mason, and his funeral will be in charge of that fraternity. His body will be taken to his former home, at Tarboro, N. C., for interment.

Gen. William F. Rogers.

Gen. William F. Rogers, who served in the civil war, died suddenly at Buffalo yesterday. He was seventy-nine years of age, having been born in Philadelphia in 1820. He entered the service in the Twenty-first New York Volunteers, serving for two years, when he was brevetted Brigadier General by President Johnson. Later he was successively Auditor, Controller, and Mayor of Buffalo. In 1887 he was appointed Superintendent of the Soldiers and Sailors' Home, at Bath, resigning about eight years ago because of advancing age.

WOMAN PERFECTS TORPEDO

Dr. M. J. Alsbau Masters the Principle of Steering It.

INVENTION OF CAPT. T. W. JUST

He Will Marry the One Who Conquered the Problem He Could Not Solve—Double Engine of Destruction.

A torpedo, whose development has been the life study of a former British Captain of artillery and has just been perfected by a New York woman, is the latest engine of destruction that has won the indorsement of many United States, British, and Austrian authorities. The invention is the work of Capt. Thomas W. Just, and the woman who has contributed to its ultimate success is Dr. M. J. Alsbau of 31 East Twenty-second Street, this city.

The Just-Alsbau torpedo, as it is called, consists of an ordinary shell similar to the Whitehead projectile, to which is attached a false head, which in itself becomes a shell that is practically the same as a charge from a mortar, and strikes the vessel or other object above the water line, while the main charge in the torpedo proper is projected at a vessel from beneath the surface of the water. Both missiles are hurled at the same time with the same charge of explosive.

When fired from the gun, which is technically known as a projector and similar to the regulation torpedo tube, the head of the missile is destined to create havoc in the upper works of a vessel with a charge of 2,000 pounds of dynamite, gun cotton, or cordite, while the heavier explosive is destined to cause wreck below the water line. One of these projectiles is sure to reach the object owing to an arrangement of an electric appliance similar to the Marconi system of telegraphy, but which is controlled in such a manner that its force can be directed in a certain direction instead of all around the compass, as is the case with the Italian's method.

The projectile is propelled by liberating liquefied air through the discharge orifices to the electors, and forms a hydraulic jet which impinges against the water. The torpedo, as designed by Capt. Just, is cylindrical in form, with each end tapered. It consists of two parts, the main feature being the submarine projectile. The forward end is adapted to fit in a corresponding socket in the after end of the head or shell, which is designed to do its work above the water. The head, when in place, is temporarily locked to the head of the main part of the torpedo, and when fired, the bolts holding it are temporarily loosened, so that they slide over the tapering head of the torpedo proper.

The head is provided with a forward compartment, in which is placed the special explosive. This explosive is inserted through an opening in the end of the head, closed by a cap piece, at the end of which is a detonator that insures the ignition of the charge upon contact with the exploder or at any suitable interval after contact.

A hand wheel below the breech of the tube acts as the lanyard, and upon its being turned the pressure of air is forced between the "sabot" and the projectile. The latter, being movable, is forced forward. The torpedo is arranged with pins on either side, at the point where it tapers off toward the false head, that run in specially prepared grooves in the barrel of the projector, and which steady the flight of the missile until it passes out from the muzzle. By an automatic action the key on the sabot releases the steering gear, which is the part of the work that Mrs. Alsbau has perfected.

This gear is composed of a pair of flanges on either side and a keel or vernal fin that drops of its own weight as soon as the torpedo is released. The effective range of the torpedo is from one to two miles, and can be regulated accurately from the firing point. Should the roll of the vessel from which the torpedo is fired cause the missile to be driven downward at an angle that would preclude it from reaching the objective point, a lever, weighted on either end with leaden balls, turns the inclined planes on either side to such an angle that the messenger is kept just below the surface of the sea, is steered directly at the object aimed at, and by the electric magnets is propelled directly at the object, whose destruction is contemplated, whether that object is a battleship drawing thirty feet of water or a small craft drawing but three feet.

There is a bit of romance connected with the completion of the new torpedo. The general scheme was all right and practical, but not until Capt. Just met Mrs. Alsbau could he master the principle of steering the explosive tube. To her belongs the credit of inventing the balanced lever that operates the lateral steering planes and the fin keel. Capt. Just is engaged to marry Mrs. Alsbau.

A company with a capital of $1,000,000 has been incorporated to manufacture the new projectile, and is perfecting arrangements for experiments with it in New York Harbor. These tests will cost $50,000, one-fifth of which the Government will be requested to contribute. Should these experiments prove successful the invention will be offered to the United States Government, and if it declines to buy the exclusive right to manufacture and use it, the company will sell its product to every nation on the globe.

CENSUS COUNT IN NEW YORK.

Supervisor Wilbur Mapping Districts for Enumerators—Estimates as to the Population.

The actual work of enumeration for the twelfth census is less than six months away. Charles S. Wilbur, Census Supervisor for Manhattan and the Bronx, is busily engaged in dividing the territory under his care into enumeration districts. Each of these districts it is intended shall contain a maximum of 2,500 persons, and it is expected that there will be about 1,200 of them, with an average population of 2,000. Although Mr. Wilbur does not yet venture an estimate of the number of persons that the next census will show as living in Manhattan and the Bronx, this would indicate that a population somewhat exceeding two millions will be found in the two boroughs.

The allotment of these enumeration districts is based upon estimates drawn mainly from the directory counts, and the election registry lists. Where new parks have been opened the sections are made larger than such estimates would warrant, and, conversely, where many institutions with a large number of inmates are situated, the sections are narrowed. In the congested lower east side, and in some portions of the west side, where there has been rapid growth of the foreign population in the past few years, the enumeration districts are much smaller in extent than those of the census of 1890. In some portions of the east side, a district will include less than a single block.

The time allotted for the actual work of enumeration is two weeks. For the compilation of their reports the enumerators will be allowed two more weeks. The enumerators will be appointed by the local supervisor, with the approval of the Director General. The department insists upon great care in their selection. If possible, the enumerators are to be residents of the district to which they are assigned.

Banquet of the Swiss Club.

The seventeenth annual dinner of the New York Swiss Club was held last night at the Knickerbocker Cottage, Sixth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street. The speakers were the Hon. J. B. Pioda, Minister from Switzerland to the United States; Chancellor W. D. MacCracken of the New York University, R. Huegle of the Swiss Legation, Augustus Hourlet, President E. P. Stahel, Dr. J. Freidrich, J. Bertschmann, M. L. Muehlemann of the United States Sub-Treasury, J. Eugene Robert, Raoul Pictet, and A. C. Francioli. A solemn toast was drunk to the memory of the late President of the Swiss Republic.

Meagher's Brigade Veterans Dine.

The veterans of Meagher's Irish Brigade, who have met every year since the battle of Fredericksburg, dined last night in the Sturtevant House. There were 200 veterans and guests present. A telegram was read from Amos J. Cummings, in Washington, saying: "Congratulate you and the Boers on your victories. Make Krüger and Gen. Joubert honorary members." Resolutions were passed expressing sympathy for the Boers. The speakers were Gen. James R. O'Beirne, Col. Edward Duffy, and Dr. David B. Poal.

BALTIMORE RAILROAD FIGHT.

Mayor Hayes Is Determined to Sell the Western Maryland and May Remove President Hood.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16.—Mayor Hayes, in the six weeks he has been in office, has shown the politicians, the other city officers, business men, and the officials of properties in which the city is interested that he is the whole administration, and that he proposes to run the city according to his own ideas. To-day he caused a sensation in railroad and business circles by declaring that he intended to institute foreclosure proceedings against the Western Maryland Railroad, in order that it should be put up at auction. If there are no other bidders the Mayor declares that the city will buy in the property and run it as a department of the City Government.

As the city virtually owns the road, the new Mayor has also threatened to remove Gen. John M. Hood, its President, if he objects to the sale of the property. President Hood has tartly replied to Mayor Hayes that he will not be deterred from doing his duty in connection with the railroad by any threat to remove him from the management.

The Mayor had a conference last night with C. C. Beaman of New York, representing a New York syndicate, in reference to the sale of the road. The syndicate is headed by John I. Waterbury of New York. Mayor Hayes says he is convinced that the syndicate is sincere in its desire to buy the road, and he believes there will also be other bidders.

"The road must and shall be sold. The present relations between the city and the company are intolerable," says the Mayor.

It is expected that competition at the sale will run the price up above the figures named by the New York syndicate, which were about $4,485,000. The New York syndicate requested the city officials to allow it to advance the money needed to refund the Western Maryland loan maturing in January.

The sum of $875,000 is required for this purpose, and a new loan was authorized by the Legislature at its last session. The refunding bonds are being prepared by the city officials, and will be ready on Jan. 2. This loan embraces what are known as the third mortgage bonds, on which the Western Maryland has defaulted in interest for several years.

TRAINS COLLIDE IN BOSTON.

Two of Four Persons Injured Are Taken to the Hospital.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—A rear-end collision between two passenger trains on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad occured this evening near the Broadway Extension Bridge, in this city, in which one car was telescoped.

Four persons were injured, two of whom are now at the hospital, the others being able to go to their homes.

MRS. O'NEIL IS ACQUITTED.

Chicago Woman, Accused of Fraud, Released in Canada.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 16.—A decision was rendered to-day in the case of Mrs. H. J. O'Neil of Chicago, who was arrested here some weeks ago on a charge of defrauding her creditors out of many thousands of dollars' worth of goods.

Judge Choquet, before whom the preliminary hearing was proceeding, ruled that the evidence taken by Judge Sicotte, the special Commissioner appointed to take evidence of witnesses in the United States, could not be admitted, because the Commissioner had not given the proper notice to the counsel on both sides and because the stenographers who took the depositions in the United States never certified to the correctness of their notes under oath, as required by the Canadian criminal code. Under these circumstances he refused to admit the evidence.

The lawyers representing the prosecution said that they were not prepared to ask for the appointment of another Commissioner, and as there was no evidence before the court to support the charge, Judge Choquet acquitted Mrs. O'Neil. The civil actions were also withdrawn, and the seizures being removed, Mrs. O'Neil regains possession of the goods and is once more at liberty.

THE APPEAL TO IRISH HEARTS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer, by request of the representatives of thousands of "loyal Irish" scattered over America, would ask you to give space in your columns for a brief reply to a letter which recently appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES entitled "An Appeal to Irish Hearts," over the signature of Caroline Arnott, 68 Merrion Square, Dublin, Ireland.

The loyalty of the hearts, for which the writer speaks, is not that base cringing loyalty to the Sassenach oppressor which inspires Mrs. Arnott; the loyalty purchased by

"Bribes in money and place,
And titles the badge of shame and disgrace,"

But loyalty to the cause for which Robert Emmet and his compatriots suffered and died, with which lovers of liberty all the world over, irrespective of nationality, heartily sympathize.

The audacity of this appeal, while strongly characteristic of the brazen effrontery of the West Briton, gives evidence of gross ignorance on the part of the writer of the feeling prevailing in this country, not only in "thousands of American families with Irish connections," but universal among the American people, both native and foreign born, who sympathize with the Boers in their heroic struggle against the invader.

To Catherine Arnott, who makes the appeal "on behalf of the special fund which has been inaugurated by my husband, Sir John Arnott, and being distributed by Lord Roberts and a committee," the loyal Irish in this country would reply, Any man with a drop of Irish blood in his veins enlisted or holding a commission in the English Army has thereby sold himself to shame and death, committed treason to his country, and consequently can prefer no claim for assistance, either to himself or family, on any human being except his purchasers. Why does not Mrs. Arnott, Sir John, Lord Roberts, and the other coproprietors of "our common empire" contribute out of the accumulations made by themselves and their ancestors, through the ages of bondage, spoliation, and slaughter, during which they have occupied the land and plundered the people of Ireland? A very small percentage of their superfluity would suffice to avert the "dire poverty and destitution" which has been for long years the normal condition of the Irish peasantry in consequence of English misrule.

To the surviving husbands of those "broken-hearted women," to the fathers of those "helpless children," and to those Irish young men who, enticed by the blandishments of the recruiting Sergeant or dazzled by his glowing pictures of military glory, may contemplate enlisting in the English Army, the Irish of America would say, Pause and think before you, in the words of our immortal Davis,

Go to find midst crime and toil
The wrath to which such guilt is hurried;
Go to leave on Afric's soil
Your bones accursed, bleaching, unburied;
Go to crush the good, the brave,
Whose wrongs with wrath the world is filling;
Go to slay each brother slave,
Accept the blood-stained Saxon shilling,

The American people, having at home so many widows and orphans, helpless women and children, left in destitution by the death or absence of husbands and fathers in the Philippines or Antilles, whom they are bound by every principle of patriotism and National honor to assist, would be guilty of base ingratitude by contributing to any foreign relief fund, however meritorious the object may be, while these are in want.

CELTIC-AMERICAN.

Brooklyn, Dec. 9, 1899.

Sailing of Henry Savage Landor.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—The American line steamer St. Paul, which will sail for New York, from Southampton, to-morrow, will have among her passengers Henry Savage Landor, the Thibetan explorer, who will lecture for several months in America. Mr. Landor has just returned from his second expedition to Thibet and Nepaul, where he broke the world's record in mountaineering, reaching, at the summit of one of the Lumpa peaks, an altitude of 23,500 feet.

Holidays for Barge Office Employes.

The immigration officials at the Barge Office promulgated a new rule yesterday, which is that hereafter the employes of the bureau shall have Sunday afternoon as a holiday. Hereafter no immigrants will be transferred from vessels to the Barge Office on Sunday unless they can be landed there before noon. This arrangement is not kindly received by the steamship companies, as they will have to hold the immigrants aboard and feed them until Monday.

PATRICK J. GLEASON BANKRUPT.

Ex-Mayor of Long Island City Owes $226,894.14, While His Assets Are $8,938.32.

Ex-Mayor Patrick Jerome Gleason filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States Court in Brooklyn yesterday. The total amount of his liabilities is given as $226,894.14, while his assets are $8,938.32. Among the liabilities are the following:

Personal tax on $10,000, $327; collateral inheritance tax, $166; as administrator to Stephen Mackin, $3,000; George Ehret, brewer, $1,602.80; First National Bank, Brooklyn, two notes, $1,629.59; the Trustees Illuminating Property, $5,899.96; Ames Building, Boston, Mass., $41,419.08. Judgments: As administrator of David Binns, deceased, $10,335.08; David A Richards and M. B. Smith, $915.37; Wilson C. Reynolds, $1,930.83; East River Gas Company, (for furnishing gas from 1895 to 1899,) unknown; State of New York, $200; John McKee, $118.53; Yellow Pine Company, $366.12; Henrietta Valentine, $5,692.49; David E. Valentine, $3,830.50; John Kipple, $1,327.12; James H. Christian, $7,138.39; Juliet Christian, $6,988.39; Gean Marie Mantell, $5,020.12; Tunis E. Buler, $1,048.65;; Emma A. Schley, $12,800.04; Eugenia R. Sweeney, $2,827.79; Edwin R. Leavitt, $1,024.25; H. A. Rowell, $5,434.38; Randolph F. Rabe, $2,948.65; Richard D. Lankford, $27,073.86; James Kennedy, $11,479.82; Henry A. Powell, $2,312.90; Anthony S. Woods, $2,250.20; New York and Queens Electric Railway Company, $10,000; Union College; $3,000; George W. Stephens, $4,500; Edward M. Tyrrell, $6,000; Thomas P. Buke, $8,000, and Thomas W. Kiely, $2,013.

Mr. Gleason says his assets include an interest in a house and lot at 167 Twelfth Street, Long Island City, on which the taxes and assessments have not been paid for fifteen years; one lot in Kansas City, which was sold two years ago for unpaid taxes; testimonials from school teachers, the Hebrew Association, and the Sixty-ninth Regiment; two black cocker spaniel dogs, one short-tail Irish terrier, a battle axe, tin, value unknown; watch, $25; stud, $25; unliquidated claims: Richardson & Co., $224.65; Henry Stanton, Jamaica, cash loan, $2,000; James W. Lamb, cash loan, $5,000; James Sheridan, cash loan, $40; Thomas Cavanagh, Long Island City, cash loan; $1,000, and Anthony S. Woods, Long Island City, cash loan, $252.

In the petition Mr. Gleason states that these claims are considered worthless and their value nothing. Continuing, he says he has $32 in cash in the Queens County Banks; three suits of clothes worth $15 each; overcoat, $15; four pairs shoes, worth $20; three suits of underwear, valued at $8; three dozen shirts, $12; three dozen collars, $7; three dozen pairs cuffs, $7; one dozen pairs socks, $8; four photographs, (large,) one small photo, value unknown, and household goods, including one bed, bedding, and household utensils, valued at $100. Judge Thomas appointed Charles A. Wadley referee.

Mr. Gleason's examination in supplementary proceedings to find out whether he is able to pay a judgment obtained against him by ex-Police Capt. Woodas for $2,250.20 was continued in the morning by Lawyer L. J. Grant. The ex-Mayor at first refused to answer Mr. Grant's questions and was taken before Justice Garretson, where he claimed that his lawyer had gone to file an application in bankruptcy which would explain all his affairs. Justice Garretson told him that he would have to answer Mr. Grant's questions notwithstanding.

Mr. Grant asked him about the large diamond which he wears in his shirt front. He said that he bought it from "Diamond Sam" about twelve months ago and cannot remember how much he paid for it.

When asked about his old team, Parnell and Gladstone, he said that he sold Gladstone to a Boston man for $500 or $600, and Parnell to the Woodside Water Company for $50. He drove Parnell to court yesterday, with the permission of the water company.

Mr. Gleason said he had no source of income. He lives on "pure air," he said, and sometimes borrows money. He recently borrowed $100 from Thomas P. Burke, to whom he owes $5 for a fine imposed on him in Jamaica.

SAVANNAH ACADEMY BURNED.

Incendiary Suspected of Desiring to Destroy All the School Buildings in the City.

Special to The New York Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 16.—After making two unsuccessful attempts to burn schoolhouses in Savannah, some one succeeded at an early hour this morning in destroying the greater portion of the Chatham Academy, the largest school building in the city. A portion of the building was gutted by the flames, and the entire structure drenched by water. The loss is nearly $40,000. Hundreds of children lost their school books.

There is no doubt that the fire was of incendiary origin. When the firemen reached the burning building they detected the odor of kerosene oil, which had been liberally sprinkled about the room in which the fire started. Within an hour the eastern half of the academy was burned to the ground.

The fire caused great uneasiness throughout the city. Thursday night the academy was found on fire in one of the upper rooms. Prompt discovery prevented its destruction. Early last evening St. Patrick's School was set on fire. The school authorities fear that some miscreant is endeavoring to burn down all the school buildings in Savannah.

The police were asked to keep a close watch on the buildings last night, but their vigilance did not prevent the second fire in the academy. There is no positive clue to the incendiary. The Trustees of the academy met this morning and offered a reward of $250 for proof sufficient to convict any one of having caused any of the fires. The City Council has offered a reward of $1,500 for the same purpose.

This morning two white boys were taken in custody by direction of the Superintendent of Police, and carried to the barracks. He said they were held for disorderly conduct. They were discharged from custody in a few hours. One of these boys was a pupil of St. Patrick's School, and was expelled. The other recently was expelled from one of the grammar schools of Chatham Academy. The Superintendent of Police says there was not enough evidence to hold them.

To-night the school houses are being carefully watched by men especially engaged for that purpose.

STRANDED STEAMER IN PERIL.

Arthur Orr Ashore at Georgian Bay May Be Lost.

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 16.—It is feared that the steamer Arthur Orr, reported wrecked off the Isle of Coves, Georgian Bay, is a total loss, as the insurance on her expired Dec. 12. She was worth $220,000, and had belonged to the company only three months.

She had 70,000 bushels of corn and 2,000 tons of package freight, worth in all $130,000. She was wrecked a year ago on the North Shore, but was rebuilt here.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Two wrecking expeditions were to-day hastened to the steamer Arthur Orr, ashore on Cove Island. One went from Owen Sound and the other from Midland, the nearest points in Georgian Bay.

The steamer's cargo is insured for $54,500. Of this $27,000 is on the grain, placed in English companies. The Union Marine has $25,000 on the flour and the Indemnity has $2,500.

Final Trial of the Craven Postponed.

BATH, Me., Dec. 16.—The official runs for standardizing the new torpedo boat Craven, which were begun here several days ago, were completed late this afternoon, but owing to the darkness, the hour run to sea, which was to have brought the official test to a close, was postponed. The boat worked splendidly in every way, and the opinion that she is much superior to her sister ship, the Dahlgren, was freely expressed.

AGAINST SHIP SUBSIDY BILL.

The American Federation of Labor Condemns the Measure with Only Three Dissenting Votes.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 16.—The American Federation of Labor this afternoon registered emphatic disapproval of Government subsidies to American ship owners, and later declared almost unanimously against the principle and practice of subsidy legislation. Federal officeholders and others who had been lobbying to obtain an indorsement of the Frye subsidy bill suffered a decided defeat.

The question was raised by the bringing in of two resolutions, one from the boilermakers and iron ship builders favoring subsidy legislation, the other opposing ship subsidies. The Resolutions Committee offered as a substitute for both, a resolution declaring that the natural resources of America abundantly offer all the materials necessary to the building of ships much more cheaply than they can be obtained in Europe, and also oppose all subsidies.

William J. Gilthorpe of the boilermakers', argued for subsidy legislation, chiefly on the ground that it costs more to operate American than foreign ships. He attributed the decline of American, compared with foreign shipping, to lack of Government assistance on this side of the Atlantic.

Mr. Warner of the New York Machinists declared that the only opposition to eight-hour legislation in Congress came from those interested in shipbuilding.

Vice President Duncan offered the following addition to the committee's substitute resolution:

"Resolved, Further, that we are decidedly opposed to all legislation of this kind, and will not give it consideration until the great shipbuilding firms of the country, which would be its greatest beneficiaries, withdraw their opposition to our eight-hour work day legislation, and cease their discrimination against the employment of union workmen."

Mr. Wilkie, one of the fraternal British delegates, and himself a shipbuilder, alleged that many misstatements on the subsidy subject had been made by shipbuilding firms on both sides of the Atlantic. He advocated an investigation by a joint committee from the labor organizations of both countries.

Andrew Furnseth of the Seamen's Union charged that, stowed away in the recesses of the Subsidy bill, was a re-enactment of the English press gang idea.

President Gompers told the convention of interviews with him by promoters of the bill, and said that the latter declined to give any assistance toward passing an eight-hour law.

After considerable further discussion Mr. Duncan's amendment was accepted by the Resolutions Committee and the resolution, as amended, was adopted by the convention with but three adverse votes. A general declaration against subsidies was adopted the English press gang idea.

FREAKS OF THE POST OFFICE.

Odd Names Found Among the Postmasters and Mail Stations of the United States.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The versatility of American parents in naming their children is freshly brought to mind every time one sees a new batch of Post Office appointments. A large proportion of these faithful servants of the Government have names that sound like a trolley car bumping along off the track, and as nearly every batch of appointments contains some of these freak names, it almost seems as if Uncle Sam had a fancy for the quaint and queer. Most of the names of this character are not queer by reason of foreign derivation, but simply illustrate the bizzare possibilities of English names.

In the latest batches there is the usual proportion of odd names. A Postmaster has been appointed for Bibon, Wis., whose parents decreed that he should journey through life under the appellation of Dee Meyers. On the same day that Dee received his commission the Government conferred a similar honor upon Jay Gumm, who is now handling the mails in McMillan, I. T. Out in Voxpopuli, Texas, the Government's work is now being done by a good American named Florian Fruka. Right after the appointment of Dee Meyers and Jay Gumm came those of Jarvy Caudill and Ellert Keefed, one in Kentucky and the other in Minnesota.

Yesterday the Postmaster General confided the mails of Lydia, Ohio, to a doubtless upright citizen with the sinister name of Swearigen. Yesterday, too, Laxsonville, Tenn., gained a Postmaster, who, through the carelessness of his parents and the malign influence of the demon of combination, is obliged to stagger under the name of Green Keel. On the same day Vaclav F. Kucera was appointed Postmaster of Colton, Neb., and a Postmistress was appointed for Breslau, Penn., whose name is an incoherent mass of consonants that reminds one of Eugene Ware's "Siege of Djrpkwtz." Her name is Mary Teljszo. Contrasted with these foreign-sounding names is the good old American title of Eph Shaver, who has a Post Office out in Ottertail County, Minn.

Parents have been as cruel to daughters as to sons, for among these recent batches of appointments shines the name of Penelope Jines. Penelope is Postmistress of Faulkner, Ind. Two other Postmistresses appointed at about the same time are named Hartsock and Goodgame. Postmistress Breeding of Best is doubtless a person of the best breeding, though her town formerly bore the lawless name of Yell. The new Postmaster of Saddle is named Bottomly. There is a combination of two good old Yankee names in the appointment, made yesterday, of Postmaster Nance of Reuben. Some older appointments are those of Eva Whitecotton, Knud Alfstad, Eelke Poortinga, and Sister Mary Rosaine Green, all made in one day, shortly after Samson was put in charge of Job.

The Post Office list of the United States is studded with flippant names like Ino, Uno, Igo, and Ido. Malevolent humor possibly prompted the selection for Ino of a Postmaster named Wise, or perhaps it was only a sense of the fitness of things. Igo was formerly on the Star route to Ono, but was ordered to be omitted a few days ago, possibly because the rhythm of the combination was becoming intolerable.

The naming of Post Offices after military heres has been a fad since the outbreak of the Spanish war, and is now beginning to die out; but after Deweys, Roosevelts, Schleys, and Shafters had dotted the Union, a flippant Texas town with an admiration for the Rough Riders turned up a short time ago with a request that its Post Office be named "Teddy," which, after due deliberation, was done. On the same day a Post Office in Georgia varied the usual procedure of securing the names of the great and good by naming itself Quilp. The flippancy with which some towns brand themselves with opprobrious names is illustrated by Twobit, S. D. The town is probably worth more than that. Some of the names, however, evince a lively and poetic fancy, as Blue Ash, Ohio; Bonny Doon, Cal., and Gallant Green, Md.

The Winter orders discontinuing Post Offices are sometimes suggestive. Hardly had the weather begun to get cool when the service from Hotwater to Lightfoot was discontinued. Three days later the department discontinued an Issue, in Maryland, a Piano in Oregon, and a Chestnut in Virginia, and this suggestive order was promulgated concerning a Post Office with the enticing name of Kissemee: "Supply Kissemee at site authorized." A few days afterward it was ordered that mail should no longer go from Earnest to Lax.

MANHATTAN CLUB ENTERTAINS.

The members of the Manhattan Club gave a "housewarming" at the new home of the club—the old quarters of the University Club at Madison Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street—last night. A large part of the membership and many friends of the club were in attendance. During the evening several performers from various theatres presented a musical and vaudeville entertainment which was well received.

The House Committee, under whose auspices the affair was held, announced that the purpose of the assemblage was to show the friends of the club what had been accomplished since the removal from the old home at Thirty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue. Much gratification was expressed by the club's officers at the growth in membership since the new house was opened. More than 200 new members is the record for the last two months.

BOSTON PRODUCE FIRM ASSIGNS.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—Francis Batchelder & Co. of 55 Blackstone Street, dealers in produce and provisions, assigned to-day for the benefit of their creditors to James Bailey, Jr. This step was taken because of the contingent liability of the firm on about $70,000 of the paper of John P. Squire & Co. The direct liabilities are about $200,000, with nominal assets in excess of that sum. The firm has conducted a successful business for many years, its transactions this year having amounted to about $1,000,000. The business will be carried on for the present by the assignee, and it is believed that matters will soon be adjusted so that the firm can resume. A meeting of creditors will be held next week.

RULES FOR HUMAN CONDUCT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The leading editorial in your issue of the 7th inst., headed "The Coming Question," is timely, full of thought, and may well be commended to the attention of thoughtful readers throughout the country. The last sentence therein is full of suggestion, and affords a text for the consideration of the wisest and best legislative and judicial talent of the land.

That we have too much Constitution is embarassingly evident to thoughtful observers, and has been so for many years, and as the Nation grows in age and expanse, this embarrassment must inevitably grow apace. It may be idle to discuss questions that have been settled, whether wisely or otherwise, yet, if timely discussion shall serve to prevent further unwisdom on any line of action it cannot be wholly profitless. The Constitution, as originally adopted, was more than enough, yet it has been repeatedly amended, and other amendments have frequently been seriously suggested and urged, all or any of which, if adopted, could hardly have failed to add to the complexity of the instrument and perplexity of the people who should be called upon to construe and conform to it. Only infinite wisdom can safely be trusted to construct a code of inflexible rules for human conduct. Therefore, if such a code is attempted by human ingenuity, the less there is of it the fewer will be the imperfections in it. Any provision in such an instrument other than those of the most comprehensive character, and invariably good for all times, all peoples, and all conditions, must sooner or later provoke discord and thus impair, if not destroy, the value of the whole product. It can hardly be questioned that our own history at least indicates, if it does not prove, the correctness of this opinion.

Had the framers of the Constitution directed their attention exclusively to the construction of a plan of government and left all specific applications of the principles therein embodied to the people and their successive generations as the exigency of occasion might require, they, seemingly, would have builded more wisely than they did. Among the embarrassments that might thus have been avoided may be mentioned the ever-growing and never-ending list of "Constitutional questions" with which our courts are burdened, involving, as it does, unmeasured time, labor, expense, and suspense of the people during repairs and adjustments of the Governmental machinery. A simple legislative enactment, if found defective or unwise, can easily be amended or repealed. Not so with the fundamental structure of the Government—the Constitution. Renunciation of the Constitution means revolution. Let the people beware therefore of adding new bands to their bondage lest they drive themselves to the dread alternative of deliverance or destruction.

Question: Can the living age be trusted to govern itself? If so, it can best do so without a straitjacket. If not, if it is degenerate, then no amount of wisdom and

CLAUSEN CALLED DESPOT

Automobile Rules Mr. Rice Considers Unwarranted Tyranny.

TO FIGHT FOR HIS RIGHTS

Mr. Seligman Again Condemns Park Commissioner—Mr. Clausen Shows No Signs of Yielding.

Isaac L. Rice, who with Jefferson Seligman suffered on Friday a revocation of his automobile permit to enter Central Park with the styles of vehicles both gentlemen have been using, declared yesterday that his Constitutional rights had been infringed. Mr. Rice has determined to invoke the aid of the law, and if he finds that he has legal ground for a suit to maintain his rights as a free citizen, one will be brought against Park Commissioner Clausen to determine whether or not he has a right to exclude from the Park any style of pleasure vehicle an owner wishes to send in. Mr. Seligman is much in the same frame of mind, but up to last evening he had not determined just what course he would take. Neither Mr. Rice nor Mr. Seligman called upon Mr. Clausen yesterday. Both decided to consult legal advisers first.

Mr. Rice repeated his assertion yesterday, made the day before, that Mr. Clausen's action was a "high-handed outrage," and followed this up with a letter to the Park Commissioner, which is as follows:

"I have hitherto fully respected your position in relation to the entrance of automobiles into the Park, as it was ostensibly based on your fear that they might frighten horses and thereby endanger the safety of the Drive. This fear proved groundless in my case, as I and my family entered the Drive three times, under the permit granted by you, without awakening the slightest attention of a single horse. This, indeed, was only what I expected, as it seemed incomprehensible to me that the horse—an animal whose good sense is proverbial—should not notice an automobile at Fifty-ninth Street, and be frightened out of its wits by it at Sixtieth Street simply because that happened to be under the control of the Park Commissioners.

THRUST AT MR. CLAUSEN.

"To-day, however, by your revocation of my permit, and your statements to the press, I find that your ostensible reason for objecting to automobiles is only a secondary consideration. It is not in your capacity as the protector of the public within the precincts of your jurisdiction, but as arbiter elegantiarum that you object to my carriage.

"In order to find favor in your eyes, apparently it is not essential that the driver be a man who understands how to manage the carriage, (as I received my permit without any examination as to my ability to drive,) but that he should wear no uniform; that he should prove and identify himself as the owner of the carriage; that the carriage shall not be old-fashioned, [sic;] that it shall be of the Stanhope type, open, so as to afford no protection against the inclemency of the weather, &c. In other words, your position is not that of a public servant acting in the public interests, but that of a despot. If your authority as Park Commissioner allows you to make a regulation of this character, it must also allow you to place your hat in some conspicuous place and permit no one to enter the Park who will not bow to it.

"Your ruling, therefore, affects the rights and liberties of the citizen, for which I believe there must be a remedy."

This letter was written immediately after the receipt by Mr. Rice yesterday morning of the notice of the revocation of his permit, sent under Mr. Clausen's orders and signed by Chester H. Smith, Assistant Secretary of the Park Board. It is similar to one received by Mr. Seligman, the wording of which is:

I am directed by the Commissioner of Parks for the Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond to advise you that he has this day revoked the permit No. 9, issued on the 12th inst., to enter and pass over the drives of Central Park with your electric automobile carriage.

This revocation is due to the fact that the vehicle you have been using, being of the general style of a coach, is not the kind which any of the few permits now issued for experimental use are intended. Cabs and coaches, for the present at least, are objectionable. Open pleasure vehicles of the Stanhope style are permitted to be used under the present permits. Should you desire a renewal of your permit to enter the Park with a vehicle of that character, the Commissioner will be glad to consider an application therefor.

MR. RICE MAY BRING SUIT.

"I am not through with Park Commissioner Clausen yet by any manner of means," said Mr. Rice. "I consider that he has trampled upon my rights as a citizen. I shall probably bring suit to determine just what power this Park Commissioner has over his fellow-citizens. I am going to consult my lawyer, however, and will be guided by his advice."

Mr. Rice showed his permit, signed by Mr. Clausen, which reads that he "may enter and pass over the drives of Central Park with his electric automobile carriage." He continued:

"That says nothing about the style of pleasure carriage to be used, and as I have said, Mr. Clausen has no legal right to distinguish between styles of pleasure vehicles. It is not for him to say what kind of an electric vehicle he will let me use, as he implies in his letter revoking my permit."

Mr. Rice here produced a statement signed by his driver, William Fonda, which he has prepared to show that the horses in the Park pay no attention to automobiles, and that the danger upon which Mr. Clausen places so much stress is "rather forced." The statement says:

"I entered the Park with Mr. Rice's carriage at the Fifty-ninth Street entrance. I was asked for my permit and allowed to pass. I was stopped on the West Drive, near the Seventy-second Street entrance, and again showed the permit. I was stopped again on the West Drive, between Seventy-second and Eighty-fifth Street, but allowed to pass on indicating that I had a permit.

"Right near the Eighty-fifth Street entrance I was stopped by two gentlemen riding in a carriage, neither of them being in uniform, who asked to whom the permit was issued. I gave the name, and then one gentleman said, 'All right, only Mr. Clausen wanted to know,' and then he said that no doubt we would hear from Mr. Clausen. This was the third time that I had been in the Park with the carriage. The first and second times, Dec. 12 and 13, I drove Mr. Rice alone, and was asked for the permit only once each time.

"On the last trip, yesterday, I drove Mrs. Rice and her two youngest children—a little girl of six and a little boy of five.

"The carriage was quieter than any in the drive, as there were no horses' hoofs to make a noise.

"I met a great number of horses, and not a single one took the slightest notice of the carriage."

MR. SELIGMAN'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Seligman said yesterday: "I have made no move yet. I am considering what is best to do. One thing is certain—while I repeat what I said, that Mr. Clausen has acted without right or reason in shutting my vehicles out of the Park, there are other places in the city where I can go. One is naturally inclined to think that the Commissioner regards the Park as his private property."

Park Commissioner Clausen said yesterday that orders have been issued to the Park police to stop the automobile cabs, coaches, or broughams from hereafter entering the Park, whether the person operating has a permit or not.

"Furthermore," said he, "in order to prevent the recurrence of the abuse of the permit, whether intentional or otherwise, I have caused a new form of permit to be issued which will specifically set forth what kind of an automobile will be allowed in the Park. The new permit will contain the phrase, 'open pleasure carriage,' the style of this carriage to be distinctly stated so that there will be no mistake.

"Permits will continue to be issued, but all owners who get them in the future must be competent operators, or have such in charge."

Mr. Clausen said that those who already have permits will be expected to live up to his requirements, but they will not be officially notified unless they break his rules by attempting to enter the Park with a prohibited style of vehicle. Then the police will give the necessary official information.

MR. BUZBY GETS A PERMIT.

First to Test Mr. Clausen's Order Against Automobiles.

Winslow E. Buzby of 223 East Seventeenth Street was yesterday granted a permit to enter Central Park in his electric automobile, by Commissioner Clausen.

Mr. Buzby was the first to try to enter the Park in an automobile in order to test Mr. Clausen's order that no automobiles should be admitted. Mr. Buzby said on Friday that he thought he was being discriminated against. He said he had had an application on file for two years to enter the Park in an automobile.

Mr. Buzby's permit, which is the first to be issued since those of Messrs. Jefferson Seligman and Isaac L. Rice were revoked, specifies that he may "enter upon and pass over the drives of the Central Park with an open electric pleasure carriage, (phaeton,) operated by an experienced motorman."

SHIPBUILDING IN MAINE.

Prosperity Has Struck the Yards and Builders Hope that 1900 Tonnage Will Exceed 1899 Output.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 16.—Prosperity, long absent, has returned to the shipyards of Maine, and there is rejoicing all along the shore. For some years past the new tonnage figures have been so small as to be scarcely worth publishing, but now the showing is encouraging, and the prospect is bright. This year about 50,000 tons of new shipping have been launched, and there is every prospect that the year 1900 will show an increase of at least 50 per cent. over these figures. The notable ships of the year are the two steel ships and the steel bark launched by the Sewalls of Bath; the five-masted schooners John B. Prescott, built at Camden, and Nathaniel T. Palmer, built at Bath; the four-masters at Thomaston and Milbridge; the steam yacht Virginia and the naval vessels at Bath.

There are to be built in the coming year numerous four-masters, several five-masters, and two six-masters, one each of the latter at Camden and Bath, while there seems to be a growing demand for schooners of moderate size, like the Pendleton Brothers, Belfast-built, and the John Maxwell, Milbridge-built, of 762 and 455 tons respectively. The cost of materials has increased about 30 per cent., that of iron and steel nearly 100 per cent. and that has the effect of discouraging operations to a great extent, especially in metal vessels. It is not likely, however, that prices will long remain as they are, and a return to reasonable rates will be followed by greatly increased activity in all departments of building.

The opening of the Philippine ports, when it occurs, will relieve the scarcity of hemp, which will, naturally, decline to something like its former price, 6 to 7 cents per pound. The price is now 16 to 17 cents.

The number of vessels now on the stocks or under contract to be built in Maine yards in the coming year is much greater than for many years. The Bath Iron Works have now in process of construction naval vessels and tugs to the amount of 7,991 tons displacement. Percy & Small have a five-masted schooner of 2,300 tons to be launched in February, and will then begin work on a five-master of 2,500 tons. They will also build a six-masted schooner of 5,000 tons capacity to be commanded by Capt. Lincoln M. Jewett of the schooner Charles P. Notman.

The New England Company, Bath, has three barges under way and will build a 2,000-ton schooner and one of 1,000 tons. G. G. Deering will build a five-masted schooner of about 2,000 tons. Kelley, Spear & Co. have contracted to build two barges of about 850 tons each and a four-masted schooner of 1,600 tons. William T. Donnell will build a four-masted schooner of about 1,600 tons. In the Waldoborough district business promises well for 1900. At Rockland, Cobb, Butler & Co. are building for the Southern lumber trade a three-masted schooner of 550 tons, to be named Wellfleet, and to be launched in January. At Thomaston, Washburn Brothers are building a four-masted schooner of about 1,100 tons, to be launched in January, have laid the keel for a three-masted schooner of 350 tons, to be launched in the Spring, and are having the frame cut in Virginia for a 1,600-ton four-masted schooner to be built next Summer.

At Rockland, I. L. Snow & Co. are to build a light-draught three-masted schooner of about 200 tons. At Waldoborough, George L. Welt will build a five-masted schooner of about 1,800 tons, for William F. Palmer of Boston. She will be named Fannie Palmer, for a daughter of the principal owner, and will be commanded by Capt. George V. Williams of Wellfleet, Mass.

In the Belfast district, at Camden, there is now on the stocks a five-masted schooner of about 1,800 tons to be launched in a few days, and a four-masted schooner of about 1,400 tons to be launched in February. There are under contract at Camden a six-masted schooner of 2,700 tons, and a five-master of 1,800 tons, to be launched next Fall. At Belfast, Carter & Co. will build a 700-ton four-masted schooner for Pendleyon Brothers of Islesborough, and there are several other contracts in view for Belfast.

In the Machias district Sawyer Brothers of Milbridge have contracted to build a three-masted schooner of about 450 tons, and at Machias, McKay & Dix of New York, who have leased the old Longfellow yard, are to build two four-masted schooners of about 1,200 tons each.

The most notable of all the vessels to be built during the coming year are the six-masted schooners at Camden and Bath. When, last Winter, the five-masters Nathaniel T. Palmer, at Bath, and John B. Prescott, at Camden, were launched, it was freely predicted that the limit of size in schooners had been reached, and that never again would such monster fore-and-afters be built. This same prediction has been made every year since the building of big schooners began, but it has never yet been fulfilled, and so no man can set the limit in the size of the big schooners.

The Prescott and Palmer are of 2,249 and 2,242 tons net register, respectively, which is larger than most ships, but the six-masters are to be of about 2,700 tons each. The Prescott and Palmer carry each about 4,400 tons of coal; the six-masters are to carry 5,500 tons. It would require about thirty-two men to sail a ship of the size and carrying capacity of these big schooners, while the schooners carry only eleven men all told. They are used almost altogether in the coal trade, make quick trips, use steam power for handling cargo, sails, and anchors, and also for pumping and other heavy work. They earn a great deal and can be sailed very cheaply for vessels of their size and capacity.

No wooden ships have been built in Maine for some years. The last brig built in this country was the Telos, launched from Crosby's yard, Bangor, in 1883. She is a fine vessel of her class, but there is more money now in schooners, which are better adapted for the coastwise trade, which, of course, American vessels have all to themselves. The square-rigger is generally a deep-water man, and where he goes he must face the sharp competition of countless steamers and sailing vessels of other nations.

At Bath, steel ship building has become an industry of considerable importance, and this year there have been launched in addition to naval vessels, two ships of 2,918 and 2,919 tons, and a bark of 1,196 tons, besides a large steam yacht, the Virginia, for Isaac Stern of New York, costing about $175,000. There is every prospect that the steel shipbuilding industry at Bath will become extensive.

Chapel at Sag Harbor Dedicated.

SAG HARBOR, L. I., Dec. 16.—The handsome chapel attached to the Presbyterian church was dedicated last evening. The Rev. Robert K. Wick of Jamaica, a classmate of Pastor Clarence Hall Wilson, conducted the exercises, and was assisted by the Rev. Epher Whitaker of Southold. The chapel, which cost about $7,000, is a memorial structure, most of the funds having been given in memory of deceased relatives. Miss M. Julia King, daughter of the late Samuel King, a former pastor of the church, was the largest individual donor. She subscribed $2,000 in money, and, in addition, gave the pulpit furniture, a piano, and the gas fixtures.

To Foreclose on Altgeld's Building.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Foreclosure proceedings have been brought in the Circuit Court by holders of the first mortgage bonds issued by the Unity Company, owners of the Unity Building, a modern skyscraper, in which ex-Gov. John P. Altgeld was formerly interested. The aggregate of the indebtedness on which the foreclosure is brought is $304,500.

New Volume of New York Reports.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—The one hundred and sixtieth volume of the New York Reports has just gone to the press. The New York Reports are the proceedings of the Court of Appeals. The new volume is the twelfth of State Reporter Edmund H. Smith.

Panther Gets Poultry and Pigs.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Dec. 16.—A big panther is terrorizing residents in the vicinity of Mountaindale, Sullivan County. Hunters have been unsuccessful in pursuit of the beast, which is destroying poultry and small pigs.

BOSTON BANK IN TROUBLE

Broadway National in the Hands of Controller Dawes.

SQUIRE FAILURE THE CAUSE

The President of the Pork-Packing Concern Also at the Head of the Financial Institution.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—As a result of the failure of the John P. Squire Company, pork packers of Cambridge, for $3,000,000, which was announced late yesterday afternoon, the Broadway National Bank of this city, in which the Squires were largerly interested, did not open its doors to-day, and a notice at the entrance announced that the affairs of the bank were in the hands of the Controller of the Currency.

The news that the bank had closed caused considerable excitement in financial circles, which had not entirely recovered from the disturbance occasioned by the announcement on Thursday that the Globe National Bank had obtained credit from the Clearing House to the extent of $300,000. A crowd soon gathered about the bank doors, and it did not take long for the news of the trouble to circulate widely. All sorts of wild rumors were started. These reports made mention of other banks with which the Squires were connected, and one or two institutions were named which, it was said, would be most likely to feel the influence of the disturbance. For an hour these conditions prevailed, but as one after the other of the banks mentioned was found to be doing business as usual, the agitation began to subside, and by 11 o'clock affairs apparently had resumed their normal state.

The Broadway National Bank is situated at the corner of Milk and Arch Streets. Roswell C. Downer is its President and Frank O. Squire, President and manager of the John P. Squire Company, is Vice President. When it became known yesterday that the Squire firm was in trouble the Clearing House took up the question of giving assistance to the Broadway National. After an investigation of the trouble, which was not completed until last evening, it was decided to take no action in the matter. The officials of the bank at once entered into communication with Controller Dawes, with the result that the institution was placed in the Controller's hands, Bank Examiner D. G. Wing being designated as temporary receiver.

The Broadway National Bank was incorporated in 1853. Its last statement, presented at the close of business Dec. 9, gave the following figures: Capital, $200,000; loans, $1,895,000; circulation, $45,000; individual deposits, $2,348,000; due banks, $131,000; due from resident agents, $274,000; Clearing House balance, $273,000; due from banks, $168,000; legal tenders, $158,000; specie, $113,000.

Members of the Clearing House Committee refused to discuss the Broadway Bank question to-day. The opinion among bankers is that no important failures will follow the closing of the institution. A prominent banker said that the management of financial affairs in Boston was in the hands of very able men, who would do all in their power to avert additional disasters. Another banker, when asked if he expected other failures as the result of the closing of the Broadway Bank, said: "It is possible that there may be a weak institution or two which will be affected, but what of it? If a bank is not on a solid footing the sooner it is known the better. In the long run it is cheapest and best for the community that unstable concerns should go to the wall."

F. H. Curtiss, Cashier of the Broadway Bank, said to-day that the institution was solvent, and he added that there actually was $600,000 in cash in the bank's vaults this morning. Mr. Curtiss also said that all the heavy depositors had expressed their confidence in the institution, and had agreed to allow the deposits to remain. It was declared that the capital stock had not been impaired in any way.

Frank O. Squire, Vice President of the bank, said: "I was as much surprised at the closing of the bank this morning as the public could have been. I certainly did not expect it."

There was considerable talk during the forenoon of the possibility of runs on some of the banks in the city. Squads of policemen were sent to various parts of the bank district to prevent crowds from gathering, but there was no need of their presence. One bank objected to having the patrolmen stand near its place of business.

The City of Boston was a depositor in the Broadway National Bank and $97,000 of city money is tied up. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts also had a deposit in the bank amounting to about $50,000.

A dispatch from Washington says Controller Dawes is very reluctant to talk about the failure of the Broadway National Bank or the general banking situation in Boston, but he dictated the following:

"The general condition of the Boston banks is strong, and there is no ground for fear of any general trouble. The causes of embarrassment of the Broadway National Bank are due to the failure of the Squire Packing Company. Until the report of the temporary receiver has been received no estimate can be given as to the probable results of the liquidation of the Broadway National Bank. While the capital has been lost, a heavy loss is not expected for the depositors."

Mr. Dawes was asked if any of the other New England banks were likely to be affected by the Squire failure. He said he could not tell, but he thought the paper was so well distributed outside of Boston that none of the country banks was in danger of being seriously embarrassed by the failure.

The local correspondents of the Broadway National Bank of Boston are the Chase and National Banks and the National Bank of North America. At each it was reported yesterday that the Boston bank had a credit balance, in two instances a small amount and in the other a sum of importance. None of these New York banks had deposits with the Broadway.

SQUIRE CONCERN'S CONDITION.

Member of the Firm Says Creditors Will Be Paid in Full.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—Frank O. and Fred F. Squire and their attorneys, with Herman W. Chaplin, the assignee, were busy to-day upon the affairs of the Squire pork packing concern, the assignment of which was announced yesterday. Very little new information could be gleaned to-day as to the situation. It was said that a thorough examination of the affairs of the company was in progress.

Assignee Chaplin says that the assignment provides that the present assignee shall withdraw in favor of such other assignee, if any, as the creditors may decide upon, and that a meeting of the creditors will be called as soon as notices can be mailed to them. "The creditors," he said, "are chiefly banks, widely scattered, but principally in New England and in New York State."

One of the members of the Squire firm, referring to the assignment and the closing of the Broadway National Bank, to-day said: "While I cannot state just how seriously our assignment may affect the Broadway Bank, I am justified in saying that the bank and all of our creditors will be paid dollar for dollar and nobody will lose a cent."

According to an official of one of the Boston banks interested in the Squire assignment, the creditors will vote to grant an extension to the company, owing to the excellent balance sheets displayed.

Swift Not to Buy the Squire Plant.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—William H. Veeder, attorney for Swift & Co. of Chicago, is authority for the statement that the firm will not buy the plant of J. P. Squire & Co., the bankrupt pork packers of Boston. Mr. Veeder says the firm never contemplated such a deal.

MARKET STILL ERRATIC.

Another Notable Slump in Stocks—Over 500,000 Shares Involved in Short Day's Trading.

The stock market had another erratic day of it yesterday, thanks to the panicky condition of the London market, due to the British reverses in South Africa, and to a more or less timorous feeling here because of the financial troubles in Boston.

At the opening of the local market London cables reported prices there for Americans at from 1 to 3½ points below the closing figures in this market on Friday night. At the outset the New York market shared in this depression, some of the stocks declining several points, in sympathy with London weakness, but later the market took on a firm tone and held it until within a half hour or so of the close, even some of the shorts, who had sold earlier, covering.

When the final decline came, however, it came with a rush, and many of the quotations were considerably knocked down.

Among the conspicuous losses were: American Steel Hoop, 2½; American Sugar, 4½; American Tobacco, 2¾; Atchison, 2⅝; Baltimore and Ohio common, 2¼; Baltimore and Ohio preferred, 2½; Brooklyn Rapid Transit, 3⅛; Burlington, 3⅜; Chicago and Eastern Illinois, 5; St. Paul, 2⅝; Chicago and Northwestern, 3; Colorado Fuel and Iron, 2⅜; Consolidated Gas, 3⅜; Continental Tobacco, 2½; Lackawanna, 3½; Federal Steel common, 2⅝; Federal Steel preferred, 3; Glucose Refining, 6; Great Northern, 3⅜; Louisville and Nashville, 3⅜; Manhattan, 3⅝; Metropolitan, 8; Missouri Pacific, 3; New York Central, 3½; Northern Pacific, 2½; Pacific Mail, 2⅛; Pennsylvania, 2½; People's Gas, 4½; Reading, 2¼; St. Louis Southwestern, 4⅜; Southern Railway preferred, 2½; Tennessee Coal and Iron, 5; Third Avenue Railroad, 3½; Union Pacific, 2½.

As an evidence of the activity of the market it may be said that over 500,000 shares were traded in in the two hours of business.

Oregon Bank in Liquidation.

WASCO, Oregon, Dec. 16.—The Sherman County Bank has gone into voluntary liquidation. All depositors will be paid in full.

LEGAL NOTES.

INDEFINITE GIFTS FOR CHARITABLE PURPOSES.—Nathan F. Graves, by the tenth clause of his will, executed in September, 1893, gave his residuary estate in trust for the purpose of founding, erecting, and maintaining the Graves Home for the Aged, to be situated in the City of Syracuse, N. Y., which institution he said was "intended as a home for those who, by misfortune, have become incapable of providing for themselves, and those who have slender means of support." In an action brought in the Supreme Court by Benjamin G. Allen and others against Charles E. Stevens and others, as executors under the will, for its construction, and to have the tenth clause adjudged to be void, the Special Term decided the will to be in all respects valid, but the Appellate Division of the Fourth Department, in October, 1898, by a divided court, held that this clause was invalid, and reversed the judgment. The Court of Appeals has now reversed the judgment of the Appellate Division and affirmed that of the Special Term. Chief Justice Parker, giving the Court's opinion, says that under the Laws of 1893, "to regulate gifts for charitable purposes, (which was passed soon after Samuel J. Tilden's will creating such a trust had been declared invalid because of indefiniteness and uncertainty in its operations and purposes,) Mr. Graves's will would not fail because of indefiniteness of the beneficiaries. The Court decided the purpose of the act referred to was to restore to the Supreme Court the powers formerly exercised by the Court of Chancery to administer trusts that were indefinite as to beneficiaries. The Court also held that neither would such a gift fail for not being given to a corporation already formed, or thereafter to be created. It was the purpose of the act of 1893, the Chief Judge said, to exempt permanent charitable trusts from the operation of the law against perpetuity, by directing the Supreme Court to administer the trust. Where, as in this case, trustees were named in the will, and they were prohibited by its terms from holding any portion of the testator's property longer than for the lives of two persons named in it, the trustees would be charged with the management and conduct of the trust until the expiration of the period mentioned, at which time the title to the trust property would vest in the Supreme Court. Such a gift to trustees in trust for the purposes named of more than one-half of the testator's property was held not to be violative of the law of 1860, which prohibits a person having a husband, wife, &c., from bequeathing to any benevolent, charitable, &c., society, association, or corporation, in trust or otherwise, more than one-half of his estate. Judge Gray gave a dissenting opinion.

THE GIFT VESTED IN THE INFANT.—Francis McCabe, by his will, gave his residuary estate to his executors in trust during the life of his daughter, Rosanna, with directions to pay specific sums from the income to this daughter, and to his granddaughter, Loretta Donlon, until certain liens and incumbrances upon the real property were removed. The income was then to be divided into three parts, one of which was to be paid to Loretta. On the death of Rosanna, and the termination of the trust, one-third part of the whole estate was to go to the granddaughter, with the provision that if she be deceased at the time of such division, her share was to go to her issue, if any. Loretta, then the wife of Thomas F. Brandon, died during the lifetime of the testator, leaving an infant child. On the accounting of the executor, a question arose as to the effect of the death of Loretta during the lifetime of the testator upon the gift made to her of the yearly sum until payment of the incumbrances upon the testator's realty. The executor claimed that the gift lapsed and failed utterly; the child's administrator claimed it vested in him, while the infant's special guardian claimed the infant was entitled to it absolutely. The Surrogate held that the amount belonged to the administrator. The First Appellant Division, on appeal by the executors and the special guardian, has now affirmed the decree of the Surrogate, so far as it adjudged that the gift did not lapse, but it decides that the gift survived to and became vested in the infant, the only surviving child of the granddaughter, and that the several installments of the gift, with interest, should be paid to the child's general guardian, when appointed. Justice Patterson, who gave the opinion of the court, decided that under the provisions of the Revised Statutes, (2 R. S. 66, Sec. 52,) the gift to the granddaughter, as here, of so much of the net income of the estate until a certain event happened, was a legacy, and one which by the terms of the statute vested in her surviving child. That child was substituted by the statute, as legated, and the right vested in her, as if the granddaughter "had survived the testator and had died intestate." In the words of the statute did not, as held by the Surrogate, carry the gift to the granddaughter's personal representatives, but solely for the child or descendant of the deceased legatee, by making that child or descendant the immediate recipient of the testamentary gift, directly from the testator. But for the statute, it was held the gift would have lapsed.

INTERPLEADER REFUSED.—Rose Kreiser, as assignee of Samuel Kreiser, sued the city for the amounts deposited by Mr. Kreiser with the City Chamberlain, claiming an assignment to her on Sept. 16, 1898. The assignment was on that day filed in the office of the Controller. The defendant asked for an order interpleading John L. Melcher, who had obtained judgment against Kreiser on Sept. 27, 1898, and had served the Controller with an order in third party proceedings. Samuel Kreiser was examined in supplementary proceedings and a receiver was appointed. Melcher's attorney made affidavit in this action that he was informed and believed that Melcher intended to have the assignment set aside, but without stating that Kreiser could not claim this sum from the city. An order granting the interpleader was reversed by the Appellate Division, which held that no substantial claim had been made by Melcher against the city for the payment of this sum, and that upon the facts there was no substantial objection to the right of the plaintiff to the fund.

WIFE'S LOVE COSTS A BEATING.

Works to Buy Christmas Present, Which Arouses Jealousy.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16.—A desire to surprise her husband with a Christmas gift resulted in Mamie Brown receiving a brutal beating and sending her spouse to jail. Mrs. Brown secured a position as domestic, and with her wages bought a ring for him. When Charles Brown, the husband, who was jealous of the charms of his wife, found a man's ring in her possession he beat and kicked her in a shocking manner.

Mrs. Brown thereupon swore out a warrant for his arrest, and Justice Grannan sent the accused to jail. He will spend his Christmas behind the bars, but Mrs. Brown has not yet decided what she will do with the ring.

Maine's Big Game Season Closed.

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 16.—The big game season in Maine closed this week, and the returns show that the number of deer transported through Bangor by rail was 3,415, an increase of 38 over last year's record. Some deer are yet to be transported, under special license. The number of moose transported to date has been 138. Last year the moose shipments numbered 202. Shipments still to be made will probably bring the total fully up to last year's figures.

FIGHTING TILING TRUST.

Jury Disagrees in Mr. Kiernan's Suit Against American Company.

The jury empaneled to try the case of Peter J. Kiernan against the American Encaustic Tiling Company and the other organizations connected with it, which control the tile, grate, and mantel business in this city, disagreed yesterday, after a trial which lasted for eight days. The disagreement of the jury still leaves the question open as to whether members of an organization have the right to prevent persons who are not members from buying goods of a trust.

Kiernan claimed that, because he was deprived of his membership for non-payment of dues, which he had paid, he was boycotted. He alleged that the organization refused to deal with non-members, and that he was consequently debarred from carrying out contracts which had been entered into by him.

The defendants maintained that their by-laws were not in restraint of trade.

A TABLET FOR A RECTOR.

N. O. Havemeyer and Others Erect One in Memory of B. M. Yarrington.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 16.—A tablet in memory of the Rev. Benjamin M. Yarrington is to be unveiled at Christ Episcopal Church to-morrow morning with appropriate services. Christ Church is the richest denomination in town, having among its membership Henry O. Havemeyer, A. Foster Higgins, George Rowland, and other New Yorkers.

The late Mr. Yarrington was for fifty-six years rector, and for three years Rector Emeritus of Christ Church, his being the oldest rectorship in the Connecticut diocese. He died March 19, 1898, at the age of eighty, and was succeeded by the Rev. M. George Thompson, the present rector.

Mr. Havemeyer and the other members have contributed $500 for the purchase of the tablet, which is of bronze, with marble background. It is 4 feet 2 inches wide and 2 feet 7 inches in depth. The marble border is 3 inches on all sides. In raised letters on the tablet is the inscription:

"This tablet is erected by the congregation of Christ Church in loving memory of the Rev. B. M. Yarrington, born March 18, 1812, died March 19, 1898. Rector fifty-six years. Rector Emeritus three years."

At the bottom are the words:

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

NOTES OF INSURANCE INTERESTS.

The insurance brokerage firm of Lethbridge & Davidge has been absorbed by Johnson & Higgins.

C. M. Nichols & Co. have been appointed sole Chicago agents of the Greenwich Insurance Company.

Maitland & McAvoy have been appointed Chicago agents for the State Fire Insurance Company of Liverpool.

Adam Archibald has been appointed Boston agent of the Traders' Fire Insurance Company of New York.

W. H. Dale of Omaha has been appointed special agent of the Manchester Fire Insurance Company of England for Nebraska and Iowa.

John W. Brooks has been appointed special agent of the Delaware Insurance Company and the Reliance Insurance Company for Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Western Underwriter of Cincinnati will be issued from Chicago after Jan. 1, under the continued management of E. Jay Wohlgemuth and C. M. Cartwright.

The business of the Toledo Life Insurance Company, which was incorporated last year with ex-Gov. Foster as President, has been taken over by the Cleveland Life Insurance Company.

C. L. Andrews, Secretary of the Detroit Fire and Marine Insurance Company, has been elected Vice President to succeed the late J. J. Clark, and A. H. McDonnell has been chosen Secretary.

It is reported on good authority that the Union Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia has decided not to enter the Western Union, and the agents of the company are being notified to that effect.

J. William Middendorf has been elected President of the Fidelity Fire Insurance Company of Baltimore to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. Ramsey Barry, and George R. Webb has been elected Vice President.

A controlling interest in the stock of the Merchants' Insurance Company of Providence, R. I., has been purchased by Price, McCormick & Co. The company was organized in 1851 and is capitalized at $200,000. It was stated yesterday that the ultimate intention of the purchasers is to reinsure the company, probably in the Hartford Fire Insurance Company.

The insurance on the building of Barbara Stimmel at 291 Bowery, which was considerably damaged by fire yesterday, was distributed as follows: Phoenix of Hartford, $15,000; Caledonian, $7,500; Commercial Union, $5,000; Palatine, $5,000; Howard, $5,000; Firemen's of Baltimore, $5,000; Newark, $5,000; Firemen's Fund, $5,000; Pennsylvania, $5,000; Springfield, $5,000; Providence-Washington, $2,500; Mechanics', $2,500; State of Pennsylvania, $2,500; Reliance, $2,500. H. A. Landgraff & Co. will adjust the loss.

The insurance on the property of H. Griffin & Son at 75 Duane Street, which was considerably damaged by fire Friday night, was distributed as follows: On stock, Palatine, $5,000; Lancashire, $5,000; Queen, $5,000; American of Philadelphia, $5,000; New Hampshire, $5,000; Merchants' Lloyds, $5,000; Citizens' of New York, $2,500; American of New York, $2,500; Reading, $2,500; Rochester German, $2,500; Glens Falls, $2,500; Grand Rapids, $2,500; Buffalo German, $2,500; Hanover, $2,500; North America, $2,500; Western of Pittsburg, $2,500. On fixtures, Imperial, $1,000. H. A. Landgraff & Co. will adjust the loss.

The suburban business of the Spring Garden Insurance Company of Philadelphia was reinsured yesterday in the Western Assurance Company of Toronto, and the suburban department of the former company, which has yielded a net profit of $72,000 in four and a half years, will change hands. Negotiations were practically concluded late yesterday afternoon, by which George E. Wood, the suburban manager of the Spring Garden, will become the suburban manager of a British office, which will take care of the business as it expires. This deal will probably tend to help the reorganization of a rating compact in suburban territory.

Killed by a Falling Chimney.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16.—Michael Zinner, a tinsmith, was instantly killed this morning by a mass of falling masonry from the chimney of the Friedenwald Company, printers, at the corner of Baltimore and Eutaw Streets. The bricks and mortar in the chimney were loosened and thrown to the street by an explosion of gas, and they struck Zinner, who was passing the establishment, crushing him into a pulp.

Think Mail Boxes Have Been Robbed.

BUFFALO, Dec. 16.—The Post Office authorities have reason to believe that two mail-box thieves have been operating in Buffalo during the last week. Whether or not they have stolen many letters is not known. Mail boxes in various parts of the city have been tampered with, it is claimed, by men dressed as carriers and provided with keys.

Trainer Robinson Remains at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 16.—Trainer James Robinson, who had charge of the Yale football eleven during the past season, was to-day signed by Manager Dwight Dana for the Yale track athletic team. Manager Dana announces that Mr. Robinson will take charge of the track men on Feb. 1 and will remain with them until after the annual intercollegiate meet, about May 25.

Missing Man's Body Found.

ROME, N. Y., Dec. 16.—The body of Frank Garvin, aged forty-five years, who had been missing since Wednesday night, was found in the sluice of Lock No. 2, Black River Canal, to-day. It is supposed that while endeavoring to cross the sluice on a plank he slipped and fell in.

FAIR HEIRS LOSE A POINT.

Mrs. Craven Gets a Chance to Prove Her Claims.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Nettie F. Craven, who claims to be the widow of ex-Senator James G. Fair, has won a partial victory in Judge Troutt's court. The Court decided that she may prosecute her claims for a family allowance of $5,000 a month.

Mrs. Craven will now be permitted to prove, if she can do so, that she is the widow of the deceased Senator.

HONOR TO HENRY'S MEMORY.

The President Writes of the Work of the Professor.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—At the centennial celebration by the citizens of Albany of the birth of Prof. Joseph Henry, LL. D., held here to-night under the auspices of the Albany Institute and the Albany Historical and Art Society, President Verplanck Colvin of the Institute read a letter from President McKinley, attesting the good work done by Prof. Henry in developing magnetic telegraphy. He said that not only our own country, but the world at large owes much to Prof Henry for his scientific discoveries.

Letters were also received from Gov. Roosevelt and Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson, Chairman of the Lighthouse Board of the United States, inclosing the remarks of Admiral George Dewey, when Secretary of the Lighthouse Board, on the death of

MOON UNDER AN ECLIPSE

Not Total and Not Important in an Astronomical View.

BEAUTIFUL AS A SPECTACLE

Clouds Fade Away as the Strange Shadow Grows, Obscuring the Gracious Earthly Satellite.

Clouds marred the commencement of the eclipse of the moon last night, and for a time it looked as though it would be invisible during the period of greatest interest, but they gradually dissolved as the eclipse progressed, and in doing so lent some beautiful effects to the spectacle. When at its height the eclipse was seen in this city under perfect conditions, as far as the atmosphere was concerned. It was not total, though practically so to the eye of the ordinary observer. There was, however, at the period of greatest obscuration one glittering pinpoint of light remaining, and this speck, tiny though it was, destroyed whatever value the eclipse might otherwise have possessed from a scientific view point.

Astronomical calculations showed that the eclipse would begin at 6:42, reach its greatest degree of obscuration at 8:26, and end at 10:07, and that the exact surface immersed in shadow would be 996-1,000 of the whole.

As the eclipse came on the outline of the moon could hardly be distinguished, but presently it was seen that something out of the ordinary was happening. Before a quarter of the surface was darkened, however, the clouds grew a little thinner, and then it was seen that the shadow was creeping over the moon from north to south.

At this stage an iridescent ring of grand proportions formed itself in the sky about the fading luminary. At first it was broken by several banks of heavy black clouds, but these speedily broke into small fleecy masses, which sailed slowly across the space within the halo. The ring lasted but a few minutes, and after it faded several small meteors trailed across the part of the sky where it had been. The passing clouds gave the effect of a heavy penumbra.

At last the satellite, save for the microscopic point, hung in the sky a dull ball, lit only by the feeble reflected reddish light, and the familiar features on its surface seemed as though coarsley sketched in with charcoal. Then the point of light seemed to slowly drop to the lowest part of the ball, and then grew as the shadow receded upward until the moon again resumed her full sway.

Although it was too chilly to stand still long, passers-by generally made a brief halt at avenue corners to gaze at the spectacle, and cab drivers up town were often seen, in turning away from the view, to take a quick glance back at it, at peril of collision with some other vehicle or pedestrian.

Prof. Harold Jacoby, adjunct Professor of Astronomy at Columbia College, said that no official observations were being made of the eclipse. "The only value of a lunar eclipse to astronomers," he said, "lies in the occultation of stars by the darkened disk. The time is noted when the star disappears behind the moon and when it comes into view again.

"From these data it is possible to determine the moon's apparent diameter, but if the eclipse is not total it is very difficult to notice the exact time of the occultation. There have been several occasions when the occultation of the Pleiades has been effected by the moon while totally eclipsed."

This was the second eclipse of the moon during the year now passing. The other, on the night of June 23-24, was total, but was not visible to this part of the world.

Viewed by Naval Astronomers.

WASHINGTON, Dec 16.—The eclipse of the moon was viewed at the Naval Observatory to-night. While almost total, there was enough light left to interfere with the accomplishment of any satisfactory scientific results. The naval scientists, however, made observations of the occultations of about twenty of the faint stars that lay in the lunar path and the results will be compared with those of similar observations made in other parts of the world.

Stars Observed at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 16.—The eclipse of the moon was observed here to-night by Profs. Charles Young and Taylor Reed, and several photographs of it were taken by Assistant Professor H. N. Russell. Prof. Reed located four stars near the moon which are visible only when the moon is eclipsed. Prof. Young said that as it was not a total eclipse it was not of especial scientific importance.

Observations at Yale University.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 16.—During the eclipse of the moon to-night Dr. Chase of Yale University took a few photographs, and because of the clear weather which prevailed, it is thought that they will develop into excellent pictures. The professor also used the heliometer to measure the diameter of the moon and its distance from the earth and other planets.

Photographed at Smith Observatory.

GENEVA, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Dr. William R. Brooks, director of Smith Observatory, made observations of the eclipse of the moon to-night. The sky was perfectly clear, and the results were satisfactory. Many photographs were taken by Dr. Brooks.

COL. JOHN F. GAYNOR MARRIES.

Ceremony Follows the Granting of a Divorce to His First Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16.—Col. John F. Gaynor of New York and Annie L. Pitney of Washington were married here to-day by the Rev. W. T. May, at the parsonage of the Reformed Episcopal Church. Col. Gaynor applied in person at the Court of Common Pleas for the marriage certificate. The bride's mother and sister accompanied him to the Court Clerk's office and also witnessed the marriage ceremony. The entire party then left for Washington.

The domestic affairs of Col. Gaynor have been discussed for months. Although he married Miss Carrie B. Gifford of New York in 1890, he, it appears, took another wife on June 10 of this year, the bride then being known as Miss Annie L. Pitney of Rockville, Md., stenographer at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington. With her Col. Gaynor went to Europe. Wife No. 1 entered proceedings for divorce when the Colonel and Wife No. 2 returned from Europe last September. A decree of divorce was granted this week in New York, awarding to Mrs. Gaynor No. 1 $10,000 in cash and $150 a month alimony, and to-day's ceremony followed.

TO FREE AN ARMY MASCOT.

He Belonged to the Eighth Illinois, but Fell Into Bad Ways.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Lucy L. Flower and the officers of the Children's Home and Aid Society are endeavoring to secure the release of Cecil Benjamin from the John Worthy School at the Bridewell. Cecil is a colored lad of twelve, who was adopted as a mascot by the Eighth Illinois Volunteers. He was born in Panama, and he ran away from home when eight years old and arrived at Santiago as a stowaway. He was there all through the bombardment and battles, and witnessed Shafter's entrance into the city.

When the Eighth Illinois arrived to take the place of the First Illinois the negro regiment adopted the boy and he came to Chicago when the soldiers returned. Here he was abandoned and fell into bad ways. He was arrested for stealing a watch and sent to the Bridewell. The story of his life was told to the ladies, who took up his case.

Anniversary of Whittier's Birth.

AMESBURY, Mass., Dec. 16.—The anniversary of the birth of the poet Whittier was celebrated in this city to-day, under the direction of the Whittier Home Association. The principal address was by Robert A. Rantoull, President of the Essex Institute, Salem, on "The Political Life of Whittier." Letters of regret were read from Senator Hoar and the Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler of Brooklyn, N. Y.

TWO MOTORMEN FATALLY HURT

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Two trolley cars came together while running on a single track on Nepperhan Avenue at 10:45 o'clock last night. Both cars were going at top speed and they met with terrific force. The motorman on each car was fatally injured.

Car No. 13 was bound south and car No. 41 was bound north. John Flood was in charge of No. 13, and John Maidock was the motorman on No. 41. Flood's car was behind time, and should have been on a siding, out of the way of No. 41. Flood was trying to make up his lost time and reach the side switch but car No. 41 had already passed the siding.

When the cars came together both were thrown from the track. Flood and Haidock were wedged in between the cars, and when removed were unconscious. Both of Flood's legs were cut off at the knees, and he was cut and bruised about the head and body. Haidock was crushed and injured internally. The men were removed to St. John's Hospital.

HOLD-UP IN A DRUG STORE.

Thief in Yonkers Gets Away with the Till, but Is Captured.

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 16.—At 6 o'clock this evening a footpad walked into the drug store of George B. Wray, on Elm Street, and suddenly jumping behind a counter, struck Charles Daub, the clerk, a terrific blow on the head, knocking him down. The man then seized the till and started for the door. Daub shouted for assistance, and Dr. F. Werner ran from a rear room into the store. He was confronted by the stranger, who leveled a revolver at him, and threatened to shoot if he came nearer. Then the thief backed out of the door and ran down Elm Street.

Dr. Werner and Terrance McGuire gave chase, and after running three blocks McGuire captured the thief. Policeman James then came up and took charge of the prisoner. He was taken to Police Headquarters, where he gave his name as John Mason and said he lives at 387 Third Avenue, New York City. A revolver and the money he had stolen from the drug store were found on him.

"BILLY" WIGHTMAN BANKRUPT.

Former "King of the Gamblers" Files a Petition in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—William T. Wightman, once the "King of the Gamblers" here, filed a bankruptcy petition to-day with liabilities of $14,000 and $50 assets. In the "wide open" days he ran several gambling houses and owend several strings of horses with George V. and "Al" Hankins. He was worth $250,000 once.

"'Billy' Wightman has been pretty quiet of late years," said a man once prominent in gambling circles, as he read the notice of the bankruptcy petition to-day. "He never got over the throw-down the administration gave him. It was a bad throw-down, too, but what could Wightman do about it? He wasn't much of a kicker.

"Frank O'Brien, who died two years ago, got the same treatment, and got so hot he threatened to kill the Mayor on sight. But Wightman was not looking for trouble. He simply sighed, accepted the deal, and sank under the waves. I don't think he will ever do much again, either in the gambling business or around the races."

ELMIRA SCHOOLS ABANDONED.

The Reformatory Is Forced to Give Up Three Departments.

Special to The New York Times.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Three departments of the New York State Reformatory have been abandoned by the Board of Managers, who have been in session here for the past two days. Prof. R. Charles Bates, the head of the manual training department, is retired by this action, as are his two assistants. Bates was drawing a salary of $1,500 a year and allowances. The photo engraving and cooking schools are also closed and inmates from these departments will be transferred to the trades schools.

President Sturgis of the board said to-night that this action was made necessary by the decreased appropriation this year. It is $15,000 short of last year.

The manual training department was one of the prides of the institution, and was held up as a model in this line of work all over the world.

Prof. Bates was Brockway's right-hand man and confidential adviser, and was Brockway's choice as his successor. The abandonment of the department has occasioned much surprise here.

NEWARK FIRM SELLS OUT.

Casper Soer Gives Up Furniture Business and Leaves the City.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 16.—Casper Soer, who conducted a furniture store at 200 Market Street under the name of J. C. Sayre & Co., closed his door last Wednesday and has not been seen since. Until two weeks ago John Kurz had an interest in the business, but he withdrew, taking about $600 worth of book accounts as his share.

The men started the firm in August. They secured a large amount of goods on credit and surprised their business rivals by their low prices. The old dealers could not understand how a young firm with little cash capital could afford to sell goods so cheap, and also sell on the credit plan.

Before going away Soer sold to the Newark Auction and Storage Company the furniture, stoves, and other goods in the store for cash. It is said he told a friend he got $1,500 for his stock, which furniture dealers consider was worth $5,000 to $6,000.

Jacob L. Newman, the lawyer who drew up the papers dissolving the partnership, said to-day that Soer told him the business did not pay, and that he was going to sell out. "I believe he is out of the State," said Mr. Newman, "for he said something about having to go and stay until he could begin bankruptcy proceedings. The company got about $5,000 worth of goods on credit."

Seeks Games for Western Collegians.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Dr. Hollister, Athletic Director of the Northwestern University, will go East soon to arrange baseball games for the purple team this Spring. It is probable that contests will be scheduled with Pennsylvania, Lehigh, Brown, and Williams. The doctor did his undergraduate work at Williams, and then took his medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania. At both colleges he was prominent in athletics, and during his last year at Pennsylvania he was Captain of the baseball team. This it is thought will make it easy for him to arrange games with the Eastern teams.

Policeman's Fatal Fall from a Car.

Melborn Bruce, an officer attached to the Seventy-seventh Precinct, Newtown, Queens, died in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, yesterday from a fracture of the skull. Bruce was forty-three years old and was married. While returning home from duty yesterday morning he attempted to get off the front platform of a trolley car at Grand Street and Maiden Lane, Newtown. He fell, striking on his head. He leaves a wife and several children.

A Chinese Swindler.

The rector of a well-known Episcopal Church reports to the Charity Organization Society the following instance of fraud: A Chinaman in native costume tells a pitiable story of being unfortunately found in this city with money all gone, a twenty-dollar bill having been drawn out of his pocket with his handkerchief, and needing some three dollars and a half to enable him to go to Philadelphia, promising faithfully to send it back as soon as he lands in that city. He trades on the fact that he is a Chinaman and that no Chinaman ever cheated.

Death Follows Assault by Robbers.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Peter Sharkey, a resident of Keene, N. H., died in this city to-day as the result of injuries received early Thursday morning, when an attempt was made to rob him. He was internally injured and received bruises about the head and shoulders. A reward of $250 has been offered by the District Attorney of Warren County for the arrest and conviction of the parties concerned in the murder.

Ex-President Cleveland Ill.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 16.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland is confined to his house with an attack of rheumatism. Dr. J. H. Wickoff, his physician, said that the attack is slight, and that Mr. Cleveland will in all probability soon be in his usual health again.

FOREIGN CYCLISTS FALL

Three Champions Defeated in the Garden by American Rivals.

TAYLORE FAR BEHIND ELKES

Ross Wins from Duer—Kramer, Martin, Eaton, and Ireland Victors.

Continental bicycle racing stock experienced an awful slump last night at Madison Square Garden, when in the presence of 2,000 persons three foreign champions went down before the superior prowess of American bicycle cracks.

The home talent began eradicating the foreigners from the lists in the afternoon. Giovanni Tommaselli, champion of Europe, of which much had been expected, did not reach the semi-final stage in either of the two races in which he was entered. Meyers, champion of England and Holland, got second place in the one-mile professional, but was nowhere among the winners of the handicap event of the same distance.

The crowning American triumph and the corresponding European disaster occurred when in the one-hour paced event Harry Elkes outdistanced Edouard Taylore by more than two and a half miles. As in the contest with Albert Champion, Elkes's last foreign victim, Taylore had some ill-luck, but the American's superiority was so manifest throughout that the galling nature of the Frenchman's defeat was unmitigated.

The Harlem Wheelmen are rejoicing over the honors carried off by their representatives, Frank L. Kramer and J. H. Lake. Kramer won first places in the half-mile amateur and the mile handicap, while Lake got second and third in these events, respectively.

When the motor-pacing machines began to warm up for the one-hour contest between Elkes and Taylore the excitement of the crowd reached its highest point.

It was almost 10 o'clock when Elkes, in pink, and Taylore, in red and white, took their places on opposite sides of the track. The pacers were already at work circling the track. Just before they reached their respective rivals the pistol cracked. Elkes caught his pacer first, while a lap was finished before Taylore had put himself in the shelter of his machine. During the first two miles Elkes passed Taylore. The Frenchman spurted and caught Elkes, who, as the Continental trio went by, dropped his American friends and took up with the European crowd until his own machine caught him, and then he showed his back to the foreigners.

Elkes then settled into the habit of lapping Taylore nearly every mile. Taylore changed pacers and lost ground while doing so. The second machine was so slow that he was soon obliged to abandon it and started on alone. This occurred in the fifteenth mile, when Elkes was one and one-tenth miles ahead. When the latter saw Elkes was alone he abandoned his own pacing machine and went it alone. The crowd applauded this sportsmanlike act. Elkes, however, took up his machine again as soon as he learned that Taylore's was getting ready. The time at the fifteenth mile was 28:57 2-5, and at the thirty-first mile 59:34 2-5. At the finish Elkes was two miles and seven laps ahead of his opponent.

DEFEAT FOR BUFFALO CRACK.

The most interesting performance of the afternoon was the fifteen-mile amateur paced race, in which Arthur W. Ross of Harrison, N. J., defeated Ray Duer of Buffalo, by more than half a mile. Ross holds the amateur paced mile record, and is ambitious for European honors. Duer holds the amateur one-hour record, and his friends were pretty confident over the result of yesterday's race. In the first two miles Duer gained a half of a lap on Ross, but he could not maintain the lead. Ross hung to his pacer as if he were attached to it, and in the fifth mile he had not only covered up the gap, but gained a half of a lap on the Buffalo boy. In the sixth mile Duer lost his pacer for a short distance, and did so several times during the race. In the last two-thirds of the race Ross steadily lapped his opponent on an average of every two miles. At the end Ross was six and three-quarters laps ahead.

The time was 28:34 2-5, which is very fast time for an indoor track, and comes very close to Michael's outdoor record for that distance. The first mile was ridden in 1:58 4-5. The fastest mile was the fifth, which was ridden in 1:50 3-5, and the slowest was the fourteenth, 2:06 1-5. At the end of five miles the time was 9:26 3-5; at the end of ten, 18:57 3-5.

The afternoon was devoted mainly to trial heats of events which were finished in the evening. This wise change the management was led to make through their experience on a recent occasion, when it was found impossible to finish all of the events in one evening. The arrangement also heightened the interest of the evening programme, inasmuch as the tiresome trial heats were avoided and only the cream of the races presented to the much larger crowd of the evening.

The other event which was finished in the afternoon was the half-mile novice, which was won by K. H. Martin of New York in the slow time of 1:06 4-5.

In the trial heats for the international half mile professional, open, event, Banker broke his chain, and although he was again listed for the fourth heat with Tommaselli, he did not appear, and lost his place in the finals. In his heat Tommaselli acted as if he had things all his own way with A. B. Stone of Denver. The champion loafed for a lap or two, when suddenly Stone jumped into the inside and to the chagrin of the Italian kept it and finished first.

The only Continental champion who won a place in the finals of this event was Henri Meyers, champion of England and Holland, who won his heat very prettily.

The Italian champion reappeared in the Tommaselli one-mile professional handicap as scratch man. He soon caught the bunch, with "Bob" Walthour, the Southern champion, close behind him. Then he rested, and when the bunch sprinted the Italian was still apparently resting, for he came in fourth and lost a place in the semi-final. R. S. Ireland, a six-day starter, won, with G. V. Babcock and "Bob" Walthour following. In the second heat of this event Meyers got third place only after a lively tilt with W. A. Rutz of New Haven. In the third heat "Al." Newhouse and Banker appeared, but failed to gain places in the semi-finals.

HALF MILE INDOOR RACE.

In the final of the half-mile indoor championship J. B. Jacobson set a hard pace and led until the last lap, when Frank L. Cramer, the American amateur champion, passed him by a brilliant spurt. J. H. Lake of the Harlem Wheelmen, got the second place by less than a foot. Cramer's time was 1:05.

The one-half-mile international was one of the best short races of the evening. In the second lap Jay B. Eaton, "The Indoor King" took the lead and won in 1:04 2-5, but only after Henri Meyers of Holland had set before him one of the hardest propositions of his racing life. Meyers, with the disadvantage of the outside, pushed Eaton hard for a couple of laps and almost got the pole, but the champion of Holland and England had to content himself with second place. A. B. Stone, of Denver, Col., got third.

In the semi-finals of the Tommaselli mile handicap Meyers was heartily applauded for the whole-souled manner in which he dug his way from scratch through a crowd of favored men to the first place and then held it until safely by the tape.

In the final of the Collett mile handicap the scratch men, Kramer and Collett, caught the bunch during the first lap and held third and fourth places, respectively, until the next to the last lap, when Kramer slipped by the leaders and won out. Collett couldn't catch him because J. H. Lake was in the way. But gradually the New Haven crack, who was playing the title rôle, forged ahead and got second place by a neck.

Tommaselli was not in the finals of the mile handicap race that bore his name. Henri Meyers was, but he wasn't in at the finish. He was the only scratch man in a field where the limit was 120 yards, and the least favored had a start of 75 yards.

R. S. Ireland, a starter in the recent six-day bicycle race, with a handicap of 75 yards, won, in 2:07 1-5.

The international pursuit race, unlimited, was limited to one and a quarter miles, with apparent ease by the American team, Louis Gimm and Oscar Aronson. The race had not been long in progress before it was seen that Jean Fischer and Pierre Chevalier of France were being steadily caught.

SUMMARIES.

EX-GOLF CHAMPION BEATEN.

Davis Defeats Douglas in Open Tourney at Atlantic City—Other Prize Winners.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 16.—The open golf tournament of the Country Club of Atlantic City was concluded to-day on the Northfield links with some very interesting playing. The programme consisted of the final rounds for all four cups, and an eighteen-hole handicap and a foursome for members of the same clubs. W. H. Davis, Lakewood Golf Club, won the Atlantic City Cup by defeating Findlay S. Douglas of the Fairfield County Golf Club, ex-amateur champion, 3 up and 2 to play.

F. P. Keating won the consolation cup, defeating J. Haines Lippincott in finals by 5 up and 4 to play.

SECRETARY ROOT ON CANTEENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer is not sufficiently schooled or interested in what is called the art of war to attempt a general criticism of what you consider the excellent report of Secretary Root. But there is one part of this report which seems to have received very queer treatment at the hands of a "vigorous and trained mind," unless the sign of vigor and training is the ability to obscure the real situation touching the question under discussion. I refer to the Secretary's treatment of the army canteen law. As many will remember, the seventeenth section of the Army Reorganization bill, passed Feb. 27 last, is as follows:

"That no officer or private soldier shall be detailed to sell intoxicating drinks as a bartender or otherwise in any post, exchange, or canteen, nor shall any other person be required or allowed to sell such liquor in any encampment or fort, or on any premises used for military purposes by the United States, and the Secretary of War is hereby directed to issue such general order as may be necessary to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect."

It is probably not an exaggeration to say that nearly every man who voted for this measure, those who secured the incorporation of the section in the bill, and the thousands of citizens who petitioned Congress for such a measure believed that the seventeenth section quoted prohibited the sale of all intoxicating liquors by anybody at post exchanges or army canteens. But an opinion was rendered by Attorney General Griggs regarding the canteen section of the bill, to the effect that by its provisions the sale of liquor was not prohibited as supposed, and the sale was continued in spite of the letter and spirit of the statute.

In the report of Secretary Root, as published in THE TIMES of Saturday, the law is referred to as having been passed in accordance with "popular clamor," and the Secretary tells us that the opinion of certain army officers was sought, and they declared that the sale of liquor in the canteen "promoted the temperance, discipline, morals, and health of the enlisted men," and therefore such sale was continued.

The matter at issue for the Secretary to clear up was not the use of liquor by soldiers, or its sale in the canteen, but the nullification of a law of Congress by the War Department, on the unsupported opinion of the Attorney General. An opinion, by the way, which has been condemned by many of the best lawyers in the country.

What the people want to know is, with due regard to the preservation of our liberties, and the inviolability of each co-ordinate branch of the Government, what right the War Department had to fail in the execution of a statute which the lawmaking body had enacted. Conduct of that sort, in the estimation of many patriotic citizens, seems to be the establishment of a precedent fraught with danger.

It should be remembered that however easy it is to refer to "popular clamor" in contemptuous terms, such clamor is the thing which must inspire law making where free government exists. When it comes to the anti-canteen law, it is safe to say that few, if any, enactments of the Fifty-fifth Congress had behind them the authority of so many autograph signatures of citizens, in the shape of petitions, as the anti-canteen law. To trifle with and nullify a statute thus demanded, is a grave matter, and it is not helped by the plea on the part of the nullifiers that they know better than the people what is the proper thing to do. There is infinitely less danger to free government in hasty and ill-considered legislation in obedience to "popular clamor," than in the nullification of such legislation by any department of the Executive branch of the Government.

Had the War Department collected the opinion of army officers, as a basis, and with that testimony, however prejudiced many would have felt it to be, recommended the repeal of the anti-canteen section of the Army bill, it would have followed a safe, constitutional, and sound mode of procedure. But as it stands now, the War Department, and the whole Administration, is open to a charge of wilful nullification of law, on an unwarranted pretext, and for the satisfaction and benefit of the liquor interest. HENRY W. WILBUR.

HELD UP IN HIS STORE.

Facing a Revolver Max Metzger Unhesitatingly Surrenders Money to a Robber.

Max Metzger, a druggist at Liberty and Railroad Avenues, Brooklyn, was held up at the point of a revolver last night and robbed of over $20 and a silver watch. The druggist was in his store alone about 10 o'clock when a man entered with one hand in a bandage. Mr. Metzger stepped forward to wait upon him and found himself facing a revolver.

"Now give up what you got in the cash drawer and in your clothes and be quick," said the robber, and the druggist unhesitatingly handed him $20 from his cash drawer, his watch, and what money he had in his pockets.

The man then backed out of the store, still covering the druggist with his revolver, and when he reached the street disappeared. The druggist reported the robbery immediately to the Liberty Avenue Police Station, but the man was not caught up to a late hour. He was short of stature, about twenty-two years of age, and wore a black overcoat and black derby hat. One of his hands was bandaged.

WEAVERS THREATEN TO STRIKE.

Fall River Operatives Claim Advance Was Not Made.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 16.—Weavers employed in the Parker Mill claim that the 10 per cent. advance has not been allowed them. It is claimed that the posted prices show an advance of less than 5 per cent. on some classes of goods, and if the pay envelopes of this class of help do not show the full advance next week, the operatives threaten a strike.

Superintendent Cook of the Kerr Thread Mills of this city, a branch factory of the American Thread Trust, arrived home to-day from a visit to the officials of the trust in New Jersey, where he went to confer regarding the wage situation here. The trust has decided not to grant an advance to its 600 employes here at the present time, but promises to do so when trade conditions warrant it.

Woolen Mills Grant an Advance.

NORTH BRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 16.—The Riverdale Woolen Company will advance wages 10 per cent. Jan. 1. About 300 hands are employed and the works are running overtime.

WANTS HER OWN POST OFFICE.

Brooklyn Opposes a Consolidation and Accuses Senator Platt.

The bill by which it is proposed to consolidate the Brooklyn and Manhattan Post Offices has aroused vigorous opposition among the business men and citizens of the borough across the river. It is believed in Brooklyn that if the local postal service is controlled by the authorities in Manhattan, Brooklyn will suffer. It is alleged that a Manhattan man could not wholly understand the needs of Brooklyn, and that, unconsciously, perhaps, he would favor Manhattan in whatever improvement should be made in the general service.

There is already talk of a big petition to Congress protesting against the bill. The measure is quite generally regarded in the borough as a political move against Postmaster Wilson, and Senator Thomas C. Platt is alleged to be more or less responsible for it.

Assistant Postmaster Taylor had this to say about the matter yesterday:

"Without wishing to criticise the Manhattan office, it might be said that matters there now are in such a condition that they cannot well take care of the mail they have, let alone stand responsible for the mail of Brooklyn. Take politics out of the situation and reason from a business standpoint, and what would be the benefit derived?"

NO CIGARS IN BOSTON TO-DAY.

Police Told to Prevent Their Sale Except in Drug Stores.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—Chairman Clark of the Police Board lectured the Captains to-day on the sale of cigars on Sunday. He pointed out the law on the matter, which makes such sales illegal. This applies to all large hotels as well as restaurants and tobacco stores, although druggists can sell the cigars as "drugs."

Chairman Cark told the Captains that they would be held responsible for the enforcement of this law.

WATER FROM THE ADIRONDACKS

Joseph S. Wood Says the City Should Get Its Supply There.

The members of the City College Club last evening listened to a paper on "The Water Supply of New York," read by Joseph S. Wood, counsel to the Water Commissioners of Mount Vernon. Mr. Wood, when asked what he thought of the Ramapo scheme, treated the entire question with derision, and said that in view of the future water needs of the city the addition of the water from that watershed was not worth considering.

He advised following the example of the metropolitan water system of Massachusetts, only upon a much grander scale, that is getting the water from the Adirondacks watershed, which would supply not only the Greater New York, but also all the cities in the Hudson River Valley.

"It is a well-established fact," said Mr. Wood, "that the rainfall in this section runs from thirty to sixty inches per annum, an average of forty-five inches. About one-half of the rainfall can be impounded, so that in dry years, when the rainfall is not over thirty inches, we can store for the use of the public a supply of about 60,000 gallons per day for each square mile of the watershed. As the city has in its three sources of supply a watershed of 465 square miles it can in very dry years rely on no more than on an average daily supply of 200,000,000 gallons. As we are now using 265,000,000, an increase in the rate of consumption of 7½ per cent. per annum, it is evident that the time is not far distant when the three watersheds will be insufficient to supply the absolute wants of the city, even if every gallon of the water that flows therein were impounded.

"It is idle to delude ourselves with the idea that it is simply necessary to enlarge the dams in the Croton watershed or build new ones. We must seek for the water that New York requires from some other source. Lake George will not answer the purpose, because it has a watershed of only 340 square miles, and it is only 326 feet above tide water.

"The source from which New York City should get its water supply is to be found in the Adirondacks. There the watershed above Glens Falls covers an area of 4,000 square miles. Even at a level of 800 feet above tide water there are over 500 square miles in the Adirondacks watershed. The formation of the land is such that the whole territory is cut up into scores of large lakes that form natural reservoirs, and the State Engineer and Surveyor in his annual report shows that storage reservoirs at a level of 800 feet above tide water can be constructed therein and connected with each other that will hold 115,000,000,000 gallons, at a cost of $1,172,500.

"The storage capacity of the Croton water system is only 46,000,000 gallons at a level of 175 feet above tide water. If a water supply should be obtained from the Adirondacks at a level of 800 feet above tide water, not only would it be sufficient to supply every building in the city by gravity alone, but its purity would be beyond question."

Trolley Cars for Far Up-Town Line.

Electric cars will be running from the East River end of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street to Amsterdam Avenue, and north to One Hundred and Sixty-first Street on Thursday next, if the plans of the Third Avenue Railroad do not miscarry. Work will be pushed, as fast as possible, on that part of the line which extends from One Hundred and Sixty-first Street to One Hundred and Ninetieth Street.

THE CITY'S SHEEP FLOCK.

It Is a Benefit to Central Park as Well as a Curiosity and an Ornament.

"Why does New York City keep a flock of sheep in Central Park?" is a by no means unusual query that one who frequents the Park may hear, particularly if he is addicted to the habit of sitting on the benches near the South Meadow, where the sheep most frequently feed, or if he takes a ride about the drives in the carryals. "Are sheep such curiosities about here that they are shown like the wild animals in the menagerie?" asks the visitor from the country. They are not so far out of the way in this query, either, for as a matter of fact a very great percentage of the people who go to the Park for an outing or to use it as a breathing ground, have never seen a flock of sheep on the hillsides of country farms. They are therefore both a curiosity and a picturesque addition to the attractions of the Park. They also give to the youngsters who do not know of the usefulness of the collie dog an object lesson, for several of these faithful animals act as shepherds and herders for the sheep, and also keep away stray dogs who might otherwise be tempted to attempt a meal of mutton.

But the chief reason for the maintenance of the city's flock of sheep is their value as preservers of the turf. Every man who has had to do with raising a plot of turf about his home, his farm, or his country club, knows that this purpose can be better accomplished if he has to assist him a flock of sheep. These animals are clean feeders, and nibble down close to the roots of the grass, keeping it closer than can any lawn mower yet devised. This is desirable, as the strength of the growth goes into the roots and the creepers that shoot off from them, and so makes a close and tough surface. The droppings of the animals are the best possible fertilizer, making the growth of the grass both rank and rapid. So it will be seen that the sheep are kept in the Park alike as ornaments, curiosities, and as direct care-takers of the turf, in which respect they have no equal.

ARTIST AND BILLIARD PLAYER.

John A. Hendrick of New Haven, Conn., who has been doing some very pretty billiard playing in the amateur tournaments, is erratic. At times he makes shots that are almost marvelous, even to the experts, shots that show not only nicety in handling the cue, but a thorough knowledge of angles, which is after all the basis of good billiards. But he is uneven and unsteady in his play. At times it seems as if he could make the ivory balls answer to any of his whims, no matter how erratic these may be, and a few minutes later he will miss shots that would be easy for the veriest tyro to make. It is his temperament, say the critics who watch the play. Possibly temperament may be "it." But Hendrick is a man rather out of the ordinary, and had necessity compelled would have been what the New Englander calls a "Jack at all trades." He is, or could be, a very expert machinist, possibly an inventor of consequence if he would apply himself to it, as he is known in his home city as a sort of "mechanical genius." He was once an expert marksman with gun, rifle, or revolver, but that was not wholly to his taste, and he dropped it. He has a gift for literary work, his friends say. He says the manual labor in such work is so wearing that the intellectual pleasure and financial returns are no compensation for it. And so he does not affect that sort of thing. What he loves and what he devotes himself to aside from billiards is painting in a dilettante sort of fashion. An excellent draughtsman, with a good eye for color, he has done some clever work with the brush, and if he was asked his profession he might say he was an artist, because he has a studio. His art work is as erratic as his billiard playing, but the best things he has done are pictures of still life—the stiller the better. He made quite a hit a few years ago by painting pictures of greenbacks of the National bank issue. These were done with such fidelity that it was almost impossible to tell whether the framed bill was the genuine thing of a painting. Examination with a glass would alone make certain the truth. Three or four pictures of this sort made by Hendrick are now owned in this city.

WANT CHEAPER TYPEWRITERS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The Administration is about to make a systematic attempt to secure by combination a considerable reduction in the price of type-writing machines. The movement originated in the Navy Department, and Secretary Long has addressed a letter to the other members of the Cabinet inviting them to send their chief clerks to a conference with the object of combining their orders for the entire year in the effort to secure low prices for high-grade machines.

According to a rough estimate the United States Government calls for no less than 10,000 typewriters each year.

COLER'S FIGHT FOR TUNNELS.

Hearing To-morrow on the Proposed $2,000,000 Appropriation for East River Bridges.

The Committee on Bridges and Tunnels of the Board of Aldermen will give a public hearing to-morrow afternoon on the proposed ordinance to appropriate $1,000,000 for each of the two projected bridges over the East River. Controller Coler, who wants action on the bridges suspended until there can be a thorough investigation of the practicability of constructing a series of tunnels in lieu of the bridges, will present arguments in favor of the former, and the engineers of the Department of Bridges, who some time ago made adverse reports on the tunnel plan, at the request of the Mayor, will likely oppose the tunnels. The decisive vote by which the Aldermen on Friday refused to concur in the bond resolution, and submitted it to the Committee on Bridges and Tunnels, indicates that there is a disposition to study the question, and it was said yesterday that the resolution was in serious danger of defeat.

Controller Coler's advocacy of a tunnel between Whitehall Street, Manhattan, and Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, which would practically open up the densely populated parts of South Brooklyn to the benefits of the underground rapid transit system, has found many admirers, especially among the Brooklyn members of the board, and these, it was pointed out yesterday, can, with the assistance of the Republican and Citizens' Union members from this borough, prevent hasty action on the matter. If the passage of the bond resolutions can be deferred until after the present board goes out of office, the new board, in which there are sixteen Republicans, can defeat it, as the Democrats cannot control a sufficient number of votes to pass any resolution involving the expenditure of money. In such cases there must be forty-five affirmative votes to insure passage of a bond issue, and there is no mandatory provision which will, as has happened in several instances of late, force the members of the Municipal Assembly to concur with the Board of Estimate.

Mr. Coler is convinced that tunnels sufficient to carry all the present traffic and to provide for any contingency that may arise within the next twenty-five years can be built far more economically than the two projected bridges. He is not opposed to bridges particularly except in so far as they will not give so nearly adequate service as will tunnels, especially after the rapid transit tunnel is a reality. Another reason why he favors tunnels is because if it be shown that inter-borough communication can be established in that way great benefit will accrue to the city through more numerous and more favorable bids for the underground railways. He assumes that if prospective bidders can see that there is a possibility of making connections which will bring the hundreds of thousands of residents of the outlying boroughs directly into communication with the rapid transit line, the bids will undoubtedly be more favorable to the city.

It is by no means a certainty that the Controller has fired his last gun in favor of tunnels. In his communication to the Municipal Assembly on Friday he said that the interests of the "population of South Brooklyn were to be sacrificed for the benefit of a few real estate speculators in the Borough of Queens" by the carrying out of the plans for the proposed bridges. Information, it was said yesterday, has reached the Controller that certain Tammany Hall leaders have acquired property in the Borough of Queens which must be taken for the approaches to the Blackwell's Island Bridge. Mr. Coler, when asked about the matter, declined to talk, but it was declared he has data which will show that Tammany's interest in this particular bridge is not an outgrowth of its solicitude for the welfare of the people of the Borough of Queens.

PITTSBURG PRINTERS' STRIKE.

Newspaper Editorial Forces Assist in Operating Linotype Machines.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 16.—The striking printers on the daily papers called for a conference with the publishers at midnight. Nothing will result, however, as the publishers apparently have the better of the situation and do not feel like dealing with the union. The afternoon papers were on the street on time, an improvement on the morning papers. The editorial forces went to work on the linotype machines, so that only half a dozen were idle. The writing forces were consolidated under one editor in one office.

It is said to-night that many of the striking printers have returned to work, and The Post, Press, and Leader have as many men as they can accommodate. They are also exchanging matter. Quite a number of printers from surrounding towns applied for places to-day and country correspondents offered their aid.

STORE THIEVES AND DETECTIVE

Both Have Already Appeared in the Mass of Holiday Shoppers That Crowd the Big Shops.

Christmas shopping has set in earlier than ever this year, say the merchants, and a stroll about the shopping districts will readily verify the truth of their assertions. Shops have been overrun during the past week, and the strain of the unusual work has already begun to tell on the clerks who have to cater to the wants of the traders and sightseers.

Store "detectives" are in demand as a result of this lively crowding of the shops, and the agencies that furnish this sort of people have all they can do to meet the demand. Most of the men and women furnished are novices, and the experienced shopper can spot them much more easily than it would seem possible for the new detectives to spot would-be shoplifters. The feminine "spotters" seem the most self-conscious, and their attempts to appear to be the shoppers and sightseers they are not are sometimes most ludicrous. They fuss about the counters where they are stationed, and while apparently seeming to be on the lookout for bargains, can plainly be seen watching other women who are actually in search of bargains.

This espionage makes many women who are out to buy and not to steal nervous in the extreme, and the "floor walkers" and store Superintendents are overwhelmed with complaints from offended womankind who go to them with their assertions that they are being offensively watched and hampered in their attempts to do legitimate shopping. It takes a lot of diplomacy to smooth the ruffled feathers of these birds, who are rarely satisfied with the explanation that the detectives are not watching the particular complainant, but some one else who happens to be at the same counter or table, or with any other apology that happens to come to mind at the instant.

But in spite of these occasional complaints from offended customers and the danger of offending still others, the managers of the stores have to keep a big force of these detectives on their pay rolls, else they would certainly lose such a mass of stuff as materially to cut down the profits in these days of quick sales at a small margin of profit.

"Detectives are as necessary to us as are our sales girls," said the manager of one of the big apartment stores to a TIMES reporter, "and while we undoubtedly make enemies of some of the shoppers by their use, it is the only way that we can protect ourselves. The amount of petty peculation that goes on daily, and in which women who do not need to steal but who apparently cannot resist temptation are involved, would not be believed by people not in the trade. Our detectives, incompetent as many of them undoubtedly are, manage nearly every day to take from customers who have pilfered things enough to more than pay for their salaries. While some of them may be oversuspicious, they are impressed with the necessity of never making a mistake, and we have had but two instances thus far this season where complaints have been made that were not warranted.

"We arrest very few of these petty thieves, of course. It would not be policy to get a reputation for making arrests indiscriminately, else we should drive nervous and perfectly honest women from our store. We simply 'hold up' the people we catch, get the goods back, and then let the peculators go with a warning that they must never come back to our store, and there are mighty few that do not respect this warning. Where we make mistakes, of course we do the best thing that we can to mollify the parties suspected, who sometimes compel cash payments as a balm to injured feelings that cut a hole in a day's profits. Detectives who make a mistake of the sort that causes us such trouble are discharged at once, and their period of usefulness in this city is at an end.

"The whole question is one of the most annoying that a shopkeeper has to do with, but there seems no other remedy than to putselves in the hands of the detectives rather than to lose through shoppers who would pilfer."

IN TOMBS ON LARCENY CHARGE.

J. Percival Stewart and J. Wolf Brown of American Investors' Company.

J. Percival Stewart and J. Wolf Brown of the American Investors' Company, who were arrested Friday on indictments for larceny, were before the Court of General Sessions yesterday, and were committed to the Tombs on a bench warrant.

Brown was arrested Friday night in his well-appointed cottage at Bensonhurst, L. I., by Detective McConville. The detective interrupted him in a game of cards with several friends. Brown attempted to shut the door before McConville could enter the house, but the latter's boot was in the way. Then, at the point of a pistol, Brown surrendered.

SCHOOL LAW ATTACKED.

New Jersey Boards of Education Combine to Defeat Proposed Legislation Affecting Centralization.

Representatives from the various Boards of Education in Hudson County, N. J., met yesterday afternoon in Public School No. 4, Park Avenue and Sixth Street, Hoboken, to consider Senate Bill No. 197, which codifies and revises the school laws of the State and which, it is alleged, both infringes upon the dignity and powers of every Board of Education in the State and is hostile to the best interests of the schools and all the teachers.

The bill was framed by a special commission appointed by Gov. Voorhees. The bill was presented so late in the session of the Legislature that it could not be properly considered. The commission was therefore continued and will report at the coming session. The bill will be bitterly fought on the ground that it centralizes unlimited power in the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, authorizes him to remove teachers and members of Boards of Education without trial, requires a two-thirds vote of all members of a board to overrule him, entails great and unnecessary expense on taxpayers by the creation of a lot of new officers, and contains a number of bad, illegal, and ridiculous provisions. The Boards of Education of the State will meet on Tuesday at Trenton to discuss the bill and yesterday's action was taken to place before this meeting the various objections to the bill.

Commissioner of Public Instruction William S. Stuhr of Hoboken presided. He said the bill was a thoroughly bad and vicious measure. John J. Mulvaney of the Jersey City Board of Education said the bill was inimical to the best interests of the schools. Mayor Fagan of Hoboken said that he failed to see any good in the bill.

Commissioner Keresey offered a resolution opposing the bill, which was unanimously adopted. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the various Boards of Education throughout the State. On motion of Commissioner Mulvaney it was resolved to ask all the Boards of Education in the county to send delegates to a convention in the City Hall, Jersey City, on a date to be fixed by Chairman Stuhr, to take action against the bill. A committee of three was appointed to prepare and present a draft to that convention setting forth the objections to the bill.

One of the Commissioners said it was the same fight in New Jersey as in New York—centralization vs. decentralization.

QUEENS TEACHERS' DILEMMA.

Mandamus Proceedings Bring Out the Fact that There Are Not Sufficient Funds to Pay All.

A peculiar condition of affairs now confronts the teachers in the city schools in the Borough of Queens. If those in one school under mandamus proceedings collect their October salaries, teachers in some of the schools must go without, as there is not enough money to pay all the teachers. This condition was disclosed before Justice Garretson, in the Supreme Court, in Long Island City, when the application of the teachers of the high school in that city for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the city authorities to pay them came up for argument.

Ex-Corporation Counsel Walter J. Foster appeared for the teachers, and Assistant Corporation Counsel W. J. Carr, for the city. The order to show cause was against Mayor Van Wyck, Controller Coler, and Auditor Cook of the Department of Education. Counsel had agreed that Mayor Van Wyck was not a party to the action, and that he should be dropped.

After outlining the legal points involved Mr. Foster dwelt upon the failure to pay the teachers and stated that the pay rolls of all the schools for October exceeded the amount of cash on hand by about $3,000 and for that reason Auditor Cook had declined to pay them, except on an order of the Court.

Mr. Carr stated that the present trouble never would have arisen had the local School Board done its duty, and that the Auditor had been deceived by the statements of the members of the Queens School Board in whom he had trusted.

Justice Garretson said that he recognized that public educators are in too many cases but poorly rewarded for their labors, but he could not see how he was to act for the benefit of the relators in the proceeding and not pay the rest of the teachers in the borough. He stated that it was evident that some one was to blame, and that inattention or the failure to perform a duty was causing innocent persons to suffer.

Mr. Daly, representing the Superintendents and clerks of the School Board, stated to the Court that his clients had a prior claim to any money in the fund, and asked the Court to so rule. Justice Garretson declined to accept that interpretation of the law, and instructed the lawyer to prepare a case and submit it to the Court. All the papers were handed to the Justice, and he will render a decision in a day or so.

The statement made by Justice Garretson is taken to indicate that he will deny the teachers' application, and the only course that will then be open to them will be to bring individual suits against the city and collect their unpaid salaries by means of a judgment.

THE RAILWAYS OF JAPAN.

Year's Addition to the Mileage of Lines Open for Traffic Was 471.

The progress of railway work in Japan during the year ended March 31 last has been unusually great, according to the annual report of the Imperial Railway Bureau, lately published. The addition made to the mileage of the lines open for traffic was 471 miles and 30 chains, which is an increase of 30 miles over the record of the preceding year. The entire mileage of State and private lines at the end of the year was 3,420, of which 768 were State and 2,652 private lines. These, added to the lines under construction and those for which charters had been given, reached the figure of 5,810 miles. In 1895 the total mileage was 2,118, and in 1889 it was less than 1,000.

At the end of March, 1899, the number of railway companies incorporated under formal charters was 58, with a total capital of 238,775,000 yen, ($118,909,950)—paid up, 158,181,389 yen, ($78,774,332)—and a mileage of 3,737 miles, (open, 2,652 miles.) Besides these, 29 new companies were formed under provisional charters during the period, with a total capital of 43,535,000 yen, ($21,680,430,) and a mileage of 809. Of the companies under formal charters, those which were actually doing business numbered 42, the rest being engaged in the work of construction. Out of these 42 companies only 5 had more than 100 miles open for traffic.

The average cost of construction per mile on State and private lines was $30,879, as compared with $27,127 in 1897-8. The increase in the cost of construction is the result of the general rise in price of commodities and labor.

The total rolling stock in Japan at the end of the year comprised 1,103 locomotive engines, 3,811 passenger cars, and 14,088 freight cars. Compared with the corresponding date of the previous year, there was an increase of 209 locomotive engines, 911 passenger cars, and 2,663 freight cars. As to the ratio of the rolling stock to the open mileage, there were for every 100 miles thirty-two locomotive engines and 112 passenger and 413 freight cars. The traffic returns for the last fiscal year show that the total number of passengers carried on the State and private lines was 99,061,889, while the goods transported amounted to 9,916,126 tons, besides luggage and parcels which aggregated 36,705 tons.

The gross income on the State and private lines for the year is put at 31,700,676 yen ($15,786,937.) Against this income the working expenditure amounted to 17,765,544 yen, ($8,847,241.) so that there was an aggregate profit of 13,935,132 yen ($6,939,676.) Compared with the preceding year, there was an increase of 5,173,129 yen ($2,576,218) in income and 5,401,448 yen ($2,689,921) in expenditure, the result of which was a decrease of 228,319 yen ($113,703) in the profits.

MECHANICAL TOY NUISANCE.

Seals that "Swim" Under the Feet of Hurrying Passers-by on Sidewalk.

It seems probable to the casual pedestrian that the street vendors of mechanical toys who recklessly start them running between the feet of passers-by must rely for a considerable portion of their incomes upon the good nature or pity of citizens who inadvertently break their wares by stepping upon them. Their stock in trade has included tiny

IN THE BOWLING ALLEYS.

The two victories that the bowlers representing Merck & Co. scored in the Wholesale Drug Trade Association tournament yesterday, at Reid's alleys, gave them second place. Dodge & Olcott's team also improved its position by winning two games, while the National Lead Company team, by losing two games, dropped from second to fifth place. The Dodge & Olcott team made a splendid showing, rolling two scores of over 800. Scores:

GUARDSMEN IN RIFLE MATCHES.

Seventh Regiment Prone Class and Non-Experts' Contests.

Two rifle matches, the prone class and non-expert, were shot last night at the Seventh Regiment Armory ranges. Corp. A. E. Wells of Company E and Private W. H. Palmer, Jr., of Company G, succeeded in making scores of 68. Palmer won admission to the expert class last night by adding a rapid-fire score of 77 to the deliberate 68.

Five prizes were awarded in the prone class match, which differs from the class match only in that the prone score is shot first. Ties are decided by the best score made prone. Seven shots are fired prone at 500 yards and seven standing at 200 yards. The winners and scores of last night's match follow:

	200 Yards.	500 Yards.	Total.
Corp. A. E. Wells, Co. E	33	35	68
Veteran A. Stein, Co.	32	35	67
Sergt. A. Stevens, Co. F	31	35	66
Private W. N. Bavier, Co. C	30	35	65
Lieut. H. V. D. Black, Co. B	31	33	64

Other good scores were:

	200 Yards.	500 Yards.	Total.
W. H. Palmer, Jr., Co. G	32	35	67
Corp. C. J. Austin, Co. C	31	35	66
Sergt. R. M. Kalloch, N. C. S.	31	35	66
Corp. W. M. Phillips, Co. D	31	33	64

"The non-expert match is open only to those who have never made a score of 68 or better in any armory rifle club match or in a competition for the Abeel Trophy. Five prizes were awarded, as follows:

	200 Yards.	500 Yards.	Total.
Private W. H. Palmer, Jr., Co. G	34	34	68
Lieut. T. C. Wiswall, Co. F	33	32	65

COLUMBIA GOLFERS WIN.

Fairview Club Team Defeated at Bronxville by a Heavy Score.

A team of four Columbia golfers met a similar number yesterday from the Fairview Golf Club on the latter's links near Bronxville. The latter club is one of the younger organizations in the district above the river, and is just developing some good golf material. That still more developing is needed is seen from the fact that Columbia won by the high score of 34 strokes to 0. Samuel Nash, Jr., won a special prize for the best gross score, and J. A. Edwards, Captain of the Columbia team, made the second best record. Later in the day Nash made a new amateur record of 82 strokes for the course. It was:

Samuel Nash, Jr.:
Out ..... 5 6 4 4 6 4 5 4 5—43
In ..... 4 5 4 5 5 3 4 5 4—39—82

The score in the team match was:

GOSSIP OF THE TRAPS.

At a meeting of the Prospect Gun Club of Brooklyn, held a few days ago, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—William La Roche; Vice President—Joseph Fallert; Secretary—Charles E. Hill; Treasurer—W. E. Banks; Trustees—F. J. Ashfield, C. T. Dotter, and C. E. Snively.

Owing to the fact that the Emerald Gun Club will not hold its regular club shoot during the current month, it has decided to give an open all-day shoot on Dec. 19. All the events will be at live birds, and Louis H. Schortemeier, Vice President of the club, will conduct the affair. Many of the best wing shots in this vicinity have signified their intention of competing in the various events.

Reinstated by Amateur Athletic Union.

The Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union has reinstated Charles Patterson, Pastime Athletic Club; James J. Bresnan and J. J. Boyle of the New West Side Athletic Club. The latter two, basket ball players, were disqualified for playing when unregistered. The following athletes of the Fourth Separate Company of Yonkers, N. Y., who committed a similar offense, were also reinstated: Edward King, Jerry Lenihan, James Maiden, John A. Ryer, Charles Williams, and John McQuillan.

YALE'S ATHLETIC TEAMS.

Trainer "Al" Copeland to be Superseded by Murphy, Who Leaves Pennsylvania.

"Al" Copeland, who had charge of the training of the Yale track and field athletic teams last Spring, has been officially notified that the Yale Athletic Club has secured a new trainer. At the same time it is learned that "Mike" Murphy will resume his duties as trainer at Yale at the expiration of his contract with the University of Pennsylvania, next June. It is not definitely known who will train the Yale athletes for the Spring games, but as "Jim" Robinson handled the football team this Fall, it is not at all unlikely that he will do the work.

When Copeland assumed charge at New Haven last Spring he had practically to develop a new team, and, when this is considered, the team made a respectable showing in the intercollegiate championships. Robinson, therefore, will have some seasoned athletes to train.

There are several reasons offered for Murphy's departure from the University of Pennsylvania. One reason is said to be Woodruff's intention to assume full charge of the training of the men and the coaching of the football squad. One other reason given is that Murphy wants to make a change because after this year there is no chance of developing a champion athletic team, as this is the last year at college for Tewkesbury, Kraenglein, Grant, and McCracken, who practically won the championship for the University of Pennsylvania. At Yale there is excellent material now for a first-class team, and Murphy is anxious to take charge and be able to maintain his reputation as a trainer of championship teams.

MAY BUY FOUR LEAGUE CLUBS.

Baseball Men's Committee to Get Prices—A New Alliance.

The National League baseball magnates adjourned yesterday, after a session lasting five days, without settling the matter of a shorter circuit, further than to appoint a committee, consisting of John T. Brush, James Hart, Col. John I. Rogers, and A. H. Soden to ascertain what the Washington, Baltimore, Louisville, and Cleveland Clubs can be purchased for, and report to the League at a special meeting to be called probably in January.

The committee is authorized to arrange details, subject to the approval or disapproval of the League. There appears to be no doubt that a majority of the owners want an eight-club league next season if the four clubs which are not paying can be bought out at a reasonable figure. Washington, Cleveland, and Louisville can be purchased, it is said, but there is much doubt expressed about Baltimore.

The meeting was productive of dissatisfaction in many quarters. Old cliques and combinations were broken and new ones formed. One of the surprising developments was the breaking away of John T. Brush from his old friends and his alliance with the forces of Andrew Freedman, the New York magnate. From the acknowledged leader in baseball politics Mr. Brush has now become the lieutenant of Mr. Freedman.

A further attempt to placate Mr. Freedman was tried at yesterday's session when Col. Rogers offered a resolution remitting the fine imposed on the New York Club in the "Ducky" Holmes case. Col. Rogers was persuaded to withdraw his motion. When President Young gave out the news of the meeting the fact that such a motion had been made was not told.

The schedule and umpire questions were laid over until after the report of the special committee is made to the league. Mr. Hart wants a schedule calling for 132 games for each club in case the twelve-club circuit is maintained, and one calling for 140 games in case of an eight-club league next year.

Sterling Pianos.

A Sensible Question Answered.

The question which many people are asking is: Which is the best piano to buy? There is a score of reliable makes and hundreds of unreliable makes. How can I tell the Reliable From the Unreliable?

Look up the record of the old established and popular manufacturers and then examine their pianos. Test them thoroughly. Listen to sensible arguments. Ignore those who slander and belittle the kinds that you know to be reliable. Avoid those who resort to tricky and unbusinesslike methods in selling.

Don't Think

that because one employs prominent artists to use unknown pianos in concerts it is necessarily the choice of the artist. It's business. Free concerts don't make good pianos. Those who have good pianos do not have to resort to such methods to sell them.

Investigate the Sterling.

Compare it with the best pianos made and you will quickly decide which piano to buy.

During our 40 years' experience we have made and sold more than 123,000 Sterling instruments, and we honestly believe that not a single purchaser of a Sterling Piano has reason to regret their choice, for STERLINGS satisfy the most critical.

"There are 6,500 STERLINGS in Brooklyn homes."

SPECIAL.

Some Odd Pianos at Reduced Prices.

9 SPECIAL STERLINGS direct from the factory, at reduced prices. They are perfect in every way and encased in highly polished Italian Walnut and San Domingo Mahogany.

5 STERLING UPRIGHT GRANDS. Special styles which have been on exhibition for the past two months at the Export Exposition in Philadelphia. They are beautiful specimens of the piano maker's art. Some are beautifully trimmed with satin finish brass candelabras, handles, etc. Others are richly carved. All are slightly damaged from handling, so slight that they could easily be sold for new. The price is $300.00 instead of $450.00 and $500.00.

Second Hand Uprights of various makes, which have come to us in exchange for STERLINGS.

All have been put in perfect repair and newly finished. Every Piano in this lot will be guaranteed for 5 years.

2 very good Uprights	$140	2 medium quality	$110
7 extra good Uprights	$160	7 good Square Pianos	$40
2 Very fine Uprights	$185	12 very fine Squares	$50 to $85
3 medium quality	$125	9 Parlor Organs	$25 to $45

THRESHIE, BILLIARD CHAMPION.

Won the Title in the Class B Amateur Tournament.

Charles Threshie, champion of the Boston Athletic Club, won first prize and the championship of Class B in the amateur billiard tournament held under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union, by defeating J. De Mun Smith of St. Louis last night in the theatre of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Threshie did some marvelous playing during the middle stages of the game, making a series of brilliant runs. Smith was the favorite. A pretty run of 50, the highest break made by Threshie, was a feature of the contest. Smith did not strike his gait until the twenty-second inning, when he made a run of 68 by clever nursing and position play. Threshie's play then fell off, while Smith's improved, and with two fair runs of 24 and 21 brought his score up to 181. Threshie finished the game with a run of four in the twenty-ninth inning, equaling the average of 10 10-29 made by Stark in the tournament last year. The score:

Threshie—5 0 7 11 2 21 15 9 15 23 50 25 2 12 0 24 6 32 1 13 1 0 2 15 3 1 1 0 4. Total, 300. Average, 10 10-29. High runs, 50, 25, and 32.

Smith—3 4 2 0 1 12 0 0 0 0 2 5 1 1 0 7 10 0 9 0 11 0 8 3 24 1 1 21 1. Total, 181. Average, 6 13-28. High runs, 68, 24, and 21.

Referee—Dr. A. B. Miller, K. A. C.

The following is the final standing of the contestants in the tournament:

	W.	L.	H. R.	B. A.	G. A.
Threshie	5	0	74	10.34	7.65
Smith	4	1	72	11.11	6.19
Kellogg	3	2	49	7.50	5.58
Hendrick	2	3	52	6.81	4.98
Cutler	1	4	74	6.31	5.42
Kevner	0	5	36	4.12	3.67

Smith gets second prize and Kellogg third. The special medal offered for the best run of the tournament will be duplicated by the club, Threshie and Cutler each receiving one, both having a run of 74 to their credit. The prizes were presented at the clubhouse last night, immediately after the final game, by Dr. A. L. Ranney, Secretary of the A. A. U. Billiard Committee.

The South's Opportunity.

From The Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal.

The one great hope of the Southern people, particularly the people of the cotton States, lies through the open door to the Pacific. All that hastens our short-cut to the Pacific—all that tends to augment the activities of he Pacific—shortens our journey toward the grandeur and the glory of the past. The fact is so conclusive that he who shuts his eyes to it, who sets his face against it, from Richmond in Virginia to Austin in Texas—all around the magic circle of the Gulf of Mexico—will go to his political death.

In Memory of Confgderates.

A general order issued by Gen. John B. Gordon, as Commander of the United Confederate Veterans, says: "As the grand old commonwealth of Kentucky gave Mr. Jefferson Davis to the Confederacy, he having seen the light of day on the 3d day of June, 1808, at the spot where the Baptist church of Fairview is now located, in what was formerly Christian, now in Todd County, Ky., and as Sunday, June 3, 1900, will be the ninety-second anniversary of his birth, that day will be specially set apart for religious and memorial services

PLATT AND THE PRESIDENT.

Declares Mr. McKinley Has No Choice for Vice President—Woodruff Makes an Impression.

Senator Platt had nothing to say last night about State or local matters. Concerning the Vice Presidential nomination, he said:

"I have talked with President McKinley about the Vice Presidency, but he has not expressed a preference for any candidate. Lieut. Gov. Woodruff made a favorable impression in Washington, and a good many people are talking of Secretary of War Root, but it is too early yet for the organization in New York to make any choice."

Mr. Woodruff was at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night, and remained in conversation with Chairman Odell for a long time. He would not say anything about the Vice Presidency or discuss the chances of his nomination. His friends are extremely active in his behalf, and are working hard to accomplish the end which they have started out to attain.

MR. PLATT AND MR. PAYN.

Senator's Attitude in the Insurance Superintendent's Fight for Office Still Undisclosed.

Louis F. Payn, State Superintendent of Insurance, called at Republican State Headquarters last night and had a long talk with Chairman B. B. Odell, Jr. At the close of the talk both denied that their conference had anything to do with the question of a successor to Mr. Payn as head of the Insurance Department.

Republicans who are in the confidence of the organization leaders say that Payn is preparing for a hard fight to retain his present position. In the event of an open fight between Gov. Roosevelt and Mr. Payn during the coming session of the Legislature it is not known what course Senator Platt would adopt. Chairman Odell and Mr. Payn are personally friendly, but those who closely follow Republican politics express the opinion that the organization would not risk the results of an open break with the Governor on the eve of a Presidential and Gubernatorial campaign.

Mr. Payn himself could not be induced to say anything last night about his plans. "I will not say a single word," was his answer to all requests for an interview. Since last Wednesday his friends have been saying that he "talked too much" in the interview which he gave to reporters in which he arraigned Gov. Roosevelt. Yesterday Senator Platt said he had received a telegram from Mr. Payn, in which the latter declared that "90 per cent. of the interviews attributed to me were garbled, and no attention should be paid to them."

Speaker S. Frederick Nixon is expected here this morning for a talk with Senator Platt and Mr. Odell about the legislative programme and the make-up of the Assembly committees. It is understood that a final conference between Gov. Roosevelt and the organization leaders will be held in this city before the Legislature convenes.

ANTI-GRUBER FIGHT ON.

Federal Office Holders Warned that They Must Oppose Him.

The regular Republican county organization has declared war on Abraham Gruber, the anti-Platt leader in the Twenty-first Assembly District. The fight against Gruber, who is a foe of Lemuel Ely Quigg, President of the Republican County Committee, is in charge of ex-Assemblyman George C. Austin. An attempt will be made by Austin to prevent the election of Gruber as a delegate to the Republican State Convention next Spring to elect delegates at large to the National Convention to be held in Philadelphia on June 19.

Gruber was at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night and said that the Platt men had informed certain Federal office holders who live in the Twenty-first District that they would lose their positions if they refused to oppose Gruber in the Spring primaries.

The Gruber men are mustering their forces, and smilingly predict victory for their leader in the coming contest.

AMBULANCE IN A SMASH-UP.

Two Doctors and the Driver Seriously Hurt in a Collision with an Electric Car.

An ambulance of the Harlem Hospital was wrecked, and Drs. Emil A. Muller and J. W. Babcock of the hospital staff and the driver, Martin Spellman, were seriously injured at Third Avenue and One Hundred and Twentieth Street early this morning in a collision with a north-bound Third Avenue electric car.

The ambulance was returning from a call at 208 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, where Robert J. Quinlan of 185 West One Hundred and Eighty-fourth Street was found to be suffering from alcoholism. Quinlan was placed in the ambulance, and was being taken to the hospital.

Driver Spellman was ringing his bell. As he was crossing Third Avenue the ambulance was struck in the middle and hurled against an elevated road pillar. Spellman was thrown ten feet into the air and landed on his head. He received a number of cuts, a sprained ankle, was badly shaken up, and a portion of the wrecked vehicle fell on him.

Dr. Muller was pitched against a pillar. His left arm and three ribs were broken, and he also received a severe scalp wound. Dr. Babcock's skull was probably fractured, but he was internally injured. Quinlan, the patient, was badly cut over the body.

Word was sent to the hospital for another ambulance, and one arrived in charge of Dr. Noifsey. The four injured men were placed inside and taken to the hospital, where Dr. Noifsey and Dr. Campbell, the house surgeon, dressed their injuries.

The motorman, Charles W. North, thirty-four years old, who lives at One Hundred and Thirtieth Street and Third Avenue, was arrested and locked up in the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station charged with assault.

For some time the ambulances of the hospital have had to be very careful when crossing Third Avenue, at One Hundred and Twentieth Street. The cars never slacken speed, it is said, while the Second Avenue electric cars, which are operated by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, are always stopped when approaching One Hundred and Twentieth Street in either direction.

VOTE AGAINST CYCLE RACING.

Six Districts of State Divisions, L. A. W., So Decide.

Representatives of the six districts of the New York State Division of the League of American Wheelmen met last evening at the Grand Union Hotel, and adopted a resolution which placed the New York Division on record as opposing the racing question.

Resolutions were also offered and adopted instructing the division to use its best efforts to procure a cycle path across the Brooklyn Bridge, the Harlem and East River bridges, and all bridges to be built; also that the Executive Committee and officers of the organization endeavor to obtain an appropriation of $1,000,000 by the next Legislature for the cause of good roads.

The following delegates were elected to attend the National Assembly: H. E. Ackerly, P. F. Brunner, John F. Clark, A. E. Crow, E. F. Hill, J. C. Howard, L. C. La Roy, F. A. Myrick, G. C. Pennell, C. H. Strickland, H. C. White, John B. Uhle, Huyler Ellison, R. W. Dye, W. M. Meserole, C. J. Obermayer, G. T. Stebbins, J. A. Stivers, C. B. Benson, H. A. Folger, W. E. Underhill, W. L. Beck, John D. Chism, R. D. Webster, and R. H. Robe.

The Treasurer's report showed the total receipts for the fiscal year 1899, ending Dec. 1, to be $11,834.20, with a total disbursement of $11,808.56.

Employes Stole Many Toys.

CINCINNATI Dec. 16.—Thomas Haverfield, assistant shipping clerk of Amberg & Bell, wholesalers of toys and notions, was arrested yesterday after detectives found his house full of goods belonging to the firm. Edward Steinrede and Louis Huesman, two other employes of the same shipping department, were arrested to-day, after goods belonging to Amberg & Bell were found in their respective homes. No estimate is given of the losses.

Widow Sues for $1,000,000 Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Mary A. Henarie, widow of the late G. V. B. Henarie, filed a contest of her husband's will to-day. Property worth fully $1,000,000 is involved. Henarie was a liquor merchant. His will ignored the existence of Mrs. Henarie, but devised the whole estate to Louis Radgsky and his wife. Mrs. Henarie alleges that her husband was of unsound mind and unduly influenced by Radgsky.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL TERMINAL.

Railroad Said to Have Bought the Soo's Property in Minneapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 16.—The Times to-morrow will say:

"The Wisconsin Central Railroad has completed arrangements for freight terminal facilities in this city, and will, if the plans are carried out, in the next two years spend nearly $2,000,000 in this city.

"The Times has been informed by a gentleman connected with the Northern Pacific Road, who stated that he had received his information from officials of the Wisconsin Central Road, that the Wisconsin Central has bought the Soo's property on the east side of the river, and that it will use that property for terminal purposes.

"He also said the same road has secured property at Second Avenue and First Street North for a freight house, and that it has practically decided to build its own bridge across the river to connect the terminals with the freight house. The same authority gives the information that the Wisconsin Central has leased for ninety-nine years running rights upon the Great Northern Road from St. Paul to this city."

THE REAL MORMON QUESTION.

From The Denver (Col.) Post.

Polygamq has been becoming extinct in Utah as rapidly as death could remove those involved in it. It is not unreasonable to expect that within a comparatively brief span of years polygamy will become as rare there as it is in New York. And then the real Mormon problem will be as far from solution as ever, unless in the meantime it be solved by the Mormon people themselves.

What the people of Utah are struggling for is political freedom. They desire the privilege of settling for themselves such public questions as may arise. A citizen of Denver might live a dozen years in Salt Lake and remain uncontaminated were every Mormon ecclesiast practicing polygamy. There would be nothing occur that would offend his sight or affect his morals. But when a single churchman, holding a religious office that places him far above every civil official, compared with whom in the eyes of the devout worshiper the President of the United States pales into insignificance—when such a man has strong political convictions and doesn't hesitate to give them utterance, then the citizen's rights are bound to be invaded. The churchman's political views become the belief of those who regard him as infallible and the result is any election he is interested in goes as he desires.

This is the real, live Utah problem. Many brave, devoted men have been bending themselves to the solution for years. Happily the future grows brighter for them, though the end of the fight is still far in the distance. Roberts was once a factor in this movement, but he deserted the cause after the most thorough identification with it. He received his reward when he was nominated for Congress. He was elected because there really was no choice among the candidate and he represented political principles at least that were dear to the majority. In his fight for admission to the House he has not had the moral support of the progressive members of his own party. Those Democrats have allowed him to defend himself as best he may. They have done nothing to hamper him because they regard the contest as having originated in partisanship. They have seen the Republicans who began the Roberts fight supporting Republican polygamists—just as open polygamists as Roberts, but without a tithe of his ability—and doing it unblushingly. Hence they have refrained from identification with the crusaders, although they will not regret the annihilation of his ambitious hopes.

Priestcraft, the domination of the church in politims, is the great menace to a high citizenship in Utah. Polygamy is becoming only an incident. That the union of church and State will finally be severed there can be no doubt. It is a principle that is as dear to Mormon as to Gentile, and happily there are to-day as many Mormons as non-Mormons who contend for it. With a cause based in justice and right such as theirs, they are bound ultimately to triumph.

Mail Bag on a Brake Beam.

From The Chicago Chronicle.

A mail bag, torn and badly used up, was removed from a brakebeam beneath a postal storage car in a Vandalia east-bound train at Terre Haute, Ind., on Sunday, Dec. 10. The bag, which contained some valuable mail matter, was wrapped closely around the brakebeam and had apparently been picked up at Milford, Ohio., carried through on the fast train to St. Louis, and then brought back east as far as Terre Haute before its presence on the brakebeam of the car was discovered. Railroad men cannot understand how the bag managed to become wrapped around the beam so tightly nor how the railroad Inspectors overlooked it.

Our East New York Distributing Depot has never had so many goods to deliver in this section of our city, and never has the service been so efficient. Our Distributing Depot in South Brooklyn has been moved into new and larger quarters at Sixty-first Street and Fort Hamilton Avenue. The new building is a handsome structure of brick and stone 60x100, and was erected for us under the direction of Mr. G. L. Morse, our architect. We will from now on be able to serve our South Brooklyn patrons even more promptly than heretofore.

With the recent addition of two stories to our Schermerhorn and Livingston Street wing we now have over 500,000 square feet of floor space devoted to our business, exclusive of numerous detached warehouses and factories in the vicinity and throughout the city Can you realize what this enormous area means? It means if we had room enough to put our entire store on the ground floor it would cover eleven and a half acres! Or, if our store could be extended along Fulton Street, one story high, and 100 feet deep (an ordinary store is 20x100 feet) it would give us a mile of frontage, reaching twice as far as from Fulton Ferry to City Hall!

Our latest pay roll shows that we have 4,300 employes, exclusive of factory hands.

And we are still growing.

Purchasers are getting their packages delivered with a promptness and despatch which, in fac of the remarkable business we are doing, is really surprising. Notwithstanding, thousands of considerate patrons are taking small parcels with them.

LAME MAN CURED AT LOURDES.

History of the Case as Related by a Roman Catholic Bishop.

From The Indianapolis News.

Bishop Chatard, speaking of his long absence from home, (he left here on the third day of April, and returned on Dec. 9,) talks interestingly of his sojourn at various points on the Atlantic coast, in this country, and of his tour in Europe. "From this country," said the Bishop, "I went to London, where I stayed a few days and saw a number of friends. From there I went to Paris, where I stopped with relatives. From Paris I went to the celebrated sanctuary of Our Lady at Loudres, with its miraculous waters—waters which if taken in proper spirit and with proper faith, produce wonderful effects.

"There are," continued the Bishop, "modern miracles which cannot be gainsaid. I have personal knowledge or one that to me is a satisfactory answer to the peer that 'signs do not follow those who believe.' I have cited this case in my lectures on 'Christian Truths.' A man, by name Pierre de Rudder, of Jabbeke, near Bruges, in Belgium, had his leg broken by the fall of a tree. For seven years he suffered from this fracture, in which both the bones of the lower leg, the tibia and fibula, were broken, which was complicated with an external wound, continually discharging. Seven different physicians visited the poor man; everything tried was of no avail. The limb shriveled and dangled perfectly useless; and walking without crutches was impossible. Not only was this the case, but on April 7, 1875, he was obliged to put on the wound an oak bark plaster to destroy the worms in it. The foot could be bent from side to side so that the heel was in front.

"On that day Pierre de Rudder, who had been praying faithfully to Our Lady of Loudres, visited our sanctuary at Oostakker. The journey by rail and wagon caused him a great deal of suffering, but still he continued hopeful and praying. After a while he seems to have lost consciousness, for he found himself at the foot of the altar, not knowing how he came thither. He looked for is crutches. He had left them at his place on the bench. He rose up, bewildered; found that he could stand; that he was cured completely.

"In the Spring of 1878, returning from Italy to America, leaving my route of travel I went into Belgium. At Jabbeke I saw and talked to Pierre de Rudder, with the cure Abbe Slock, with several of De Rudder's neighbors and intimates, with the inn-keeper at Jabbeke, and with one of the doctors who had attended the case. All testified to the miraculous cure. The doctor said 'art could not accomplish such a cure as had taken place in De Rudder.'

"De Rudder showed me his leg and the scar that remained. There was no inequality from callous or loss of substance of the skin. He was sound of limb and walked without limping, there being no difference in the length of his limbs, nor any deformity in them. I cannot flatter myself everyone is going to accept this fact as a miracle, or believe it supernatural, or be induced by it to acknowledge the efficacy of devotion to the blessed Virgin, or finally to enter the fold of the church. Faith is a gift of God, and the Spirit breatheth wheresoever He will."

Manhattan Wins at Football.

In a spirited football contest at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, yesterday, the Manhattan Club defeated the Staten Island Club by a score of two goals to nothing. A. Smedley, Catty, Reynolds, and C. H. Hill played in splendid style for Manhattan, and Hancock, Sparks, and Whitelaw distinguished themselves for Staten Island. A previous game betwen the teams had resulted in a tie.

Bumps, the Roadster, Is Dead.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 16.—Bumps, the fastest roadster in the world, the property of C. K. G. Billings of Chicago, died at Billings Park to-day of lung fever. Billings paid $8,000 for Bumps a year ago. He had a wagon record of 2:03½ and made a quarter on the New York Speedway in 0:28½.

BULLER'S AMERICAN RELATIVES.

Descendants of His Father's Cousin Now Residing in the West.

Olathe (Kan.) Letter to Chicago Tribune.

The English family name of Buller has acquired a special interest by the reflected renown of the Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, now commanding the British army in the Transvaal. There is an American branch of the family which retains many of the dominant traits of character that have given place and power to their relatives in England, and these American Bullers are entirely worthy of their respectable origin.

A correspondent of The Tribune called on Mrs. Gertrude Buller of this city, who is the widow of Edward Buller of Lamar, Mo., once a distinguished lawyer and for a time a member of the Missouri House of Representatives. Mrs. Buller's complexion and figure suggested that she, too, might be English, but she is an avowed American. She has a mother's pride in the lineage of her son and daughter, and though wishing to avoid publicity, consented to tell what she knew of her husband's family, which is quite old. The family had its origin in one of the oldest communities in England—down in Devonshire, near Exeter, where Winfrid was born a thousand years ago and began his religious work which gave him the title of Saint Boniface.

The American branch of the family was established by Charles G. Buller, a cousin of the father of the present General. Charles G. was given the liberal education preparatory to taking orders in the clergy of the Church of England, but there is a tradition that he dissented from some of the High Church doctrines, renounced his intended career in the ministry, and left England in his early manhood for the British colonies in Canada, taking passage in a sailing vessel. There is also a pretty little story about a Miss Boucher, the daughter of a London wine merchant, who so strongly reciprocated the love of the young student that she shortly after followed him to Canada, and they were married at Cobourg, on Lake Ontario, where six sons and two daughters were born to them. The mother was an estimable woman of strong character, inherited from the old wine merchant, who compelled her to arise at 4 o'clock each morning to practice her music.

During the civil war in the United States Charles G. Buller and his family moved to this country, settling on a farm in the then pioneer region a few miles from McGregor, Iowa. There the oldest son, Charles, and youngest son, Frederick, died. The other children grew to maturity, and three of them studied at Ann Arbor, Mich. After eight years, however, the old couple returned to Canada, and made a home for themselves at Hillside Farm, two miles from Campbellford, Ontario.

It was at that home that the present Gen. Buller visited in 1870, when he was a Colonel in Gen. Wolseley's Red River expedition, and at that time he presented the American family with a photograph showing him in the dress of a civilian. The photograph was taken by Mayall, 224 Regent Street, London W., and is an interesting portrait.

The sons of the American branch have all proved strong in character and of unimpeachable honor. The English idea of primogeniture prevails, and Reginald Francis Buller of Hailey, Idaho, is now regarded as the head of the family, being the first-born. He was graduated from Ann Arbor, settled down to the practice of law at Stockton, Mo., served in the Missouri Legislature, and is now President of the First National Bank of Hailey, Idaho. His son, Charles Osborn Buller, is now a student in the Shattuck Military School at Faribault, Minn.

The second son was Edward Buller, who also graduated from Ann Arbor, went to Dover, Ark., and after a few months there removed to Lamar, Mo., where he practiced law successfully, was conspicuous in politics, and became a member of the Missouri Legislature. His two children—Edith Cornelia, aged fifteen, and Francis Wentworth, aged twelve—are now in the Olathe schools. Edward, the father, died in 1891, leaving a competence to his family, and the children are being carefully educated.

The third son of Charles G. is Dr. Frank Buller of Montreal, Canada, who had the distinguished honor of being physician to Princess Louise when she presided over the Government House at Ottawa.

The fourth son is Edward R. Buller, a farmer of San José, Cal., who has a son named Frederick Buller, now studying medicine at Toronto.

The two daughters are still living, making their home at Vancouver, B. C. One is married, and is now Mrs. Edith Barwick. The other is Miss H. F. Buller.

ARCHIBALD FORBES.

Interesting Reminiscences of the Famous Editorial Correspondent's Visit to This Country.

From The Detroit (Mich.) Free Press.

It is no small record for a war correspondent to pass through seven distinct campaigns of warfare, but when, in addition to this, such a man achieves, meanwhile, numerous specific triumphs as a news-getter and deliverer, then indeed is he entitled to fame. It is such a record and such achievements that have made Archibald Forbes, who is now critically ill in London, perhaps the most notable war correspondent now living. Born in Moray, Scotland, in 1838, Mr. Forbes received his education at the Aberdeen University.

Immediately after graduation and in a spirit of adventure he enlisted in the Royal Dragoons. For ten years thereafter he served in the British Army, never rising above the chevrons of a Corporal, but acquiring an intimate acquaintance with life in the field, in the barracks, and on the march. His first service as war correspondent was for The London Daily News, and for that paper he passed through five campaigns in Europe, one in Asia, and one in South Africa.

Nearly twenty years ago Mr. Forbes appeared in Detroit in the old Music Hall as a lecturer. He was greeted by a tremendous audience and after the lecture there was a reception at the residence of the Hon. W. G. Thompson, who was then Mayor of the city. At that time Mr. Forbes was about forty-three years old and a fine picture of manhood. He was above six feet in height, he had square, broad shoulders, and a superb head set upon a strong neck. His hair, just touched with gray, was abundant and wavy, and he wore a heavy dark red mustache. He had the carriage of a soldier, while his dark eyes were piercing in their intensity. He was essentially companionable, and on the day following his lecture, as he was to lecture in Ann Arbor that evening, he did not leave Detroit until afternoon. In a social chat in Mayor Thompson's office he revealed the true high-grade companionship of a man of the world, cordial with all, possessed of an inexhaustible fund of reminiscence and entirely unassuming.

In speaking of the value of historic mementos he related how, at the surrender after Sedan, which he and other correspondents witnessed, one of his companions accidentally overturned a bottle of ink and stained the cloth upon the table. "And that cloth to this day," he continued, "is retained as a historic relic because it is stained with ink from a bottle which the Emperor Napoleon, in his nervousness, had capsized."

About the time of Mr. Forbes's visit there was intense rivalry among the various telegraph companies in this country, which had brought about an effort at their consolidation under one management. It had proceeded so far that Rufus Hatch had obtained an injunction to prevent such action. The value of telegraphy to the world and Mr. Hatch's injunction were being discussed when Mr. Forbes said, "I do not know your Mr. Hatch, but he will not be long dead before not only your telegraphs but your railroads and your large manufacturing interests will be consolidated, because the trend of the times is toward centralization, and it will prove a good trend for all concerned."

If that prediction was somewhat correct in its estimate, he was more prophetic in an observation he made relative to the situation in South Africa. Mr. Forbes had served through one campaign in that land and was one of the small party who first discovered the mutilated remains of the Prince Imperial. At the time of his visit to Detroit, the British were in possession of Pretoria, and severe fighting was going on to the discomfort of Parliament. The Boers had asked for the appointment of a royal commission to inquire into their claims, and the Colonial Secretary, the Earl of Kimberley, had declared that if the Boers would only lay down their arms the problem would be solved.

The situation had been brought up for discussion through Mr. Forbes's relation of a meeting he had once had with Gen. Joubert, which ended with the observation, "That man is a born commander of men, and back of that he has the innate accuracy of judgment which produces the great General." Later on, Mr. Forbes exclaimed: "Nonsense! The Boers are mere lumps of humanity with absolute stubbornness as their only qualification. They won't get hungry or thirsty, don't you know, because they are too stubborn to recognize a physical need; they will live on roots and wild game till these resources give out, and then their God only knows what they will do. It is only stubbornness that makes them work, and they are brutal in their capacity for work." And so he went on predicting that Great Britain would never see peace for her colonists in South Africa until the Boers were exterminated. "It is all nonsense to suggest that they will lay down their arms. They are so stubborn that they wouldn't know how to do such a thing, and it would be a mercy to them and to the world at large if a sort of a Red-Sea-and-Pharaoh arrangement could be fixed up for their benefit."

Consignees Not Found.

From The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal.

At the Wichita Street fair a few months ago the Wells, Fargo Express Company had a float in the parade. The float represented a big delivery wagon piled full of express packages, and in preparing it the express people borrowed from the Dold Packing Company a couple of huge meat boxes which weighed, empty, eighty-five pounds. To make the display appear realistic these boxes were stenciled with the fictitious addreses, "J. Scholson, Berlin, Germany," and "A. Hunt, Liverpool, England." After the parade the float was driven to the Wells, Fargo office and unloaded, and that seemed to be the end of the affair. But it was not the end, for last week the Wichita agent received a couple of tracers informing him that one box was in Berlin and the other in Liverpool, and that the people to whom they were adressed could not be found. Investigation then revealed that the night force at the office had found the boxes piled upon on the platform and had billed them out according to address. The error occurred more easily as Dold often sent boxes to the express office when in a hurry without making out a bill, and it was the custom of the office to rush such boxes along.

An Auk Comes South.

From the Manchester (N. H.) Union.

It will be quite a surprise to many who have visited Billings & Freeman's store in Lebanon and seen what they supposed was an eagle, to learn on the authority of the Rev. C. A. Downs that it is but a little auk, or foolish gillemot, a bird that is almost a perfect stranger so far inland as where it was captured. Few particlars are known of this species, which is very rare, and has its home in Greenland and as far north as Spitzenberg. In Greenland it is called the ice bird. It is not by nature a crafty bird, and is simetimes easily captured. It is, when seen, usually on the seacoast, and has very peculiar habits in feeding.

THE VALUE OF DIAMONDS.

NOTE—We refer herein to perfect Diamonds, such as are free from color and defects.

The value of a diamond is more stable than that of gold. Its intrinsic worth can't be severed from the stone. A diamond that is yours is yours forever—unless it gets lost.

If you would give a diamond at Christmas, whether ring, brooch or scarf pin, make sure that it is a pure stone. For the only valuable part to an imperfect diamond is the price you pay for it.

We sell pure diamonds.

Bits of Tin No Longer Wasted.

From The Lewistown (Me.) Journal.

The present age sometimes is accused of extravagance, but we utilize many an article that our forefathers threw away. For instance, the many small strips of tin plate that are cut off the ends of the countless numbers of sheets, during the season in the sardine canning factories at Eastport, are now being turned into money. From nearly every sheet of the costly tin plate a small piece is cut off and this formerly was dumped on the beach as worthless. Much of the small scrap tin is now gathered up, pounded together, and shipped west, where it is worked into many new forms, including window weights, etc. The former bright strips of metal are too valuable for this use and are now used in making tobacco tags and the like. Four cars loaded with strips of tin plate lately left Eastport for Baltimore.

THE SENATE EXPENDITURES

Curious Items for Which Large Amounts Are Paid.

OVER $600 FOR PENKNIVES

Nearly $1,300,000 Spent During the Year—Over $2,300 to Furnish the Vice President's Room.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—However luxurious the Senate may choose to be, it always makes a clean breast of its expenditures once a year. Promptly after the opening of the Congress the Secretary of the Senate, William R. Cox, made his report of the receipts and expenditures of the Senate from July 1, 1898, to June 30, 1899, and, as usual, this document contains some entries that possess interest for those who have heard of the liberality with which the upper branch of the Nation's Legislature provides for its needs. Still, the Senate does not spend all the money it might. To be sure, it spent $1,293,263.25 in the year, which was $91,687.66 more than it got rid of in the preceding year. But it also had to its credit $87,199.66 which it might have expended if it had regarded further outgo necessary, convenient, or desirable.

Two items of expense of interest are those showing that the officers and other employes received $43,789.17 as "extra month's pay" in July, 1898, and again in March, 1899, drew $50,092.30, being two gifts to persons very highly paid and who are idle, in the nature of things, about six months each year, most of them on annual salaries.

Just why the Senate required so large a stock of cutlery during the year covered by the report of the Secretary is not explained. The war was over in November, 1898, so far as everybody in this town, except the Bureau of Navigation, was concerned, and yet in that month the Senate required edged tools in small variety and great numbers. For instance:

½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $7.20	$3.60
1½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $49	73.50
1 dozen Wostenholm knives	28.50
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $24	12.00
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $25	12.50
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $16.20	8.10
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $18	9.00
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $11	5.50
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $11.50	5.75
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $25	12.50
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $14.50	7.25
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $25.80	12.90
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $16	8.00
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $15.50	7.75
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $14.80	7.40
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $16.45	8.23
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $18.50	9.25
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $19.50	9.75
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $16.75	8.37
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $19	9.50
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $21.25	10.63
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $17.30	8.65
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $31.20	15.60
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $20.15	10.07
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $9.35	4.68
1 dozen Wostenholm knives	13.80
2 dozen Wostenholm knives, at $14.10	28.20
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $16.25	8.12
½ dozen Wostenholm knives, at $22.25	11.12
	$368.22

But this is not a sufficient number of knives to meet the immediate demands of the Senate. A few days later it made these purchases:

NOV. 22, 1898.

½ dozen Western knives, at $4 per doz	2.00
½ dozen Western knives, at $40 per doz	13.33
	$240.47

By Christmas Day of 1898 every Senator should have been provided with six knives, and a few of them might have had seven in their sleeves or pockets. They had cost more than $600, which is low as armaments go, but a pretty penny for pocket knives, foreign and domestic. Yet on Dec. 12 it appeared to have discovered that something further was needed in the way of cutting implements, for it made these purchases:

½ dozen pairs scissors, 6 inch, at $4.20	$2.10
½ dozen pairs scissors, 5½ inch, at $3.72	1.86
½ dozen pairs scissors, 5 inch, at $3.24	1.62
½ dozen pairs scissors, 4½ inch, at $3	1.50
½ dozen pairs scissors, 6 inch, at $4.20	2.10
½ dozen pairs scissors, 5½ inch, at $3.72	1.86
½ dozen pairs scissors, 4 inch, at $2.76	1.38
½ dozen pairs scissors, 5½ inch, at $3.84	1.92
1 dozen pairs scissors, 4 inch	5.70
½ dozen pairs scissors, 5½ inch, at $5.76	2.88

And again, three days later:

DEC. 15.

Senators Mason and Quay were the champion telegraphers of the body during the year reported. Between Jan. 8 and 10, 1899, Mason sent about 110 telegraphic dispatches to as many persons in Illinois, at a cost of about 20 cents each. He had fits of dispatch sending from time to time. On March 18, 1898, Mr. Quay sent, at Government expense, 246 telegrams, about two-thirds of them addressed to persons in Altoona, Pennsylvania, and a large proportion of the remainder to Roaring Springs, in the same State. There is no suggestion of the interest the Government possessed in the correspondence between the Senator and the two or three towns addressed. The cost of telegraphing in the fiscal year was $6,759.16, or $2,896 less than was drawn for the purpose.

SENATOR MORRILL'S FUNERAL.

When it comes to funerals the Senate will have nothing mean. There is but one account of a funeral in Secretary Cox's report, that of Senator Morrill. It is interesting in its items. See how it was built up:

DUEL FOUGHT BY TWO NEGROES.

One Has His Pistol Shot from His Hand—Both Arrested.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 16.—George Douglass and Andrew Smith, colored, ice-cream makers, quarreled and decided to settle their differences with pistols at ten paces. The duelling ground selected was the rear of 921 Madison Avenue, where they were employed. After exchanging half a dozen shots Smith's weapon was shot from his hand and he sought shelter in one of the sheds attached to the place, where he remained until the police arrived and took the combatants to the Northwestern Police Station.

They will answer the charge of trying to kill each other in the Criminal Court.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Still Further Improvement Shown in a Week of Varied Dealings.

SALE OF THE ASYLUM BLOCK

Fine Dwellings Still in Demand—Latest Sales by Brokers — This Week's Auction Schedule and Its Features.

Continuing along the same general lines, the market shows its most favorable characteristic in a gradual strengthening, rather than in any special transactions of great interest. The Orphan Asylum deal, it is true, is very much of a special transaction, but having dragged along in various stages of incompletion over a period of two months, it cannot be classed with the business of the last week. Its importance, however, generally speaking, has not been lessened by the seemingly endless negotiations. It is a deal of the size and character to affect other deals, in fact, to control the market in its immediate neighborhood, and it would be difficult to find a broker or owner along Fifth Avenue who is not glad that the formality of signing contracts is all that remains to complete this $2,000,000 transaction.

The future of the block has already become the subject of speculation. That the bulk of it will be used for residence purposes there seems to be little doubt. Whether the Union Club will take the Fifty-first Street corner on the Fifth Avenue front will be known only after that organization has met and voted on Wednesday evening. It is well known that the sentiment of the club is far from unanimous on the subject of abandoning the present house at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, and there is liable to be considerable opposition from the conservative element to the proposition to move up to Fifty-first Street. In the event of the Union Club's not taking the corner opposite the cathedral, it, too, will be sold as residence sites, the purchasing syndicate looking with little favor on any hotel or apartment house scheme.

Buying of fine dwellings continues to be a feature of the market, and the last of deals of this character, headed by the sale of W. E. D. Stokes's house for $325,000, has been a long one for the last week, the Fifth Avenue and Riverside sections sharing honors about equally. Ex-Gov. Morton, already a large holder of realty, showed further confidence in this form of investment by his purchase of the dwelling completed Lucile apartment house at St. Nicholas Avenue and One Hundred and Fourteenth Street.

Builders and others with building operations under consideration seem to look with apprehension on the new Building Code. The rush to get plans on record is almost unprecedented in the history of the Building Department, over $4,000,000 being represented by those filed last week. At the present rate there will be enough plans filed under the existing code before the new code takes effect, on Saturday, to make the latter practically inoperative for a considerable period.

Latest Sales by Brokers.

The Seaboard Realty Company has sold to an investor the eight-story business building, recently completed, at 59 Fourth Avenue, 25 by 167 and irregular.

L. J. Phillips & Co. were the brokers in the sale of 148 and 150 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street to the J. M. Horton Ice Cream Company.

Herman Wronkow has sold to John Roberts the four five-story flats 9 to 15 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, on a plot 75 by 100, taking in exchange the seven-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, 50 by 100.

George R. Read has sold for Lowenfeld & Prager, to Joseph Personeni, the four-story building 496 West Broadway, 25 by 75. The buyer is the owner of No. 498, adjoining.

E. A. Cruikshank & Co. have sold for Rocco M. Morasco and Dominick Abbate to the Italian Mission of the Protestant Episcopal Church 127 Elizabeth Street, an old building on lot 25 by 94. The property adjoins 359 and 361 Broome Street, already owned by the mission.

William P. Giles has sold to Henry A. and John Bade the five-story brick building at the northeast corner of Canal and Mott Streets, 21.1 by 99.7.

William C. Lester has sold to D. V. Mackie the four-story brownstone-front dwelling 351 West Fifty-sixth Street, 18 by 100.

Kahn & Baumann have sold for Charles H. Heinberg the five-story double flat 1,730 Madison Avenue, 25.11 by 79, the buyer giving in part payment the four-story flat 213 East One Hundred and Ninth Street, 19.4 by 100.

Murray & Hill have sold the two five-story tenements on the north side of Fifty-second Street, 375 feet east of Eleventh Avenue, to Frederick Aldhous, who gives in exchange the plot at the southeast corner of Bradhurst Avenue and One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Street, 101 by 82.3 by 99.11 by 102.

Mandelbaum & Lewine have bought the old building 133 Thompson Street, 22 by 100.

The Auction Room.

Last week was another one of uninteresting results at auction and voluntary offerings fared poorly. Eleven lots on Gerard and Walton Avenues, a partition sale, were withdrawn, but, on the whole, Bronx property made a better showing than that south of the Harlem River. The three-story frame flats on the east side of Webster Avenue, between Alden Place and One Hundred and Seventy-ninth Street, sold under foreclosure, went to an outsider, and William M. Ryan was successful with an executor's sale of several vacant parcels on Third and Washington Avenues.

The most important offering for this week will be that of 30 and 32 West Forty-fourth Street under foreclosure. This property was sold several months ago by Jackson & Stern to a syndicate which had planned to erect thereon an apartment house. The project was abandoned, however, after the excavation had been completed, and on Tuesday Auctioneer William Kennelly will sell the property to satisfy a claim of about $40,000. Prior mortgages on the lots amount to $55,000.

Tuesday's list also includes the building at the southwest corner of Greenwich and Rector Streets, to be sold by William M. Ryan, and the dwelling, 162 West Seventy-third Street, offered in partition by Auctioneer Ingraham.

Among other parcels advertised in foreclosure proceedings are the southeast corner of Pearl and Pine Streets, 57 and 59 Ann Street, and the southeast corner of Canal and Varick Streets.

There were recorded last week 289 mortgages for $4,386,366; of which 93, for $1,263,835, were at 5 per cent.; 128, for $1,561,156, were at more; and 73, for $1,561,375, were at less. In the corresponding week last year, there were recorded 293 mortgages for $5,553,797; of which 99, for $1,837,615, were at 5 per cent.; 133, for $1,681,482, were at more, and 61, for $2,034,700, were at less.

OUR METHODS IN BUSINESS

Comparison with Those of Exporting European Countries.

Save in Educational Facilities, Says W. C. Barker, We Lead the Whole World.

From a Paper by William C. Barker Before the International Commercial Congress.

What are we Americans doing in the way of schools for training our young men for commercial life in foreign countries? It is true that sons of rich men can go to college and learn languages as taught there; that is, to read and write general composition; but I do not know of a school or college where a young man who wishes to fit himself for a commercial traveler in any foreign country can learn the commercial language of that country. I regret to say that, as a rule, the sons of our manufacturers care more for baseball, golf, rowing, and other athletic sports than they do about international law or commercial languages. If an American firm want a foreign traveler, are they able to find an American who can speak the German, French, or Spanish language who is competent to do it? They may, but they are very scarce.

I know of a firm who recently advertised for a traveler for Europe. They stipulated that applicants must be able to speak and write German and French. They received several hundred applications, but not 1 per cent. of them were American-born citizens.

The question is often asked, Which is to be preferred, a man who speaks the language, knows the customers, the customs of the country, but does not understand American ways of doing business or the possibilities of American goods or of the manufacturers to supply goods to meet all requirements or an American who thoroughly understands the goods he is to sell, their possibilities, American ways of doing business and is imbued with American ideas and enterprise, but who is not able to speak the language and does not know the customs of the people? Having tried both in connection with the sale of agricultural machinery, I will take the latter every time.

I know a man who represented a manufacturer of harvesting machines in Europe; he could not speak anything but the English language. A trial of different makes of machines was to be held. All the other representatives were foreign born and spoke the language, but their machines were of American manufacture and did not understand their language. My friend, being an American, and his machine being of American manufacture, understood each other so well that the judges employed a talking machine to tell him that he had won the first prize, and the principal dealer employed the same talking machine to secure the agency.

The American commercial traveler has no equal in any country; his enterprise, hustle, and acuteness are proverbial; he possesses a species of "contagious enthusiasm," and has the faculty of inoculating all with whom he comes in contact with this enthusiasm for American goods.

The American commercial traveler is at a great disadvantage by reason of not having the proper commercial education, but we are fast realizing the advantage of travelers having such an education, and I predict that in the very near future such schools will be established and equipped with the best teachers and apparatus the world can supply.

Give American commercial travelers the advantages of such an education and our European cousins will have to look closely to their laurels or the United States will soon become the centre of the world's commerce.

BUSINESS METHODS.

There is a marked difference in the methods of obtaining and conducting foreign trade. A German manufacturer sends his representative to a foreign country to learn what kind of goods are sold, to obtain samples for him to copy, and to take orders for imitations at prices lower than those asked for the originals; he then imitates them, even to original manufacturer's name, trademark, or patent number. To sell such goods at a low price he must reduce his workmen to the lowest place of wage earning; this course does not benefit the dealer or consumer, for an "imitation" is never better than its "original."

An English manufacturer insists that his machinery and goods are just what are wanted; he will not entertain the thought that they can or should be modified to meet the requirements. He argues that, having manufactured them in their present forms for so many years, they must surely be perfect.

Neither of these methods stimulates inventive genius or the development of new ideas.

An American manufacturer sends his representatives to study the requirements of the trade in his line, and report carefully all conditions of labor, power used, &c., then he makes such modifications in his goods or machinery as will meet those requirements. I say "modifications." An American manufacturer seldom changes the mechanical principles of his goods. As a rule, it is not necessary, as we have within the limits of these United States every kind of soil, grow nearly every kind of grain and crop, have nearly every class of labor and climate to contend with that can be found in the world, and our manufacturers have adapted their products to meet all these varied demands. This being the case, it is only necessary for them to know the requirements of a market to supply them. They will not make antiquated articles, neither will they make imitations. They give the dealer something new and better, put into the hands of the user an article that will enable him to earn more money, live better, and be a better man or woman; for such an article the user will pay a better price, and the manufacturer can pay better wages for producing it; thus the dealer, user, and producer are all benefited.

FACTORY METHODS.

In Europe a manufacturer will make a large assortment of different classes of goods, thus necessitating the frequent shifting of the men from one class of work to another. As the result they are not experts in any one class of work.

The American manufacturers confine themselves to one specialty or class of goods, the men working at the same machines on some parts continuously, thus becoming experts in that particular thing, and being paid by piecework, develop special tools for their work, premiums often being offered by the proprietors for new ideas or tools for this purpose.

The European manufacturer of machinery builds on the theory "weight indicates strength." The American manufacturers say "weight does not indicate strength"; therefore, the reason of the great difference in weight between the European and American machines. As, for instance, a European agricultural engine developing twenty-horse, actual power, will weigh about 20,000 pounds; an American of same power about 13,000 pounds. A European mower weighs about 1,000 pounds; an American of same width of cut weighs 750 pounds.

As transportation and duty are based on weight, this additional weight is an expensive matter for the importer, to say nothing of the saving in motive power for moving them from place to place.

The European manufacturer says, "time is of no value." They sacrifice "time" to save outlay in new and improved methods, they employ old machines, tools, and methods; speed their machines to suit the movements of poorly paid workmen.

An American manufacturer says "time is money"—they spend money to save time; they employ the last and most improved machines, tools, and implements; they speed their machines so as to turn off the greatest possible amount of work, and employ the best men money can hire to operate them.

Gov. Stone, in his adress of welcome the other day, said: "Our manufacturers economize labor." I want to emphasize that point, and say, that they also economize "time."

I once had the pleasure of visiting a large manufacturing establishment in Europe, where they made nearly every article known in the line of agricultural machinery. I was interested, and desired to go through the works; at first the general manager was rather doubtful as to the propriety of permitting me to do so, but when I assured him that I would give him the benefit of suggestions as to how we did things in the United States, the manager concluded that possibly he might get some ideas from me that would be as valuable to him as what I might see would be to me, so we started on the rounds of the shops. We entered the wood-working shop. There I saw them using the old single spindle boring machine, and the single chisel mortiser, boring one hole and cutting one side of a mortise at a time. The manager was greatly surprised to learn that American manufacturers used gang boring machines, boring all parallel holes through a piece at one movement, and gang mortisers cutting all parallel mortises at one stroke. In the forge room I found them using rope and pulley attached to a drop hammer, running in upright guides, worked by hauling the hammer up by hand and allowing it to fall—this was their trip hammer—it was a "tripper" in earnest. When I referred to our power hammers striking 100 to 150 blows per minute with power equal to 1,000 to 2,000 pounds per stroke, the manager could hardly believe it.

I saw a man working at a machine, and I had to look twice to see if either the man or machine was in motion. I inquired why they did not speed the machine up and have it turn off more work; his reply was that the machine was set to suit the speed of the man, and when told that in American shops the machines were run to their highest efficient speed, and if a man could not or would not speed his movements to correspond, another was put in his place who would; his reply was that their workmen would not do so.

When asked his opinion as to the reasons European manufacturers adhered to the old ways and principles, while Americans adopted new ones, he said: "The European manufacturers have inherited their ideas from their ancestors, their workmen had done the same, and they could not change them now, while the ancestors of you 'Americans,' when they landed with William Penn on American soil, found themselves surrounded with new conditions that required new methods of thought and action to meet, so every one set himself to thinking in his own way along different lines, to provide the means and methods to meet these new requirements; they accomplished it, and their descendants have each kept on thinking out new ways and methods of doing things ever since—as a result they have become 'a nation of inventors and mechanics.'"

SPEED OF PRODUCTION.

What are the results of these different methods? I will not tire you with statistics beyond stating that in 1890 we exported $151,102,376 worth of manufactured goods. In 1899 we exported $338,667,794 worth of manufactured goods, an increase in nine years of $187,565,418.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works of this city received on Jan. 1, 1896, an order for thirty-two large passenger locomotives for Russian railways. These locomotives were required for transportation purposes during the festivities attending the coronation of the Czar. They were shipped in two lots, sixteen on March 30 and sixteen on April 3 of same year. They reached destination, were erected, and put into operation in time for the coronation festivities. * * *

The same company received in January, 1896, an order for four locomotives for use on the Egyptian railroad in the Soudan. Shipment was guaranteed in eight weeks. A bounty was offered for anticipating the contract date, and the engines were completed and shipped in thirty-three days from time order was placed.

We have factories building grain binders that harvest the world's wheat crop, at the rate of one complete machine in every three minutes.

We build pumps to supply water for the deserts, and people of all classes, at the rate of one complete pump in each three-fourths of a minute. We build plows to turn the soils of all nations and climes at the rate of two per minute.

In 1889 we imported from England all the bicycles used in this country. In 1899 we exported more bicycles than were made in all other countries put together.

One of the most striking illustrations of the difference between European and American ways and the truth of the axiom that "time is money" is the construction of the Atbara bridge in Central Egypt. On Oct. 16, 1898, Lord Cromer made a requisition upon the War Department of the Egyptian Government in London for a bridge. Plans were prepared, and on Dec. 29, 1898, report was made that no suitable material was in stock. The English builders said it could not be completed within two years. Lord Cromer urged its construction, saying that if not completed before the floods the advance on Khartum would be delayed for at least six months. Therefore, bids were asked for from two different American firms. The Pencoyd Iron Works of this city offered to furnish the material in six weeks, therefore a contract was signed early in February of this year, work was begun on Feb. 8, delayed several days by reason of the blizzard, the material was shipped in two lots, one lot on Feb. 25 and the other March 16, the bridge was erected under the direction of American foremen, who did not understand the language of their laborers, and turned over to the authorities on Aug. 26, 1899—six months and eighteen days after the contract was signed. When we consider the distance which this material was transported, it makes one of the most notable feats of American enterprise yet on record. Another notable feature of this transaction was the price. The lowest English bid was $87,750 and two years' time to erect. The American firm's bid was $31,000, or a trifle over two-fifths of the English price. * * *

LABOR CONDITIONS.

In Europe the laborer is taught that his Government will provide for him in old age, so he has no care for the morrow. In America the laborer knows that he must provide for his own future, and does it.

In Europe capital rules labor. In the United States labor rules capital.

In Europe Governments enact laws compelling employers to deduct a certain amount from wages earned by their employes for the Government insurance fund for their employes, thus taking away all incentive to provide for themselves.

In America our workmen organize building and loan associations and savings banks of their own; by this means they soon own their own homes and lay by a competency for the future.

Home builders and savings bank depositors are seldom found in the ranks of strikers or of labor agitators.

In Europe workmen as a class are poorly paid, poorly educated, and have but limited voting power. In America we have manufacturing establishments that maintain free libraries, lecture rooms, free hospitals, and the workmen have their societies and organizations, officered and controlled by those chosen from their own ranks, and their vote has the same power as that of the capitalist.

A QUESTION OF POSTAGE.

What to Do with Undesirable Tickets to Charitable Entertainments.

"I am up against a condition that needs a satisfactory solution for myself as well as others," remarked the young man of many friends and acquaintances and a limited income. "Look at these." He took from his pocket six letters, all addressed to his wife. These came in the morning's mail. Every one of those six envelopes contains five tickets to entertainments to be given in behalf of as many different charities. One of them, from The Strollers, has a half dozen charities and a building fund to be benefited. The tickets I am requested to buy—or my wife is—and in this particular instance it amounts to the same thing. In case I do not buy I am requested to return the tickets. These things come in bunches every week. I don't want to buy; can't afford to buy, in fact, if I wanted to. No postage has been inclosed for the return of the tickets to the senders. What am I to do? Pay the postage and return the tickets to the senders, a matter of about a dollar for this week's bunch of tickets, or throw the whole business into my waste basket, paying no attention whatever to the missives. I'm bound to slip on the toes of some of my friends if I ignore the whole business, I suppose, but really I can't see why I should be asked to pay return postage on a lot of stuff that I haven't asked for, don't want, and wouldn't use if they were given to me. I'm not stingy, but I have to be economical, and my wife and I both have our pet charities, for which we do all that we can afford. Really the thing is a nuisance and an imposition. I wish some one might formulate a rule. There must be a lot of the readers of The Times who are puzzled as I am by these annoyances. They are no more anxious to appear as boors than I am, nor to violate the rules of decency and good breeding. Do they submit to this draft on their postage stamp allowance or ignore the whole business as I am tempted to do?"

Presents for 2,000 Children.

The hearts of at least 2,000 poor children in Williamsburg will be gladdened on Christmas morning by the East End Christmas Tree Association of the Eastern District of Brooklyn. The little ones will be invited to an entertainment in the Amphion Theatre, which will be followed by a distribution of gifts comprising toys, candy, and fruits. The East End Christmas Tree Association is composed of women well known in Williamsburg. That section of Brooklyn has probably more poor children than any other. Particularly is this true of the Fourteenth and Sixteenth Wards. At a meeting to be held on Tuesday the boxes in the theatre will be disposed of and other arrangements made. The Board of Managers for the present year are: President—Mrs. Walter J. Barron; Vice Presidents—Mrs. A. H. Baird, Mrs. J. H. Fleming, Mrs. J. H. Dick, and Mrs. Edwin Knowles; Treasurer—Miss Louisa C. Wurster; Recording Secretary—Mrs. C. T. Caldwell; Corresponding Secretary—Miss M. A. Latimer.

PROSPERITY OF THE BRONX

Astonishing Advance in Real Estate Values in the Borough.

BIG PROFITS REALIZED BY SALES

Plans for No Fewer Than 1,627 New Buildings Filed During the First Nine Months of the Year.

From a real estate point of view the past year has been a remarkable one in the Borough of the Bronx. Building operations show an increase of one-third over those of 1898, and values have taken fabulous jumps. Single lots have been sold for $20,000, a figure that a couple of years ago would have been considered a ridiculous valuation even by the most audacious boomer. During the early part of the year there was a great hue and cry raised against high taxes, but this had little or no effect upon the transactions and throughout the length and breadth of the borough real estate men report excellent business for the year, while fortunes have been made by builders, speculators, and investors.

Mr. Charles M. Kaeppel, one of Bronx Borough's prominent real estate dealers, in reviewing the business of the year, said to a representative of The New York Times yesterday:

"It is not so many years ago that this section of the city was dubbed 'The Annexed District.' The name alone was enough to keep investors away and give them an idea that the section north of the Harlem River was an insignificant chunk of wilderness tacked on to the City of New York in order to please the population of farmers and backswoodsmen who inhabited it. If we attempted to assert our rights as citizens of the metropolis we were goodnaturedly laughed at, and if you gave your address, the question would be, 'How far are you from Jerome Avenue?' And later on, 'Are you anywhere near Third Avenue?' To-day the borough is popularly alluded to as the north side, a name given to it before the Greater New York consolidation act became a law, and it is beginning to assume its proper place in the city.

"One of the strangest features of this year's real estate transactions have been the large and successful sales of property offered at auctions—parcels in some instances bringing higher prices than could be obtained at private sale. Why this should be can hardly be explained, except by the timidity of investors, who perhaps figure, (as real estate men often figure for investors,) that if certain property is worth a certain figure to some one else it's worth that to me, the result being that the buyers outbid each other, and finally realize that they have paid full market value. The first auction sale of any importance during the past year, and the one which set the ball rolling, was the offering of a parcel consisting of 144 lots by the Bathgate estate last January, which realized the sum total of $515,275. At this sale the southwest corner of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, 25 by 100, vacant, brought $16,700; the southwest corner of Tremont and Arthur Avenues, about 33 by 99, averaging 9 feet of rock above grade, brought $9,500; inside lots on Tremont Avenue, adjoining, brought from $4,500 to $4,775 each; lots on Washington Avenue, between One Hundred and Seventieth and One Hundred and Seventy-first Streets, about 25 by 150 brought $3,850 each; southeast corner Washington Avenue and One Hundred and Seventy-first Street, 25 by 95, $6,000; northeast corner Bathgate and Wendover Avenues, 25 by 100, with rock averaging 12 feet above grade, $7,100; the vacant northwest corner of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Seventy-first Street, 25 by 100, $12,700; inside lots adjoining ranging from 20 to 25 feet frontage, with a depth of from 100 to 175 feet, brought from $6,000 to $8,000 each. At this sale the southwest corner of Third and Wendover Avenues, 25 by 100, with a mountain of rock on it, was sold to Mrs. Marie Eichler for $20,000, the highest price ever realized for any corner lot on Third Avenue.

"It is interesting to recall that about two years previously the lot on the northwest corner of Wendover and Third Avenues, at the first Bathgate estate sale, was sold to Messrs. Heilner & Wolf for $9,000, and the southeast corner of Third and Wendover Avenues, about 33 by 100, was bought by Dr. C. A. Becker for $8,000, who immediately resold it at a handsome profit. In May, 1899, Mr. Gustave Huerstel offered fifty-one lots on Third Avenue, Fulton Avenue, and One Hundred and Seventy-first Street, with the result that the northeast corner of Third Avenue and Julia Street (now St. Paul's Place) brought $3,500; two lots on Third Avenue adjoining, $3,500 each, while the southeast corner of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Seventy-first Street, 25 by 100, sold for $4,450, and four adjoining lots on Third Avenue brought from $3,100 to $3,350 each. Comparing the above prices with those of the last Bathgate sale in this neighborhood gives an idea of the advance in the Bronx realty.

"At the Peyton estate sale James L. Wells sold 132 parcels for $403,700 in one afternoon. This sale had the effect of placing values in neighborhoods where few sales had been made in years past. One of the best examples of values was shown last April, when Mr. M. Morgenthau bought the Brown property at Sedgwick and Lind Avenues and One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Street, containing 160 lots, at the recorded price of $138,000, and one month later offered it at auction, and sold it for $172,870, showing a profit of $34,870. However, in some quarters it is asserted that his profit amounted to $50,000.

"There have been many private sales, all of which show wonderful increases in values. For instance, a plot on Tremont Avenue and Southern Boulevard consisting of 185 lots was sold during the early part of the year for $125,000 and resold five months later for $160,000. The present owner has since been offered an advance, which has been refused. The north side of Tremont Avenue, including both corners of Marmion Avenue, 225 by 190, was sold to Mr. John W. Cornish for about $40,000. The plot on the northeast corner of Third Avenue and One Hundred and Eightieth Street was bought by a speculator, who held it for three months and realized a profit of from $5,000 to $6,000. The same man bought the block bounded by Lafontaine and Arthur Avenues and One Hundred and Eightieth Street. He bought it from a firm at a profit of $8,000, and in turn resold it within two months at an advance of over $8,000. Hundreds of similar examples could be given."

When asked about building operations Mr. Kaeppel said:

"Notwithstanding the steady rise in building material and vacant property, building operations in the Bronx have been unprecedented. Buildings have been springing up like weeds. During the first nine months of the present year plans for 1,627 new buildings were filed at an estimated cost of over $15,000,000.

"Never in the history of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards has money been loaned as liberally as during the present year. It is not so long ago that downtown investors ridiculed the idea of lending large amounts in what they termed Westchester. To-day, we find the leading fiduciary institutions lending large amounts, not only at the standard rate of 5 per cent., but in a great many instances at 4 and 4½ per cent. This in itself shows conclusively the high regard in which Bronx Borough property is held by leading New York financiers, who are known the world over for shrewdness and business insight.

"Among the mortgages placed during 1899 was one of $300,000, on the property bounded by One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, Park Avenue, and the Harlem River, another of $128,000, by a bank on the buildings situated on the northeast corner of St. Ann's and Westchester Avenues. The Equitable Life Assurance Society lends $500,000 on the New York University property at Morris Heights. The Cheesebrough property, on the Southern Boulevard and One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street, is mortgaged for $70,000, a mortgage of $104,000 is placed on a manufacturing plant near One Hundred and Forty-first Street, having a frontage of 75 feet on Rider Avenue running through to the canal, another of $85,000 was placed on the apartment building covering the junction of Boston and Third Avenues at One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street, containing about two and a half city lots.

"It has been said that there is an overproduction of flat houses in the Bronx. This is not so. As soon as a new block is finished it is rented. Ninety per cent. of the flats rented in the district are to former residents of Manhattan who prefer to pay lower rents for better accommodations. There is a great demand for two and three story houses, and stores in good locations are in great demand, all of which speaks well for the prosperity of the Bronx.

"As to the future of the borough, that is assured, for the natural trend of the city's growth is northward, and the Bronx, with all its proposed improvements, will reap a golden harvest. The Manhattan elevated railroad will undoubtedly complete its line to Fordham, and to bear this out, a number of consents of owners and mortgagees along the line has been secured and filed as an addition to those which had previously been recorded ten years ago.

"The completion of the Willis Avenue Bridge and the viaduct across the Harlem Railroad yards means a thoroughfare from First Avenue, Manhattan, to Yonkers and Mount Vernon, by way of Willis, Melrose and Webster Avenues, which will in all probability receive one name, and thereby become the most extensive avenue in the Bronx.

"The One Hundred and Forty-ninth Street Bridge will make another great improvement, as it brings the west side close to our doors. Work on this structure is to begin before the new year sets in.

"Rapid transit for our borough is now an assured fact, and for immediate relief the suggestion that the Harlem and New Haven Railroads be used for that purpose is highly commendable."

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

CENTRAL NEW ENGLAND'S PLANS.

Will Build an Extension and Compete with New Haven Road.

The Central New England Railway Company, which has a system of 181 miles, and whose main line is from Campbell Hall to Silver Nails, N. Y., and which leases the Hartford and Connecticut Western and the Dutchess County Railroad, is to proceed with its extension between Tariffville, Conn., and Springfield, Mass. This has become possible by the decision in its favor by Judge Prentice of Hartford, in the case of a farmer named Montague at West Suffolk, who blocked the operations by litigation. When the extension is in operation the Central New England will compete with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company on New England west-bound traffic.

Of the plans of the Central New England its Treasurer, J. K. O. Sherwood, says that its relations with the New York Central are agreeable, while it holds the New Haven responsible for the Montague farm suit and cherishes a grievance against that company on this account. The New England has a great advantage through its use of the Poughkeepsie Bridge, which gives the shortest natural route between the Pennsylvania coal regions and New England, and for this traffic the New Haven cannot successfully compete, and will have to greatly reduce rates east to west. The New England has a water front of 2,000 feet at Rhinebeck, and will next Spring operate a steamship line, which will be managed by C. W. Chapin, and the New England's system with this will make up an important New England and Hudson River rail and boat route for New York. Mr. Sherwood adds:

"We have a forty-year traffic contract with the Boston and Albany, which, according to the terms of the lease to the New York Central, is to be kept intact. We have hitherto been unable to take advantage of this contract, as we had no direct connection with the Boston and Albany at Springfield, and any business that passed through Hartford was subject to the switching charges of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, thus precluding any profits to us.

"Hitherto we have had to haul our cars westward practically empty, as the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad was in a position to force this condition. Now our connections through the Boston and Albany with the Boston and Maine and other lines in the northeastern part of New England will enable us to compete better with the New Haven Road."

TO USE WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Ann Arbor Railroad Adopts the System for Its Lake Ferry.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—A dispatch from Toledo says the Ann Arbor Railroad will put wireless telegraphy to practical test by introducing it in connection with the car ferry business across Lake Michigan. The contract with the Marconi people has been closed, and the system will be introduced at once. The stations will be at Frankfort and at a point near Menominee, Mich. The distance to be covered is about eighty-three miles.

The Ann Arbor is attempting to keep this ferry open all Winter, and the new method will receive a thorough test. If it fails a cable will be laid across the lake next year. Representatives of the wireless system express confidence that they will be able to give satisfactory service.

Appointments on Santa Fe System.

These appointments for the service of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railway Company are announced: H. U. Mudge, General Superintendent, made General Manager, succeeding J. J. Frey, resigned; C. F. Ressegule, General Superintendent of Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fé, made General Superintendent of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé; W. Nixon, Superintendent of the Chicago Division, made General Superintendent of Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fé; Avery Turner, Assistant General Superintendent of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé, made Superintendent of Chicago Division. The office of Assistant General Superintendent is abolished.

Jersey Central's Atlantic City Route.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey will on Jan. 8 begin operating a fast passenger train service to Atlantic City. New trains of parlor and vestibuled coaches will be used, and new locomotives of the compound type, and the largest and fastest yet introduced, will be in service. The route is via Lakewood. A train will leave New York at 3:20 P. M., arriving at Atlantic City at 6:35 P. M. Returning, the train leaves Atlantic City at 2:10 P. M., arriving in New York at 5:25 P. M.

Increase of Capital Approved.

ALBANY, Dec. 16.—The State Board of Railroad Commissioners to-day approved of the increase of stock of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company from $100,000,000 to $115,000,000, the increase to be used for equipment purposes.

HAS YET TO SEE DEWEY ARCH.

City Official Has This Distinction, Though He Stood Almost in Front of It.

It is hard to believe that there is in this city, living south of Central Park, an active man of affairs, who is abroad every day in the public streets, who is as patriotic as Americans generally, and yet has not seen the Dewey arch. Such a person has been discovered. He holds a pretty high position under the Municipal Government. He was greatly disappointed when a sudden family emergency prevented him from seeing and being a part of the great public celebration which marked the Admiral's home coming. He had persistently refused all invitations to go to Madison Square before that and see the progress made on the arch, saying that he did not want to see it until it stood complete in all its beauty.

After the great day had come and gone he found himself very busy for a week or so with the duties of his office, which had been much increased by work in connection with the reception, and found it impossible to get to Madison Square while daylight endured. He promised himself that he would make a special trip on purpose to see the arch but it so happened that on every day he set something else intervened and he did not get to that part of the city at all until last Wednesday when he was summoned by telephone to the Fifth Avenue Hotel on a matter of urgent official business.

He walked down Broadway from the elevated station at Thirty-third Street, finally revolving the matter that was heavy on his mind. He arrived at the hotel without looking to right or left, but found that the gentleman he was to see had not yet arrived. He stepped outside the building and, leaning against one of the columns of the portico, gazed down the avenue, still pondering. Finally the man he expected came up, and together they walked into the hotel and had a long talk about the business in hand. The conference lasted longer than either expected, and when it broke up the office holder found he was just a little late for another important engagement, and he hurried from the front entrance of the hotel and through Twenty-third Street to Sixth Avenue.

"Well, sir, you have seen the arch at last," was the salutation of his first subordinate when he got to his office a little later in the day. The chief's jaw dropped and his eyes opened wide as he replied: "Seen the arch! Why, confound it, I haven't seen it. I forgot all about its being there and I stood in front of the hotel for fifteen minutes wondering what those big marble columns with the white balls on top had been put up there for since the last time I was there." Then he went straight to his appointment calendar and wrote on the leaf for next Sunday: "Morning—go to see the Dewey arch, sure."

TEACHES MUSHROOM RAISING.

Miss Torrey of Orange Has Discovered a New Field in Women's Work—Her Other Occupations.

There is a clever little woman in Orange, N. J., who is doing something entirely new in the line of women's work. She is teaching the insidious art of raising mushrooms. She is Miss Adeline W. Torrey, who is very well known from her social standing in New York, as well as in New Jersey. She was the founder and organizer of the Daughters of the Revolution of the latter State, and is a member of the Orange Woman's Club.

There have been several women before this who have gone into mushroom raising, but Miss Torrey is without doubt the first to give instructions in the art. That it is an art and a difficult one to learn she discovered herself when she first attempted it. She had good common sense, business sense, though she had not been long a business woman, and not wishing to follow a penny-wise-and-pound-foolish policy, when she went into the work she decided to learn it thoroughly and properly, and she engaged a professional mushroom raiser to give her lessons.

The idea of a teacher she found by that experiment was excellent, but not always practical. Mushroom growers are not anxious for competitors, and at the close of her course of instruction she found that she did not know much more than she did in the first place, and had spent a good deal of money. The art could be taught, but it had not been. Then she started to work on her own hook. She visited the plant of a mushroom grower who had been very successful, found that his methods did not suit the conditions of the beds she was to have in her own house in Orange, and by taking up various books went to work herself and evolved methods of her own. These proved very satisfactory, her mushrooms began to come up bravely, and she has now more customers than mushrooms, and always standing orders.

The teaching came about incidentally, and Miss Torrey, seeing her opportunity, took advantage of it. A woman who was fond of mushrooms decided to raise them for her own table, but she did not know how to go to work to have it done.

"Why don't you go to Miss Torrey and have her give your gardener instructions?" inquired a mutual acquaintance.

"I would be only too glad to if she would do it," said the mushroom lover, and she sent for Miss Torrey forthwith.

"I felt like a naughty child who hadn't learned its lesson, and was going to make a failure and be punished, when I was first asked to give the directions for making some one's else mushroom bed," says Miss Torrey. "I had never done anything of the kind before, but I thought I might as well make a beginning, and I tok the little book of directions which I had prepared myself and started out. That was the way I began giving lessons.

"The woman was delighted with my home-made book of directions, and wanted one somewhat enlarged, with all the particulars for mushroom cultivation in it, so I went home, filled it out a little more fully, and copied it. Now I go and give lessons for a certain number of days at $5 a day, or I will undertake to direct the whole preparation of the beds and give my book of instructions for $25."

Miss Torrey has been raising mushrooms for herself for the past four years. She has a man to do the heavy work, preparing the soil for the beds, and sprinkling them when they need it, and she gathers the mushrooms and delivers them to her customers. These are many of them prominent New York women, friends of Miss Torrey, and others are in Orange. Their orders are standing, and when several pounds are needed for a special occasion the order is given a few weeks in advance so that the mushrooms may be ready to fill it. Mostly the large mushrooms of broiler size are preferred to the buttons. It is too much trouble to keep in touch with the market prices of mushrooms, which vary from less than a dollar to over two, and Miss Torrey charges one price for her products, $1 a pound the year through.

She gets her beds laid and planted about the 1st of October, as early as it is pleasant to store them in a house cellar, and in about six weeks the mushrooms appear, and from then on she usually has them constantly until March, though the time may vary a little. Her beds are in a room partitioned off in the cellar, and the room has such additional heat as it may need besides that given from the furnace, in the coldest weather, by a single gas jet in one of the pipes running through the small room.

The mushrooms are only one of Miss Torrey's ventures. When she found it necessary to go into business five years ago she decided she would be the proprietor of whatever undertaking she went into, and the first was the practical work of preserving. Tomato butter and tomato relish made from old receipts to be served with meats, are her specialties, with orange marmalade, currant jelly, and preparation of piccalilli.

These she supplies to the woman's exchanges in New York and Orange, as well as to many private families. That was her first work, and she superintends it with a strong woman to help her with the manual labor. It was a year later that she took up the mushroom culture, and also that of violets, for which she has a hotbed in the yard, the two working in to advantage at a season when the preserving is over. Now the business has been worked up so that a good many hundred dollars pass through the proprietor's hands in the course of a year. This is not all profit, for there is a great deal of outlay required.

LEAKAGE FROM WATER PIPES.

City Club Denies It Only Aggregates 4 Per Cent. of the Supply.

The contention made by Commissioner Dalton of the Department of Water Supply that the leakage from defective pipes, hydrants, and underground connections does not aggregate more than 4 per cent. of the supply, and that such leakage is far below the average in other great cities, was vigorously denied yesterday by members of the City Club who have been investigating the subject. One of the members of the club cited statistics from official reports of the Water Department showing that in 1890 New York City, embracing the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, received 77 gallons per capita per day, while in 1899 the daily supply amounted to 121 gallons per capita. Liverpool's daily supply is 30 gallons per capita of population, while Providence, R. I., has 35 gallons a day for each inhabitant, and in neither place is there a shortage.

The same man, quoting from a report of Gen. William Ludlow, who was for three years at the head of Philadelphia's waterworks, said, "Forty gallons per day per head is an ample amount for all purposes," and from an article on the subject of waste by Col. G. E. Waring, Jr., "The distributing system of every large water supply in America is a seine. Whatever else may happen, the underground leak may be depended upon twenty-four hours in the day and 365 days in the year."

AZTEC LIFE ILLUSTRATED

Significance of the Exhibit of Ancient Mexican Art.

MYSTERY OF THE CODICES

As Represented in American Museum, Scholars May Decipher Them — Forbidding Sacrificial Stones.

The opening of a Hall of Ancient Mexican Art in the American Museum of Natural History a few days ago might almost be said to mark an epoch in the history of that institution, for it places it at once in the first rank, among all the museums of the world, in one of the most important fields of American archaeology—that pertaining to what is popularly known as the Aztec people. Within the past few years investigation in this field has received a pronounced impetus through the efforts of public-spirited men in this country and abroad, and the American Museum has been the first institution to reap the benefit.

The new exhibit is believed to be the most comprehensive of its kind in existence, and comprises a large collection of reproductions of ancient Maya and Aztec "books," casts of all the principal sculptures, both monumental and mural, and a fair representation of the original objects. It is due largely to the generosity of the Duke of Loubat that an effective representation of objects scattered thousands of miles apart is now made for the first time. Many of the ancient monuments are still buried in the jungles of Southern Mexico and Guatemala, amid the ruins of the old temples, a few are in the National Museum of Mexico and in similar institutions elsewhere, while the originals of the old codices, or picture writings, are carefully preserved in the great libraries of Europe, and attempts to reproduce many of them have not been made until quite recently.

Exploration in this field may now be said to be ahead of investigation—a marked contrast to the conditions which have prevailed for more than a century. But exploration so far has done but little more than scratch the surface. In the interior of Guatemala and in Yucatan there are literally thousands of ruins of temples and other structures which have never been seen by a white man. The lumber men are the pioneers in this region. So heavily wooded is the country, however, that an explorer might pass within fifty feet of a great temple and never know of its existence.

AZTEC PICTURE WRITINGS.

The exhibit of ancient picture writings, reproductions in color of the so-called codices, occupies a long case in the centre of the hall. The originals were executed on prepared deer skins or on paper made from the leaves of the maguey plant, with a surface whitened for the painter, such as is in common use in Mexico. Some of the old Spanish writers described these manuscripts as having been written on the prepared bark of trees, but none of that variety is known. Very few of the Maya codices have been published. Most of those which have been discovered were sent to Europe just after the conquest of Mexico, and have been found in the libraries there by accident. The Aztec manuscripts are more numerous.

Interpretation of these codices is still in its infancy. Numerous attempts to decipher the old writings have been made, but authorities differ so widely that their conclusions cannot be said to have passed beyond the controversial stage. It is known, however, that most of the manuscripts consist largely of chronological tables. The system of writing was a hieratic one, known only to the priests and a few others. One of the main difficulties encountered in the attempts to interpret the ancient writings is their lack of uniformity. In different examples the same ideas are expressed in different ways; in some the variety of colors used is undoubtedly significant, the cardinal points, for example, being always indicated by the same colors, as they are to-day by the American Indians. In other specimens such significance, if it exists, has yet to be determined. Similarly, the symbols employed vary considerably in the different specimens. It is for this reason that the bringing together of accurate reproductions of all the principal codices, it is believed, will have an important influence on the study of the manuscripts.

In the central cases in the hall, filled with the mute relics of long past ages, may be seen what some have regarded as the most momentous event in the history of mankind—the birth of an alphabet. Picture writing in its simple form is the method used by the American Indians, but in the Aztec codices it can be seen in its highest development. The codices also show that the Aztecs used, to a certain extent, a phonetic system, in which the symbols refer not to the thought, but to the sound which indicates that thought when spoken. In some of the specimens conventional symbols were employed to represent the sound of the first syllable of the name of a thing. It was the beginning of the change from picture writing to the phonetic system.

THE STONE OF THE SUN.

The collection of casts of ancient Mexican carvings comprises a large variety, ranging, in time of discovery, from the celebrated calendar stone, which has been on public exhibition for more than a century, to some recently found rock sculptures from Guatemala. The most important specimen represented is the calendar stone, or stone of the sun, as it has been called. This wonderful piece of work, according to the best authority, was completed more than four centuries ago. The original was sunk in the surface of an altar on the top of a pyramid, where the City of Mexico now stands, and it is recorded that on its inauguration the then ruler of the Aztecs killed 100 victims upon it with his own hands, drinking of their blood and eating of their flesh.

The stone represents the division of time of the Aztec system. The Aztec year consisted of 365 days, each of which had a particular name, except the last five, which were nameless and were regarded as unfortunate. The year was divided into two parts, called respectively the moon reckoning, of 260 days, and the sun reckoning, of 105 days. There was another division into eighteen months of twenty days each, and each month comprised four weeks of five days. Fifty-two years made a cycle, and each of those years had a particular name. According to the Aztec belief the world has been destroyed four times, by war, hurricanes, rain, and a general flood, respectively, and the present is the fifth period of creation.

Some of the ceremonies incident to the system are also indicated in the carvings. At the end of each cycle all fires were extinguished and the men went about wearing black masks, for it was believed that the world would then come to an end. On the last night the people went to a neighboring mountain, on the summit of which could be seen, lying upon a sacred circular stone, a man who had voluntarily given himself up for sacrifice. At midnight the priest thrust a knife into the victim's breast and tore out his heart, while another placed a piece of soft wood over the open wound and revolved a stick upon it until a spark was produced. The spark was caught up and carried to a neighboring funeral pile, the flames from which announced to the people that mankind had received a new lease of fifty-two years of existence.

THE SACRIFICIAL STONE.

In the religion of the ancient Aztecs human sacrifice played an important part, and the lives of thousands of human beings were offered to the gods. In the case of distinguished persons, the victim was sometimes allowed the privilege of a personal combat with a man of his own standing and rank before he was sacrificed. These combats took place on a large circular stone. In the centre of the main hall in the museum there is shown a cast, the original of which was long supposed to have been one of these gladiatorial stones, but which is now regarded as a sacrificial stone, upon which were placed the hearts of the victims.

The stone is known as the Cuauhxicalli of Tizoc, "Bowl of the Eagles," on account of a large bowl-shaped cavity in the centre, connected by a channel or groove with the rim. It is believed to have been used in connection with the calendar stone. The central bowl is surrounded by grooves, designed to collect the blood from the hearts thrown upon the stone, which was then drained off through the main channel "to wash the face of the sun;" in other words, to be applied to the calendar stone. The stone is believed to have been carved when the elder Montezuma ruled, and was inaugurated in 1448 A. D.

In addition to the two examples which have been noted, there are many other specimens, equal in size and hardly less important. On entering the hall, the most conspicuous object on the left is the so-called Great Turtle of Quirigua, an exceptionally fine specimen of carving. Beyond this, on both sides of the hall, there are several finely carved pillars. The largest of these monoliths, some twenty-five feet in height, is too high for the hall, and has been placed on the floor below. On the right of the upper hall is shown the Temple of the Cross, the back of which consists of a bas-relief known as the Tablet of the Cross, consisting of three sections. The right-hand section was brought out by the explorer Stephens half a century ago, and for many years was stored away with the rubbish in the cellar of the Patent Office Building in Washington, unknown and unvalued. It is now in the National Museum and is perhaps its most valued possession. The carving is exceptionally fine and well executed, and the symbols of the days and months, although carved in stone, correspond almost exactly with those on some of the painted manuscripts. The collection is especially rich in these base-reliefs showing hieroglyphics, numerous specimens being shown on the walls and on screens in the hall.

MANY ORIGINAL SPECIMENS.

In the class of original objects the exhibit is also rich. The American Museum has been able to secure many of these under its arrangement with the Mexican Government, and others have come to it from various sources. In cases at the ends of the hall there are many Tarascan terra cotta figures, sculptures in stone, pottery, jadeite ornaments, copper implements, carved stone yokes, &c. In a case by itself stands a life size terra cotta figure of a warrior in cotton armor. Not more than one-sixth of the original specimens in the possession of the museum have been placed on exhibition, owing to lack of room. Eventually the objects will be brought together and placed in the adjoining hall on the west, which is not yet completed by the builders.

One of the most interesting exhibits in this class is that of funeral urns, made of pottery elaborately decorated. Within recent years the demand for these by museums and private collectors has been so great that the business of counterfeiting them in Mexico has asumed quite respectable proportions. The museum has in its store rooms, and will eventually place on public exhibition, a case devoted especially to these counterfeits, so that the tourist may learn before he leaves his own country the pitfalls which await him in the land of the Aztecs.

M. I. BLOCH MISREPRESENTED.

Charges Against the Dieppe Casino Director Without Foundation.

In THE NEW YORK TIMES of Oct. 14 last there appeared a dispatch from Paris which was to the effect that an Englishman named Derrick, together with his master, a Capt. Murphy, had been attacked by police detectives at Dieppe, and the servant had been so seriously injured that he died some days later. It was further stated that Capt. Murphy had incurred the wrath of the Dieppe Casino officials because he had secured the conviction of the manager of the Casino, a man named I. Bloch, for swindling. It was further said that Bloch was "an adventurer and ex-jailbird."

It appears that the Paris correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and through him this newspaper, have been the victims of a campaign of revenge systematically carried on by the man Murphy. Emile M. Blum of 22 Broad Street, formerly United States Consul at Barcelona, is a friend of M. Bloch, and from the latter he has received a statement, together with a number of clippings from French newspapers, which, Mr. Blum says, give the true facts of the case.

M. Bloch declares that at Dieppe last Winter a man who called himself Capt. Murphy conducted himself so scandalously in the Casino, where he quarreled and fought with all those with whom he came in contact, that admission to him had to be refused. It appears from L'Eclaireur of Paris that Murphy assaulted Lee Jortin, the English Consul at Dieppe; that he had been sentenced to eight days' imprisonment for other misconduct, and that on his appealing to the court at Rouen the judgment was affirmed and the penalty doubled.

Then, it is alleged, Murphy began a systematic campaign in the English newspapers, with the object of revenging himself on the management of the Dieppe Casino and the police of that place. The servant whom he declared to have been assassinated testified before the Correctional Tribunal, saying that he knew nothing of any assault on either himself or his master. He was at home when the alleged assault was said to have been committed.

Furthermore, M. Bloch is not a jailbird, and bears the best of reputations. In certain English and American newspapers he was represented as having served two years in prison as a consequence of the Max Lebaudy affair. M. Bloch says that he never even met Lebaudy, and was certainly never in prison. He mentions the name of Gen. Porter, the United States Ambassador to France, to whom he is known, in support of his denial of the allegations.

The offense for which Murphy was imprisoned was for threatening Dieppe police officials with a revolver, and assaulting the members of the force who arrested him after he had smashed one of the doors of the Casino.

Verdict of $2,670 for Mrs. Ames.

Mrs. Annie Ames of Jersey City, in whose suit against the North Jersey Street Railway Company her baby played so important a part, yesterday secured a verdict for $2,670. Mrs. Ames was riding on one of the company's cars on June 19, 1898, when the motorman started the car suddenly. Mrs. Ames was thrown to the floor of the car and her ankle sprained. When the verdict was announced, Warren Dixon, counsel for Mrs. Ames, lifted the baby and kissed it. He said the baby was entitled to the credit of the victory.

EX-SPEAKER REED SUMS UP.

Remark of Lawyer Hill in Brooklyn Gas Syndicate Suit Brings "Tears to His Voice."

Justice Werner, presiding in the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, called by Gov. Roosevelt to try election cases, adjourned all the trials of men who have been indicted for violation of the election laws yesterday for the purpose of hearing the summing up of the case of Logan against the Brooklyn Gas syndicate, the evidence in which was heard by him before the election trials began.

Ex-Speaker Reed, ex-Judge Thacher, and ex-Judge Cohen are counsel for the defendants. William B. Hornblower is counsel for Logan, the plaintiff. J. L. Hill is counsel for E. C. Benedict, a separate defendant, who has some issues in common with the plaintiff in the case.

Edward P. Lyon, associate counsel with Mr. Hornblower, opened for the plaintiff. He said the Williamsburg stock was the keystone of the consolidation, and Logan controlled 7,202 shares, to 10,717 controlled by all the others in the syndicate, thus being able to block the consolidation. The entire testimony, leaving out the plaintiff's own, was a proof of the contention that Logan put this into the pool with the agreement that it should be used for purposes of consolidation only and not sold. Mr. Lyon said the syndicate agreement seemed to him a sham, an ex-post facto agreement got up to get what could be got out of Logan.

Mr. Hill followed, and then Mr. Reed began his argument. He said Logan had gone into the Brooklyn Gas consolidation to save the value of his holdings, knowing that consolidation was on foot. For every dollar he put in he gained three or four, said Mr. Reed, and then he referred sarcastically to a statement of Mr. Hill that the syndicate paper had been signed for the purpose of cheapening Logan's stock. This was too bad, Mr. Reed said, adding, "Why, it actually brings tears to my own voice to think of it."

"Every man connected with these dealings," he continued, "was struggling for his own interest. Trade is always a contest. It was a struggle of human selfishness on each side. That is legitimate; it is recognized by law; it is proper and suitable. The plaintiff and his counsel have shown the utmost horror of what they call stockjobbing.

"What the law requires of men is that they shall keep within the Revised Statutes. The law requires that they shall be honest in their transactions. That is all it requires. Logan had a perfect right to buy up and get control of stocks for the purpose of blocking this consolidation and forcing a good price for getting out of the way. We were endeavoring to consolidate, and he was trying to get as much out of us as he could."

In replying to another phase of Mr. Lyon's argument, Mr. Reed said: "Laws do not enforce the highest equity—using, of course, the word in the broad sense of humanity. They cannot right every shade of wrong. What we endeavor to do is to manage in a fair way, taking into account human infirmities.

"I should like to admit that what Mr. Logan has said is true, if I could, even for argument's sake," he remarked. "If Mr. Logan thinks that this whole consolidation should be undone because a mistake was made about his little interest, why, the only thing we can say is that there is really too much ego in Mr. Logan's cosmos."

Mr. Hornblower replied to Mr. Reed. It was decided to adjourn till Tuesday afternoon to hear the summing up in the case of Logan against Benedict.

BANK SUES LORILLARDS.

Eleventh Ward Institution's Old Claim Against Jacob Lorillard.

A suit has been brought in the Supreme Court by the Eleventh Ward Bank against Pierre and Louis Lorillard to recover a sum of more than fifty thousand dollars, which is claimed to be due from Jacob Lorillard's estate to the bank.

The bank, in 1890, took a claim from Jacob Lorillard for $50,000, which it assigned to George E. Weed, who brought a suit, in which he recovered judgment for the amount due, with costs, the total amount being $55,063. The defendant, in 1897, and again in 1898, paid $1,000 of the judgment. This left a balance of $53,063, and, as Weed was unable to collect it, he assigned his claim back to the bank.

The bank now claims that Jacob Lorillard is in Europe and may not return, and that Louis and Pierre Lorillard are trustees for him under the will of his father, Peter Lorillard. The bank wants to collect its claim from this trust.

DEWEY ARCH SUBSCRIPTIONS.

August Belmont to Give $5,000—Amount So Far Promised, $200,000.

August Belmont, it was announced at the offices of the Citizens' Committee to Perpetuate the Dewey Arch yesterday, has promised $5,000 to the fund. Many large subscriptions were received in the course of the week just ended, amounting in all to nearly $30,000.

The Metal Trades Committee, through H. H. Hendricks, its Chairman, has handed in checks amounting to over $5,000. This is the first subscription from any of the various trade and business committees, and large amounts are expected from all the others, some of them this week. The metal trade men have also subscribed additional amounts, which will be sent to the Treasurer of the Citizens' Committee soon.

The total amount received or promised up to date reaches about $200,000—one-fifth of the entire sum required. This does not include some promises conditional on the entire amount necessary being subscribed.

A meeting of the Executive Committee is to be held next Wednesday evening at the Savoy Hotel. Plans for entertainments in the course of the Winter in aid of the fund will be formulated, and it is expected that some decision will be reached on the question of making public the names of contributors and the amounts subscribed.

Iron Foundry Changes Hands.

The old established business of Howell & Saxtan, iron founders, who for the past forty years were situated at Park Avenue and Hudson Street and at 351 Adams Street, Brooklyn, and of which the late James Howell was a member, yesterday passed into the hands of the Eagle Iron Works, Jacob May, President. The sale includes the buildings, which will be demolished, and patterns and machinery of both the foundry and shops, which will be transferred to shops of the Eagle Iron Works.

Victim of Poisoned Tea Better.

Christian Hitt, who was poisoned at the Mutual Chemical Works, West Bergen, by sulphate of chromium placed in his tea, was somewhat improved yesterday, and the physicians had hopes of his recovery. Henry Bolzer of 112 Morris Street, who is in the City Prison charged with putting the poison in Hitt's tea, will not be arraigned until Hitt is able to appear against him.

SUES THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

W. E. Young Wants Reinstatement and $200,000 Damages.

An action has been commenced in the Supreme Court by William Euclid Young against the New York Stock Exchange, through its President, in which the plaintiff demands an injunction restraining the defendant from excluding him from the privileges of membership, and also damages in the sum of $200,000 on account of the pecuniary loss and injury to his reputation by reason of the action of the Board of Governors of the Exchange in expelling him on Dec. 30, 1896.

Young was a member of the Exchange for nearly thirty years, having joined it in 1860. [illegible] Dec. 22, 1896, he was the [illegible] representative of the firm of E. B. Cuthbert & Co. About a week later, on Dec. 30, after a trial before the Board of Governors, he was convicted of having participated in an irregular transaction in connection with Jacob Kirkner and expelled. He protested against the action of the Board of Governors and endeavored to have it reversed, but without success. In January, 1897, he made a general assignment to E. F. Bullard.

Young's attorneys in the action are Montignani, Mallory & Ehmendorf of Albany.

Sale of Postage Stamp Sets.

Postmaster Van Cott invites attention to the fact that the sale to the public of newspaper and periodical postage stamps in sets ceases on Dec. 31, and states that there are still a number of sets on hand which may be purchased if application is made before the above-mentioned date.

WHAT INTERESTS CHICAGO

Another Religious Convention of the Liberal Type.

TO GET RID OF PLANK WALKS

Three Thousand Miles of Them Now in the City—Good Year for Lake Commerce—Robbers Flourish.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—This city, which ever since the World's Fair has been the meeting place of conventions of the liberal religions, saw another gathering of that kind this week in Sinai Temple. Dr. Thomas of the People's Church, presided, and by his side sat Rabbi Hirsch, Dr. Joseph Stolz, the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, the Rev. Galusha Anderson, and many others. Dr. Thomas paid a tribute to Sinai Temple and Dr. Hirsch in his opening address, saying that if it had not been for that congregation, the Congress would not have had a place to meet. All dogmatism was forgotten in the meetings and the spirit of love was the only religion manifested. All present united in repeating the Lord's Prayer and all bowed to receive the benediction invoked by Dr. Hirsch.

Dr. Anderson of Chicago University said: "This is an honest period to-day; skeptics are honest in their statements. This is a missionary period, too; every door in the world is open. Environment will not save people. True, sweatshops and the like should cease, but you must save individualy by the message revealed in the death of our Lord. Don't reconstruct society to save men, but save socicty and men with it. Do not discuss theology; preach to the average man. We must be born again in the spirit of faith. Our bond is love that binds us to the King and binds us to one another in the kingdom. He who fears God and accepts righteousness is eligible to the kingdom."

The sessions continued three days, and to-morrow the wife of Dr. Thomas is to be ordained as an assistant to her husband in the People's Church work.

The production of "Quo Vadis" as a spectacle occurred at McVicker's Theatre Tuesday night with over 200 people on the stage, including some very capable actors. The production had the advantage of magnificent stage setting, and from the manner in which it was received, it is probable that it will be a popular success. The adapter had, of course, to make many changes, particularly in the way of eliminations, in order to get the story in presentable dramatic form, but the general opinion appeared to be that he had accomplished the work with commendable skill. Great credit is due to Max Freeman for his management of the stage.

A FRONTIER TOWN FEATURE.

It will seem strange to a New Yorker to read that there are in this, the second city of the country, and one which aspires to rival the metropolis, over 3,000 miles of plank sidewalks and that some of these are within a mile of the City Hall. Chicago presents many characteristics of the frontier town, and this is one of the most noticeable to the stranger. The business streets of the down town district are, of course, of stone, as are also those of the principal residence thoroughfares, but there are many hundred miles of wooden walks within a few miles of the city's centre. Of necessity these get out of repair and cause accidents and much inconvenience.

Chicago has paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in damages to people who have been injured by these defective walks. Plans for the elimination of these eyesores are now under way, and it is proposed to omit from future specifications for public work all reference to wood as a material for the walks. This will come up in the form of an ordinance, which the Council will probably pass, as a majority of the members have awakened to the objection to the old-fashioned walks. Stone, cement, or cinders will be the substitutes, the latter being used upon the unimproved streets.

Vessel men and shippers generally are congratulating themselves on the fact that the lake season just closed was not so disastrous as the previous one. The total number of vessels which went out of existence was forty-two, against fifty-eight in 1898. The tonnage lost this year was only 16,000, while that of last year was nearly double that amount. Last year's losses were so heavy that they affected freight rates, but this year no such result will be experienced. Of all kinds there were 569 losses, and of these Lake Erie, as usual, had the greatest number, no less than 98 being charged to that body of water. Fully 50 per cent. of the total losses of the year are said to have occurred in the narrow channels connecting Lake Superior with Lake Huron and Lake Huron with Lake Erie. These disasters took the form of strandings and collisions, caused by crowding in those narrow passages. The increased size of lake craft in the last few years has greatly added to the number of disasters in such places and vessel men will urge upon Congress the necessity of increasing the capacity of those channels. The loss to commerce through the blockade at the Soo a short time ago was greater than that caused by any direct disaster.

GOOD YEAR FOR UNDERWRITERS.

The underwriters who have carried large lines this season are said to have made much money. This has been increased by the fact that the disastrous season of 1898 drove many out of the business in disgust and left the field to a smaller number. Rates have been from 25 to 75 per cent. higher. The grain-carrying trade has been especially profitable to the underwriters, for the percentage of losses in this line was very small. These facts will send a good many back into the insurance business, for this year's showing has caused lake risks to be looked upon with great favor on London Lloyds and other exchanges.

The opinion of Mayor Harrison that the sidewalks are public property and that the city should control the spaces underneath them, even to exacting rent therefore, was embodied in a decision rendered this week by Judge Dunne in a case where a man injured by falling into a coalhole sued the owner of the building in front of which the hole was. The court said: "It is against public policy to allow public property to be used by private individuals without requiring the private individuals or corporations so using public property to insure citizens passing over the public property against any loss they may suffer by reason of the private use of such property."

Judge Dunne said that the subject had never been submitted to the upper court on the broad question of public policy, and both property owners and the city would look with interest for the Supreme Court's opinion. He overruled the defendant's demurrer and an appeal was taken. The decision has a special bearing on owners who have extended subways under sidewalks, as is the case in much of the down-town district. Under the ruling the property owner would not be released from liability should any citizen be injured through any defect in the walk. Where the Supreme Court has ruled in such cases and held that the tenant was liable because of his possession of the property, the question of public policy has never been considered. Judge Dunne is confident that the upper court will reverse its rulings when it considers the question that it is against public policy to allow private individuals to control public property without insuring the public from injury.

GOOD TIMES FOR ROBBERS.

The season of robberies and burglaries has been unusually profitable for the parties of the first part, and the police have made the annual announcement that the reign of crime has got to stop. From Nov. 11 to Dec. 9 over $20,000 was taken by the highway robber, the burglar, and the pickpocket. Thieves climbed poles and stole 1,000 feet of copper telegraph wire. They got away with 5,000 cigars, and then, becoming bolder, stole the laprobe from a Police Inspector's buggy. Two robberies occurred on elevated trains in the presence of several persons. Nine stores were broken into, and in one case a safe was blown open. Nineten residences were entered, many of them in the daytime, and over $4,000 worth of property stolen. Of course, the police have not been idle. They have made several clever captures and recovered several thousand dollars' worth of goods. But the citizens are highly indignant at the frequency of the hold-ups.

The Associated Charities propose to rid the city of tramps, but they can hardly do that without the assistance of the police, and the Mayor has put himself on record as opposing the movement. The charity officials have collected statistics to show that giving shelter to tramps in the police stations in Winter is a very bad thing, for the provident associations which demand some labor in return for food and shelter are by no means so well patronized as they should be, while the station houses are crowded with the wanderers. Letters on this subject have been received by the Associated Charities from experts in various parts of the country. Josiah Flynt, who was once a tramp himself, and now writes for the magazines, says that Mayor Harrison is "the hoboes' friend," but the Mayor, so far from denying this, rather says he is not ashamed of the phrase. He says that nothing will induce him to close the station houses to the homeless in Winter so long as the shelters provided by organized charities fail to meet the requirements of the time.

The coming year will see built the manual training school provided for in the will of George M. Pullman. The sleeping car man set aside the sum of $1,000,000 for that purpose, and the funds will be transferred to the trustees early in the coming year. It will consist of stock in the Palace Car Company, which the trustees may retain or convert into money or other securities at their option. The trustees are not hampered in any way. The school is to be free, but out-of-State pupils may be admitted on payment of a small tuition fee. As soon as the school is incorporated a Superintendent will be chosen and the site selected. It should be one of the finest institutions of the kind in the country when it is in running order. It was Mr. Pullman's hope to start the school in his lifetime and that it should be situated in the town of Pullman.

"Buy China and Glass Right"

HIGGINS & SEITER.

FINE CHINA
RICH CUT GLASS.

MESSRS. HIGGINS & SEITER are of the opinion that it is just the kind of people who habitually read THE TIMES—people of sound judgment and educated tastes—who will most thoroughly appreciate the magnificent Holiday Exhibit of Rich China and Fine Cut Glass, now on view at Nos. 50, 52, and 54 West Twenty-second Street. It may surprise some to know that we now carry the largest and best selected stock of these beautiful wares to be found in the United States, if not in the world; but such is the fact. The famous price policy of "Always at Least ¼ Less Than Elsewhere," supplemented by judicious buying and fair dealing, has worked remarkable results. Certainly there is to-day no other such a "Store for Presents" in the City of New York. If you have any doubt upon the subject, come and be convinced. Meantime, note the following paragraphs—and prices:

Marble Pedestals, Bronzes, Figures, Etc. We have recently received some very handsome marble figures, pedestals, bronze figures, (some with electric-light attachment,) very artistic. Marble pedestals, full size. $12.50 each.

Chocolate Sets, Brandy and Coffee Sets, Etc. A most complete assortment of chocolate sets, brandy and coffee sets, Five o'clock tea sets, etc., are shown in our store, No. 54. These are all moderately priced and make very effective and acceptable gifts.

Teakwood Tables. Importing Teakwood tables direct from Canton, China, thus saving middlemen's profit, enables us to sell these at prices very much below those usually asked. For instance, a Teakwood table, hand carved, marble top, 31 inches high, size 12x16 inches, one shelf underneath.. $5.80 each.

Cordial or Liqueur Sets. If you are at a loss to know what to get for a gentleman, see our assortment of cordial, brandy, or liqueur sets shown in store No. 52. There are many different styles, shapes, decorations, prices, etc. One set of green glass with gold edges, consisting of six glasses, one decanter, and handled mirror, complete set.. $7.70.

Rich English China Plates. Our customers tell us that there is no such assortment of rich English china service plates to be seen elsewhere; judging from our large sales this must be true. A description here would be impossible; we would like you to see them.

Plates at $2.00. From one entire table you have your choice of some very handsome English and French plates; there are many different styles, decorations, etc., at.. $2.00 each.

Boudoir Sets. A great many different patterns of rich and handsomely decorated boudoir sets, consisting of brush and comb tray, three covered boxes, one hairpin tray, and one ring stand; instead of $15.00 real value..... $7.50.

Smokers' Articles. An inexpensive and yet always acceptable gift to a gentleman is a cigar or tobacco jar or pipe rack. We have a most complete line of these imported novelties, all at moderate prices.

Manufacturers' Samples. One of the most fortunate happenings of the season in the china and glass world is the arrival at this time (just in the height of the shopping season) of a large shipment of manufacturers' samples, consisting of—

Fancy trays, chocolate sets, covered muffin dishes, hair receivers, bon-bons, croton sets, cups and saucers, candlesticks, ink stands, paper racks, etc.; these were all bought at 50 cents on the dollar and will be sold accordingly. We are too busy to stop to mark the entire lot, so we have arranged them on our SPECIAL BARGAIN TABLES as follows:

50c	articles on the	25c	table.
$1.00	"	50c	"
2.00	"	$1.00	"
4.00	"	2.00	"
10.00	"	5.00	"
20.00	"	10.00	"

Lamps. Choose from an entire table of lamps the one which pleases you best, at..... $10.00

We also have a magnificent line of rich hand-painted lamps.

Dinner Ware. We have just received a new pattern in dinner ware. It is a reproduction of an English pattern both in decoration and shape. It is the best we have ever seen. It is Limoges china and has a hair-brown decoration with a key border on a burnished gold edge; handles all solid gold. This is to be sold in open stock—127-piece Dinner Set, $125.00. We would like you to see this and 500 others.

While this advertisement is being prepared we are receiving 100 Limoges china dinner sets, assorted flower decorations, artistic shapes. For those who desire to make a useful Christmas present, or buy a dinner set for their own use, here is an opportunity—instead of marking these at their real value, $25.00, we will sell them during this week at.. $18.00 per set.

Sterling Silver Mounted Cut Glass Punch Bowl. An ample from our cut glass and sterling silver department is a magnificent footed cut-glass punch bowl mounted with very heavy sterling silver hand-chased top..... $125.00.

Those desiring to purchase now can have the goods held and delivered at any date desired. Brooklyn deliveries and calls are now made by our own wagons, thus insuring perfect satisfaction to our Brooklyn patrons.

WILL AID WEATHER BUREAU.

Bill Relating to Appointments and Pensions in This Branch of the Government's Service.

Willis L. Moore, Chief of the United States Weather Bureau, has drafted a bill which is now before Congress, and which, if it becomes a law, will tend, he believes, to establish a discipline and efficiency in the personnel of his bureau second to that in no other portion of the Government service. What he calls an ideal merit system applied from the humblest employe to the Chief of the bureau himself, is the basis of the proposed law. The bill contains several departures from the existing Civil Service law, which Mr. Moore thinks is defective in its application to the bureau, because of the peculiar exigencies of the weather service.

The bill, which was introduced by Congressman James W. Wadsworth, apportions appointments among Senators, Congressmen, and delegates without regard to their political faith. It provides that candidates shall be nominated under such rigid restrictions as to age, physical condition, and education, as shall render it practically impossible for a permanent appointment or promotion to fall to an unfit person. It aims to prevent the use of political influence to obtain promotions or removals, and to render the tenure of office of any employe safe so long as his services are advantageous to the Government, but no longer.

The bill also provides for a pension fund for aged or disabled officials by withholding a certain percentage of all salaries. Some of the reasons advanced for this feature by Chief Moore are that employes work 365 days in the year and longer hours than are usual in any other branch of the public service. They are subject to great vicissitudes of climate, being required to serve from Alaska to the West Indies according to the exigencies of the service, which also prevents them from establishing homes.

According to the proposed measure employes of twenty years' standing, if disabled, may be retired by a retirement board composed of the Chief of the Bureau and two employes, to be selected by the Secretary of Agriculture, and receive a pension equal to 30 per cent. of the highest annual salary they received at any time during their final five years of service. Twenty-five years with disablement may bring an annuity of 40 per cent., and employes who are sixty years old, with thirty years service to their credit, may be retired upon their own request with 60 per cent. pensions, and those who after the same length of service have reached sixty-five years must be retired with 75 per cent.

The bill provides that vacancies in the lowest grade of observer, clerk, and stenographer shall be filled by appointments apportioned among the States and Territories in their alphabetical order and vacancies in the mechanical positions, or as messengers or artisans are to be similarly apportioned, but according to the alphabet reversed. Age limits for appointments range from fifteen to thirty-five years. The bill, if passed, is to go into effect July 1, 1900. Chief Moore has the hearty support of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in the proposed measure.

Flower Mission's Christmas Cheer.

The New York Flower Mission, founded in 1870, will be open Dec. 19, 20, 21, and 22 at 104 East Twentieth Street for the reception and distribution of Christmas cheer for hospitals and insane asylums on the islands and for tenement house sick. Fruit, jelly, candy, pop-corn, Christmas cards, evergreen decorations, and supplies and delicacies of all sorts, or money for their purchase, will be gratefully received, also toys, books, games, and dolls for Randall's Island, and for very poor tenement house children, the latter being supplied in their own homes by responsible charitable visitors.

SIMPSON, CRAWFORD & SIMPSON.

Suggestions That May Decide.

In Leather—A Writing Tablet; may cost 98c., or $10.00 if of finest leather. Collar and Cuff Boxes teach orderliness and save trouble, 98c. to $6.00. Photo Albums, one picture to a page, or two or three; there's a great play of fancy in color, size and leather. Cigar Cases carry exceptional inducements—We closed a sample line in calf, morocco and seal; instead of putting them in stock at $1.50 to $4.00, they're on a counter at $1.00, $1.50 and $2.25—a considerable difference. Pocketbooks ought to have a special column, those at 48c. and 95c. especially so. Nine-tenths of the stock must be left out, but your visits will tell all and make up for the omission.

In Silver—Take for example Hollow Ware and Table Ware. There is pleasure to giver and recipient in the exclusive, uncommon designs we monopolize. No fear of duplication on a friend's table, with the comfortable consciousness that your gift is newest of the new. Tiny spoon to massive tureen, this display surpasses all, and its prices are consistently reasonable.

In Bags—The $5.00 Suit Case deserves place among any man's possessions; you buy a $6.75 value, good all through and good to look at. Alligator Hand Bags are well to the fore; between $2.89 and $4.50 are all sizes from 12 to 17 inches—handsome adjuncts to shopping or trip. Possibly you have thought of Fitted Bags, with nickel celluloid, silver or ivory equipments; it may decide your wavering ideas to see the great line we show. Have we helped to choice? We haven't begun to tell of a tenth.

SOUGHT ARREST, BROKE WINDOW

Dennis O'Brien, Hungry and Out of Work, Got Desperate.

Dennis O'Brien of 384 Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, early yesterday morning smashed a plate glass window valued at $100 in Otto Oetinger's drug store at 61 South Eighth Street, Brooklyn, in order that he should be arrested. He is twenty-nine years old, and has been out of work for several months. According to O'Brien's story, told to the police, he was shunned by everybody from whom he begged for food, and then, in a fit of desperation, he put his right hand through Oetinger's show window and waited there to be arrested, so that he could be sent to prison.

O'Brien had a deep gash on his right wrist, and he was so weak when he reached the police station that a hurry call for an ambulance was sent to the Eastern District Hospital. Dr. Halpin found that an artery in O'Brien's wrist had been cut by the broken glass. After the man's injuries were bandaged he was locked up. In the Lee Avenue Police Court later he begged Magistrate Lemon to send him to prison. O'Brien was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

NO GAMBLING ON THE TRAINS.

Lackawanna Official Issues an Order on Complaint of Mr. Comstock.

Superintendent Edward G. Russell of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad yesterday issued the following order from the Hoboken offices of the company:

"The Society for the Suppression of Vice having given notice that gambling is being practiced on the company's trains, employes are directed to prevent gambling in the cars of the company and are forbidden to furnish to passengers cards or boards for playing at any game to be used in gambling."

The complaint was made by Anthony Comstock. Mr. Comstock, who lives in Summit, noticed a poker game in the smoker one day last week. Instead of chips the players were using an old deck of cards. No money was in sight, and when Hoboken was reached the men who had played left the train and boarded the boat for New York.

Mr. Comstock walked behind, and heard them trying to settle up in cash what they had won and lost on the way to the city. Each card was equivalent to 10 cents, and a goodly sum changed hands.

Mr. Comstock, when he reached his office, lost no time in sending an account of what he witnessed to Superintendent Russell, and the above order was sent out.

RESCUED BROTHER AND SISTER.

One Boy Throws Them to Another from Roof of Burning House.

During a fire in the five-story brick tenement at 70 Henry Street yesterday morning a little boy and his brother rescued their brother and sister from the roof of the house. They also rescued two other children. The fire started in a coal office on the first floor and did $250 damage.

There are two families on nearly all the floors of the house, while on the top floor lives the Monks family, consisting of the mother, John, twenty-one years old; Mamie, George, and Joseph, the last three small. The families on the floors below the top floor climbed out on the fire-escapes, as the halls and stairs filled with smoke, and made their way to the next house, No. 68.

The Monks family, however, could not do this, as the house is one-story higher than No. 68. So they had to go to the roof, and two children of another family were with them. Joseph Monks is a red-haired boy about fifteen years old, and he works at night. He got home about the time the fire started, and, not being able to make his way into the burning building, went through No. 68 to the roof.

When he saw his mother, two brothers, and sister on the roof of the burning building he told John to throw the children down, and he stood an I broke the falls of George and Mamie and the other two children. Mrs. Monks got down herself, the descent to the roof being but seven feet.

DIDN'T KNOW THEIR FATHER.

Dispute as to Identity of a Body Settled by Missing Man Himself.

A curious instance of children not knowing their father has come up through the finding of a body in the East River at the foot of Thirty-first Street Dec. 7. It was taken to the Morgue, where some of the family of William M. Nolan of 20 Cornelia Street identified the body as his, while others hold opposite views.

William M. Nolan, Jr., went to the Morgue Tuesday and positively identified the body as that of his father, though he said his father did not wear such clothing as that with which the body was clothed. He had brought three friends with him, and, though one of them said that the body was that of Nolan, the other two said it was not.

Margaret and Anna Nolan, daughters of the missing man, went to the Morgue Wednesday and looked at the body. One of them said the body was their father's, but the other was just as positive that it was not. The dispute led to the leaving of the matter with the landlord, who had known Nolan for many years. The landlord visited the Morgue, looked at the body, and said it was not Nolan's.

Several visits were made to the Morgue by the four persons, the son and one sister stoutly maintaining that the body was Nolan's, and the landlord and the other sister being positive that the body was not. Sometimes two would come together and would disagree. The result was that the Morgue keeper scratched the identification off the books and the undertaker who had been instructed to take charge of the interment of the body was informed that the order was countermanded.

While the family were still discussing yesterday afternoon the question whether the body was that of the father or not, Nolan walked in as well as ever.

Convict Proves to be Innocent.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 16.—Joseph Goldberg, who has been serving a term for burglary in the Trenton Prison, has made application to the Court of Pardons for his release. Goldberg was formerly a "stool pigeon" for the New York police and was convicted last year for robbery at Asbury Park. His petition is accompanied by an affidavit made by Benjamin Silverman, who was convicted for the same burglary, in which Silverman declares he swore falsely against Goldberg to satisfy a grudge. Several New York policemen have made affidavits declaring that Goldberg was engaged in New York doing detective work the night the burglary was committed.

At the Play and With the Players

Marital difficulties have, from the very beginning, been the staple of comedy. An interesting play must have a subject that can be understood by everybody, sentiment that touches the common heart, "situations" growing out of misunderstandings and equivocation?. One character or set of characters must have something to conceal from the others, or at least from one other. Matrimonial complexities supply "motive," which is hard enough to find in modern life. Therefore so many of our comedies cling to the same old subject. Everybody comprehends it, can laugh sympathetically at the comic side of it, and realize the unhappiness that can grow out of it.

With the writers of the advanced drama, which is avowedly written above the heads of the "general public," which affects to deal truthfully with human nature and human society above everything else, and to have a better purpose than entertainment, the choice of marital infidelity as a subject is not as easily explainable as it is when the playwrights of the commercial theatre use it. The "advanced" ones rarely get any sort of fun out of it. They stick to the subject, evidently, because it is unpleasant. Their idea always seems to be that to be disagreeable is to be artistic.

Now, comedy of intrigue, of the very brightest description, when it deals with foolish wives and befooled husbands, or the reverse, is apt to be distasteful to persons of mature years who have purged their minds by right living, have felt the sting of sorrow, and come to a realizing sense that the "war of the sexes" is not such an important element in life as flippant, erotic, and depraved writers assume. To the innocent young also the subject is surely not satisfying, though the most famous writers of this kind of comedy in English—Wycherley, Congreve, Farquhar, Vanbrugh, Sheridan, for instance—were young men when they turned out their masterworks.

Granted that there always is a middle class of coarse-minded folks in a theatrical audience, it is, nevertheless, a patent fact that there has been an oversupply of plays making sport of marital relations for many years, and that a work of this kind must have unusual vivacity and originality to secure success. There is always a large audience which is not "nice" for a farce which is not "nice" but sufficiently funny; but comedy is another thing.

Mr. Carton's piece called "Wheels Within Wheels," at the Madison Square Theatre, is comedy, and except in the structural weakness of its second act is as clever an example of the comedy of intrigue as the English stage has lately produced. It is witty and vivacious, it is as nearly original as a work of its kind can be, its characterization is distinct and smart. Of course nobody believes in it—believes that it is true to life in modern London, or that its personages were drawn from observation of life anywhere.

Of all these personages Lord Eric Chantrell is, surely, the most malicious libel on British humanity, worse than the careless Mrs. Bulmer, the selfish baronet, the sottish "man-about-town," or the incredibly silly young wife. This gentleman is represented as an amiable, idling, slow-minded bachelor in middle life, who meets a woman under the most compromising circumstances, has reason enough to believe she is going to the bad, and yet determines to make her his wife. We are not permitted to be in doubt about the slowness of Lord Eric's mind or the depravity of his taste. In the very last scene in the play, after he has proposed marriage to the seemingly defeated and disgraced widow, he is shown to be astounded at her revelation of her innocence.

But Charles Lamb's idea that the personages of artificial comedy must not be judged by the standards of sense and morality that obtain in the workaday world holds as good with Carton as with Congreve. The contemporary writer is smart enough to have allowances made for him. I have no words to excuse the emptiness, the straining for verbal effect, the lack of device which mar the second act of "Wheels Within Wheels," but there is salt in both the other acts, and a three-act piece with two good acts is never to be despised.

The performance of "Wheels Within Wheels" reveals again the agreeable personality and the competent skill of the Australian actress Hilda Spong, whose portrayal of Imogene Parrott in "Trelawny of the Wells" was exactly right. Quite the same measure of praise could scarcely be applied to her acting of Carton's very tough-skinned "woman of the world,' who is, in fact, a "shocker." But doubtless Miss Spong's cheerful and delightfully irresponsible manner of denoting the curious traits of the venturesome widow is valuable in quieting one's apprehensions. It may truthfully be said of Miss Spong that she makes Mrs. Bulmer charming. Mr. Mason acts with all needful skill, too, as the adventurous bachelor, and makes the man just comprehensible enough to cause one to wonder what Carton means by his conduct. But perhaps it is not worth while to wonder.

It is always gratifying to be able to record a triumph for Robert Hilliard. He is a native actor who has presence and force, but has had trouble in finding his exact field. I have no idea that rowdy comedy of the Holcroft pattern is coming in again just because of the success of Mr. Hilliard in the Goldfinchlike rôle of Jim Blagden, but Mr. Hilliard attests his fitness by his humorous portrayal of this roysterer, for "character comedy," and his experience with Carton's play will doubtless turn out to be as useful to him as Arthur Bourchier's was to Bourchier in London. Mr. Hilliard manifestly was too loud in the first performance. Blagden's emphasis was out of all proportion to the small size of the theatre and the rest of the performance. But that was an error easily corrected.

An American abroad has sent me this interesting note:

In Harper's Weekly, (Nov. 25, 1899,) you quote the following dialogue from the play of "Sherlock Holmes":

Holmes—Is the lady old or young?
Billy—Old, Sir.
Holmes—Handsome?
Billy—Four-wheeler, Sir.

Mr. Gillette's version is evidently adapted from the following attributed to W. S. Gilbert:

Scene, the lobby of Doyly Carte's theatre, London. Time, the early days of "Pinafore."

W. S. G., standing by box office as audience is leaving theatre after the play. Enter to him a "long swell," with monocle and much "side."

Long Swell, (peremptorily and with hauteur)—Er-aw! See here, me man, call me a hansom. Look sharp!"

W. S. G., (deadly calm)—Well! You are a four-wheeler; you surely wouldn't have me call you a handsome, now, would you?

As Mr. Dooley might say: "In th' interest of th' alliance, Hinnessy, it is bethter f'r us to give credit to th' hands accrass th' say, f'r anny little jokes they may think thimsilves entitled to."

Mr. Gillette may have heard the Gilbert anecdote, of course. The bit of dialogue was not quoted, however, as an example of original wit. It serves in the play.

"Henry Irving, a Record and Review," by Charles Hiatt, (London, George Bell & Sons,) is that rara avis, a theatrical book really worth reading, and consequently worth printing; one to be recommended cordially to people who like the theatre and enjoy reading about it. It is much better than any other extant book about the career of the greatest English actor of these times.

In the first place Mr. Hiatt writes with authority of the facts of Irving's public career and such in his private life as are of actual interest in connection with his record as an actor. This biographer, if so formidable a term may be fairly applied to Mr. Hiatt, can be appreciative without falling into the blindly adulatory mood. His own criticism is sensible. His selections from the body of published criticism relating to Irving are judicious.

He tells the whole story of Irving's life to the present hour with no superfluous details. He reproduces many interesting play-bills on which the name of his hero has figured, including that one of the historic opening night of the New Royal Lyceum Theatre, Sunderland, Sept. 29, 1856, when Irving made his first appearance on any stage, every first night bill of the London Lyceum under his management, and many of the Bateman régime.

The illustrations include reproductions of many rare portraits of Sir Henry, in character and out of it, as well as caricatures of him, generally in character, made from the hour of his triumph in "The Bells" to the era of "Peter the Great" and "The Medicine Man." A lucid account is given of each of the Lyceum's famous productions, and there are many pictures of scenes in Lyceum plays.

This week will be full of dark days for theatricals—six of them, in fact. Everybody will be shopping, day and night. No full houses can be counted upon except for the plays that are drawing so well that seats must be bought a long while ahead. "On the road" some of the wiser stars and combinations will "rest" this week. In this town there will be a huge theatrical re-awakening Christmas night, but this week there will be nothing new to speak of. At the Garden Theatre Mr. Mansfield will revert to Bernard Shaw's clever play called "The Devil's Disciple," in which his portrayal of the sentimental cynic, Dick Dudgeon, is a work of dramatic art of so great relative value, in these times, as to command much esteem.

EDWARD A. DITHMAR.

MRS. WHIFFEN'S STAGE GOWNS.

And Some of Those of Her Associates in the Company at Daly's.

When is the time coming when there will be a special dress performance of every play in which pretty gowns are worn, when the women in the audeience will have a special view of them and see all the perfections of detail and style that they do not see now?

Shocking, of course, from the point of view of acting alone, but if the art of dressing is not art with a big A, it is art with a small capital; and, oh! there are such attractive things about stage gowns that no one knows except the woman who wears them.

Take "The Manoeuvres of Jane," for instance. There might be a small book written about those gowns and the accessories alone. One thing interesting, when one comes to think of it, is the general sombre effect.

With the exception of Miss Tyree's pink gown and the pink frock of one of the maid-servants, every gown in the play is in dull tones. That is rather a surprise. The elderly English matrons might be expected to wear quiet tones as becoming to their dignity and eminent respectability, but who would expect them on the impulsive, warm-hearted, emotional, headstrong Jane? Wouldn't any one take it for granted that in that first act, where she makes her unwilling entrance into Chaney Court, that she would wear a gay, "perky" little gown of some kind instead of that plain dark-blue cloth? Then the charming gown of panne velvet, in one of the tan shades, might be worn by a most sedate young woman, and the last-act gown of crêpe de chine and white lace is colorless. That big, long, loose coat in which Jane starts off to be married, with its pale-blue lining and the pretty little hat she wears, both very becoming to Miss Manneling, look more like what might be expected of her, but the gowns as a whole must be intended to show unsounded depths in Jane's nature.

Jane has been misunderstood, curbed where she should have been guided, and consequently has taken the bit in her teeth. Her quiet good taste in her frocks proves without doubt that behind the tumultuous outside there are hosts of good qualities that will in time appear and make Jane a fine specimen of an Englishwoman, the practical, sensible mother of a large family of children. But this is of course fine character reading, and goes to an extent that would shock the most realistic dramatist.

That panne gown is very pretty to examine. It is simple, but trimmed with applications of lace and with the touch of pink coral at the neck.

Miss Tyree's pink gown is really twins. The wily Constantia is supposed to spend the night in a small boat with little Lord Bapchild in that gown. But it is the twin gown in which she enters Miss Dodd's house in the morning, miserable, wet and bedraggled. The two gowns were made exactly alike in the first place, pink velvet, pretty lace and all. Then the one was given a little boating expedition all by itself before the play appeared on the first night, and was then reduced to an entirely up-to-date, all-night-in-a-boat condition. It is enough to cause a feminine heartbreak to witness the destruction of such a pretty gown, but that is one of the sacrifices the exigencies of the stage demand.

One of the gowns Mrs. Walcot wears as Mrs. Beechinor the black brocade, has some very pretty effects in pearl embroidery on black net, whose full value must be seen near at hand to be appreciated, but no one in the theatre who sees the big collar of lace that Mrs. Whiffen wears over Lady Bapchild's heliotrope velvet gown would doubt that it was a very charming piece of real lace, though that, too, will reward a closer acquaintance. It is a very lovely piece of lace honiton, with the design of thistle, rose, and shamrock, the pattern of the thistle very distinct. The shamrock and the leaves of the rosebush are woven in here and there and a scalloped edge is formed of the roses. Mrs. Whiffen has a quantity of lovely old laces and many interesting ornaments that she wears in a play like this, and at times when they are appropriate.

MRS. WHIFFEN'S LACES.

"All my laces were given me by my aunt, Louisa Pyne, who was the well-known singer," says Mrs. Whiffen. "She is over seventy now, and of the many laces she accumulated she has given away all but a few, and I have many that she has given me, knowing that they would be useful in my profession. Many people think that this piece of honiton was made to commemorate some special occasion, though the pattern of the rose, shamrock, and thistle is one that is used to represent Great Britain in many ways, is used a great deal even for table cloths. I am only afraid in wearing it that something will happen to it, and there is only one woman I would trust to mend it. She is an Englishwoman who lives near Honiton and understands making pillow laces. She lives in Chicago now, and I send the lace to her by express.

"Laces are worn so much now, and in the character of Lady Bapchild, an English woman of high station, they were so appropriate. The lace ruffles in the sleeves are of old English point. I have put things on just as I thought an elderly English woman would wear them. In the first place she would be a little old-fashioned in her gowns. She would have them made along the lines of the modern gowns, but a little different. A woman of that age would never wear a sheath skirt, so in that heliotrope velvet any one who notices would see that the skirt was made just a little fuller than the modern skirt. She would not wear a décolleté gown, either, and the sleeves come to the elbow. They are a sort of a bell sleeve, with a flare something like a modern sleeve, but yet not just it. The lace is put on perfectly plain, without a fold to show all the beauty of the design.

"Yes, I wear a good deal of old-fashioned jewelry, all my own. One bracelet is of silver, with three large cairngorms set in it, and another broad brand bracelet is of large links interwoven and flexible, and with pink topaz set in the clasp. Then I wear two of the old-fashioned narrow-band gold bracelets, in two pieces with a hinge at one side, and which clasp together at the other with a little gold chain as a guard, bracelets that were worn a great deal at one time. Two brooches that I wear are the old brilliants set in silver that are not to be found now, the kind that are seen in fine old shoe buckles. There is a pair of earrings to match these, and I wear another pair of gold ones that were given me when I was married, thirty-two years ago.

"I like to have things that mean something for my own personal satisfaction, even if they do not all show to the people in front. I can act a great deal better when I feel that I am dressed as the character I represent would be. It is a great deal of work at first, but then when everything is just right you are able to feel perfectly comfortable and forget about the dress. I like to feel in every detail of Lady Bapchild's dress I am like one of those old ladies.

"In the first act, with the gown of tan moiré, I wear a fichu of point de esprit, and the hat that I wear with it is made exactly after the style of the black mushroom garden hat the Queen used to wear driving. Oh, yes, I have seen her in it many times, but not of late years, for she only wears it now in the garden. The milliner made it after my design. I couldn't get any straw, and this is made of black net. The chatelaine watch that I wear in the first act is an old one that was given Mr. Whiffen.

"That is a most charming little watch. It is about the ordinary size of a lady's watch, not like one of those old-fashioned watches which are large and so thin that they have a pancake appearance, but a thick little watch, open-faced and with a jeweled crystal back. This crystal is curved, and shows the watch works through and on the inside of the crystal are the jewels, a crown at the top and a pattern of jewels extending around like a wreath. On the two edges of the watch are rows of tiny jewels, and in the hand of the watch shows some fine old workmanship. Mrs. Whiffen wears the watch pinned at her waist, with a chain falling in loops.

Mrs. Whiffen's second act gown is of gray crepe de chine, worn with a jabot of lace in front. Perhaps the chief characteristic of this is the dull color which might be called lachrymose, for it is while wearing this gown that Lady Bapchild is dissolved in tears.

"I liked the part of Mrs. Mossop in 'Trelawny,'" said Mrs. Whiffen, continuing, and speaking of the parts she enjoyed dressing, "because there was a chance to wear a good many old things, not in the same style as for Lady Bapchild, for Mrs. Mossop was the landlady. But there was a chance to wear old caps and gowns. We keep those old things by us so long that we are rather glad to have a chance to use them after a while. Mrs. Mossop had to be a stout woman, though, and I had to pad a bit, and it was rather uncomfortable.

"I didn't have to learn how to wear the hoop skirts. They were wearing them when I was married. Indeed they are not uncomfortable. They are very easy to walk in; I wondered why I was getting along so easily and freely. One character that I liked was the blind woman in the 'Charity Ball.' She wore everything that looked soft and pretty, as a blind woman would. There were tans and browns, and in the last act, when she was in mourning, a black gown, but all with soft fichus.

"I always think of any one who is blind dressed in soft colors. I should want to dress them that way. There must always be soft colors for soft and gentle parts, and those more pronounced for aggressive parts. Soft laces for old people, though sometimes they must be very stiff and prim. I never could dress a part until I had read it through carefully, even though I knew what the character was, the age, and time, and everything about it. The characteristics make such a difference.

SOME OF HER REMEMBRANCES.

"Yes, I remember my first part, though there was no dressing in it. It was a fairy in a burlesque with short tarletan skirts. Of course I was proud of it, and I did what I wouldn't do now, I went to the expense of getting new dresses for it so that I could wear different colors, one evening pink, one blue, and one white. Only one dress was provided, and I bought the others. But I could do it then, for I had a good home. When you have to make a home for yourself you look after the pennies more.

"You couldn't change the color anyway in a play now without throwing the whole color scheme of the play out of order. If you wanted to buy a new gown it would have to be of the same color. But then I was on the stage alone part of the time, and they didn't mind. Bless my, they didn't dress plays then as they do now. People go to the theatre now to get the fashions, I know my dressmaker tells me that women go to her and say that such and such a woman on the stage wears such and such a gown, and they want one like it, it was so pretty. Then, if she hasn't seen the play she goes and gets the idea. In earlier days, if we had two or three dresses in the wardrobe they could usually be made over with different sashes to look presentable."

Just here an interesting side light was thrown upon stage gowns and their wearers' feelings for them. Wouldn't almost any woman in private life think that when a stage gown had seen service on the stage and been retired that something might be made out of it for private use, even if it was nothing but a bolero? Every woman turns her odds and ends of pretty clothes into boleros nowadays.

It would seem as if when a woman loved her profession, as women of the stage must to remain on it and act well, it would be a pleasant association for her to have her stage gowns about her. So it was quite natural, though the question was put almost incidentally, that Mrs. Whiffen should be asked:

"Can't you often make some use of your stage gowns for private life?" But Mrs. Whiffen looked as if she had received some moral shock—a suggestion of some awful impossibility.

"Oh, never! Oh, never use stage gowns for private life," she answered, quickly; "or, at least," she went on, "I never could. I have tried, but I couldn't bear myself in them. No one can have an idea of the feeling there is about it. And it is the same with a private dress that has been taken for the stage. There have been a few times when I have worn them on the stage on a pinch, but I never could wear them afterward for myself.

"I suppose the real reason is that you have the feeling that so many people have seen you in the gowns that you think every one would know you by it. Of course that wouldn't be so, but you would have that feeling, and it would not be possible."

MR. CONRIED'S PROGRAMME.

Felix Schweighofer, the German comedian, who will make his first appearance in this country at the Irving Place Theatre Christmas night, is esteemed a great artist in Germany. His are the flexible countenance, the "various voice," the sure sense of effect, the quick observation, the unfailing mimetic gift which form the equipment of the "character" actor, the genre comedian. Schweighofer's repertory is as richly varied as Coquelin's. His gift of facial expression is surpassed only by his command of the tricks of "make-up." His "theatre" includes a gallery of portraiture of his country and his hour. He has been likened to Menzel, the draughtsman, for the verisimilitude of his portrayals. He is always studying types. Photographs of him in character exhibit his wonderful pictorial versatility. Of course, this does not stamp him necessarily as an actor of the first rank. The expression of passion and emotion, not of physical peculiarities, is the actor's first duty. The great actor is first of all an interpreter of poets. Schweighofer's biographer has very little to say of the poets he interprets.

Schweighofer is fifty-seven years old now. He was born in Brunn, Austria, of poor parents who knew nothing of theatres, but he left the shop in which he was put to work in his boyhood and got a job in a queer little traveling troupe. For years he worked like a slave for poor pay. But he was ready when his call came.

The two plays of Schweighofer's first week at the Irving Place Theatre will be "Ein Blitzmaedel" and "'S Nullerl." This week there will be performances of "Hofgunst," "Maedel als Rekrut, and "Goldfische." After Schweighofers engagement Mr. Conried will produce the sequel to "Im Weissen Roess'l," called "Wieder im Roess'l," and will also revive Albert Lindner's famous tragedy of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, called "Die Bluthochzeit." In this Mr. Conried himself will appear as the French King, Charles IX. Interest in this revival will be increased by the recent announcement that an English version of this drama will be produced by Sir Henry Irving at the London Lyceum next Spring.

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS.

The announcement that a play for Mr. Goodwin's use is to be made out of Paul Leicester Ford's brilliant romance of American political life, "The Hon. Peter Stirling," is not surprising. The wonder is that the work of dramatizing the novel has been so long deferred. As a matter of fact, "The Hon. Peter Stirling" was originally designed for a play, and the scenario was submitted to Mr. Crane, who could not "see himself" in the principal character. Mr. Ford, who was then known principally as a historical essayist, turned the work into narrative form and entered upon a new and prosperous stage of his career as a novelist. Miss Mildred Dowling, who will assist Mr. Ford in this dramatization, showed her comprehension of dramatic effect in her little piece called "Dangerfield '95," in which Annie Russell acted so charmingly.

There is probably no other actor now in sight who would so nearly fit the character of "David Harum" as Mr. William H. Crane. It will require some sort of "composition," of course. David Harum will be a "character part", and Mr. Crane, for a long time, excepting in the last act of "A Fool of Fortune," has been appearing as Mr. Crane. His Peter Stuyvesant was an attempt in the direction of strong characterization, but he had too little help from his playwrights in that piece to secure any sort of result worth remembering.

Maude Adams will act Lady Babbie in St. Louis this week, and will appear in Toledo, Dayton, Columbus, and Indianapolis in Christmas week. Viola Allen will appear as Glory Quayle in Philadelphia this week, and will come to the Borough of Brooklyn next. Julia Arthur will act the Empress of the French in that borough this week, and at Christmas will go to her native Canada. W. H. Crane has begun his annual tour in Connecticut. Christmas week he will go to Philadelphia.

Wilfred Clarke, the younger son of the late John Sleeper Clarke, who was for two years a member of Daly's company, has gone "into the vaudevilles." He will rely on some of his father's famous rôles, to wit, Major Wellington de Boots and Timothy Toodles, to please the good folks who find such entertainments to their liking, using condensed versions of the old plays, of course.

The cast of "Little Red Riding Hood," which will be presented at the Casino after Miss Nielsen's engagement, will include Kittie Mitchell, Ida Mulle, Hallen Mostyn, Walter Jones, Norma Whalley, Mayme Gehrue, Hattie Delaro, and the pantomimist, David Abrahams.

A dramatization of a story by Conan Doyle called "The Firm of Girdlestone" was acted under the title of "Dark Deeds" at the Bowdoin Square Theatre in Boston last week. It seems to have been a sensational melodrama of a very ordinary pattern.

There are twenty-three men and two women in the Japanese dramatic troupe which appeared in Boston last week. A Boston reporter asserts that the performances of the Orientals once more illustrate the homely old adage that "People are very much like folks." The scenic effects must be uncommonly ingenious. In the little play they do, which resembles the legend of Pygmalion and Galatea, according to the Transcript, the Gejsha statue, when it is first revealed, does not look so substantial even as a statue. The lights are so arranged that the effect is the flat presentment of a picture without perspective. The illusion is perfect, and the dramatic effect much greater when it is a picture rather than a statue that is suddenly endowed with life and motion. This is but one of many surprises, by the way, for at the end, after the wife's jealousy has subsided and she, her husband and the living statue have come to an amicable understanding, four or five lay figures awake into unexpected existence. It is as pretty a little play as one could wish to see. Mme. Yacco is a dainty bit of decalcomania, transferred from a Japanese fan or jar, and in the ntional dance, which she introduces in this piece, and in all her motions, she is the very embodiment of grace.

Divorce is the theme of the drama from the French of Paul Hervieu, which will be produced by John Blair at Carnegie Lyceum next Wednesday night. "Les Tenailles" was acted by the Comédie Française in 1895. It has never been translated until now. "Ties," the English version will be called. An unhappy and dissatisfied wife, after two years of married life, begs for a separation from her selfish and indifferent husband. He much prefers things as they are. A divorce would involve a scandal—a division of the fortune—would disarrange his life. Ten years elapse. Fergan and his wife are living quietly in the country with their only child, a delicate boy of nine. Fergan has decided that the boy must be sent away to school. The mother is alarmed; it is only her care that can prolong his life, and finally to save him she tells Fergan that he is not his son—that he has no authority over him. Hervieu's "philosophy" is summed up in the few words he gives the wife: "Ten Years with me to be an honest woman, and on my knees begged for a separation. You would not listen to me. My fault has been against you—yours against nature, and we must both pay the penalty."

Few persons who see "The Manoeuvres of Jane" at Daly's remember the actor of the broadly comic rôle of Prebendary Bostock when he was the favorite of a large part of the play-going public as the hero of romantic drama. In 1866, when George Boniface "created" the rôle of Rudolph, "a poor artist," in Mr. Barras's celebrated drama entitled "The Black Crook," he had enjoyed ten years of popularity, and had starred in the "legitimate." He was always a versatile actor, however, and his success in comic characters in these later years is, therefore, not remarkable. He was the original Pygmalion in Gilbert's poetic comedy in this country, at Wallack's, in 1872, and at a later stage of his career he took up "The Streets of New York," and starred in the rôle of Badger, in which Lester Wallack, J. K. Mortimer and Frank Mayo had been his most distinguished predecessors. His portrayal of James Telfer, the old-fashioned actor, in "Trelawny of the Wells," at the Lyceum Theatre last season was admirable in every respect.

"A Wonderful Woman" is the title of the new farce in which Fanny Rice will star this season. Theosophy is said to be its subject. The title was used years ago for a little two-act drama from the French which was very popular with lady stars who had reached a certain age. Its leading character was a fascinating but mature woman.

"Arizona," by Augustus Thomas, has been as cordially received at the Tremont Theatre in Boston as in every other city in which the play has been acted. There seems to be no room for doubt that the play acts as well as it reads. When it gets to New York it will doubtless have a very long run. The new domestic drama by Mr. Herne, called "Sag Harbor," which New York will not see until Mr. Hammerstein's latest theatre is finished next season, is also enjoying a profitable run in Boston.

Christmas week will be overcrowded with theatrical novelties. New plays will be given at the Empire, Knickerbocker, and Fifth Avenue Theatres; the German comedian, Schweighofer, will make his American début at the Irving Place; interesting changes of bill will be made at some of the other theatres. The habitual "first-nighters" will be in a quandary at Christmas night. As for the professional critics, what they can see they will see. The rest will have to go unseen, so far as they are concerned.

One of the new plays of Christmas week will be "The Cowboy and the Lady," by Clyde Fitch. This has been praised in Philadelphia, damned in London, and sneered at in Chicago. Yet, we may surely hope, it will have a fair and unprejudiced hearing here. Mr. Nat Goodwin and Miss Elliott have the principal roles in the play. The first appears as Teddy North, an Eastern young man, who goes to the Far West and becomes a cowboy.

"The Village Postmaster," by Jerome Eddy and Alice Ives, has been uncommonly successful "on the road" this season. It will come back to town, to its old abiding place, the Fourteenth Street Theatre, Christmas day, and Mr. Rosenquest promises that the scenery and costumes will all be new.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

DALY'S THEATRE.—"The Manoeuvres of Jane" continues.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—This will be John Drew's last week for the present at the Empire Theatre.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Miss Annie Russell is still playing in "Miss Hobbs." Miss Russell will stay at the Lyceum until Jan. 20.

HERALD SQUARE THEATRE.—"A Greek Slave," the American presentation of the London musical farce, will enter on the fourth and last week of its engagement tomorrow evening.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Frank Daniels and his company continue with their performances of "The Ameer." The piece moves now in an easy and sprightly manner and seems to be amusing.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Mrs. Fiske and "Becky Sharp" will remain in this city but one week more, the final performance falling on Dec. 23, after which the company will go on an extensive tour of the country.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—This week's offering consists of the Vaudeville Burlesque Company, headed by Fatima, the Oriental dancer. A special feature will be the Tobascoscope, showing French moving pictures.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE.—To-morrow night's performance ushers in the last week of the long run of "The Dairy Farm." It will also be the one hundredth and fiftieth performance of the play, and souvenirs will be distributed.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—There has been a remarkable demand for seats for "Ben-Hur." The house has been crowded at every performance, and seats are sold far in advance. It looks as if no limit to the run need be thought of for a long time to come.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—"Carmen" in dramatic form will be the offering of the Donnelly stock company this week. The version used is an adaptation by John M. Morton from Prosper Merimée's novel of "Carmen" and Bizet's opera of the same name.

KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE.—Mr. and Mrs. Kendal enter on the last week of their engagement to-morrow night in "The Elder Miss Blossom." The special Wednesday matinées begun last week will be continued regularly during the remaining part of their engagement.

GARRICK THEATRE.—William Gillette, who is near the end of the second month of "Sherlock Holmes," is still playing to standing room audiences. Charles Frohman has made arrangements for Mr. Gillette's appearance in his play for the next two years, covering both America and England.

CRITERION THEATRE.—Miss Julia Marlowe continues to attract large audiences to her performances of "Barbara Frietchie." There will be no more midweek afternoon performances during Miss Marlowe's season at this house. The only matinée will be the regular one on Saturday.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—"The Rogers Brothers in Wall Street" will continue to be the attraction at this playhouse until the end of the month. The Rogers brothers will present their usual new features this week, and will shortly exploit a burlesque on "Barbara Frietchie," which is now in active preparation.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—To commemorate the fiftieth performance of "Way Down East" at this house, and the two hundred and fiftieth time of this play in New York City, Friday evening, Dec. 22, every woman holding a reserved seat coupon will be presented with a silver jardinière as a souvenir of the occasion.

DEWEY THEATRE.—Beginning to-morrow afternoon and continuing every afternoon and evening for the week, Jacobs and Lowry's Merry Maidens Burlesque Company will furnish the entertainment. Heading the company is Miss Nellie Hanley, and in her support are the Revere sisters, William J. Mills, Josie Flynn, Sam Rice, and James Lowry.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—James Herne's play "Shore Acres" will open a two weeks' engagement, beginning to-morrow. Although Mr. Herne's play is unconventional in construction and almost entirely free from old-time theatrical devices, it is uncommonly interesting, and its story cannot fail to hold the attention of even the most blasé theatregoer.

WEBER & FIELDS'S MUSIC HALL.—Another success has been added to Weber & Fields's répertoire in "Barbara Fidgety," and the new burlesque, together with "Whirl-i-gig," is nightly delighting audiences that crowd the theatre. A new finale has been introduced in the first act. Lillian Russell closes it with a hunting song, assisted by the entire chorus attired in appropriate costume.

GARDEN THEATRE.—Richard Mansfield will this week be seen in four widely varying portrayals. According to the order of presentation, the bill to-morrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings will be George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "The Devil's Disciple"; Thursday evening and at the matinée Saturday, Gunter's "Prince Karl"; Friday evening, "A Parisian Romance," and Saturday evening, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—"The Girl With the Auburn Hair" remains this week, and the other headlines will be Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar. The remaining part of the bill includes Mme. Adelaide Herrmann, the widow of Herrmann the Great, who reproduces some of her late husband's most popular illusions in a new setting which she calls "A Night in Japan," The Smedley Sketch Club, Smith and Campbell, the Van Aukens, and Frank Cushman.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—The bill this week is full of comedy features, and the numbers are Jennie Yeamans, Gertrude Mansfield and Caryl Wilbur in "Color Blind"; Watson, Hutchings, and Edwards in a skit, "The Dramatic Agent"; Doherty's poodles, Dick and Alice McAvoy, Bowery types; Ward and Curran, eccentric comedians; May Cook, cornetist and vocalist; Arthur Rigby, monologist; kalatechnoscope, Wilson and Leicester, and others.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—This week's offering is to be the production of "The Great Ruby," which ran so long at Daly's Theatre last Winter. Lady Garnett, the rôle played by Miss Rehan, is filled by Miss Isabelle Urquhart. Others in the cast are Louise Thorndyke Boucicault, who plays the adventuress, the Countess Charkoff. Prince Kassin Wadia, Sir John Garnett, Longman, and Brent are played by Louis Massen, White Whittlesey, William Hazeltine, and Frank Losee.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—Beginning to-morrow night, this house returns to straight vaudeville, and the Wednesday and Saturday matinées will be continued. The programme arranged will have among its numbers Clivette, Cushman, Holcomb, and Curtis, operatic trio; Alcide Capitaine, Binns and Binns, the musical comedians; the Brothers Damm, comedy acrobats; the De Foresets, Barney Reynolds, the Beaumont sisters, and Marie Dressler, assisted by Adele Farrington, in a musical sketch.

THE CASINO.—The one hundredth performance of "The Singing Girl" will take place on Friday evening, Dec. 22, and will be noteworthy not only by the distribution of handsome souvenirs, but by the introduction of two new songs for Miss Nielsen by the composer, Victor Herbert, and an entire new set of topical verses for the comedians by Joseph Herbert. The souvenirs will be handsome jewel cases. Rehearsals of "Little Red Riding Hood," the holiday pantomime to follow Miss Nielsen, are well under way.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.—In the number of features announced for this week no two acts are alike, and this indicates a wide diversity of entertainment. The leading numbers are John C. Fox and Katie Allen in the farce, "The Flat Next Door"; Harry Howard's ponies and monkeys, Pauline Moran and Turner's pickaninnies, Conway and Leland, one-legged acrobats; the kalatechnoscope, Halladay and Ward, talking comedians; Raymon Moore, the tenor; Freeze Brothers, Shedman's dogs, and a score more.

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—The bill this week will be practically new throughout. Francisco Lentini, the three-legged boy, will be seen again. Victorine, the sword swallower, will be another prominent attraction, and Lee Hung Fee, the Chinese magician, will be retained for another week. Among the many attractions to be found in other parts of the building are Herr Drayton, the cannon-ball juggler; Setunka, the Hindu fakir; Amelia, the Indiana fat girl; Allen's up-to-date Punch and Judy, Prof. Frank's Broom Factory, and others. In the theatre a double variety company will be seen.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—Lillian Burkhardt and company will be seen in a play called "Passing Fancy" during the week. Miss Burkhardt will also introduce a little play from her own pen entitled "Her Soldier Boy." Charles Wayne and Anna Caldwell will present their sketch "To Boston on Business," while Hastings and Wright will introduce a number of musical hits. Okabe's twelve imperial Japs will be seen in acrobatic juggling and slack wire acts. C. W. Littlefield will show the perfection of mimicry, the Paterson brothers a comedy horizontal bar act. Deveaux and Deveaux will be seen in musical novelties, while McMahon and King come with the funny act, "Down Near the Railroad Crossing"; Bennett and Kessner with a series of new illustrated songs will close the bill.

EDEN MUSEE.—For several months preparations have been made at the Musée for a Christmas celebration. They were completed yesterday, and to-day an elaborate Christmas group was placed on exhibition. It is in the lobby of the musée, and extends nearly the whole width of the building. It represents the front of a cathedral of the Renaissance period. At the side of the edifice Santa Claus, in costume, stands ringing three huge bells suspended in the steeple. At the side near the top of the church are four angel figures, their attention directed to two little cherubs, who stand at one of the two open windows. This group is one of the most elaborate and expensive ever made at the musée. Another extra Christmas attraction will be Tilly's marionettes; they will give two exhibitions daily of a Christmas pantomime. The other attraction will be new moving pictures.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS'S PLAY.

"Paolo and Francesca," the poetical drama by Stephen Phillips, quotations from which have already appeared in this column, has been published in London. The author has presented the story of the tragedy of the house of Malatesta in its simplest form, without the accessories which various commentators of the sixteenth century have added to the story as told by Dante. The incidents are historical; the only essential innovation is the character of the widowed and childless cousin of Giovanni, Lucrezia degl' Onesti, who, bitterly jealous herself, fans the jealousy of the husband, and actually plans the tragic end. Lucrezia's sudden outburst of grief and rage against her lonely fate is, poetically speaking, one of the finest passages in the play:

Gio.—Lucrezia! this is that old bitterness.
Luc.—Bitterness—am I bitter? Strange, O strange!
How else? My husband dead and childless left,
My thwarted woman-thoughts have inward turned,
And that vain milk like acid in me eats.
Have I not in my thought trained little feet
To venture, and taught little lips to move
Until they shaped the wonder of a word?
I am long practised. O those children, mine!
Mine, doubly mine; and yet I cannot touch them,
I cannot see them, hear them—Does great God
Expect I shall clasp air and kiss the wind
Forever? And the budding cometh on,
The burgeoning, the cruel flowering:
At night the quickening splash of rain, at dawn
That muffled call of babes how like to birds;
And I amid these sights and sounds must starve—
I, with so much to give, perish of thrift!
Omitted by His casual dew!
Gio.— Well, well,
You are spared much: children can wring the heart.
Luc.—Spared! to be spared what I was born to have!
I am a woman, and this very flesh
Demands its natural pangs, its rightful throes,
And I implore with vehemence these pains.
I know that children wound us, and surprise
Even to utter death, till we at last
Turn from a face to flowers: but this my heart
Was ready for these pangs, and had foreseen.
O! but I grudge the mother her last look
Upon the coffined form—that pang is rich—
Envy the shivering cry when gravel falls.
And all these maimed wants and thwarted thoughts,
Eternal yearning, answered by the wind,
Have dried in me belief and love and fear.
I am become a danger and a menace,
A wandering fire, a disappointed force,
A peril—do you hear, Giovanni? O!
It is such souls as mine that go to swell
The childless cavern cry of the barren sea,
Or make that human ending to night wind.

The struggles of Paolo against his destiny, the half-unconscious yielding of Francesca to what was at first a mere "drawing of youth to youth," and the central scene in the "place of leaves" where the book of Lancelot and Guinevere proves to be "the Galeotto, the go-between of the lovers"—all this is told with perfect truth to nature, with a thoroughly artistic reserve, and in verse that is always melodious and sometimes of extraordinary beauty. And here is the final speech of Paolo, before the two pass together to the room where happiness and death await them:

Pao.—What can we fear, we two?
O God, Thou seest us Thy creatures bound
Together by that law which holds the stars
In palpitating cosmic passion bright;
By which the very sun enthralls the earth,
And all the waves of the world faint to the moon.
Even by such attractions we two rush
Together through the everlasting years.
Us, then, whose only pain can be to part,
How wilt Thou punish? For what ecstasy
Together to be born about the globe!
How wilt Thou punish us who cannot part?
Franc.—I lie out on your arm and say your name—"Paolo!" "Paolo!"

Women Here and There—Their Frills and Fancies

There are a bicycle face, a mushroom neck, an automobile expression, and various other eccentricities caused by different pursuits, but there is one thing that woman might cult vate with advantage to other people, to say nothing of themselves, and that is a car eye. In both the surface and elevated cars it is nothing unusual to see women standing at one end of a car playing the usually acrobatic gymnastics on the strap that make car riding so unpleasant, while at the other end are plenty of seats or a noticeable amount of space covered by a few people who will willingly move if she goes to that end of the car. Very often a stranger will nudge the woman and point out the seat to her. If there are several seats they let her stand, because it is so utterly ridiculous that she has not sense enough to take one of them. A man looks at the woman hanging on to the strap, looking self-consciously out of the window perhaps, then he looks at the seats, and then his face says as plainly as can be: "Well, Madam, if you prefer to stand I shall not interrupt your pleasure." Where the woman needs the car eye in another case is where there are plenty of seats in the car and she crowds herself into a place for one, or where two women crowd into one seat and make a line of people move, when by walking a few steps they would have found plenty of room. This is done very frequently. It is not selfishness and it is not altogether thoughtlessness. It is more often a sort of embarrassment which many women seem to feel in looking around the car before they are seated. They think themselves conspicuous. But it makes too many people uncomfortable to call for much sympathy. It is comparatively easy when a car is passing, in the season of closed cars, to take account of stock through the windows and note the vacant places as the car is slowing up.

There is a new use for the old piano stool. It has quite gone out these days and an all-wooden stool or chair has taken its place. Some of the old stools were very respectable-looking pieces of furniture and made of fine wood. One family which has one has improvised a useful piece of furniture from it. The upholstery was removed and in its place was securely fastened a box which had been secured at the grocer's and neatly stained. On top of the box, which is laid on its side, is placed the family dictionary, where it is always ready for use, and which can revolve in a most convenient manner on the screw of the old stool. In the box, through its opening at the side, are placed the magazines of the month, which must be at hand, but litter the room. The piano-stool-dictionary-stand is such a convenience that the family which made the discovery does not know how it ever existed without it. To secure another effect a bit of upholstery can be tacked on the top with a frill around the edge to hide the sides, and if this is in keeping with the room the result is very good. Home-made furniture is not always to be recommended, but with the excellent foundation the stool offers it does not require any great amount of talent to make a useful article.

There is a little shop up town whose head clerk, the daughter of the proprietor, is an enthusiastic young saleswoman, for many of the goods are Swedish, and she is interested in them as coming from her native land. She doesn't remember much of them at home, for she was a baby of four when the family came to this country and brought with them, among other things, one of the butter boxes of the country—quaint little wooden affairs which answer for market baskets and to carry many small purchases there—filled with Swedish eggs, for who could be sure that they would not be better than any found in this country? They have some of these butter boxes decorated in the shop, with other things of wood and birch bark and a little Swedish china, but the most interesting things are the Swedish aprons. Some of these are of a kind of Swedish embroidery and others are of wool. These woolen aprons are in bright-colored strips running horizontally, small and narrow, and all hand made.

"We sell some of these to Swedish girls who like to give their mistresses something for Christmas, and they like them because they have never seen them before," says the little Swedish girl, "but we sell mostly to Americans, for duties make things too high for the Swedish girls to buy."

"Dear me," said the woman at the theatre the other night, as she studied her programme, "if I was a first-class actress I should just hate to have them say that Smith & Co. or A. B. C. Brown made my gowns. I should be afraid people would think I got 'em cheap for using the name. I never did think much of one of those shops anyway. They needn't say the gowns came from there. They look it."

"The prospect of my relatives and friends of Christmas presents from me looks more and more doubtful," says the Brooklyn school teacher. "If the salaries are paid before Christmas all right. If they are not—well, I shall not spend two cents for Christmas presents."

"Seems to me it is about time they had something different to represent time," said the oculist. "Now why don't they have in place of the old skeleton hour glass and scythe a figure holding out a pair of spectacles and a woman with an expression of anguish on her face pushing them away? Women, as a rule, have such a horror of glasses, and yet they are so careless about their eyes that they have to put them on much sooner than they need. For instance, just now my business is dull. Women are too busy to have their eyes doctored, but after Christmas I shall have a harvest. I know it by years of experience. Fine fancy work for Christmas presents will have worked the mischief. You sympathize with people who are obliged to misuse their eyes to support themselves, but when they use them up over unnecessary needlework it is another thing. If the oculists and opticians ever need to work up their business all they will have to do will be to open a fancy work competition and offer prizes for different kinds of fancy work, and by the time the affair is closed they will have paid expenses and reaped a big harvest."

The professor had come from Holland and was ready to settle down in New York as soon as he should have collected the furnishings for his office. Among these were to be one or two skeletons, rather expensive articles, so when he read an advertisement in the paper of several reputable skeletons at reduced prices he decided to investigate. He had an idea that the call would take him to the house of some other professional man, and he was somewhat surprised when he found that the address given in the paper was that of a large and fashionable boarding house and it was the mistress of the house who had skeletons for sale. The professor had a pretty dry Dutch wit, and after he had examined the wares offered and found them quite satisfactory he turned to the landlady and said:

"The skeletons are everything that I could desire, but—er—I should like to ask one question. I might have some scruples, you know—in fact—er, I suppose, Madam—these gentlemen here do not represent any of your former guests?"

But they did not. There had been a practiceless doctor boarding for a time in the house, and he had departed suddenly, leaving the skeletons as his sole assets.

A New York girl who has a sister living in London is not going to receive presents from her from that city. The sister has gone to the shop of a big American jeweler in Regent Street, selected goods that are made in New York, the order was sent across, and the presents are to be delivered from the New York shop to the girl.

The Comtesse de Castiglione, the once-famous Parisian beauty, who has recently died, could never become reconciled to the loss of her youth and charms. She was a wonderfully beautiful woman in her day, but when her beauty began to fade she became a recluse, and spent the remainder of her life mourning her lost graces. She took no comfort in the thought of her past triumphs, as many women do, and was so jealous of her own portrait that when by comparison with it she could see that old age was drawing near she tore it into fragments. The Comtesse must have been either much more beautiful than most women originally or a more just critic of her own defects later than women generally, for if all so-called beauties objected to their painted portraits because they were more beautiful than the originals there would be a good many famous paintings that would be destroyed in short order.

"There," said the fishman, "I am positive that woman is a New Englander. She has ordered four clams sent up with the oysters for her oyster stew. Every good New England cook will put a few clams into her oyster stew to give it a more delicately saline flavor. There is no taste to the clams, but they give a character that the oysters would not have without them."

If a customer is waited on by an intelligent clerk in a first-class shop it is very probable that any questions asked about the goods will be truthfully answered. When the truth is not told it is more likely to be the fault of the clerk than of the proprietor. In one of the up-town shops where fine furniture is sold the proprietor happened to pass a clerk who was talking with a customer the other day and heard him tell an absolute untruth about something the customer was thinking of purchasing. He stepped up immediately, sent the clerk off, waited on the woman himself, and corrected the statement that had been made. The woman probably never knew that it had not been an error and did not know that it was the proprietor of the place who was taking her order. The clerk was dismissed. "Why should any one tell an untruth about the goods he is selling?" says a man who has been in business for many years. "It doesn't pay."

"You can never make me believe that animals have not a large share of intelligence," says a woman who is fond of them. "I have a very lazy little fox terrier which I have photographed several times, and he seems to know what I am doing and enjoys it thoroughly. He will sit up for any length of time and hardly wink, he is so pleased. Ordinarily he does not care to come when he is called, but let me call him from the top of the house and tell him to come and have his picture taken, and he bounds up the stairs as fast as his legs will carry him and takes any position I put him in.

"Then I have a cat which is very fond of being petted. My sister will talk to him by the hour and call him 'Pretty cat, beau-ti-ful animal,' and he purrs, looks as happy and pleased as possible, and evidently cares more for her than for any one else in the family. But the other night he was cross for some reason or other, and he did not want to be petted. Nothing suited him. But my sister called him, as usually, 'Com-m-e here, pret-ty fellow." He did go to her, but only to lift one of his front paws and give her a hateful little slap and then walk off. It was absolutely human, and I never realized before why some women are called cattish.

"There is our horse, too. He is a high-spirited animal, and we feel that it is as much as one's life is worth to touch him with the whip. He is a splendid horse, but he does not need the whip, and he will not have it. But the other day, when he was standing at the door, little Dick got out and in some way climbed up into the carriage, and when we looked out he was standing up with the whip in both hands and laying it over the horse's back. Even a little boy has a good deal of strength in his small hands, and every blow of the whip must have hurt, but the horse did not move. If he had Dick would have been thrown out and killed. Animals reason, and they have better qualities as a foundation for their reasoning than a good many human beings, I believe."

An English woman's magazine offers prizes for designs for original costumes from amateurs. The woman who wins the prize can then go to a big West End shop and have the costume made up and the materials supplied at the expense of the magazine. In addition to this, or to offset it, as one chooses to look at it, she has to give her portrait to the magazine to be published as the successful prize winner.

There is something new to help my lady in that difficult task of "doing up" her hair. She will not have a "beautiful back hair," as little Lord Bapchild says affectionately of Constancia's tresses in the "Manouevres of Jane," if she does not take several views of it in dressing. The new assistant is a glass shaped like a hand mirror, but with a longer handle and made to fasten to the back of a chair. My lady, while she is combing her hair, sits in the chair and views the back of her head in the large mirror on her dressing case.

A New York school teacher—maybe she lives in Westchester and maybe she does not—is just now looking forward every day to her school luncheons with great pleasure. She lives too far from home to go back and forth at noon, and at one time she always took a light luncheon, but now she has a hot meal that might almost be called a dinner. It comes from the house of one of her pupils, who lives near by. The mother is a splendid cook and housekeeper, and the dinners, which are sent in piping hot, are delicious. There is always a delicious soup, then meat of some kind—on a certain day turkey, on another chicken, sometimes varied with fish and vegetables—all nicely cooked.

"But just wait until you have occasion to give the boy a good scolding," says another teacher. "Though I suppose you would have such a tender feeling for the luncheon that it would extend to the boy."

"No," answered the teacher of the hot luncheons, "it would not make any difference. I should not spare the words because of the good things to eat. But I am glad," she added, "that he is a very good boy and never needs reprimanding for lessons or behavior."

An imported bedstead of stained green ash has scenes of night and morning upon it. The former, with the word "Nuit," is at the head. It is a silver moon with dark clouds and black bats, effective but somewhat nightmarish. On the outer edge of the footboard a big rising sun is in gold, with a jolly face in the centre, the word "Matin" being at the top and a conventionalized bird at the other side.

FEMININE FRILLS.

There hasn't been much talk of the "new woman" lately, but there is a good example of her to be seen on stormy days occasionally now that the long, loose coats are so generally worn. And they are becoming very general, and it looks as if by the first of the year every little typewriter in the down-town offices would have one of some shape or style. But she is not the young woman who looks "new" in them. The business woman does not wear the short skirts. One girl who does was doing her Christmas shopping one stormy day last week, and had put on the short skirt—not very short, but just short enough, and with it she wore her new three-quarter-length coat. That has, particularly the back view, a somewhat masculine appearance, and with the short skirt beneath it and a plain little felt storm hat the girl looked pretty enough, but very much like the caricatures that appeared a little while ago of the masculine new woman when she was more of a topic for discussion than she is now.

Two Christmas presents that are to be particularly attractive are to be neck chains of amethysts and topaz, one chain having the former and the other the latter kind of stones. They are these pretty new chains that pin to the bodice of the gown instead of fastening around the neck. These are to be about twelve inches long, and the stones, most attractive ones, were picked up in the corner of the Woman's Exchange where the "little Russian girl" sells her wares from the land of the Czar. In the centre of the chain is a large round stone. On either side, separated by a few links of gold, are two oval stones, and at intervals on each side of these three small stones. The last two of these small stones are set into the heads of stick pins, and form the ends of the chain. They fasten into the gown half way around the neck so that there is a chain in front only, not passing around the throat. Each stone is set in a ring of gold in the way that has been popular for some time.

A pretty dinner gown is made of alternate narrow strips of accordion plaited crêpe de chine and lace. The plaits are set close together at the waist line, and gradually widen to the lower edge of the skirt. The narrow panels of lace are slightly narrower at the waist, and also widen gradually to the edge of the skirt. The bodice is made of alternate horizontal rows of the lace and plaited crêpe also.

The old-fashioned box plaits are to be seen as the trimming of underskirts. A box-plaited ruffle is four or five inches wide. There are one or two inch wide plaits separated by an equal space, and the plaiting is stitched on an inch or so below the upper edge and the top of each plait is caught down.

A handsome gown of tan velvet has the over-dress outlined with a design in cut cloth applique, stitched on with gold thread, the design edged with a tiny gold braid. The body of the over-dress is covered with a small all-over pattern of the cut cloth, each design set some distance apart and stitched on with the gold thread.

A woman on the street the other day wore another edition of the plait-fitted bodice. Her plaits were on the shoulders, two deep ones taken on either shoulder and at the back and front of the bodice and then tapered down to a point on the bust and half way to the middle of the back.

The big shops and parts of shops where cooking utensils are sold do not do much special business at Christmas except in the way of chafing dishes and coffee machines. Every woman and every other man is delighted to have one of these for a Christmas gift.

One other thing that pleases the housekeeperly woman, and which is not high in price, is the little pepper grinder. The man who is a connoisseur of good things to eat says that pepper should be freshly ground to be good, and hence ground for individual use at the table. These little table pepper machines come in attractive forms. One of the prettiest is a little wooden cask of well-finished wood, others are in wood of different shapes, some are all of metal, and others of glass and metal.

"A number of my friends are going to receive little match-holders from me this Christmas," says a girl who has not an over-abundance of money. "No, they are not to be made; they are of Kaga ware, and I am getting them not only because they are cheap, but because they are good. They are the kind in which the matches stand—perhaps they may have been made for toothpicks, but I hate to think so—and are small and will not accommodate many at a time. But the decoration is good, they have some interesting Japanese characters on the inside, and they only cost 50 cents each. I am giving them to hold matches on desks to light tapers for sealing wax. Did you ever notice what a difficult thing it seems to be to buy anything for 50 cents when your finances are limited to about that amount? I won't give cheap silver, and I won't give anything that I feel is a reflection upon my taste or buy for the sake of buying something. These little match receivers quite satisfy me.

"I seem to be going into writing-desk supplies, for besides these I am going to make some gifts of little solid brass candlesticks, Russian, small miniature tall candlesticks, the kind that the little Russian girls play with in their first efforts at housekeeping at home. They are heavy brass, just the size for a taper, and they also cost 50 cents. With the crowds of things in the shops it is a very difficult thing to find anything that seems to be at all new in the way of a gift at moderate price. I am not sure that the price makes all of the trouble, either. It is a study to find any kind of gifts that are new and interesting."

Children are wearing long coats with pretty effect. Two small sisters on Fifth Avenue the other day wore bright red coats with short capes. A little girl with them wore a long black velvet coat with a broad collar edged with sable and carried a sable muff. The other children carried, one a sable and one an ermine muff. All three wore large black hats.

THE WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Memorial Celebration at Mount Vernon Attracted Crowds.

PAYNE REPRESENTATION PLAN

Southern Wing of the Party Opposes It—Peculiarity in Names on the House Roll Call.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The assembling of the Republican National Committee, the celebration of the anniversary of the death of Washington, the proceedings before the special House committee to get rid of Representative B. H. Roberts, and the announcement of the make-up of the Senate committees have been the events of the week here, which incidentally brought out Senator Depew in two speeches not made in the Senate.

While the ceremonies in observance of the death of Washington were not elaborate, they were impressive, the most strikingly impressive part being the unusual crowd at Mount Vernon. That hallowed spot has its throng of visitors on every weekday in the year, and sometimes there are enthusiasts who are compelled, because of the brevity of their stay in this city, to be satisfied with a Sunday trolley trip to the edge of the grounds, which are closed on that day, and to return home with the limited satisfaction of being able to say that they could see the home of Washington dimly through the trees. On Thursday, however, trolley cars and boats could scarcely carry down and back the people who were impelled to go out of curiosity or respect. Possibly there were never so many persons at Mount Vernon since the old house was built.

The streets of Washington, its hotels, and restaurants, its public conveyances, felt the temporary influx of visitors, and rejoiced thereat; for while there has been a diminution in the number of signs denoting apartments to let, it is still possible to obtain shelter without great difficulty. The Washington memorial parade was small and early, and comparatively few persons saw it. The President made the trip to Mount Vernon and back in a special trolley train.

The struggle to secure the convention was lacking in the animation that has heretofore characterized it. This was owing to the accepted fact that there is to be no contention at the convention about the leading nomination. Wherever the convention was to go, it was to renominate President McKinley. To do that, possibly by acclamation, instead of proceeding by the tedious roll call, will shorten the meeting, as it unquestionably will diminish the interest in the preliminary exercises.

In the matter of the Vice Presidency, while an announcement has been made that Secretary of War Elihu Root is to be the Administration candidate, this may not be with the President's full approval. There is no doubt now, after Mr. Root has been in public office long enough to have opportunity to show his quality of mind and his adaptability to executive work, that he could be nominated, and that he would fill the place of the Vice President with distinction. The President is profoundly gratified to have him in the War Department. He runs that department to suit himself and the President. Everybody, except some officers who are conscious that their combs have been cut, feels that the right man is in the office. There is good authority for declaring that the President would be glad if he should not be nominated and would consent to remain longer in the War Department, close to the Chief who has learned quickly to rely upon his judgment and to rest confidingly in his advice. To banish Mr. Root to the Capitol, to perform the drudgery imposed upon the presiding officer of the Senate, and to accept the risk of getting a weaker man in the War Department, would be regarded by the President as a great misfortune.

What has been known by many National Committees of the Republican Party as the Payne scheme of representation in conventions is one that has for years appealed to the sense of the majority, but that provoked the Southern section of the party to vehement opposition. Republican National Conventions are now made up on a basis similar to that of a National apportionment. The number of Senators and Representatives in Congress from a State being known, that State has been accorded two delegates for each Senator and two for each Representative. So Alabama, having two Senators and nine Representatives, has been allowed to send to a Republican convention four delegates at large, representing two Senators, and eighteen delegates, representing nine Representatives. New York, with two Senators and thirty-four Representatives, has been sending seventy-two delegates to National Conventions. The Payne proposition abandons the imitation of the Congressional apportionment plan. In its place it provides for a convention with 894 delegates, the same in number as the last National Convention, but it distributes the delegates among the States according to the Republican vote cast in those States at the last Presidential election. Alabama, according to this plan, will get but nine delegates, losing thirteen. New York, gaining because of its large Republican vote, will get eighty-six delegates, a gain of fourteen. Besides Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Wyoming will lose. It will at once be seen that the idea at the back of the plan is one that has long been accepted as guiding both parties in their respective States in making all political conventions.

Confidence and general harmony were the conspicuous characteristics of the meeting of the Republican National Committee. From every section of the country came the same report, of the satisfaction of the people with business conditions and their unwillingness to venture political experiments, for fear they might affect the industrial activity that has reached to every remote point. The characteristics and temper of the Democratic National Committee, which will meet later on, will be studied with grave concern by anxious Democrats and with not a little interest by Republicans. Already there have been some advance indications here of unrest and possible revolution before the next convention is held. Mr. Sibley's published abandonment of the 16-to-1 dogma and his admission that his advocacy of it had been mistaken, Senator Daniel's ingenious but none the less effective though paradoxical talk at the meeting of the Virginia Democratic Association, and the stand taken by the New York Democrats in favor of the gold standard bill now before the House, are indications most significant of the lack of harmony that must affect the Democratic meeting unless the free-silver members of it are so strong and so headstrong that they will not permit any talk that is not loyal as well to Bryanism as to Bryan.

Nothing can be plainer to those who enjoy any degree of familiar acquaintance with leading Democrats than that the effusive displays of admiration for Col. Bryan and the prompt assertion that he will be nominated are convenient and conventional in the party. The present fear with the Democrats who believe that it is time to drop that plaything and to play politics is that the devotion to Bryan has been so long cultivated that the Democratic rank and file will not catch up with the reasoning leaders until after the favorite of 1896 has been once more nominated.

If the Democrats were more determined than they are to insist again upon acceptance of the free silver idea as a test of Democratic soundness, they would be more bitter than they are in denunciation of the attitude of the ten New York Democrats who have decided to vote for the Republican currency measure because it is a gold measure. All of these men, most of them new in politics, have taken their stand, knowing very well that it may bring their careers to a close. But such men as Mr. Scudder, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Clayton, Mr. Driggs, and their associates, have determined their course for themselves. Rather, they maintain that their constituents have pointed it out for them; for not one of the gold-standard Democrats from New York has the faintest idea that their constituencies expect them to vote for a double standard. By accident, or perhaps for temperamental reasons, Mr. Driggs appears to have been a sort of whip or leader of the Democratic sound money men, although none of them needs a guide or governor, and he has reminded some members of the House and a few newspaper men of the time when George Fred Williams of Boston and the Bryan host, in company with Gen. Charles Tracey of Albany, gave days and nights to rounding up the Democrats so as to prevent them from stampeding for free coinage. Williams argued, coaxed, scolded and ridiculed the weak and wavering until enough men had been convinced to assure the defeat of the silver bill. He wrought better than he knew; and Mr. Driggs is an earnest and diligent toiler in the field formerly occupied by George Fred Williams without any expectation of following him over to the silver camp.

A student of peculiarities suggested by the roll call in the House of Representatives has made up an entertaining combination of names rather common. This investigation followed the discovery that the maker of the roll call had omitted the name of Roberts of Utah, indicating that the officer of the House responsible for the list was convinced that it would not be necessary to have the name of Roberts ready for calling. But the list does carry the names of both Loud and Long. In each roll call Little and Small are asked to vote. Then Moon and Mudd are appealed to in close company. Scattered through the list are Hill, Marsh, and Lane. Such names as Newlands and Littlefield seem descriptive and oddly associated, but have no such startling effect as the coupling of Robb and Steele. Tongue and Spight are quite close together, and Joy and Payne follow each other with a brief interval. Various useful callings are represented by names, Baker, Barber, Bishop, Brewer, Butler, Cooper, Miller, Turner, Smith—six of them, and Weaver dot the long list. There is a Cannon and a Ball. Hay, Hedge, and Snodgrass may be found with a little foraging. There are a Brown, two Greens, and a White—who is black. Jack and Gill are also in the list, but Gill does not pronounce it that way. There is a large number of repeated names, but the Smiths are stronger than ever before in a session of the House.

There is a wide and desolate area of ground, with the remnants of a foundation discernible, on the spot where the Department of Justice Building stood not many months ago. The beginning of the new building has been put off for ninety days, the Attorney General hoping that in the meantime the Congress will authorize the condemnation of the remainder of the block and the extension of the plans so as to secure a much larger edifice. The property desired is at the corner of Fifteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, including the land on which the Riggs Bank stands. It is very valuable, and the owners do not desire to sell. It seems that after plans had been adopted for the ground already owned by the Government it was found that the Attorney General, the Court of Claims, and the libraries for both, would be badly crowded in the building as designed. The new designs will be made to provide a building nearly twice as large as that at first proposed. At the same time an effort is to be made to obtain a site on Capitol Hill, near the Congressional Library, for a Supreme Court Building. This was a favorite project with the late Senator Morrill.

LIFE ON ARMY TRANSPORTS.

Usual Idea of Their Discomforts Sometimes Incorrect—Changes in Cuba Since American Occupation.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Dec. 8.—The word "transport" does not suggest much luxury in the way of ocean travel; on the contrary, one is rather more apt to picture a large flat boat on the lighter plan, with accommodations for none but soldiers, and even those accommodations very scant; their only resting place the hard floor of the deck, with blanket and knapsack for mattress and pillow. The idea of traveling on a transport for pleasure is far from the minds of most people. Moreover, the Government does not grant every one permission to take a trip on one of these boats, but for army people it is the usual way of going to and from Cuba, and the other West India military stations.

Of the several steamers engaged in the army transport service between the United States and the West Indies, the Sedgwick is beyond doubt the most desirable. As she lies at her dock in East River, one might easily think her one of the ocean greyhounds, as she in reality was before she assumed her present name. The City of Chester of the Inman Line was familiar to the public. One might write pages in praise of her conveniences and luxuries, her fine engines claimed to be second to none, and, best of all, her easy motion.

The stateroom of the master of the vessel is a spacious one, fitted up with excellent taste, rivaling in its appointments, sumptuous bachelor apartments on land; the master, however, is not a bachelor, and occasionally his family goes with him on his voyages to the tropics.

The master and the ship's officers attend to the navigation of the ship, but beyond that their duties cease. An army officer of the Quartermaster's Department is on board each transport, and he looks after everything else. To be sure, he has a retinue of assistants, but every detail comes under his observation in one way or another. After the vessel gets under way, the passengers assemble in the cabin and the roll is called. On the list before the Quartermaster is the name of each passenger, his destination, and the reason why he is allowed to travel as the Government's guest. Each of these reasons was given to the Adjutant General at Washington before permission to travel on the boat was granted.

It is not the Government's purpose to realize an income from the dollar a day paid by the passengers, for the fare given is excellent, including all that the market affords in the greatest profusion, and not until the last day out is condensed milk resorted to, so well is provision for the trip made.

The scene on deck is not unlike that on any ocean liner. There are little groups of passengers here and there enveloped in furs and steamer rugs, book in hand, or gazing out upon vacancy; other groups discussing whist in the cabin; a desperate flirtation going on between some pretty girl going to visit her brother, and some young officer whom the said brother had asked to be polite to her on the trip. Almost every one is cheerful, for the end of the journey usually means reunion with loved ones. On a recent trip down, two of the passengers were the wife and daughter, respectively, of a Colonel whom they had not seen for more than two years. At the first port touched, Matanzas, a tug came out to the steamer soon after she cast anchor, and the one officer on the tug was the Colonel who had been separated from his family for so long.

The Cuba to which we have come this Winter is very different from that of a year ago. Although it is still foreign in many ways, American customs greet us on every hand, American sign boards are conspicuous all along the streets, bicycles have come into general use among the native inhabitants, and American vehicles are seen on all of the streets.

Many Americans are living here, engaged in occupations of various kinds. Many of these are realizing large incomes and spending the same lavishly. The army people here are migratory. There is nothing certain about their stay, and it seems scarcely worth while for them to set up their Lares and Penates, when an order may come at any moment taking them far away. But the civilians are making Cuba a permanent place of residence, and wherever there are Americans there is usually one house that is a social centre, where one is sure to find other Americans.

Living expenses are still very high, so that, try as one may, one spends a great deal on the common necessities of life. Army officers have less furnished to them and receive no more pay in this country or in any of our foreign stations than at home, and yet have to pay much more to live. A problem which many are trying to solve is how to pay out $15 to $50 more than their salary each month and yet remain clear of debt.

The Cubans are hospitable, and entertain a great deal, mainly by giving balls. As in many foreign countries, Sunday with them is a gala day, and their most important festivities take place then. They seem to be adopting American customs, that before the occupation last January were unheard of among them. Cuban ladies used never to appear on the street alone. Now it is quite common to see them going about unattended.

In the Musical World

The return of Mr. Paderewski may be set down as of no small benefit to musical art. The playing of many pianos is a weariness to the flesh and of the making of virtuosos there is no end. But behind the virtuoso lies the great art of playing on the piano and the beneficent task of interpreting the music of the masters. Mr. Paderewski is indeed a virtuoso, but with a difference. In him of all pianists, with a very few exceptions, the perfection of technic is obscured by the beauty of his readings. To be sure one cannot always agree with his conception of a composition, but one is forced to admit that his presentation of that conception carries with it some highly potent arguments for its own existence. The beauty which he finds in a work may not be the beauty which you find there, but it is beauty none the less; and when you have heard him play, you go away with the conviction that what he found in the music was there. Something else may have been there which he did not reveal to you, but you are not likely to quarrel much about that while you are listening to him.

It has been said in this paper that he does not play exactly as he used to. Perhaps that needs a little explanation. He plays with greater breadth, with more authority, with a more lovely repose than ever before. His art has rounded into a more admirable symmetry. There is in it the depth of a more oceanic calm, a more convincing evidence of reserve power. There are bursts of furious strenuousness at times in his playing, and perhaps there is an attempt to get a bigger sound out of the piano than there was formerly. But none the less the same old beauty of tone is there. It is in his constant endeavor to make the piano sing and the unfailing success of the endeavor that Mr. Paderewski places himself in a solitary position among the pianists of our time.

His technic seldom amazes the hearer. It is a technic trained to one end, and that is the preservation of the beautiful singing tone in every passage, no matter how difficult. There is never any parade of facility in Mr. Paderewski's playing. The ease with which he surmounts obstacles is forgotten in the result. And that result is never acrobatic dexterity, but inevitably musical beauty. His command of the varieties of touch known to pianists is wonderful. It is complete, and it is backed by a taste of the purest and most refined kind. Coupled with this command of touch is a mastery of the art of pedaling which is unique. In this he certainly excels every other pianist now before the public.

Students of piano playing know that it is by the combination of pedaling and the varieties of touch that pianists get the wonderful range of tonal tints now at their command. No other pianist equals Mr. Paderewski in this department of his art. It is by means of his skill in this that he maintains throughout all of his performances the marvelous beauty of his singing style. It is his skill in this which makes it possible for him to sing a Chopin nocturne through the piano as no other player can. It is this which enables him to make the most intricate figure work seem to be the exfoliation of a melodic thought instead of mere passage work, as it so often seems to be in the hands of an inferior player. We have heard a good deal too much of this passage work playing. Of course there are compositions in which there is passage work pure and simple, but somehow when Mr. Paderewski plays them they seem to be vitalized into musical worth.

Another feature of his playing that ought to be carefully observed by the hearer is his phrasing. How beautifully he distributes the accentuation with regard to the contour of each phrase! How beautifully he makes each phrase show its correct relation to the other parts of the melody! These are the achievements of a master, of one who understands not only the art of singing on the piano, but the fundamental laws of musical structure. Such achievements do not come by intuition, though there must be the natural gift of love for the beautiful. They come rather by the power of constant study, of thoughtful and loving analysis of every composition which the pianist undertakes to play. Undoubtedly many singers might learn much from the finish, the restful perfection, the high artistic serenity of Mr. Paderewski's phrasing.

And what a lesson all his performances give in self-control! Master of himself, he becomes master of his instrument, of its music. He never lets his passionate temperament run away with him, but pours it into the artistic design which he has prepared till the whole thing glows with the fire of his genius. Yes, genius is the right word for such an organization. It is not mere talent that so gets the start of the world. It is only genius that speaks in the unmistakable tones of command. The hysterical girls who worship at the foot of the throne may not perceive the genius, for their whole thought is superficial. But there are women, and men, too, who feel the potent charm of this man's playing, and they cannot well be accused of silly sentimentalism. A great artist, a master, a dispenser of the beautiful in bounteous way is this player, and if the world falls at his feet and renders him homage which seems exaggerated he wins it fairly, and let no one begrudge him his triumphs. Whatever else may be said of his art, it is unfailingly amiable, and the personality which pervades it is lovable.

Piano playing is a feat of manual dexterity and mechanical skill which rises to artistic importance as it becomes a means of expression in musical reproduction. The elegant smoothness of intricate passages, the dazzling brilliancy of trills, and the grace of delicate ornamentation, all the various qualifications of the touch—the scintillating staccato, the clinging legato, the insinuating tenderness of the piano and the commanding power of the forte; the even more expressive restrictions of the movement—the impetuous accelerando, the lingering ritardando, the ritenuto and stretto, and the fanciful rubato—all are at the player's bidding to serve his artistic purpose, yet more artistic and effective as the performer sacrifices his individual taste and liking to the higher requirements of musical art as qualified in the character of the composition.—Adolph Carpé, "The Pianist's Art."

He who has talent uses the pedal well; he who has none uses it badly. This dictum seems to be about the gist of the scanty explanations on the use of the pedal found in the older piano methods. * * * Instead of saying he who has talent uses the pedal well, let us say, "He who uses the pedal well has talent." —First and last sentences of Hans Schmitt's treatise on the use of the pedals.

All piano forte technic has primarily the one aim of producing a tone fine in itself and felicitous in expression.—Adolph Kullak, "The Aesthetics of Pianoforte Playing."

When the fire and impulsiveness of emotion are held in check by the restraining and regulating influence of the intellect; when the repose and the positiveness of the latter are stirred by the spontaneous inspiration of the former, the one supplying what the other lacks, both going hand in hand; then this blending of soul and brain, accompanied by faultless technic, results in the highest attainable executive perfection and artistic beauty.—Adolph Christiani, "Principles of Expression in Pianoforte Playing."

If music, therefore, is to be treated as an art, it is not our feelings but our imagination which must supply the aesthetic tests.—Edouard Hanslick, "The Beautiful in Music."

Once more let us protest against the degradation of Mr. Paderewski's art by that part of the public which indulges in manifestations of hysterical excitement at each of his concerts. This sort of excitement reveals itself first in a wild and uncontrollable desire to applaud. The pianist's hearers cannot wait till he finishes any number, but if there be two or three movements, they break in with their noisy demonstrations between the movements, although the player does not raise his hands from the keys and thus endeavors to inform their ignorance that there is more to come. But all this class of listeners to music goes about with a motto written on its forehead. It is this: "If a soloist stops, we'll applaud him."

In the very best known pieces of the piano player's repertory these persons applaud in the wrong places. They care nothing for the music. They know nothing about it. They could not tell a sonata from a gigue to save themselves from instant death. All they are looking for is opportunity to announce in some loud way that they are worshippers of the pianist. No doubt many of them are under the delusion that he is playing things that none of the other pianists play, and they applaud him vociferously because they think he is accomplishing unheard of feats of technic. This is an insult to so great an artist. Yet it is a common mistake of the ignorant.

The wild rush of women to the front of the auditorium at the conclusion of each concert is not a thing that a man cares to see. It tends to increase the skepticism of the male as to the reasoning powers of the female of his species. It also tends to lower his ideal of womanhood. This mad desire to get near to a man who has made you feel will not bear analysis. It is not a pretty exhibition of femininity.

If the people who indulge in it are of the opinion that they are giving the artist a great joy, they may as well rid their minds of such an impression at once. Paderewski is not at all delighted by the procession of musical Bacchantes down the aisles after his recitals. He is too much an artist to rejoice in the thought that he has made people aesthetically drunk. He would much prefer to be judged by the high imagination of his audiences and not by their feelings. But as he cannot help himself, he gracefully submits to the inevitable. I cannot speak with authority on the subject, but I have a gentle suspicion that when it is all over he goes home, kisses his wife, and says, "What fools these women be!"

If Mr. Charles Martin Loeffler, violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, lived in Berlin, he would be treated as a person of considerable importance in the musical circles of that city. But he lives in America, and that brings him much too close to many of those who are called upon to pass judgment on his merits. His compositions which have been heard in this city entitle him to a place of no small size in the musical activities of the day. Symphonies by foreign composers of much less music worth than his chamber music have had the honor of performances by the leading orchestras of the country, and as for songs, Mr. Loeffler's are far and away finer than many of those which are sung year in and year out by singers who are wise, perhaps, after all, in their choice. Mr. Loeffler's songs are not for the ordinary salon singer, but for the vocalist who possesses deep musical insight and the art of conveying the inner content of songs to the audience.

The violin and orchestra piece which was produced on Thursday night by the Boston Symphony Orchestra is not one of the most successful works of Mr. Loeffler. Nevertheless it is interesting and deserved to be heard. By its ingenious use of those wonderfully fecund Russian melodies alone it commanded attention, and its orchestral coloring was a delight to hear. As a master of scoring Mr. Loeffler has no superior in this country and few equals anywhere. Rich and various as his orchestral tints are, they are never garish, and the ear is not assaulted, as it too often is in the music of less judicious writers for the instrumental body. But, after all, it is impossible to avoid the opinion that this composer's most substantial successes have been gained in the more intimate forms of music, through which his peculiarly reflective and dreamy thought breathes itself more directly to the hearer.

W. J. HENDERSON.

THE OPERA SEASON.

To Begin at the Metropolitan Opera House To-morrow Night.

The annual season of grand opera in French, Italian, and German at the Metropolitan Opera House will begin to-morrow evening with a performance of Gounod's work, "Romeo et Juliette." In all that is to be found up to the present time in the announcements of the manager of the enterprise there seems to be no food for popular excitement, yet the subscription is the largest that has ever been known in this city, and probably in any other. So far as can be seen at the present the season will be practically a repetition of those which have preceded it. We shall hear the same operas, and almost the same persons in them. As the public has elected to regard these persons as some sort of demi-gods, this is not a matter for wonder. There are to be some new persons in the company, and these, too, we make no doubt, will speedily be deified. Our operatic heaven will soon be as crowded as Olympus in the fabled days of old. Mr. Grau sends out the following alphabetical list of the divinities:

Sopranos—Mme. Suzanne Adams, Mlle. Mathilde Bauermeister, Mme. Emma Calvé, Mme. Emma Eames, Mlle. Zella de Lussan, Mme. Lillian Nordica, Frl. Olga Pevny, Miss Susan Strong, Mme. Marcella Sembrich, Mme. Clementine de Vere, Frl. Milka Ternina.

Contraltos—Miss Elenore Broadfoot, Mme. Van Cauteren, Miss Marie Brema, (for a limited number of performances only,) Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Mlle. Eugenia Mantelli, Mlle. Rosa Olitzka.

Tenors—M. A. R. Alvarez, M. Jacques Bars, M. Claude Bonnard, Herr Hans Breuer, Herr Andreas Dippel, M. Ernest Van Dyck, M. Queyla, M. A. Saleza, M. Thomas Salignac, Signor Vanni.

Baritones—Herr T. Bertram, Signor G. Campanari, M. E. Dufriche, Herr Fritz Friedrichs, M. Illy, M. T. Meux, Herr A. Muhlmann, Signor Pini-Corsi, Herr A. Van Rooy, Signor A. Scotti.

Basses—M. Hermann Devries, M. Pol Plançon, Mr. Lempriere Pringle, M. E. de Reszke.

Conductors—Enrico Bevignani, Luigi Mancinelli, Emil Paur.

The repertoire will be selected from the following list, and will be evenly divided between the Italian, French, and the German operas: "Romeo et Juliette," Gounod; "Faust," Gounod; "Philemon et Baucis," Gounod; "Les Huguenots," Meyerbeer; "L'Africaine," Meyerbeer; "Le Prophète," Meyerbeer; "Herodiade," Massenet; "La Navarraise," Massenet; "Mignon," Thomas; "Hamlet," Thomas; "Carmen," Bizet; "Ero e Leondro," Mancinelli; "Aida," Verdi; "Otello," Verdi; "La Traviata," Verdi; "Il Trovatore," Verdi; "Falstaff," Verdi; "Rigoletto," Verdi; "Lucia di Lammermoor," Dohizetti; "Don Pasquale," Donizetti, "La Favorita," Donizetti; "La Fille du Regiment," Donizetti; "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," Rossini; "Mefistofele," Boito; "Martha," Flotow; "La Sonnambula," Bellini; "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; "Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; "Nozze di Figaro," Mozart; "Don Giovanni," Mozart; "Il Flauto Magico," Mozart; "Fidelio," Beethoven; "Die Lustigen Weiber von Windsor," ("The Merry Wives of Windsor,") Nicolai; "Lohengrin," Wagner; "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; "Tannhäuser," Wagner; "Die Meistersinger," Wagner; "Tristan und Isolde," Wagner; "Das Reingold," Wagner; "Die Walküre," Wagner; "Siegfried," Wagner; "Die Götterdammerung," Wagner.

It is a cunning phrase, that "selected from." The manager could without falsification put on his list all the operas which have ever been produced, and then select from them "Faust," "Les Huguenots," "Carmen," and the rest of those which Mr. Grau knows that the public likes to hear. The manager is not to be blamed for not giving new works, since the people subscribe with the certainty that they are going to hear the old ones. It is the singers who attract the public, and for that reason it may not be amiss to print here the biographical sketches of the newcomers furnished by the manager.

Albert Raymond Alvarez was born of French parentage at Bordeaux, and is not a Spaniard, as many have imagined. The date of his birth is lost in conflicting statements, but the presumption is that he is in the prime of life within the twoscore mark of passing years. For several years first tenor at the Grand Opéra at Paris, his career during that period has been one long triumph. One success after another has fallen to his lot, and now the figures demonstrate that he has not only appeared since the beginning of his career in forty-five grand operas, but has created eleven original characters, a record quite unique and perhaps impossible away from the sacred precincts of the Paris Grand Opéra. Not all were permanent successes, as a matter of course. That would be quite impossible in view of the somewhat questionable material produced by most of the modern composers, yet we are assured that the fiery manner and splendid vocal qualities of Alvarez have saved more than one opera from disaster. His Paris experiences include original rôles in "Gautier d'Aquitaine," "Thais," "La Montagne Noir," "Fredegonde," "Helle," and "Messidor," while at the Covent Garden Theatre in London he created the chief tenor parts in "Amy Robsart," "The Lady of Longford," "La Navarraise," "Inis Mendo," and "Messaline." None of these operas save "La Navarraise" have ever been heard in New York, and most of them are hopelessly without inspiration or value, yet as indicating the activity of this tenor and his wide range of experience it is interesting to recall the names.

But it is in the standard repertory that Alvarez has gained his chief fame. All of the important tenor rôles, except those of Wagner's later period, have been made his own. If contemporaneous testimony is worth anything he has triumphed in all of these creations, uniting voice, manner, and dramatic strength in performances of remarkable power. Alvarez is at least to the lyric manner born. At an early age he devoted himself to music. At eighteen he was already an excellent musician, and he enlisted voluntarily in the French Army as a conductor of music. After leaving the army at the age of twenty-three his voice had developed to such a degree that he made up his mind to go to Paris and study singing. He studied with a private master, A. de Martini, who, marveling at his musical abilities and the surprising progress he made, did not wish him to study for a long time at the Conservatory. This was with good reason, because in a comparatively short space of time Alvarez was able to make his début at the Royal Theatre at Ghent, and from there he went immediately to the French provinces and sang at the Grand Théâtres at Lyons and Marseilles. It was during his engagement at the latter place that his reputation spread to such an extent that he was summoned to Paris by the managers of the Opéra. Here he made his début on March 14, 1892, in the rôle of Faust, and since that time has sung constantly the heroic rôles at this theatre. He has appeared nearly every Summer at Covent Garden, and last season made a short visit to this country, singing, however, only in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis. Report assigns to him a fine presence, elegant appearance, and striking personality. He is tall, commanding, and said to be a master of both vocal and dramatic expressions. His fiery outbursts are represented to be without prejudice to the lyric quality of his art, and the understanding is that his voice is brilliant, resonant, and of the true tenor quality.

Milka Ternina was born in 1863 at Vezisce, Croatia. Her tender years were passed in Agram under the care of an uncle, for her father died when she was six years old. When she was sixteen she went to Vienna to become a pupil of the Conservatory. Although her people were musical she was the first of them to look forward to the life of a public singer. She herself once wrote: "When I was attending the High School at Agram the opportunity was given me to study music and the languages at home, and I learned French and Italian and a little German. I began to study the piano when I was about ten years old, and two years later I took my first singing lesson from Miss Ida Winiberger. She is the one that awakened in me a love for music and showed me the beauties of song. Should I ever reach the heights that were thus enticingly shown me? At that time there was no thought of my going on the stage; but the same question comes to me now."

Encouraged by Prof. Gansbacher, who declared that success would follow her endeavor, she studied under him at the Vienna Conservatory three years. She made her first appearance on the stage at Leipsic in June, 1883, as Elizabeth. Her second appearance in that city was as Elsa. From Leipsic, where she was unhappy for a year, she went to Graz, where she remained two years, singing the soprano parts of the repertory, with the exception of the coloratura rôles. She was at Bremen the season of 1886-7, taking the place of the late Katherine Klafsky. There she staid four years, and she added to her repertory the parts of Brünnhilde and Isolde. When she appeared as Brünnhilde Anton Seidl was conductor. In 1890 she was engaged at the Court Theatre at Munich, and she made her appearance as Isolde June 12. She is still a member of the Munich company, although offers that are regarded as extravagant in Germany have been made to her by other managers. She is a Court singer and has received medals and other honors.

She has been a guest in many cities, where she has sung in opera or in concert. Thus in May, 1894, she was at the Niederrheinische festival at Aix-la-Chapelle; she appeared at the Gewandhaus, Leipsic, Oct. 24, 1895; she sang with great success in the Netherlands, and she sang for the first time in London at a Wagner concert, conducted by Hermann Levi, April 25, 1896. She came to the United States early in 1896, and made her first appearance in this country in Boston, Feb. 1, 1896, as Brünnhilde in "Die Walküre." At Covent Garden in 1898 she was crowned with laurels for her impersonations of Leonore, Isolde, Sieglinde, and Brünnhilde.

Her career has been neither uncommon nor sensationally romantic. As she herself once said: "I regret that I cannot tell you of any extraordinary experiences which I have had during my life. I have had no adventures, and my imagination is not fertile enough to invent any." Fraulein Ternina is looked upon to-day as the greatest of the younger generation of Wagner singers—of that generation which is to succeed Sucher, Materna, Malten, and Lehmann.

Theodore Bertram was born at Stuttgart on Feb. 13, 1868. His father was Heinrich Bertram, a well-known baritone, and his mother also won distinction as a dramatic soprano. It is no wonder, therefore, that Herr Bertram turned to music at an early age. His first intention was to become an instrumental player, and for a while he performed on the 'cello in the orchestra of the opera house at Stuttgart. The discovery that he had a voice, however, turned his ambition in another direction, and he began to study singing under the tuition of his father, who is now a professor at the Stuttgart Conservatory. Herr Bertram made his first appearance at Ulm in "Der Freischütz" in 1889. The following year he was engaged by Pollini for his famous company at Hamburg. Then followed a season in Berlin, and from there he passed to the Royal Opera House at Munich, where he has remained ever since. Herr Bertram is said to have a voice of remarkable range, which enables him to sing such basso rôles as Mephistopheles and Sarasto in "The Magic Flute," as well as baritone parts like Hans Sachs, Wolfram, Telramund, Don Giovanni, Wotan, and Vanderdecken. Two years ago Herr Bertram was married to Mme. Moran-Olden, the dramatic soprano who was heard in New York several years ago under the direction of Edmund Stanton at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Antonio Scotti was born at Naples in 1866, and began to study music at the age of nineteen. His only teacher was Mme. Paganini, a niece of the famous violinist. He remained under her tuition for four years, and made his début at Malta in 1889 in the rôle of Amonasro in "Aïda." The following year he was engaged for the Theatre Argentine, at Rome. From there he went to South America with the company headed by Tamagno, where his success was so great that he was compelled to return every season for the next six years. Signor Scotti has also sung in Madrid, Warsaw, Moscow, and Odessa. In 1899 he was engaged for La Scala in Milan, where Mr. Gray heard him and signed him for the Covent Garden last Summer. His success in London led to his engagement for the Metropolitan Opera House. Signor Scotti succeeded Maurel in the rôle of Falstaff after the first production of the opera, and was warmly congratulated by Verdi and Boito. His repertory is a large one, and includes such rôles as Don Giovanni, Valentin, Escamillo, Rigoletto, Hamlet, Hans Sachs, Wolfram, Iago, Don Carlos, Tonio, and Don Pasquale.

Miss Susan Strong hails from Brooklyn, and made her first appearance in grand opera as Sieglinde in "Die Walküre," at Covent Garden, London, in 1895. Her teacher has always been Francis Korbay, to whose careful training she has attributed whatever success has come to her. Following her début in London Miss Strong sang in Naples, and then came to this country in 1896 with the Damrosch Opera Company. She then filled two engagements at Covent Garden, winning marked distinction in the rôles of Brünnhilde in "Siegfried," Aïda, Sieglinde, and Venus. Her repertory in German also includes Gutrune, Elsa, Eva, Senta, and Isolde. In Italian Miss Strong also sings Marguerite and Pamina in "The Magic Flute." She has also sung the rôle of Selika in "L'Africaine" in French.

MR. SCHULZ'S MORNING CONCERT.

Mr. Townsend H. Fellows and Mr. Leo Schulz are to give their fifth and last chamber musicale on Wednesday morning next, Dec. 20, at 11 o'clock. Mr. Carl Stasny of the New England Conservatory will be at the piano, Mr. Boegner the violin, and Mr. Schulz the 'cello. Mr. Townsend H. Fellows will sing and Mr. Huhn will be the accompanist. Following is the programme: 1, 'cello sonata, A minor, Opus 36, Edward Grieg; 2, baritone, (a) "Dast Madchen an das erste Schneeglockchen," Weber; (b) "Der Doppelganger," Schubert; 3, 'cello quartet; (a) "Religioso," Golterman; (b) "Cradle Song," Fitzenhagen; 4, trio, G minor, Opus 15, Smetana.

The Harlem Philharmonic Orchestra will play the following programme on Dec. 20 and 21 under the direction of Mr. Henry Fleck:

Symphony No. 3 ..... Tschaikowsky
Concerto in F minor ..... Chopin
(Burmeister edition.)
Overture, "In Fruhling" ..... Goldmark

This will be the first production in New York City of Tschaikowsky's third symphony. The work contains five movements, and is thoroughly characteristic of the great Russian master. The concert soloists will be Miss Sara Anderson and Richard Burmeister. The public rehearsal is given at the Harlem Opera House and the concert at the Waldorf-Astoria.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

The second evening concert in the series given by the Kneisel Quartet will take place in Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday at 8:15 o'clock. The programme will be as follows: Beethoven, quartet in E flat, Opus 74; Dvorak, terzetto for two violins and viola, Opus 74; Richard Strauss, quartet for pianoforte and strings. Mr. Mark Hambourg will play the pianoforte part in the last-named composition.

The terzetto by Dvorak and the pianoforte quartet by Richard Strauss will doubtless be new to most of the listeners. The terzetto is a charming work, in a quite unfamiliar instrumental garb. Beethoven wrote several string trios, but they are for violin, viola, and 'cello—a combination that seems to afford more tonal solidity than that employed by Dvorak, yet this charming work will be found to be extremely effective as to tonal balance. The terzetto was written a considerable time ago; the composer intended it at first for the diversion and instruction of his children in their musical studies, but it grew to unexpected dimensions under his hand, as such things will when a master finds he has something to say, and it turned out to be far too difficult for the little Dvoraks to play, so the father put it by for some years, but finally published it. For this there will no doubt be a feeling of gratitude in the house next Tuesday, for the composition is highly characteristic of Dr. Dvorak's most charming and spontaneous vein.

"The Strauss Quartet" is one of the composer's early works, written before he had entered the period of storm and stress that is now urging him to exhaust the resources of the modern orchestra in the service of programme music. It is "absolute" music of the purest kind, showing a gift of original melody, and in treatment reminiscent of Brahms, a fact that in itself indicates how far he has changed his point of view since he wrote his op. 13.

"The Beethoven Quartet" is the one known as "The Harp Quartet," dedicated to Prince Lobkowitz, written in 1809, when the French were besieging Vienna and when Beethoven was so much disturbed by the firing—his lodging at that time being in an exposed position on the city wall—that he on at least one occasion took refuge in the cellar of his brother's house. How little these things interfered with his productive capacity is seen not only in this beautiful quartet, but in the pianoforte concerto in E flat and the sonatas in F sharp and E flat, all of which were written at the same period.

One of the most important musical events of the season will be the concert of the Musical Art Society, which takes place in Carnegie Hall on Thursday evening next, Dec. 21. The first part of the programme will as usual be devoted to old church and Christmas music, the two special features being the mass by Palestrina and an "Ave Maria" by Verdi which he describes as the "Scala Enigmatica" harmonized for four voices. The society will have the assistance of Mr. David Bispham. The complete programme is as follows:

"Missa Brevis" ..... Palestrina
"Adeste Fidelis" ..... Old Catholic Hymn
"Ave Maria," (Scala enigmatica) ..... Verdi
"Willst du dass ich geh" ..... Brahms
"Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer" ... Brahms
"So willst du des Armen" ..... Brahms
David Bispham.
Four Folk Songs, Book VII. ..... Brahms
David Bispham and chorus.
"Two Motets" ..... Walter Damrosch
"Trost in Tranenen" ..... Cornelius
David Bispham and chorus.
"Wings of a Dove" ..... Howard Brockway
"Hey Nonino" ..... Howard Brockway

MR. WHITING'S CHAMBER RECITALS.

Arthur Whiting will give four recitals of chamber music at 819 Madison Avenue. The first will take place to-day at 3 P. M. The programme is as follows:
